Scarcity of Money.

There is no doubt but the present situation of all kinds of business and industry is fearfully depressed, and it behooves every family to look carefully to their expenses. Winter is coming on when children are liable to Croup, Whooping Cough, etc. Coughs and Colds will prevail everywhere, and Consumption with other Throat and Lung disease will carry off many.—These diseases should not be neglected, Doctor Bills are expensive, and we would advise our people to use BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP. It never has failed. One bottle at 75 cents will keep your whole family well during the winter. Two doses will relieve any case. Sold in all towns in the United States, and by your Druggist, William H. Voorhees.

Real home comfort can be enjoyed by everybody, by wearing a pair of Terhune's Slippers about the house.

COAL is down and now is the time to lay in your winter's supply. Look among our columns for the places to buy.

One of the best methods of preserving health is by keeping your feet well protected, this can be done at a very small expense at Dr. Terhune's shoe store.

THE Plainfield Athletic Club have issued a neat four-page programme containing a list of the exercises of the proposed Tournament of the Club at the Driving Park Grounds, Oct. 5th.

J. & M. RUNYON have reduced the price of coal as follows: Stove, $5.25; Egg, $5; Nut, $4.75. Parties laying in coal will do well to patronize them. Yard, cor. Peace and Fourth Sts.

THE Y. M. C. A. of this city are making arrangements for another popular Concert by the "Young Apollo Club" of boy singers to be given early in October. Full particulars will be announced soon.

Philosophers, astronomers and all other learned men who are connected with "Old Probabilities," predict a very wet fall this season, and have been to Dr. Terhune's store, Cherry St., and selected their boots and shoes from his immense fall stock.

The Washington Fire Insurance Co. of this city has not had a single loss by fire during the year which closed July 1st. Such a case we do not think has ever occurred with any other company of this State, which certainly argues well for the future of the Washington.

RAHWAY'S celebrated carriage manufacturers, Hatfield & Jackson, have been awarded the First Premium for Side-bar Top Wagons, and Sulky, at the Centennial Exhibition. This is a justly deserved compliment. No better wagons are made in the country than at the factory of this well-known firm.

THE practice of throwing melon rinds on the sidewalk should be discontinued, before some serious accident happens. One evening last week, while an aged lady was walking along Second Street, she stepped on a piece of melon rind on the walk and was thrown over backwards to the earth, receiving severe injuries.

MR. FLORENCE WORMSER is erecting a handsome new residence on Fifth Street, near Peach Street. Our young and enterprising townsman Isaac Millburn does the mason work, and Jacob Kriney the carpenter work. The building is to be of brick, 24x32 feet, in dimensions, with all modern improvements.

A REPORT of the finances of the Board of Education will be found in our advertising columns. We are informed out of the two mill State School Tax, of $6,380,00 paid by this district to the State, but $5,867,01 of the same is appropriated to our district by the State Board, the balance being applied to poorer districts in the State.

WHILE Mr. A. Benedict was in the act of dusting off a carriage at his livery stables last Sunday morning, he slipped from a box on which he was standing and broke one of his legs. Dr. Stillman was called in and the fractured limb set. This is the second time the same limb has been fractured, and we sympathize with Mr. B. in his affliction.

OUR Public School, which commenced its Fall Session last Monday shows a marked increase in attendance above last year. The teachers and pupils were welcomed by J. W. Murray, Esq., of the Board of Education, in a few brief and interesting remarks. Miss Emma Force and Miss J. M. Runyon resigned their positions as teachers, otherwise the corps of teachers remain the same.

THE trotting at the Driving Park, to-day (Thursday) was witnessed by a large concourse of people. Through some misunderstanding "Nellie V." was not on the ground to appear in the race, Pete Manee, her driver failing to bring the mare here as agreed between him and her owner, Mr. Chris. Van Arsdale. "Garth" won the race in three straight heats, time: 2:48½; 2:46; 2:50.—"Flora," 2d; "Bessie B" 3d.

FRED. CASPAR, having obtained a license to keep a saloon will open a lager beer and lunch room on Second St., some day next week, in the building formerly occupied by him as an upholstery store, just above the City Hotel, where he will be pleased to see his friends and all those who love a pure glass of lager and a good lunch. The place is being fitted up in fine style, and with ample accommodations. Fred. asks the public to give him a call. He intends to keep a place that will be first-class in every particular.

WEDNESDAY night last Captain Breen discovered two persons manoeuvering about a freight car standing on the side track at the depot, and shortly after saw them enter the car. He quietly slipped up to the door and closed and fastened it. In the morning he opened the door and found within the car two tramps who had enjoyed a good night's rest. He enjoined upon them the necessity of dusting their feet of Plainfield soil which they did, laughingly saying "that they had a good night's rest."

LILLIENSTERN, the Clothier, is out this week with a column advertisement, asking an inspection of his goods. Mr. L. makes a specialty of keeping on hand a large and varied stock of Ready-made Clothing, which he guarantees to sell as low as Newark or New York prices. Besides, he is prepared to do custom work in the best possible manner. He has good workmen and guarantees satisfaction. We do not see why ready-made clothing cannot be kept and sold in Plainfield at as low prices as in other cities, and think that Lillienstern has solved the problem. At all events, it won't do any harm to go and examine his stock.

A SERIOUS accident occurred on the Pennsylvania R. R., near Trenton, last Monday morning, by one train striking two cows and throwing them over to another track on which an express train was approaching. The result was that several cars were thrown from the track and travel delayed for over five hours. Fourteen trains were delayed on each side of the wreck. One train was loaded with 1,200 persons visiting the Centennial Grounds. Of course this accident was the means of sending a large number of passengers over the Bound Brook New Line, it being necessary to run extra trains which were heavily loaded. We notice since then a decided increase in the number of passengers conveyed over the new road, and no doubt the accident will prove a blessing in disguise to the new line, as people were given an opportunity of experiencing what a magnificent road it is. No dust, clean cars, quick transit and delightful scenery.

Y. M. C. A. Convention.

The Ninth Annual Convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations of New Jersey, will be held at Madison, opening on Wednesday evening September 27th, and closing Friday evening 29th. There are now forty-three Associations in the State, sixteen of which (including three Railroad Branches) have been organized during the past year. Many of these have experienced a year of fruitful activity, and their delegates will give interesting and profitable reports.

GODFREY HEROLD has opened an oyster saloon and restaurant in the basement under French & Martin's Clothing Store, where he will at all times be pleased to see his friends. No intoxicating liquors or beer will be sold on the premises. Give him a call and try his oysters and chowder.

Sentenced.

Peter Moran, the individual who pounded one Skelly back of the 1st Baptist Church, this city, a short time since and who was remanded by Judge Good for trial, has been sentenced by Judge Runyon to one year in the State Prison. James Lloyd and Thomas Fitzsimmons sent down from Plainfield for being implicated in a highway robbery case a few weeks since were also sentenced to one year each in the State Prison. Both the latter plead guilty to larceny from the person.

Scottish Games.

Tuesday last was a gala day among the Scotch and their friends in Union County, the occasion being the annual games and festivities of the Union County Caledonian Club at Waverly. Last year the games were held in a grove near Fanwood, but this year the Club determined to hold the same on a grander scale. Headed by a drum corps of youths and three pipers, the Club marched through Broad Street, Elizabeth, in the morning, and presented a fine appearance. The members were all attired in the costume of their native country. When opposite the Sheridan House, the genial proprietor, Colonel George Miller invited them inside to partake of his hospitality, after which the line of march was again taken up for Waverly Fair Grounds, where the games and festivities were held. A large dancing platform on the grounds afforded ample space for those fond of dancing. Franze of this city furnishing music. Plainfield was represented in the club by our jolly St. Commissioner John Wilson, our worthy young friend Robert Simpson and others, while part of the honor of the day in athletic sports was carried off by one of our townsmen, John Donald. Messrs. Wilson & Simpson both contributed prizes for the occasion, which was one of unalloyed enjoyment throughout. Large representatives were present from Newark, Paterson, New York and other cities. Below we give a list of the games indulged in, together with the winners and prizes: We return thanks for the invitation extended us to be present.

At about 12:15 the games commenced. A large circle had been fenced off with stakes and ropes, and inside of those the chief, the judges, the competitors and the reporters were allowed, while the crowd was kept outside, where they could see all that was going on.

The competitors in nearly all the games were John Renne, John McGhie, John Finnie, John Donald, A. Muir and Joseph Wilson, of Union county, and John West of New York, D. T. Keller of Hudson county, John McLaren of Newark, George Irving of Ottawa, Canada, and Alex. McKay of New Haven, the latter of whom was singularly muscular, and looked like a giant.

The first game was "putting the stone." First prize $3, second prize $2. McKay put it 41 feet, and John Rennie 34 feet 6 inches. The other competitors were considerably behind.

The next was the standing jump, in which nearly all competed; same prizes as before. McKay jumped 10 feet and John West 9 feet 3 inches.

Then followed the running high leap—same prizes. John West jumped 5 feet 6 inches high, and John Donald 4 feet 8.

Throwing the light hammer (12 pounds) came next. McKay distanced every one else in this by throwing 98 feet. John Renne came next throwing 74 feet 4 inches.

The quarter-mile race was run for by several, but George Irving of Canada, won 1st prize, and John McLaren 2d.

Next came a hop, step and jump, in which all took part. D. T. Keller won the 1st prize by going 37 feet 6 inches, and John West, 2d, by 36 feet 6 inches.

In the boys' race (under 14 years) for $1.50 and $1, James McLaren was 1st, Jas. Stewart, 2d.

The vaulting high leap came next, with as many competitors as before. McLaren jumped 8 feet 4 inches, and John McGhie 7 feet 4. In this game James Wilson did himself unusual credit.

The Highland Fling came next. James Kennedy of Brooklyn, John West and John McGhie competed. The prizes were won in the order named.

The three-legged race was comical, two men are tied together by their legs, one leg of each man being left free. They then run. Some half dozen couples ran for the prizes. McLaren and Irving in first, and McGhie and Wilson second.

An intermission followed next, in which the members of the club and their guests did ample justice to some very excellent clam chowder and other edibles that had been provided, and after this was over the games were resumed.

Throwing the heavy hammer came first, for members of the club only. John Renne took first prize, throwing 71½ feet; McKay then took the hammer and threw 92 feet 5 inches.

The half mile race followed, and was very interesting. John Donald won 1st prize, John McGie 2d. Donald was a little surprised at his success, and was heartily cheered when he was presented with the silver medal by Miss Thompson on behalf of the ladies of the Club.

The broad sword dance took place next, and Kennedy and West competed. Kennedy easily taking first prize as he is a capital dancer and is covered with medals that he has won at different Scottish games.

The sack race was very comical. The runners are tied in a sack, covers feet and all but the head, and then they run. Some tumble head over heels, and the sight is one to remember when once seen. Geo. Irving took the 1st prize in this, and Charles Wier the 2d.

A half mile race between the boys of the drum corps followed next. Brag won first, Robeny second and Alexander third prize.

The mile race, open to all, followed next. Irving won the first, Andrew McClave of Newark second, and John Donald the third prize.

Next followed an old man's race—over 50 years old. It was singularly comical. The first prize was won by James Faulkner of Brooklyn, the second by James Alexander, aged 74. This closed up the games, and the crowd went home.

Washington Rock Festivities.

Another of those delightful dancing and social entertainments for which the Washington Rock Mountain House has justly become celebrated, took place at that hotel on Wednesday evening, the 6th inst. The visitors from Elizabeth, Rahway, Westfield, Cranford and Plainfield began to arrive before dark, and reversing the old order, supper was served early in the evening, leaving almost the entire night for dancing, with lighter refreshments of ices at midnight, a most acceptable change for those who had driven so far to attend the hop. The music was by Worsley, well known to the lovers of Terpsichore in this section. The company was large and brilliant and most social in its character. The hotel and grove were brilliantly illuminated with Chinese lanterns, while the ball-room had received some new, bright decorations. Among the guests were the Misses Craig, Miss Black, Miss Pierson, Mr. Bloodgood, Mr. Clark, Mr. Squier and others from Rahway; the Misses Scudder, and the Messrs. Scudder and Miss Stitt, of Westfield; Mr. Hinds, of Elizabeth; Mr. Van Pelt, of Somerville; the Misses Egbertson, the Misses Baker, Miss Smith, Miss Lee, Mr. Egbertson, of Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. Dalton, Miss Ashfield, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Allen, and others of New York and Brooklyn. The most appropriate season for such parties having arrived, we presume there will be frequent installments of such entertainments. We understand the proprietors of the hotel intend keeping it open during the entire year, so that N. Y. parties can have an opportunity of enjoying a "broiled chicken" and the "glide waltz," with a sleigh ride accompaniment, during the winter months on this mountain top.

Hard Times—Economy.

"There is no denying the fact that times are generally pretty hard and money scarce, which, of course, increase the desire of everybody whom it effects to economize and put their money where it will bring the greatest returns. If you need a new suit of clothes, you want a good one, as you used to buy, but you want it for less money, because your money is harder to earn now than before; you may be poorer, but you are just as proud, and there is no sin in either. Many a proud and honest heart beats under a ragged coat, but a proud heart beats with a little more comfort and satisfaction under a good one. Odd, indeed, is the man who at all times feels at ease in a shabby outfit, though he may be just as much respected. We desire to help you out of any such annoyance, and can do it if you will give us an opportunity. Your money invested at our store will do it. We honestly and candidly believe we can sell you clothing and furnishing goods better and cheaper than you can buy anywhere else in this place, and want you to give us a trial on your Fall and Winter outfit to convince you that we mean it.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

The recent rains dampened the top dressing of the macadamized road bed of Johnston Drive to an extent that facilitated the rolling of the same with the steam roller, advantage of which was taken by the contractors, Messrs. Hossie & Walley.

There will be a meeting of the Tilden & Hendricks Reform Club on Wednesday evening next, (Sept. 27th,) at 7:30 o'clock, at Keller's Hall. All are invited to be present.

At the Wash of "Warren 3," Friday night last, at the fire well in the rear of A. Berry's residence, it was found that a leak in the air chamber caused the engine to work unsatisfactory. The "Warren boys" immediately remedied the same.

Interesting church ceremonies took place in North Plainfield to-day, (Thursday), the occasion being the consecration of the Church of the Holy Cross. This church was built several years ago by Rev. Mr. Embury on land owned by him and loaned gratuitously to the congregation by him until recently, when he gave the congregation a free title to the same. To-day, Bishop Scarborough consecrated the same and transferred the deeds of the property to the vestry of the church, and also laid the corner stone of a Parish School Building adjoining the church. This new building is to be known as the "Spooner Memorial Building" in commemoration of the fact that when the late Jane E. Spooner died she bequeathed a sum of money to the Church of the Holy Cross to be used in erecting a building as above stated, also bequeathing a valuable library of 1,500 volumes for the same purpose. Fifteen clergymen were present and participated in the exercises. The new building is to be 30x70 feet in dimensions. The contract for the erection of the same will be given out in a short time. In our next we intend to give a more lengthy account of the proceedings.

FIRE MATTERS.

Members of the Department have again been drawn to serve as jurors from Somerset county. This is because the Secretaries of the Fire Companies do not attend to their duties and see that the names of every member of their respective Companies are enrolled on the books of the County Clerk of the Counties wherein the member resides. This is a duty prescribed by law. The Secretary of each Company should attend to the matter. It is their duty to send the names to the County Clerk's office—not the duty of the Secretary of the Fire Board.

The Board of Fire Commissioners met last Tuesday evening, and among other business agreed that on account of the financial condition of the Department it is deemed inexpedient to order a parade of the Fire Department this year, although the Companies may parade if they so desire, without the Board appropriating any money for that purpose. While the Board desire that the Department have their annual parade this year, they do not feel like laying themselves liable to the law by exceeding the appropriation allowed them. But few of our citizens, among whom is the habitual grumbler against taxes, are aware of the difficulties experienced by the Board of Fire Commissioners to run the Department on a sound and safe basis with the present meagre sum allowed them by law $6,000. While the value of property owned by the Department is three times that of the indebtedness of the same, it should be borne in mind that out of the six thousand dollars appropriated about $4,500 goes toward paying off bonds and interest on bonds, leaving $1,500 (if the taxes should all be collected) to run the Department on. Taking into consideration the expenses liable to keep such a department as ours in working order, furnish supplies, repairs, keep in order hose and apparatus, &c., it is certainly highly creditable to the managers for conducting the same so economically. They, as well as the firemen, labor gratuitously and to keep up the splendid organization now possessed by Plainfield, and to meet the growing wants of the same in proportion to the growth of the city, the Fire Department should be allowed more means to carry on the same. It is all very well to cry "we want more wells; we want more steamers and hose; if you don't give us protection we won't pay our fire tax!" how can it be expected to run such a magnificent department as Plainfield has always had the credit of possessing, on the insignificant sum of Fifteen Hundred Dollars? Were it not for the old debt of the Department created long before the present plan of controlling the same was granted by law, with the accumulated interest added thereto, the amount now annually appropriated would be sufficient to carry on the Department, but it is the Board must shoulder the debt, and provide for the payment of those old bonds or a renewal thereof while the best interests of the Department is suffering for the want of funds to provide for the maintenance of the same.

An alarm of fire was caused last Tuesday evening by a bright reflection against the sky from a fire in the neighborhood of New Brunswick, on the Raritan river and was caused by the burning of a barn and stables.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

The grand bazaar held at the residence of R. B. Duyckinck, Esq., on the 6th and 7th insts., in the interest of All Saints' Episcopal Mission, Rev. Chas. L. Sykes, in this village, was a deserved success. The popularity of the church was elegantly expressed by the numerous contributions of tastefully wrought fabrics and valuable ornaments, while visitors made liberal competition in order to obtain a souvenir of the pleasant occasion. Mr. Duyckinck decorated and arranged his mountain home with a generous view to the comfort and enjoyment of those present, while the accomplished ladies of his family and the Mission, dispelled all business like solemnity from the affair by an entertaining welcome accorded to all. We might say that the gathering seemed to happily blend a select picnic with the worthy object noted, through the agreeable incidents of fine music, delicious lunches and moonlight rides. Nor must we forget the humorous auction sale conducted by Prof. A. Archer, the gifted pianist. We are pleased to announce that Mr. A. will conduct another concert at Academy Hall in behalf of the above Mission. The satisfaction given by his previous musical entertainments in "the village" ensures a full and appreciative house on the evening of Sept. 27th.

Some time since Dr. Coles had a look-out erected on the mountain facing his charming residence. Besides this, he had in a pleasant shady grove in the vicinity, tables and seats arranged for the greater comfort of enjoying the viands which the numerous parties availing themselves of this beautiful spot for a pleasant picnic, annually regaled themselves with. Several comfortable seats were placed in excellent positions on the two paths leading to the tower, thus enabling those who wished for a rest in the ascent to do so in ease. All these were put up at considerable expense to the Dr., solely for the convenience of the public, and innumerable parties from both far and near have come to this delightful spot to enjoy themselves. But we are sorry to chronicle the fact that the bump of destructiveness must have been pretty largely developed in some of the visitors, or may be, perhaps, in some of our village boys, for refreshment table and seats are nearly demolished; of the numerous resting places only one remains, and the steps leading to the top of the tower have been so wantonly broken down that they are scarcely passable for one of the fair sex. Can this be stigmatized as anything less than ruffianly?

The Executors' Sale of the Fanwood property lately belonging to Harriet Squier deceased, J. B. Squier, Elizabeth and George Squier, executors, advertised to be sold the 12th inst., was adjourned without date. The property consisting of 40 acres, will be offered in the meantime at private sale in parcels to suit customers. Particulars may be had by addressing the executors, J. B. Squier, Elizabeth or George Squier, Fanwood, N. J.

A large grey eagle was shot by a workman in the employ of John Taylor Johnston, Esq., last Wednesday morning. When first observed the bird had seized a large-sized turkey from a flock and was bearing aloft his prize. He soon, however, alighted, and proceeded to devour the Thanksgiving fowl, when the workman above mentioned, seized a gun and as the eagle attempted to raise in the air at his approach, fired at him, striking the left wing. The majestic bird slowly fluttered to the ground and after considerable difficulty was captured alive and is now safely housed in a large coop at Brittin's Hotel. The bird measured seven feet from tip to tip of wings.

The regular monthly meeting of Excelsior H. & L. Co., No. 1, of Scotch Plains, will take place on Monday evening next at 7:30 o'clock.

The Tilden & Hendricks Association met in their rooms Dean's Building on Tuesday evening last. There was a good attendance. After the transaction of the routine business several gentlemen signed the roll, and the names of others were presented for membership and duly elected. After remarks by Messrs. S. B. Ball and C. Forest the meeting adjourned to Thursday evening.

Our old and esteemed friend, Dr. Joseph Clark can not see as well as he used to on account of his failing eye sight, and when he was invited to ride by the driver of a passing vehicle as he was on his way to Plainfield the other day, and upon his accepting the invitation, he remarked to the driver, who was attired in one of those natty little garments which look so much like a boy's jacket, also a round straw hat, that the horse attached to the vehicle resembled one owned by L. H. K. Smalley, Esq. The driver demurely remarked that the animal did belong to that gentleman. "Ah, my lad," remarked the Dr., "how long have you lived with Mr. Smalley?" "Oh, a long while," answered the lad (?). "Well, it is a little singular that I have never seen you before," as he turned to look at the lad whom he found was none other than Mrs. L. H. K. Smalley herself. Then the Dr. quietly remarked—"sold," and thought the joke was too good to keep.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Westfield Lodge, 169, I. O. O. F., dedicated their new quarters in the beautiful rooms of Atlas Lodge, 125, A. F. & A. M., Academy Hall, last Wednesday evening. A large delegation of visiting brethren from Plainfield, Elizabeth and Newark, were present to give No. 169 a hearty impulse in the good work of Odd Fellowship. District Deputy S. A. Smith was unavoidably absent and sent his regrets. Among the speakers of the evening were the N. G. of No. 44 and 169, Past Grands Pack, Boice, Pennington, Miller and Mitchell of Plainfield Lodge, and Brothers Decker, Chamberlain, Todd and Crosby of Westfield. The occasion was one fraught with enjoyment and will long be remembered by the participants.

Last Sunday as a gentleman was driving a horse and buggy through Broad Street, in attempting to turn the corner of Central Avenue and Broad Street, the buggy was overturned and the occupant thrown out.—He, however, quickly sprang to his feet and grasped the horse's head. The animal being a gentle one, a runaway and smashup was averted. The man was slightly bruised.—The turn-out was from Ubdel's Netherwood Livery Stables.

Orin Peirson, road overseer, has finished the macadamizing of Broad Street, and has made a very creditable job of it. The road bed is first dug out, then filled in with stone and coarse gravel put on top, which will make a very good winter road.

The Tilden & Hendricks Club of Westfield, now numbers 125 members and is daily adding new names to its roll. Westfield will give a good account of herself in the coming fight.

Jerome McNeil has completed the painting of a handsome Tilden & Hendricks banner which is to be flung to the breeze at Scotch Plains in a few days.

A few Republicans met in the Undertaker's office last Saturday evening and organized a Hayes & Wheeler Club. 20 members enrolled themselves. Rather ominous.

John Rolston is grading a piece of low meadow land belonging to Frank Miller on Elm Avenue, for the purpose of making a fish pond and otherwise greatly beautifying what was formerly a marshy piece of ground. A handsome fountain will also be another feature of the premises.

Mr. H. Dougherty, blacksmith and horseshoer, formerly of Plainfield, has located in Westfield and is receiving the liberal support he deserves from the public.

The genial proprietor of the Westfield Hotel reports business flourishing. "Brock" is a popular landlord, and keeps one of the best country hotels in the State.

Acrostic.

Just as the bee collects her sweets
From every flower and shrub she meets,
So what from various books I drew,
I give—though not the whole as new.
I would not like the fabled bird
Gaudily, vaunted and plumed,
In borrowed plumage strut about
To be the sport of every lout.
It is not vainly my design
To publish others' thoughts as mine;
Amply rewarded I shall be
If their aptitude you can see.

Moral maxims appropriate to good and tried men of the Democratic party.

Look on this picture:

Safe is he who serves a good conscience.
A clear conscience fears no accuser.
Men's merits have their seasons, as well as fruits.
Justice is akin to fidelity, wherein honor is the reward.
Truth and honesty have no need of loud protestations.
It is good to know much, but better to make good use of what we know.
Live the defender of liberty, truth and virtue, and you shall prosper.
Deep rivers move with silent majesty, shallow brooks are noisy.
Exalt wisdom and she will exalt thee.
Never forsake a true friend.

Truth never fears rigid examination.
Honesty is the best policy.
Oppose villainy with your utmost vigor.
Safe is he who serves a good conscience.
A virtuous mind in a fair body, is like a fine picture in a good light.
Honest integrity and a clear conscience is a sure card.
Every condition sits well upon a wise man.
Never be weary of well doing.
Deserving success, you shall command it.
Refrain not to speak, when by speaking you may do good.
If a good man thrive, all thrive with him.
Conduct and courage lead to honor.
Knowledge is the treasure of the mind.
Sincerity is the parent of truth.

Maxims applicable to the Republican party and its nominees.

Now look on this picture:

Reform those things in yourself that you blame in others.
Undertake no more than you can perform.
That which opposes right must be wrong.
He who opposes honesty, never had any.
Be not false witness against thy neighbor.
He who loves money more than honor, will value it above honesty.
A wise man aims at nothing out of his reach above honesty.
You should remember knavery may serve a turn, but honesty is best at the long run.
Evil beginnings have wretched endings.
Such as the tree is, such is the fruit.

Wisdom without justice is but craftiness.
Ill examples are like contagious diseases.
Liars are generally cowards, and always boasters.
Little boats must keep near shore.
Add not trouble to the grief-worn heart.
Woe to those preachers who heed not their own advice.
He who swims in sin, will sink in sorrow.
Evil communications corrupt good manners.
Empty vessels make the greatest noise.
Little men and little minds are seldom conscious of their own diminutiveness.
Every one thinks himself worthy of standing with noble and well-bred horses.
Rather confess ignorance than falsely profess knowledge.

HAWK'S MENTOR.

ANOTHER FALSEHOOD NAILED.

The Grant-Hayes Republicans, in their desperate efforts to manufacture political capital out of calumny, having no other stock in trade, seized upon the Income Tax Returns of Mr. Tilden and thought they had surely found a big torpedo. Like all the rest, it has exploded to the terrible mutilation of the libelers. The Financial and Commercial Chronicle effectually drove the nail as follows:

> The reputations of our citizens are the property of the State. And when a character has stood the test of three-score years, every individual has a personal interest in it, reaching far beyond the passing political excitements of the day. With deep regret, therefore, one sees a growing disposition, even among some of our more conservative newspapers, to accept and give currency to defamations of character, simply because the person attacked happens to be candidate for a high office. The form of the charges seem to be something like this: "You swore falsely in 1862," or, "You stole in 1863;" "Now prove you did not, or stand convicted of perjury or theft." This is rather a summary mode of changing the burden of proof, and putting a man on the defense. It may require weeks for him to look up or recall the facts which influenced his acts so long ago; but in the meantime, as slander travels fast, the charges made are echoed by the press of the whole land, and the wrong done can never be wiped out. If public opinion permits this, we shall soon find very few honest men willing to allow their names to be placed before the people for office.
> As an instance of the evil we complain of, take the charge, which we are called upon to believe, that Gov. Hayes during the war stole $400 left with him by an executed soldier. The facts assumed are (1) that such a man was executed; (2) that he was seen to give the $400 to Gov. Hayes; (3) that Gov. H. has not accounted for it. Of course, therefore, Gov. Hayes is a thief. Rather a startling conclusion to a man who has earned, by a life free from reproach, a good name. Yes, if newspaper trial is to be indulged in and accepted during the excitements of a political canvass, there seems to be no way to avoid such violent warfare, better suited to the Sioux districts than the intelligent, cultured communities where the slanders originate.
> But our main design in referring to this subject was to speak of Gov. Tilden's income tax for 1862, which in some quarters has become a very interesting and momentous subject. We all necessarily feel a pride in Gov. Tilden's reputation. No man has stood higher, and deservedly so. Were we not in the midst of an unusual political excitement, such a charge could not be repeated without being indignantly repelled by every man of character in our midst. Yet now we see the slander assumed as proved, and loudly stated by newspapers and speakers everywhere, although the facts show that there was never a more baseless charge made.
> What are the facts? It seems that in December, 1863, Gov. Tilden, like all the rest of us, made a return, under oath, of his income for the year 1862. That return showed that he received in 1862, subject to taxation under the law, a little over [illegible]. In a suit now pending on behalf of the St. Louis, Alton and Terre Haute Railroad, the Governor swore that he received in 1862 twenty thousand dollars for services which were "commenced prior to the year 1859, and were rendered from time to time during a period of three years." These are the simple facts, and the whole of them, and on them the charge is made of perjury, assuming or jumping over entirely the one further premise necessary for a conclusion—and that is, whether under the law, the twenty thousand dollars received from the railroad should be included in the return. Assuming, we say, that this twenty thousand dollars should be included, while the instructions of Internal revenue Commissioner Lewis, issued at that time, state clearly and positively that it should not be included. For the benefit of those who may have forgotten those instructions, we insert the following extract taken from them, as published in our Hunt's Merchants' Magazine for August, 1863, page [illegible]:
> "A merchant's return of income should cover the business of the year 1862, excluding previous years. Uncollected accounts must be estimated. Physicians and lawyers should include actual receipts for services rendered in 1862, together with an estimate on unrealized or contingent income due in that year."
> Here we have it positively stated that the "actual receipts for services rendered in 1862," "excluding previous years," with an estimate of "uncollected accounts" or "unrealized income" from the business or services of 1862, are the items to be included. This same idea was [illegible] in the Commissioner's subsequent instructions of that year, and more [illegible]. [illegible] no one had a doubt as to the meaning; so all of us, in preparing our returns of income from our business, included what we had earned, and not what we had collected in 1862; and if Gov. Tilden [illegible] that way, every honest man in the country did the same. [illegible]
> Now, turning to the [illegible], we find the amount [illegible] that it was received in 1862, but for services which were "commenced prior to the year 1859," and were "rendered from time to time during a period of three years." In other words, [illegible] no portion of the amount was earned in 1862, but all of it during the three years [illegible]. [illegible]

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE WATCHWORD.

It cannot be too frequently urged that the issue of the present campaign is Reform. The Grantites have brought forward the "bloody shirt," and have tried to spread it out so close to our eyes that our vision might be obscured and we might not be able to see this issue any longer. They cannot, however, succeed in their purposes. The days of their iniquity are numbered. We will never more consent to see our country harrassed, burdened, cheated, plundered and disgraced as she has been during the past eight years. We do not intend to fight again over the issues of the war. They are settled, irretrievably settled, and the Republican leaders are guilty of treason in trying to raise them from the grave in which they have been buried, and, by their agency, striving to keep old animosities alive and the hand of man raised against his brother.

All that is settled, and we have now only to deal with the manner in which the government has been conducted sence the war was ended. The corruptions, the abuses, the extravagances of the Administration are what the people now look at, and what they are determined to reform. They have adopted Governor Tilden as their leader in the battle, because they have seen him dealing with, and successfully combating abuses of the same kind in New York. They cannot trust the Grantites any longer, because they have broken every promise they have made, and are now endeavoring to secure another term of power by means of lies and deceptions. Success is certain to attend our efforts, for we know that when Tilden is in the White House, all that is opposed to honesty must vacate the place.

The issues upon us are not war issues, but peace issues. The practical questions are:

1st. Better men in office.

2d. Honest and intelligent administration.

3d. The war is over.

4th. Official rogues must be punished.

5th. No military interference in elections.

6th. Less taxes and more economy.

7th. The earliest practical resumption of specie payments.

8th. Government salaries and pay to conform to salaries paid for competent like services out of public life.

9th. Less federal centralization and more respect for the rights of the people.

10th. Let the common schools alone.

11th. No federal interference with religious faith, sects or organizations.

12th. One term for the President, and a six years' service, if the Constitution is amended.

This is substantially what the Democrats are fighting for, and their candidates, if elected, will insist upon these reforms.—Evening Express, of August 22, 1876.

SHOT AND SHELL.

The "bloody-shirt campaign with money" in Indiana is not a success.—Put down Indiana for Blue-Jeans Williams by 10,000 majority.

"Killcavalry Kill" is the present Sitting Bull, of the Republican party.—And he calls lustily in Indian fashion: "Much Bloody Shirt; Much Money!"—Detroit Free Press.

So the Connecticut Republicans declare that President Grant is entitled to their thanks for his "patriotic services," and "his name will be deservedly enrolled among honored sons of the Republic." Stick a pin there.

It is about time the New York Times shut up its abuse of Mr. Tilden, and stopped its lying assertions about his being mixed up in the Tweed ring. When Mr. Tilden was nominated for Governor in 1874, the Times, in its issue of the 18th of September of that year, said; "The New York Democratic Convention made an end of its work yesterday by nominating Mr. Tilden for Governor. Mr. Tilden is a highly respectable candidate, and no man in the State who wishes to see the return of the Democratic party to power need be ashamed of him."

A Republican of Buchanan county, Mo., writes that he lived thirteen years in sight of the Tildens in New York, and knew them well as neighbors and citizens, and he adds: "If Samuel J. Tilden is not an honest man and a patriot, I am no judge of men; and though I have been a Republican since 1856, I shall this year vote for Tilden and Hendricks if I live till November." And he is not by any means the only Republican in that vicinity, says the St. Joseph Gazette, who will thus signify this desire for a change of parties and of men."

Thousands of Republicans throughout the country who voted for Abraham Lincoln have abandoned the party which has become so corrupt, and are now laboring to secure the election of Samuel J. Tilden.

General Sigel who has been the Republican candidate for Secretary of State of New York—the gallant German soldier—is for Samuel J. Tilden.

Gideon Walls, the honest Secretary of the Navy in Lincoln's Cabinet is for Samuel J. Tilden.

Ex-Gov. Palmer, of Illinois, the friend of Lincoln, and the gallant soldier, who was elected Governor of his State by the Republicans, is for Samuel J. Tilden.

Montgomery Blair, another member of the Lincoln Cabinet, and one of the original members of the Republican party, is for Samuel J. Tilden.

Ex-Governor Curtin, of Pennsylvania, one of the great lights of the Republican party during the war and since, is for Samuel J. Tilden.

Charles Francis Adams, the ablest of our foreign ministers under Lincoln's administration, is for Samuel J. Tilden.

It is announced that Gov. Morton drinks a quart of hot blood every day, he having been advised to so do by his physicians. We say, this is the announcement—but some irreverent cusses (a democrat, of course) suggests that he indulges in this practice for the purpose of keeping "that shirt" up to regulation color.

SETTLING THE DAMAGES.

A colored citizen of Ohio street maintains a family dog about six inches high and eight inches long. The said dog never tried to eat any one up until yesterday, when he attacked a pedestrian and nipped his leg. The pedestrian at once called the owner of the dog out doors and demanded damages.

"Whar's de proof of de bite?" inquired the colored man.

"Right there," replied the victim, exhibiting a black and blue spot.

"And what's de damage?"

"Five hundred dollars!"

"Shoo! You can have de dog for a dollar!"

"Makes no difference," continued the man. "I don't say that he has inflicted five hundred dollars' worth of physical damage. I estimate that at only two shillings, but I can't lie awake nights and think of hydrophobia for no small sum."

"I can't never pay dat sum."

"Then I'll see you!"

"Very well, I'll adjourn de suit till de bite gets well, and den whar will your proof be?"

The man reflected a moment, and then said:

"I see. We must come down to physical damages."

The colored man knocked the dog in the head with the spade, and as the animal kicked its last he remarked:

"If you has been bitten by a dog I don't know nuffin about it. I used to own a little dog, but he's dead now!—If dere's any more talk 'bout damages around heah I'll climb over de fence and hurt some white man!"

There wasn't any more talk.—Detroit Free Press.

There was no preaching in this town last Sunday, and all in consequence of a practical joke perpetrated by a lively young girl. The young girl, inspired by the world, the flesh and a little devil mixed, sat down, late on Saturday evening, and sent a note to each of the pastors. The missives were on tinted paper, and written nicely. They each contained these words: "All is discovered—fly." Nine of the preachers fled to St. Louis, and three went West. There is a sensation in town larger than a man's hand.—Ex.

This is the season when a man follows the lovely being whom he adores to a Summer hotel, and sees her eating green corn on the cob with both hands, at the dinner table, and immediately pays his bill and goes home and takes to drink.

A Bumpkin once dining with the Governor of Rhode Island, where part of the entertainment consisted of champagne and preserved limes, was asked, at the conclusion, by his host, how he liked the dinner. He replied, "Well, guv'nor, your cider's very good, but hang your pickles!"

NEW JERSEY Enamel Paint Company,
RARITAN, NEW JERSEY.
Manufacturers of
Bradley's Enamel Paint.
Mixed Ready for Use, in any shade, Tint or Color desired.

THESE Paints are composed of the purest and best materials known to painters; the principal ingredients being Pure White LEAD, ZINC, and LINSEED OIL, which are made soluble in a homogeneous mass by the addition of other materials which add greatly to the durability, elasticity, beauty and strength of the Paint. The whole are chemically combined so that the pigments are held in permanent solution, thus forming a new compound which dries on the surface and adheres firmly to it, thus forming a Smooth, Glossy, Firm, Elastic, Beautiful and Durable Paint.

The Oil, which is the real life of the Paint, instead of being absorbed by the substance to which it is applied, as it does in paints mixed in the ordinary way, & thus leave the pigment dry and chalky, to wash & rub off in few months. This paint is composed by chemical process, is perfectly impervious to the action of water, is well adapted to all classes of work, & is in every particular a better paint for either inside or outside work of most paints than any other paint known to the trade, and will last at least three times as long as the best Lead and Oil mixed in the ordinary way.

These Paints are Ready for use,
Are easily applied by any one, require no mixing, stirring or addition of dryers.

Liberal Inducements to Dealers.
And full satisfaction guaranteed to their Customers.

Sold by the Gallon, Keg or Barrel. Orders attended to promptly. For Price List and Sample Color Card, Address,

POETRY.

THE BATTLE OF OUR LIFE.

BY REV. EDW. C. JONES.

Up to the strife with care,
Be thine an naked heart,
Life's daily contest nobly share,
Nor act a craven part;
Give murmurs to the coward throng,
Be thine the joyous notes of song.

If thrown upon the field,
Up to the task once more,
'Tis worse than infamy to yield,
'Tis childish to deplore;
Look stern misfortune in the eye,
And breast the billow manfully.

Close in with every foe,
As thickly as they come,
They can but lay the body low,
And send thy spirit home;
Yet mayst thou about it out and view,
What giant energy can do.

Soon shall the combat cease,
The struggle fierce and long,
And thine be true, unbroken peace,
And thine the victor's song;
Beyond the clouds will wait for thee,
The wreath of immortality!

NATURE'S TEACHINGS.

BY RICHARD COE, JR.

Falleth now from off a tree,
A withered leaf;
This the lesson taught to me,
Life is brief!
Hear it say,
Mortal, soon thou'lt follow me
To decay!

Droppeth now from off my head,
A silver hair;
Plainer preacher never said,
For death prepare!
Filled with gloom,
We follow Time with solemn tread,
To the tomb!

Mounteth now on wings of air,
To the sky,
A little dew-drop, pure and clear,
Far up on high,
Hear it say,
All above the earth is fair,
Watch and pray!
Night or sorrow come not here,
'Tis perfect day!

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

UNLOCKING A HEART.

BY IDA E. BARTON.

At the age of thirty, Allen Moore married, taking for his wife pretty Mary Graham.—He had been waiting until he might commence the new life fairly and independently. He did not hope to be independent of toil and fatigue; but he had planned that he and Mary should work together, and perhaps, in the coming years, find a competence upon which to enjoy healthful repose. Allen was a lawyer, with a fair practice; and he had promised himself that when Mary became his wife she would help him in his labors; not that she would delve for him into the mysteries of law, or do the drudgery of copying; but he looked for sympathy and love, for a love that should make his labors light, and for a sympathy upon which he could rest for confidence.

Allen Moore had known that Mary had her faults; but he had also known that her heart was good and true, and in his great love he found the assurance of peace and joy. But a season of disappointment was to come.

They had been married three years, and a cloud was upon the household. And whose was the fault? Allen examined himself very closely, but he could not discover that he had done wrong. And yet, Mary was neither happy herself, nor did she try to make him happy. His business had increased until he had as much upon his hands as he could possibly attend to; he labored early and late; he toiled without ceasing; but the sympathy which he had expected at home was not his. The result was that he often wore a cloud upon his brow. Expecting coldness when he entered his home, he came with compressed lips; he did not seek it.

Allen Moore wondered whether he had been mistaken in his estimate of Mary; had he given her credit for good that she did not possess? Certainly there was little of the good now to bless him, but evil continually. In short, his home was very far from being a happy one, and open rupture was frequent. Mary had become fretful and fault-finding, and instead of sympathizing with her husband in his engrossing and oft times perplexing business, she would not permit him to mention his business in the house.

Mary was growing to have sharp features, and the old look of beauty was disappearing. But upon Allen the change was working with deeper effect. He was growing thin and pale, and there were shoots of pain and mysterious throbbings at the heart; and the pain was growing deeper.

Why was it? Was the good all gone, or had the tares only come up and outgrown the good—tares that might have been rooted out long ago, if the hand of prudence and skill had been applied? Had the heart been locked up, and all its good hidden from the fructifying light? If so, why could not some kind power unlock the closed heart, and set the blessings free?

The good genius was at hand.

Dr. Ralph Graham, Mary's uncle, had seen the gathering cloud, and had marked the progress of the deepening gloom. He had known both the husband and the wife from their infancy; and he had loved them both, and when he now saw them thus unhappy, he wondered if he could not help them. He knew that the greater fault was Mary's; and he knew, too, that she yet had a preponderance of good in her heart. He knew that she had in that heart the [illegible] of sympathies; the noblest of impulses; and the fount of a true and enduring love. He knew because in other years he had seen them; and he knew that the good of the human heart cannot wholly die. It may be choked up, it may wither and shrink; and it may be crushed down beneath the superincumbent weight of evil; but while the human heart hath pulsation of life it may be probed to the fountain of good, and in its darkest night it shall yield flashes of generous impulse.

Dr. Graham—or "Uncle Ralph," as Mary called him—had been the family physician when she was a babe, and he was a man of science as well as of experience and skill. Lately he had been called to prescribe for Allen, who was troubled more and more with that uncomfortable throbbing of the heart.

I cannot tell what Uncle Ralph really thought. He may have thought just as another experienced physician would have thought, that the [illegible] was simply the result of indigestion; and that the dull pain came from [illegible] sympathy; and, further, that the cause of the whole lay in nervous derangement consequent upon mental [illegible] labor. But, be that as it may, he resolved that he would make use of Allen's heart in unlocking the heart of his wife.

"Uncle Ralph, what do you really think of Allen?"

"Mary, do you want me to tell you the truth?" He spoke very seriously, and with a grave look.

"The truth, uncle?" she repeated, with a startled expression. "You do not think there is anything serious?"

"What can be more serious than a disease of the heart?"

"But Allen has no such thing."

"My dear girl, you must not deceive yourself. You may not keep Allen with you long. Excessive labor—ambition to achieve great results, and a want of healthful recreation, have strained his heart more than it will bear. I tell you plainly, Allen is dying."

"Dying!"

"Yes—surely. It is but a question of time. We may save him to prolonged and useful life if we can remove the cause of his disease. Have you not observed how pale and thin he has grown? and have you not marked how often the pain comes to his heart? Alas! poor Allen! I dare not tell him how near he is to the brink! I spoke with him once—a few days ago—upon the subject. I told him there was danger."

"You told him? And how did it affect him?"

"He only smiled, and shook his head."

"Smiled?"

"Yes; but with tears in his eyes. He says if he could only leave his wife and child well and comfortably provided for, he should be willing to go. That was when he had a great pain in his heart."

Mary arose, and went and placed her hand upon the doctor's shoulder.

"Uncle Ralph!—do you—do you—tell me truly?"

"I only tell you what I fear, my child. I tell you what is possible, aye, what is inevitable, sooner or later, if Allen continues to be so overworked. But do not tell him what I have told you; it might break him down at once. He must not fail and die now, in the noontide of life, if mortal power can save him. But, my little girl, you must be prepared; the blow may fall at any time. These heart-troubles are most treacherous. It is for you to make his pillow smooth, and give him comfort for the few short days that—"

"Oh, uncle—uncle, do not say so! Oh, my soul! Allen must not die! Better, a thousand times, that I should go, and leave him to live his bright and useful life!"

Dr. Graham drew his weeping niece to his bosom, and gently whispered, "stay with him, Mary, and give him strength, and hope and courage. While I give him such medicine as I have to give, be it yours to draw him away from his labors when you can, and make his burdens light. Let us do this, and leave the rest with God."

After her uncle had gone, Mary moved about the house like one awakened from a troubled dream, gathering up the threads of the past, and weaving them into the woof of the present. How the old love burned up, and how dear to her were the memories of the brighter times! Her husband dying? oh, it could not be—it should not be!

And yet—and yet—what could she do if the die was fatally cast? Ah! she could bless him while he lived. Yes, she could do that.

That evening when Allen Moore returned to his home, his wife met him in the hall, and put her hands up to his shoulders, and then kissed him.

"You are late, Allen. Dinner has been waiting for you."

"But you have not waited, Mary?"

"Yes, Allen. I could not eat alone this evening."

"You could not?"

He spoke like one in a dream.

"No. I wanted the light of the other times, Allen, the light which only your own presence can give."

And she helped him to remove his overcoat; and when he had pulled off his boots, and put on the slippers which she had ready for him, she led the way to the dining room.

His old favorite dishes, the silver bright and clean; the china, drinking the gaslight into its translucent substance; the napkins, white, like snow; and the food as she knew he preferred it; and, above all, her own face, wearing a smile of the old sweetness, presiding over the scene.

Was he dreaming or was it real? Almost afraid to speak, lest a breath might dispel the happy illusion, he drank in the joy of the occasion. When the meal was concluded Allen rose from the table.

"Now, now, Allen! Where are you going?"

"To my own room, Mary. I have papers to copy."

"Cannot others do your copying?"

"There are papers which I dare not trust to other eyes."

"But you will trust me, Allen?"

"Trust—you!"

"Yes. If you will explain to me the work and leave them with me to-morrow, I will copy them for you. You know I write well."

"Mary!"

"Oh, Allen! my husband! my own true love!" She had moved up and laid her hand upon his shoulder, "you are working too hard. If you will let me help you, I will help you now; and by-and-by you shall rest. We will go away among the green fields, and the brooks, and the hills."

"Mary! My darling! What music is this?" He took her to his bosom, with his arms twined closely around her.

"Allen, I have been unmindful of your good, and I have been very miserable; but I will be so no more. If you will let me help you! if you will give me back your love and your trust; if you will lean upon me when you are weak, and rest upon my bosom when you are in pain; if you will forgive me for all the wrong and error, I will bless heaven, and take courage; and we will be happy always while we live!"

Oh, blessed, happy hour; blessing and happiness reaching out into all the coming years! The heart had been unlocked, and the flood of true love, gushing out into a current broad and strong, had washed away the stains of evil, and purified the temple; and upon the sacred altar of their home the vestal fires burned brightly.

A year had passed when Mary said, as she stood and looked up into her husband's face, "Allen, how strong and well you have grown! You don't know how proud and happy it makes me."

He caught her to his bosom, and held her there.

"My blessed wife! how could I help being strong and well beneath the influence of a love like yours. I owe you much, darling—very much. I cannot tell you how happy I am!"

And Mary knew that the fountain of goodness in her heart could never be closed up again while sense and memory were hers.

BASHFUL JOHN.

John Patterson was driving his venerable horse slowly homeward from the little village of [illegible].

They were passing the low lying farm of Nathan Wynn, and John, not daring for the life of him to turn his head, rolled his great black eyes toward the old-fashioned farm-house, in the hope of catching a glimpse of Kitty, the farmer's comely daughter. But though John kept his eyes turned in their sockets till his head ached fearfully, he saw nothing of Kitty.

John was desperately in love with Kitty Wynn, and had been so for many a day, and yet he dare not tell her so.

He generally managed to bow to her when he met her, but even that brought a great lump into his throat, and turned his face the color of a peony.

As John passed over a little knoll and out of sight of the house, the farmer's great orchard—the trees ready to break down under the weight of ripe fruit—was before him.

"What a while that miller kept me waiting for my grist. I'm as hungry as a bear, I must have a pocket full of those beauties to eat on my way home."

And with this John drew rein, scaled the fence, and struck out for his favorite tree.

He knew as well as Mr. Wynn did where the best apples were to be found.

John filled his pockets, and was about to retrace his steps to the wagon, when he caught the flutter of a pink dress through a cluster of trees, and heard Kitty's merry voice in conversation with some one.

Stealing a hasty glance through the trees, John recognized Kitty's companion to be cousin Hetty Shaw, from the village.

They were coming directly toward the tree under which John was standing.

What in the world was he to do?

He did not fancy running away like a detected thief, and his trembling knees and palpitating heart warned him that if he did not wish to die then and there, he must seek a place of concealment.

To add to John's embarrassment he was conscious that he was not in the least "tidied up."

He was in every day garb. To make the matter worse, his clothes were covered with flour, which had somehow got on while waiting for grist at the mill.

John glanced up into a tree, but the foliage was not thick and there was little chance for a hiding place there.

Near the tree was an inverted hogshead which had been used for a stand to pick apples from the tree.

The hogshead had once been used as a temporary dog-kennel, and a hole, perhaps eighteen inches in diameter, had been made to admit the dog.

There was no time to be lost.

The hogshead offered the only retreat within the trembling young man's reach, and he was not long in squeezing himself inside of it.

The girls came on, and sat down on the grass right where John, stooping down and peeping through the circular hole, could watch them.

Kitty, he thought, looked prettier and brighter than ever in her pink dress, and the sun, which was setting in the west, made her brown hair as golden as the apples in her lap.

Kitty held up an apple by the stem, saying:

"Name it, Hetty; but not Will Joice, nor Jerry Davis, nor—"

"Then stop; the apple is named," said Hetty, merrily.

Kitty pared and eat her apple, carefully saving all the seeds.

When she had them all in her chubby hand, she then came for Hetty to spell the name.

Touching each seed with her finger Hetty spelled:

"J-o-h-n P-a-t-t-e-r-s-o-n. It spells exactly. Why, Kitty, what are you blushing so for? One would think that fellow's name was spelled out in your heart in indelible letters by the way you look."

Kitty said nothing, though she looked uncommonly sober for her, John thought, and he wondered if the girls didn't hear his heart beat.

He thought, too, that Kitty was angry that any one would suppose that she cared for him.

How humble he felt; he could scarcely tell why; his cheeks burned with wounded pride.

"Now, really, Kitty," said her cousin with a bantering laugh, "if you don't drive away that forlorn look, I shall think that you care more for him than your pride will let you acknowledge for that great awkward booby, who hasn't courage, and never will have, to ask you to have him."

"Hush, Hetty!" said Kitty, as she rose to her feet, and her cheek had a flush of deepest crimson. "You do not know John Patterson as we do. He is not awkward at home with his mother. You ought to see how kind and considerate he is to her.—Father drops in there often, and he says there isn't a more noble hearted man to be found. John is industrious; do you know what he does with his money? Father says he is paying off the mortgage on his mother's little farm, and when he has a few pounds more than is necessary for a payment he spends them for books. Mark my words, Hetty, John Patterson will yet be a man that you will be proud to class among your friends; he has intellect of no common order—it's only his great bashfulness that keeps him back now."

"Now, Kitty, you are too absurd," and Hetty laughed as though she thought her companion in jest. "Well, it is leap year; and you had better offer yourself to this paragon; I don't believe he will refuse."

"I know no one whom I would sooner marry—so there!"

And Kitty's face was scarlet with blushes, as she made this frank acknowledgment to her cousin.

But John was not looking at her now.

He was engaged in the most remote part of the hogshead, trying by different gestures to drive away a huge mastiff which threatened to make his whereabouts known.

The sun had gone down, and John's hungry horse had quietly walked home, and still the two girls chatted away.

"Well, Bruno, what have you got there? I'm sure you have been whining and pawing there for half an hour at least."

And Hetty came forward and patted the dog's hairy back.

"Why, Kitty, there is some dreadful animal in here. What a pair of eyes it has.—Thank my nerves, if uncle and Charlie are away I can fire a gun. I'll soon show what that horrid creature is. In my opinion here is where your geese have gone to. I'll warrant the ground in there is strewn with bones. You and Bruno keep watch, while I run to the house for a gun."

Hetty rattled all this off in a breathless fashion, and before Kitty had time to look at the "dreadful animal," her cousin was on her way to the house.

What was John to do now? Stay where he was or crawl from his lair like a Hottentot from his hut, and right before Kitty's eyes too?

The faithful dog began to wag his tail, and whine with renewed [illegible], and John thought the gun was really coming. Life was sweeter to him now, since hearing what Kitty had said of himself, than ever before, and creeping to the opening he began coming out.

Kitty, who was peeping anxiously in, saw that the creature was moving toward her, and giving a spasmodic little scream, she sank helplessly to the ground, and covered her face with her apron. Kitty's [illegible] made John for the moment forget that he was the most bashful of men alive, and quickly the arms which Kitty felt encircling her waist was not those of a wild beast.

Knowing this, it did not need a great amount of courage to [illegible] uncover her face, and see that the great eyes that had so frightened her belonged to John Patterson.

It is strange that neither she nor John, during the half hour they tarried under the apple tree, thought of Hetty or the gun she had gone to bring.

Perhaps neither would have remembered Hetty's boasted nerve in connection with the use of that weapon again, had not the young lady herself, two years later, reminded a certain happy bridegroom and his equally happy bride of the incident, and informed them that she knew all the time that John was in the hogshead, as she saw him put himself there, and that her part of the conversation under the apple tree was indulged in solely with a view to encourage the bashful lover to propose.

Mrs. John Patterson scolded her cousin bridesmaid for her duplicity, but for all that it was plain to be seen that she was not angry, especially since Hetty had that day acknowledged that she was glad to class her cousin's handsome husband among her friends.

S'POSIN'.

While Judge Copley was sitting in his office the other day, looking over some law papers, the door opened and a man hobbled in upon crutches. Proceeding to a chair, and making a cushion of some newspapers, he sat down very gingerly, placed a bandaged leg upon another chair and said:

"Judge, my name is Briggs. I called in, Judge, to get your opinion about a little point of law. Mr. Judge, s'posin' you lived up the 'pike here half a mile, next door to a man named Johnson. And s'posin' you and Johnson was to get into an argument about the human intellect, and you was to say to Johnson that a splendid illustration of the superiority of the human intellect was to be found in the power of the human eye to restrain the ferocity of a wild animal.—And s'posin Johnson was to remark that that was all bosh, because nobody could hold a wild animal with the human eye; and you should declare that you could hold the savagest beast that was ever born if you could once fix your gaze on him.

"Well, then, s'posin' Johnson was to say he'd bet a hundred dollars he could bring a tame animal that you couldn't hold with your eye, and you was to take up him on it and Johnson was to ask you to come down to his place to settle the bet. You'd go we'll say, and Johnson 'd wander round to the back of the house and pretty soon come front again with a dog bigger'n any four decent dogs ought to be. And then s'posin Johnson 'd let go of that dog and sick him on you, and he'd come at you like a sixteen inch shell out of a howitzer, and you'd get skeery about it and try to hold the dog with your eye and couldn't. And s'posin' you'd suddenly conclude that maybe your kind of an eye wasn't calculated to hold that kind of a dog, and you'd conclude to break for a plum tree, in order to have a chance to collect your thoughts, and to try to reflect what sort of an eye would be best calculated to mollify that sort of a dog. You ketch my idea, of course?

"Very well, then; s'posin' you'd take your eye off of that dog; Johnson, mind you, all the time sicking him on and laughing, and you'd turn and leg it for the tree, and begin to swarm up as fast as you could. Well, sir, s'posin' just as you got three feet from the ground, Johnson's dog would grab you by the leg and hold on like a vise, shaking you until you nearly lost your hold. And s'posin' Johnson was to stand there and holler, 'Fix your eye on him, Briggs. Why don't you manifest the power of the human intellect?' and so on—gassing away with ironical remarks like those; and s'posin' he kept that dog on that leg until he made you swear to pay the bet, and then, at last, had to pry off the dog with a hot poker, bringing away at the same time half a pound of your meat in the dog's mouth, so that you had to be carried home on a stretcher, and hire four doctors to keep you from dying with lockjaw.

"S'posin' this, what I want to know is, couldn't you sue Johnson for damages, and make him pay heavily for what that dog did? That's what I want to get at."

The judge thought for a minute and then said:

"Well, Mr. Briggs, I don't think I could. If I agreed to let Johnson sic the dog at me, I should be a party to the transaction, and I could not recover."

"Do you mean to say that the law won't make that infernal scoundrel, Johnson, suffer for letting his dog eat me up?"

"I think not, if you state the case properly."

"It won't, hey?" exclaimed Mr. Briggs, hysterically. "Oh, very well! very well! It's a beautiful government, this is! Beautiful, ain't it? I s'pose if that dog had chawed me all up, and spit me out 'd 've been all the same to this constitutional republic. Blame me if I don't have satisfaction. I'll kill Johnson, poison his dog, and emigrate to some country where the rights of citizens are protected. If I don't, you may bu'st me open!"

Then Mr. Briggs got on his crutches and hobbled out. He is still a citizen and will vote at the next election.—[Max Adeler, in The Illustrated Weekly.

FRITZ'S TROUBLES.

Fritz has had more trouble with his neighbor. This time he determined to appeal to the majesty of the law, and accordingly consulted a legal gentleman.

"How vos dose tings," he said, "ven a valere's got a garden und de oder valere's got some chickens vat um up? Don't you got some law for dose?"

"Some one's chicken's been destroying your garden?" asked the lawyer.

"Shtaw is mine garden! Nine, it vos vegetables."

"And the chickens committed depredation on them?"

"Ish dot so?" asked Fritz in astonishment.

"And you want to sue him for damages?" continued the lawyer.

"Yaas. Gott for tamages, und de cabbages, und de lettuges."

"Did you not notify him to keep his chickens up?"

"Yaas, I nodify him."

"And he refused to comply with your just demand?"

"Hey?"

"He allowed his chickens to run at large?"

"Yaas. Some vos large, und some vos leetle valeres, but dey vos scratch mine garden there as de [illegible]."

"Well, you want to sue him?"

"Yaas, I vant to sue him to make vos blank fence up sixteen feet his house all around, vot de dame chickens don't get over."

The lawyer informed him he could not compel the man to build such a fence, and Fritz left in a rage, exclaiming:

"Next Summer time I raise chickens too, you bate. I raise fighting chickens, py tam!"—[illegible] News.

CENTENNIAL BISCUIT.

Make a good hasty pudding; boil till the meal is well cooked. Set aside to cool.—When milk warm, to every quart of the pudding work in flour sufficient to make stiff dough. Then make into biscuits, put in the bake pan and let them stand in a warm place over night. Bake for breakfast in a hot oven and eat while hot.

A newsboy says of the new star-spangled handkerchief, "If any man shall blow a blow at the American flag, spot him on the snoot."

VERY HARD TO PLEASE.

There is a gentleman in this city who has acquired the habit of going to a fruit stand and after pricing the melons, etc., and eating about five cents' worth of peanuts, he objects to the price, and does not buy anything.

Yesterday the fruit man made up his mind to sell him something, anyhow.

"How much are those melons?" inquired the peanut fiend.

"Five cents a piece."

"Can I pick my melon?"

"Take the biggest you can find."

"Let me plug 'em to find a ripe one?"

"Here's a knife; slit 'em wide open."

"Don't you throw in a banana?"

"Always."

"Whew! If I had any way to get the melon home I'd believe I'd invest."

"Just say the word, and I'll send you both home in a new hack, and give you ninety days to pay for the melon."

"Melons are going to be cheaper after a while, but if the chromo suits I'll take the melon. No chromo in it is there? Let me see the chromo?"

"What chromo?"

"Why you ought to be able to throw in a chromo if you mean business. I always get a chromo for each transaction like that.—Sorry can't trade." And he picked up a handful of peanuts and sauntered out.

A TOUCHING TALE.

He was a seedy looking individual, and as he stood upon the corner, gazing wistfully at the disappearing form of a newsboy, who had just picked up a good sized stump, there was a vague space of despair in the attitude which was very touching. Perhaps it was this which attracted the attention of a mild-looking party who was passing by, and perhaps it was something else; but, however this may be, the mild-looking party stopped and, gazing at the solitary figure, addressed it thus:

"Old man, wouldn't you like to have a drink this morning?"

"You've read me as accurately as though my thoughts were printed on an open page," replied the solitary, taking his quid from his mouth and passing a dilapidated coat-sleeve over his lips.

"I thought so," murmured the mild-looking party, while a tear trickled down his cheek; "but conquer the desire. Fight it as you would a legion of devils, for drink has ruined many a man who had a more expansive forehead than you've got!"

And then the mild-looking party continued on his way, and the solitary gazed dreamily into space and communed with himself.—Evansville Argus.

Democratic Nominations.

For President,
SAMUEL J. TILDEN,
OF NEW YORK.

For Vice President,
THOS. A. HENDRICKS,
OF INDIANA.

FOR CONGRESS—FOURTH DISTRICT.
ALVAH A. CLARK,
OF SOMERSET COUNTY.

Democratic Congressional Convention.

The Democratic Electors of the several Counties, Townships and Wards, composing the Third Congressional District of New Jersey, are requested to meet at their respective polling places for the purpose of appointing delegates to the Democratic Third District Convention to be held at Freehold, on TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER the 26th, at 12 o'clock noon, to nominate a candidate to represent the Third District in the ensuing Congress, and to transact such other business as may be brought before the Convention.

Each Township and Ward will be entitled to a representation in said Convention of one delegate to every one hundred Democratic votes cast at the last gubernatorial election, and one for each fraction of the same, over fifty.

A. W. JONES,
Chairman of last Convention.

ANOTHER MEETING.

The Democracy of Plainfield will hold another Ratification Meeting at Laing's Hall, Thursday Evening, Sept. 28, inst. Prominent speakers will address the meeting, among whom, it is anticipated will be ex-Gov. Joel Parker. Further notice will be given.

LIKE THE REST.

It is surprising to what base means reckless politicians will resort in their mad endeavors to hold on to power and plunder. There is no falsity too brazen, no trick too disreputable, no personal abuse too venomous for the attainment of their ends.

Happily, falsehood convicts itself, and personal vilification disgusts decent people.

Among the multitude of infamous untruths uttered against the Democratic party by the Grant-Hayesites is that of a design to allow, when in a dominant position, Southern War claims.

The absurdity of such a charge is disclosed by the fact that the Constitution expressly forbids the allowance of any Southern war claims, the pensioning of any Confederate soldiers, or payment for any slave property.

The Democratic party never would do the silly act unscrupulous opponents in their desperate warfare allege, and if the intention did exist, it could not be carried into effect, because the Constitution imposes an impassable barrier.

The foregoing, like all the other charges against Democracy and its candidates, carries with it the stamp of malignant untruth.

Vote for
TILDEN AND HENDRICKS.

REAL ISSUES.

The Maryland Democratic State Convention truthfully declared the real issues of the present political campaign to be—

Reform in the administration of the Federal Government, throughout every department.

Reform in the currency.
Reform in the revenue.
Reform in expenditure.
Reform in taxation.
Reform in the civil service.

Those are the issues, and neither the calumny of unprincipled journals and speakers, nor the artful schemes of desperate office-holders, and corrupt party managers, can hide them from public scrutiny and thought.

Reform is the battle-cry of Democracy.

To carry it into practical effect, for the welfare of the people and the honor of country, is the pledged purpose of TILDEN AND HENDRICKS.

DEMOCRACY.

Some Grant-Hayes editors speak about "burying the old Democratic party out of sight forever."

It is astonishing what absurdities men calling themselves sane will utter.

Bury the Democratic party out of sight.

How they would like to do it, if they could, and how hard political intrigue has striven to accomplish that purpose for the past seventy-six years!

The hope is vain.

As well attempt to lower the Atlantic Ocean with a mop, or level the Rocky Mountains with a tooth-pick.

You cannot excavate a hole large enough for the Democratic party, noble grave diggers!

The Democratic party cannot be killed, and it will never be buried.

It was born with the Republic.

Its principles and civil freedom are identical.

Its measures have given to the American people about all the bona fide prosperity they ever enjoyed, and its stern fidelity to the Constitution forms the brightest chapter of national glory.

It has survived every imaginable species of opposition, springing from defeat with renewed energy, and battling again and again for the supremacy of popular Rights.

It has seen many proud parties languish and die, and it will live to witness the obsequies of that which now seeks to fasten upon a suffering country the frauds, corruption, extravagance and centralized tyranny of Grantism.

Since Tilden—and Tilden will be President—[illegible] Hayes and nobody knows who the President will be. It may be Morton, or [illegible], or [illegible], or Chandler, or Ben [illegible], or possibly a company composed of the whole five beauties.

THE RIGHT MAN.

The Grant-Hayes partisans, drawing inspiration from that fount of political calumny, the New York Times, started a fierce tirade against Governor Tilden's former connection with some Western Railroads.

The whole pack, large, small and medium sized—Tray, Blanche and Sweetheart, barked vociferously for a time, but of late have become quite subdued.

Possibly, the Boss at Washington, finding they were on an unprofitable hunt, called off and demanded silence.

Thousands of votes were made for the Democratic candidate by that malevolent piece of Chandlerism.

The people sought after facts, and finding them, as they easily did, inwardly resolved that a man whose legal judgment, practical business tact, and economic supervision could raise Railroad investments from almost worthlessness to a dividend paying par value and keep them there, was the very man to put an end to fraud and wanton waste in the National Government—the best man in the whole United States for President.

That is the popular verdict, and truth sustains it.

JUMPING JACK.

There is a somewhat notorious politician in Northern New York largely interested in Canal matters. From being an active Republican, and as such serving several terms in the Legislature, a year or two ago he jumped over into the Democratic party and was sent as a delegate to the St. Louis Convention. He opposed the nomination of Governor Tilden there, and now, having jumped back to where he properly belongs, opposes his election through a public speech.

All of which is characteristic of the politician and not in the least degree hurtful to the Governor.

Exposure and prosecution of the Canal Thieves is Governor Tilden's offending act in the estimation of the trading politician.

Ring Robbers, Post Traders and Fraud Contractors are bitterly hostile to the election of Samuel J. Tilden as President of the United States.

He will scatter the whole corrupt gang.

VOTE FOR TILDEN!

GIVE US THE NAMES.

The Republican party being on their defense in the matter of "Honesty and Reform" vs. Robbery, et. al., have produced some ingenious yet very incompetent evidence for the reason that it does not in the remotest degree go to show their innocence, but in a manner tends as they suppose to prove their opponent's guilt of the crimes they themselves are charged with. Now we take it, every one knows the old axiom, that "two wrongs don't make one right," yet so far as that may be we can most plainly show the fallacy of their hypocritical conclusions, and that instead of the case being as they attempt to make others believe the facts as adduced by them most conclusively prove the honesty of former Democratic administrations. With apparent sincerity they refer to the archives at Washington, where may be found a list of defaulters to the government, who held office under Democratic rule, with the amounts each one has been short of in his accounts when called upon for a settlement by the proper authorities—in short, the sum that each one has defrauded the government of. They have even made a calculation to show the percentage of such robberies, making it appear that such percentage was greater under Democratic rule than at any other time. We do not propose going to Washington to personally inspect such documents. For argument's sake we will admit their figures, but what do they prove? Why, most conclusively, that this great Democratic party founded on Jeffersonian Republican principles never did let any guilty man escape; whatever short-comings there were of their office-holders is plainly to be seen; with them there was no let up with such men. Now, how is it with the Republican party since they have held the reins of government? They have preached yet did not practice according to their text; with the exception of a few scape-goats, all have gone free. It has been the indefensible aim and intention of this faction to protect, not punish, such disreputable crime. They make a nice distinction yet without any difference, for we call, especially, attention to the fact that it is to defaulters alone they would draw notice. Well enough, but why not go farther, let us know something and have some statistics of the defrauders, peculators and petty pilferers, inasmuch as for every dollar robbed from the people by the defaulter, thousands and tens of thousands have been purloined by these class of robbers, who have and still are occupying offices, from the highest grade to the lowest. Let us have a list of the office-holders under all administrations who have entered upon their duties poor men and came out rich; let there be included in such roll those holding office to-day who have amassed fortunes since their appointment. Then give us a percentage, and the Democratic peculations will dwindle down to a mere atom in comparison with the gigantic thieving and stealing of the so-called Republican party. The enlightened public cannot be blinded by such figures as they can adduce. It is well to judge of the future by the past, and in this connection it is hardly necessary for us to say that SAMUEL J. TILDEN has been one of the foremost to uproot all corruption. He cannot and will not go back. "Forward and Reform" is a fit motto well worthy this great and good leader in his stupendous, yet successful efforts for reformation.

[illegible]

We welcome to our ranks every man who desires a change in the government, whatever his name or color, and we gratefully accept aid and support from any organization or individual that desires to work with the Democratic party in rescuing the government from unworthy hands, at the same time acknowledging the important assistance heretofore received from these valuable sources.

ALVAH A. CLARK.

Since the nomination of the above gentleman for Congress in the Fourth District his enemies and political opponents have sought to revile and cast odium upon his name, hoping thereby to cause an independent ticket to be put in the field, which would not only be the means of probably electing a Republican to the office, but would cast a stain upon the democracy of the District. Mr. Clark is an able, honest man, and will make a worthy representative. We clip the following from that staunch Democratic journal, the Hunterdon Co. Democrat, which explains the situation:

The latest number of the Somerset Unionist has nearly a column of "bosh," entitled "Interview of our Reporter with a Democrat," given in the form of a dialouge, in which an imaginary Democrat is made to utter all kinds of charges against our worthy candidate for Congress, Hon. A. A. Clark. It is seldom we pay any attention to such a massive pack of lies as have been here collected together. Like all such "roorbacks" just enough truth is put in to make the lies look plausible. Mr. Clark, indeed, was indicted by a Somerset jury that we doubt not was composed of competent men; now, where the lie comes in is just here; after the indictment the parties (as is often the case,) who had Mr. Clark indicted, with the wholesome fear of a cross examination and a fair trial in open court before them, faint by the way, and refuse or neglect to have the matter moved.—Our understanding is that the indictment is now some years old, that Mr. Clark was ever anxious to have it tried, and dared his opponents to bring it before any proper tribunal; and that any one ever "heard that some of the members of the bar did consider it their duty to bring the matter to the notice of the Supreme Court," is "bosh" of the greenest kind. Who ever heard of an indictment so obscure that it had to be brought "to the notice of the Supreme Court?" Does not a judge of the Supreme Court preside over the Court that tries indictments? We are sorry that the reporter of the Unionist has to consult either a "sorehead" or a man of straw, and then report such a bundle of "bosh" in the frantic effort to defeat our chosen candidate for Congress.—But its no use. Hon. A. A. Clark will, we hope and believe, live and be elected to high office to which he aspires, and to which his political friends have nominated him, when "soreheads" and men of straw are forgotten.

A few Baltimore roughs, led on by an ex-Federal office-holder, supposed to be the shadow of Zach Chandler, the other night attempted to interfere with a Hayes and Wheeler meeting and were promptly arrested. The Republican journals vehemently style the attack a Democratic outrage, but no indignation have they against those armed Republican rioters in Charleston, South Carolina, who vowed death to every member of a colored Tilden and Hendricks Club. "If you steal my cow you're a thief and a vagabond, but, if I run away with your horse—why—that's nothing."

President Grant, in officially acknowledging a congratulatory letter of the Emperor of Austria relative to the Centennial of the United States, styles that Sovereign as one of "the most renowned and most wonderful nations of the Eastern Hemisphere." When we remember the iron despotism of Austria, and the bitter hostility manifested toward Kossuth and his fellow Republicans of Hungary, we cannot but think that a thinner layer of adulation would have been more consistent with the principles of free government.

The income tax slander against Gov. Tilden, started by that infamous sheet, the New York Times, has met with the refutation it deserves. At the urgent request of the Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, Abraham S. Hewitt, a full and elaborate account of the facts in relation to the monstrous slander has been prepared by Judge Sinnot, who in 1862 was the confidential clerk of Mr. Tilden, and published in the leading New York papers. Mr. Hewitt has prefaced it with a clear and concise statement of the nature and origin of the calumny. The facts as set forth exonerates Gov. Tilden in every particular from the infamous charges set afloat against him by the minions of the present administration. Will Gov. Hayes now clear his skirts of the charges preferred against him regarding his income tax.

Mosby, of Virginia, was a red-hot rebel guerrilla and annoyed the Union soldiers terribly. He was so ardently devoted to the cause of rebellion that he did not want to surrender with Lee. Mosby is now a fine fellow, a first-class loyalist, a Grant office-holder, and, consequently, a warm supporter of Hayes. Wade Hampton, of South Carolina, was a rebel General, he never violated honor, never would accept office from Grant, never joined the Republican party, never did a mean act, and therefore, by the same partisan authority that makes a loyal saint of Mosby stigmatises Hampton as a disloyal sinner. What arrant hypocrisy!

The Indian campaign has ended as the officials of the War Department knew it would end when they were demanding more troops for a winter campaign—in an ignominious fizzle.—The United States troops have been out-marched, out-manœuvred and out-fought; Sitting Bull and his hostiles have gone into winter quarters, and their families are surrendering to the Government, which will have to feed them all winter. It is very superfluous on the part of Gen. Terry to represent the Indians as starving, when the fact is that last week enough food was found in a small camp to keep Crook's whole command from famishing. Gen. Terry had better go South or edit a "campaign supplement."—World.

ANOTHER LIE NAILED.

The last Republican House of Representatives had 132 places to 88; the Democratic House had 122. The Republican House had on its rolls eighteen ex-Union soldiers, six ex-Confederate soldiers and three colored men.—The Democratic House had thirty-five ex-Union soldiers, [illegible] ex-Confederate soldiers and [illegible] colored men. Thus the Democrats, in proportion to the places they had, [illegible] these House as many Union soldiers and [illegible] colored man as the Republicans had appointed.

ALL FOR TILDEN AND HENDRICKS.

The German-American voters through the Western States are supporting Tilden and Hendricks with extraordinary unanimity and enthusiasm.

They are sick of Grantism, official corruption and hard times, and they know Hayesism means the same thing over again.

Hence they come out from the foul party and boldly declare for the champions of reform, economy and prosperity—

TILDEN AND HENDRICKS.

The following list of eminent Germans at the West now advocating the election of the Democratic nominees shows a most remarkable change of political sentiment:

Charles Reemelin, of Cincinnati, who supported Hayes last year.

Emil Hoffman, of Cincinnati, who supported Hayes last year.

Ex-Lieut. Governor Jacob Mueller, of Ohio, elected on the Republican ticket in 1871, who supported Hayes last year.

Judge J. B. Stallo, of Cincinnati, who supported Hayes last year.

Frederick Hassaurek, late editor of the Cincinnati Volksblatt, who supported Hayes last year.

August Thieme, editor of the Cleveland Wachter am Erie, who supported Hayes last year.

Colonel Edward Jussen, of Chicago, brother-in-law of Carl Schurz.

Ex-Governor Koerner, of Illinois.

The lying campaign supplements of the New York Times have no effect upon those gentlemen and their thousands of followers. They act from a conviction of truth, they well know the personal worth and statesmen ability of both Governor Tilden and Governor Hendricks, and furthermore, they know the time has arrived when a change of Administration is of vital necessity for the public good.

Their motto is HONEST GOVERNMENT.

WASHINGTON, September 19.—Additional advices from Ohio continue to confirm the opinion heretofore expressed that the Republican State ticket will be defeated in October. The Radical State Committee have found it impossible to control the German vote, which is quite united against Barnes, the Prohibitionist, who is running for Secretary of State on the Hayes ticket. Colonel Thompson, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, also writes in a private letter received to-day that he sees no reason to doubt a Democratic triumph. The Republicans here are gloomy over their best advices from Ohio, and are now talking about a small majority, even less than that of last year.

WASHINGTON, September 19.—If the Internal Revenue Bureau ever seriously intended to institute a suit against Governor Tilden on his income returns, that intention has been abandoned. It is not pretended at the bureau that there has been filed a scintilla of evidence on which to base a suit. On the contrary, the assessor who made the return to the Treasury is willing to testify that the returns was honestly and properly made, and that nothing can be said against it. The opinion of every ex-Commissioner confirms the returns as legal and proper. This campaign slander has fallen out of sight here, even among Republican officials who were most anxious to keep it alive by any means that would not re-act on themselves.—N. Y. World.

Sitting Bull out-generals the great American army, while Fred Grant, a commissioned officer, is enjoying elegant leisure on board a steam pleasure yacht, cruising around at the public expense. What think you, struggling Workingmen, is it not time to inaugurate Reform by lopping off useless and criminally wasteful Government expenditures!

There are in this country about eighty thousand office-holders quartered upon the National Treasury. Grant's Secretary of the Interior and Hayes' Chairman of Executive Committee assesses each thirty dollars, making an aggregate corruption fund of nearly two and a half million dollars to be used in defeating, if possible, the cause of Reform.

Arkansas gave 40,000 Democratic majority without a single disturbance on election day. Arkansas has as many electoral votes for President as Vermont. Our Republican friends have not yet heard from Arkansas, but they are over-joyed to learn that Vermont remains loyal to Belknap, Babcock and Boutwell.

A colored man from Arkansas recently spoke at a Democratic meeting in Albany, N. Y., and denounced in fitting terms the false pretensions of the Republican party. Colored voters are flocking to the Democratic standard all over the South, and Cameron's army cannot bayonet them into political slavery!

The disgraceful spectacle is now presented to American eyes, of a Cabinet Minister, drawing an enormous salary from the Treasury, and neglecting official duty in order to conduct a political campaign for the retention of himself and the like in office. Is not Reform a vital necessity, Tax-payers?

"No party, corrupted by the long possession of power, will correct its own abuses. That can only be done by a change of administration."

General Joseph Hooker, of valiant fame, who achieved the title of "Fighting Joe," boldly proclaims himself in favor of Tilden and Hendricks.

General Franz Sigel, of New York, a brave officer of the Union Army, and heretofore a Republican, now supports Tilden and Hendricks.

General Wm. F. Bartlett, of Massachusetts, who earned distinguished military honors, supports Tilden and Hendricks.

There were 95,000 people on the Centennial Grounds last Tuesday and [illegible] on Wednesday.

The great [illegible], at Hell Gate, is now announced to take place at 2:41 p. m., next Sunday.

GRAND LODGE OF ODD FELLOWS.

PHILADELPHIA, September 19.—The Right Worshipful Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows reassembled this morning, Grand Sire Durham presiding.

After the opening of the Lodge with prayer, a telegram was received and read from the Thomas Wildey Lodge and Anglo-American Encampment, of London, saluting the Grand Lodge. A suitable reply was ordered to be sent.

The question of admitting Indians to membership was introduced by the Committee on Unfinished Business and referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Questions relative to appeals and various other points in the internal administration of the order were acted upon, and a resolution was adopted authorizing an encampment in Dakota and certifying to the constitutional number of Lodges there.

A communication in reference to Lodges working in the Bohemian language was referred to the Committee on the State of the Order.

Other business, of interest only to individual Lodges, was transacted, after which the Grand Lodge proceeded to the election of officers for the ensuing term, with the following result:

Grand Sire—John W. Stokes.
Deputy Grand Sire—J. B. Harmon.
Grand Corresponding and Recording Secretary—James L. Ridgley.
Grand Treasurer—Joseph Vansant.

Representative Dowder made a report recommending the extension of the privilege of the Rebekah Degree to daughters of Odd Fellows. Also the establishment of a new degree entitled "The Degree of Ruth."

The Committee on the State of the Order submitted a report indorsing the action of Dallas Lodge, of Texas, which was referred to the Committee on Appeals.

An invitation to hold the next annual session at Austin, Texas, was accepted, but afterward re-considered and the subject laid on the table.

The official reports read contained the following statistics: Number of grand lodges, 48; subordinate lodges, 9,395; grand encampments, 39; subordinate encampments, 1,796; lodge initiations, 50,043; lodge members, 454,689; encampment members, 87,850; total relief, $1,698,868.92; total revenue, $4,714,241.70.

The report of the Grand Secretary showed the total amount expended for relief for the period embracing the year 1830 to December 31, 1874, to be $22,273,386.63, and the total receipts for the same time, $60,035,926.52. The Grand Treasurer's report showed:—amount on hand Sept. 1, 1875, $16,386.70; received from all sources from Sept. 1, 1875, to Aug. 31, 1876, $40,442.39; total, $56,829.09. Amount expended during the year, $45,392.24. Balance on hand Sept. 1, 1876, $11,436.85.

The Democratic increase in Vermont, over any vote ever before given, was 4,227. Those who looked for a Republican increase haven't seen it yet, though they imagine they heard something drop.

There must be no divisions or factions. Only in unity is their strength. We have a common enemy to fight, who is well fortified, and we can only put him to rout by a combined attack.

Hayes said in his letter that he approved of Grant's manner of running the country. Hayes, therefore, favors Belknapism, Black Fridays, Indian speculations and general official corruption.

Murder Will Out.

A few years ago "August Flower" was discovered to be a certain cure for Dyspepsia and Liver complaint, a few thin Dyspeptics made known to their friends how easily and quickly they had been cured by it. The great merits of GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER became heralded through the country by one sufferer to another, until without advertising, its sale has become immense. Druggists in EVERY TOWN in the United States are selling it.—No person suffering with Sour Stomach, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, indigestion, low spirits, etc., can take three doses without relief. Go to your Druggist, Wm. H. Voorhees, and get a bottle for 75 cents and try it. Sample bottles 10 cents.

For the ladies we call attention to the following:

1. Custom Work.

We have full power and control to make to measure fine shoes on the McComber Patent Last. These we have finished in New York, and at a saving of $1.50 per pair to parties who buy of us. We can explain this to our customers personally and satisfactorily.

2. Ready-Made Work.

A full line in seven widths of the celebrated McComber Patent Fine Shoe, which for fit and elegance has no equal in the world. The only agency (save one) in the state. Made from French Kid, Cur Kid, Straight Grain, Glove Kip, Pebble Goat, at prices varying from $4 to $7.

3. Our Own Work.

Will be our leading specialty for medium price goods for 1876-7. These goods will be nicely made up, all sewed shoes, at the following low rates:

Pebble Button, best,	$2.75
Pebble Button,	2.00
Pebble Lace, best,	2.00
Pebble Lace,	1.50

While other qualities and styles will be equally low. We can also make shoes to order as low as $3.50 and $4.00 per pair, for Ladies' Fall wear.

We call special attention to the following goods of our own make for Misses, Youth and Children:

1. Pebble Button Shoes.

In Lace and Button, ranging from $1 to $2, according to kind, size and quality.

2. Calf Fox Button.

An elegant shoe, extension edge, for $2.50, $2.75 and $3.00.

3. All Calf Button.

Extension edge, for general Fall and Winter wear. A good water-proof shoe at $3 per pair.

GREAT DOWNFALL

LOOK!
The wildest excitement exists in many localities on account of the immense number of tramps who are perambulating over the country,
Out
of work, and many of them would not work if it was tendered them. The most of them are a ragged, thieving, dirty and worthless crew. The exception can be granted to an occasional few,
For
a whole flock of black sheep is truly a rarity. The general depression of business, and lack of employment everywhere has forced many to roam in search of work, and others travel, beg, and steal, because they don't want to work. In this connection we wish to call
Your attention to the fact that we propose to do our level best to keep up the high standard for respectability of this section of country as far as GENTEEL APPEARANCE IN DRESS can do so, and while the wearing of good clothes is no particular safeguard for your Lives and Property
there is no denying the fact that a neat appearing, well dressed man is not likely to get up a scare, equal to a rough and ragged individual. This brings us to
The
great question at issue which is to inform you that our new stock of Clothing is now in, and we are prepared to fit neatly every MAN or BOY, who will come with the cash, in a suit, to please in every respect. Our prices are so very low that the
Tramps
Themselves can readily see that it will be cheaper for them to buy than undertake to beg or steal a new suit. We propose to keep the lead in our line of business. If you

DEMOCRATS!

The Rooms of the Young Men's Tilden & Hendricks Reform Club, corner of North Avenue and Cherry Sts., is open every evening, and plenty of suitable reading matter is furnished visitors.

SEE advertisement of A. Benedict in another column. He wants to purchase some good horses for cash.

J. R. FRANCE has broken ground on the corner of Fourth and Sycamore Streets, for the erection of a dwelling house.

The blowing up of Hell Gate on Sunday next, will be no comparison to the shaking up the Republican party will get Nov. 7th.

THE Waverly Fair opened on Monday last and will close on Friday, 22d inst. The number in attendance each day has been large.

A WHIP was lost from a wagon somewhere on the block bounded by Front, Second, Peace and Cherry Streets. The finder will please return it to this office.

WE learn that there will be an interesting trot on the Driving Park Grounds between horses owned by two well-known gentlemen of this section, one day next week, due notice of which will be given.

THE Night School for Young Men will re-open on Monday, Sept. 25th. The ordinary branches will be taught. Special attention will be given to Writing, Arithmetic and Book-Keeping. For further particulars apply to the Principal, JAMES LYON, Plainfield Ave., near Front St.

From the looks of the loads of Stoves, Ranges and Heaters, unloading in front of Berry & Thorn's, on the corner of Front and Cherry Streets, we think there is no use of going out of the city for any thing in their line. Why not advertise and let the people know what you have?

On account of the stringent condition of the finances of the Boards of Freeholders of Somerset and Union Counties, it has been deemed advisable to build a new line bridge over Green Brook at Water Street, this city. This is unfortunate, as the present structure is unsafe, especially should it be attempted to cross it with a steam fire engine.

WE are informed that our friend Chamberlin, the Crockery dealer, Front Street, sold on Monday last, a Dinner Set, composed of 162 pieces, for $100, cash money. Talk about hard times; but then Chamberlin has the reputation of selling good goods at N. Y. prices, and that, together with his large and carefully selected stock, will draw customers.

We have received a copy of Miss Gardner's new novel, "A Woman's Wiles," and pronounce it, after digesting its contents, a capital book. The Authoress, Miss Celia E. Gardner, is a resident of this city, and has gained great popularity by her recent works of fiction. "A Woman's Wiles" is a work of fiction founded on fact. It is well worthy of perusal.

WE are informed that there is a cat confined in the Old Presbyterian Church, which makes night hideous with its cries. It is supposed the animal has been in there since the Church was used by the Republicans to hold their mass meeting in some time ago. If the cat lived through Pangborn's speech there is no danger of its dying until the Church is opened for the next meeting.

THAT the Democracy of Plainfield is aroused and united is evidenced by the fact that three fine Democratic Clubs are now organized and working harmoniously together in this city. The Young Men's Tilden & Hendricks Reform Club, Plainfield Democratic Association and the Working Men's Club. Plainfield will give a good account of herself in the approaching contest. "Dinna ye hear the slogan?"

ON account of the heavy storm last Sunday evening, the Rev. J. L. Hurlbut, of the Methodist Episcopal church, postponed the second sermon of the course upon "The Reasons why we Believe in the Bible." The discourse will be delivered next Sunday evening, Sept. 24th, and, as in the previous sermon on the same subject, the blackboard will be employed in illustration. All are invited to these services, commencing at quarter before eight o'clock.

DOCTOR THRUNER, our popular Boot and Shoe man, is the first to come out with a Fall advertisement, which will be found in the columns of this issue. Surely the display of goods advertised is great, no other firm can boast of such a line; and we ourselves will say that the prices are the lowest, as the large and increasing trade built up by the Doctor is all owing to the good article he gives for the lowest cash price. Call now and examine his assortment, as per invitation in his advertisement. Read well what he says; an advertisement worded like this is well worth the perusal of all our readers.

SOME miscreant, it is alleged by the members, threw a spoiled egg into the ranks of the Republican "Invincibles" during their short parade last Tuesday evening striking one of the members. Such acts are condemned by all right thinking citizens. Of course the act will be set down as another Democratic outrage, when, in all probability, one of the hundred boys, scarce out of their swaddling clothes, who always follow such processions along the sidewalks, was the perpetrator of the outrage. If the parents of such hoodlums cannot keep them home evenings the police should take them there or some where else where they don't sleep on feather beds.

WE learn that the reason Mr. Chris Van Arsdale's mare "Nellie V" failed to appear in this city last week, where she was advertised to trot, was because of the neglect of the train agent at Jersey City to forward the car in which the mare had been shipped, he leaving the same standing on a side track.— It is stated the cause assigned was to get square with Mr. Pete Manee, her trainer, for an old grudge. Mr. Van Arsdale proposes to institute legal proceedings against the Railroad Company for damages on account of the non-delivery of the mare after being shipped in time.

WE learn that our old friend, Wm. M. Jennings, recently appointed an agent in this city by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, exercised the authority invested in him for the first time, one day last week, when he learned that a car loaded with sheep had remained standing nearly two days on a side track at the depot, without water or food, the parties to whom they were consigned in this city refusing to receive them. Mr. Jennings notified the railway officials to send the animals back from whence they came, which was done.— Mr. J. is determined to exercise the power invested in him in this section.

THE severe rain storm which prevailed on Saturday night and Sunday last, extended over a large area of country, and much damage was done to shipping and property. In Plainfield and vicinity, several large trees were uprooted, fences blown down, &c.— The smoke stack of Kenyon's steam laundry on Third Street, was blown down. Geo. Hadley, Esq., lost a fine shade tree in front of his residence on 7th St. The Hayes and Wheeler banner [illegible] during the high wind Sunday afternoon and tore away a part of the balcony in front of the Post Office to which one of the guy ropes was attached. The banner was drawn in, as was also the Tilden and Hendricks banner.

The entries to the games of the Plainfield Athletic Club will positively close on Monday, Sept. 25th. No person will be admitted as a contestant after that date.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians, Division No. 4, of this city, will hold their Annual Ball at Laing's Hall, Wednesday evening, Oct. 11th next. The Committee of Arrangements promises to spare no pains to make the occasion one of enjoyment to all who may attend. Tickets, $1.00, admitting gentleman and ladies.

New Line Bridge.

The Boards of Freeholders of Union and Somerset Counties met at Laing's Hotel on Saturday last to receive bids for the building of the superstructure of the new line bridge over Green Brook at Netherwood Avenue. Three bids were received and *Lawrence Austin being the lowest, the con*tract was awarded to him at $424.00. The bridge is to be an A truss structure, with iron stringers, span 40 feet. John Wilson received some time since the contract for the mason work and speedily completed his share of the work.

Y. M. C. A.

The concert of the Young Apollo Club of boy singers, mentioned in our last issue, will be given on Thursday night Oct. 5, at the Congregational Church. The reputation this Club from their connection with the Gilmore Garden Concerts in New York and the excellent concert given by them on Decoration day in our city should be sufficient to fill the church on this occasion. Fifty cents will be the admission price and no extra charge for reserved seats, which may be selected on and after Thursday, 28th inst. at either store of Reynolds & Stelle, Front St. and on North Avenue.

Killed by a Mad Bull.

On Tuesday afternoon last a laborer in the employ of a Mr. Dean, who resides in the Township of New Providence, on "Stony Hill" road to Summit, was gored to death by a mad bull. It appears that this animal, which is 4 or 5 years old, has been for a long time considered dangerous, and consequently has been kept chained. Mr. Dean, in order to pasture him, has been in the habit of having him tied to different objects about the premises, and it was while the unfortunate man was in the act of changing him to new pasture that the savage beast made a rush at him, throwing him high in the air. Almost immediately the body was taken up and carried to the house, and a physician summoned, but it was of no avail as life was extinct in ten minutes.

Working Men's Club.

Saturday night last the rooms of the Young Men's Tilden & Hendricks Reform Club was filled with the hard-working advocates of Democracy and Reform, who had assembled for the purpose of forming a Working Men's Club, with the view of turning *out in street parades during the cam*paign. The meeting was called to order and Wm. B. Maxson, Esq., elected chairman, who stated the object of the meeting, after which permanent officers of the Plainfield Democratic Working Men's Association were elected as follows:

President—E. C. Morse.
Vice Presidents—David Roach and E. Merritt.
Secretary—M. L. Stanton.
Treasurer—P. Casey.
Executive Committee—P. Casey, Walter Hetfield, Richard Merritt, John Edsall, Frank Vreeland.

Over seventy members signed their names to the roll at once, and at the present writing over 100 members constitute the organization, with more coming. It is proposed by the members to equip themselves with a suitable campaign uniform and to parade on all occasions when their efforts in that direction will tend to aid the cause of Tilden, Hendricks and Reform. Several enthusiastic young Democrats have organized a drum corp, which turned out the above evening, and after marching through some of the principal streets, repaired to the club rooms, and enrolled themselves as members of the Working Men's Club, and will hereafter be attached to that organization as a drum corp. This meeting being entirely impromptu, augurs well. While the Republicans were endeavoring to muster enough members of their "Invincibles" to turn out and make a decent street parade, the honest, hard-working Democratic voters of Plainfield were organizing themselves into a campaign club, the numbers of which will surprise their political opponents when they turn out. The next meeting of the Association will be held in the same rooms this (Thursday) evening to perfect arrangements for the equipment of the members. A large transparency, suitably inscribed will be hung out of the windows of the Club Room.

Outrage on the Travelling Public.

Unless some steps are taken by the proper parties to ensure more comfort and quick transit to and from the Centennial Grounds via the New York and Bound Brook New line, travel over that road will surely depreciate. Last Tuesday, a large number of our citizens started for the exhibition grounds on the train due here at 8:38 a. m., and after riding in crowded cars, many standing up, the train arriving at the grounds at a quarter past twelve o'clock p. m., full one hour behind time, the delay being caused at Erie Junction, where the Pennsylvania R. R. Co. attach to the cars of the new line, and draw them to the Centennial Grounds, a distance of about five miles. Many of the passengers alighted from the cars while waiting for the train to start, and in indignant terms asked the cause of delay. A polite and loquacious official said he didn't know, but asked "what way did you come? By the Bound Brook Line?" "Yes," was the reply. "That accounts for it," said he; "if you had taken the other road (Pennsylvania) you would have been all right." This explained the whole matter. The managers of the Pennsylvania R. R. desire travelers to think not over well of the new line and therefore make all the delay possible in get*ting to the grounds, hoping thereby to in*duce the traveller to next time go by that road. Indeed we heard many express themselves that way, that the next time they go to the Exposition they should go some other way than by the New Line. Again, a train is advertised to leave the Centennial Grounds on the new line at 6:10 p. m. Hundreds of passengers desiring to take this train were admitted through the depot to the enclosure adjoining the tracks where the trains start from, and there, packed like sardines, were compelled to stand there until after eight o'clock before the gates were thrown open and they were allowed to enter the cars. Meantime, they were not allowed to re-enter the depot, the doors being closed behind them. Here, in the surging mass, men, women and children were huddled together, fainting, hungry and thirsty. Until the gates were to be opened by the magnates in power, they were to remain penned up in this "cattle pen." During this time their vision was greeted by the sight of their train entering through the gates and passing half way around the curve of tracks at that point, there remain stationary until train after train of the Pennsylvania R. R. Co. had come up, filled its cars with passengers and gone on its way. After there were no more passengers to go by this line the "cattle pen" was opened and the hungry, tired and indignant crowd were allowed to enter the cars of the train which had remained standing in their sight so long, there to find a seat if they could, finally arriving in this city after twelve o'clock, midnight. The New York and Bound Brook New Line is one of the best roads to ride over in the country, clean cars, [illegible] officials, &c., but if the present system continues of forcing passenger trains to wait hours within a few miles of their point of destination before transferring them thence, we are afraid the [illegible] on the road will fall off.

Personals.

Judge Nelson Webster, of Plainfield, and daughter, expect to sail next month for the South. Judge W. was attacked some two months since with paralysis, and hopes are entertained by his friends that a sea voyage will benefit him. We wish them a safe trip, and hope much good will result to the Judge. —Eliz. Monitor.

It is with sorrow and regret we learn of the continued serious illness of our esteemed friend, M. S. Wadley, of North Plainfield.

We notice by our exchanges that some rich man recently died in California, leaving an immense fortune in diamonds, &c., to Judge Webster's daughter of Plainfield, N. J. Who is or was Judge Webster is now a query among the ladies of Plainfield.

We notice again the pleasant countenance of our esteemed friend, Geo. Hadley, Esq., on our streets. Mr. H. and family have been spending a few weeks among the hills of Massachusetts, and returns to his home with renewed health.

Mr. Philip Tisch, for a long time in the employ of Messrs. Schepflin, Baldwin & Tweedy, left this city on Tuesday for Germany, taking his family with him.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

Dr. Dod, of this village, has returned home with his family, looking hale and hearty after their extended summer tour.

We notice the return to his home in this village, of Dr. Abram Coles, who has been absent for several days as a delegate to the International Medical Convention held in Philadelphia.

Our genial old friend, Mr. Jno. Flannery, of this village, has embarked in a new enterprise, having taken the store formerly occupied by Messrs. Treadwell & Brower as a harness shop, and intends keeping a temperance restaurant. Success to the enterprise. It is hoped, however, that after the election of Tilden & Hendricks, good mechanics like Mr. F. may find profitable employment in the enterprises and industries of the town, and not be compelled as so many are to remain idle or seek some other occupation.

We are very happy to learn that Mr. A. L. Frentz of this village, who has been so dangerously ill for some time past, is slowly recovering. Mr. F. was attacked some weeks ago with a soreness in the throat, which resulted in diptheria of so malignant a type as to almost baffle the skill of his physicians. After all other remedies had failed, and the suffering patient had well nigh choked, Dr. Abram Coles, with great skill, inserted a lancet in the throat making an incision from which a large quantity of *putrid matter discharged, and relief was im*mediately had. Mr. Frentz's lungs are somewhat weakened by his severe sickness and pneumonia was threatened, but it is sincerely hoped that further afflictions are averted. Mr. Frentz who is a first-class mechanic, is an honest, upright citizen, and in his affliction has the sympathy of all who know him.

A special meeting of the Tilden & Hendricks Reform Club of this village was held on Thursday evening last, at which time several new members were elected. Messrs. Smalley, Martine and Ritchie, Committee to procure campaign banner for the Association, reported "banner procured" and ready to be swung to the breeze. It is of net work, size about 18x20 ft., and is lettered on either side, as follows: "Scotch Plains Tilden & Hendricks Reform Club." "For President—Samuel J. Tilden, of New York." "For Vice President—Thos. A. Hendricks, of Indiana." It was voted that the banner be raised on Wednesday afternoon 20th inst., and in the evening of the same day there will be a public meeting in Academy Hall.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather on Sunday last, the attendance at the churches in this village was very slim. We understand, however, that a morning service was held in each church. At the Baptist church, owing to the temporary illness of their pastor, the Rev. H. W. Jones, of Elizabeth, occupied the pulpit, and preached an able discourse from Hebrews—12:3.

As far as politics go the ball of Reform has made a ten-strike in this little Democratic stronghold. We hear of several well-known Republicans coming straight out for Tilden and Reform. Rats, you know, will always leave a sinking ship. These gentlemen are getting out of the Haze that has so long befogged them and are Wheeling right into Democratic line—apropos of this we have received a rather facetious letter from some merry-andrew of this village, telling us that in a conversation with a Re*publican the other day, the latter remarked* that he could not conscientiously cast his ballot for Hayes & Wheeler, but alluding to some of the leading articles in THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, he stated that he did not like to be "Forced" to vote for the Democratic nominees, yet that was the only thing for any sensible man to do. Our correspondent adds—"How is that for high, Master Billy?" In reply we would state in the most "Forcible" manner that the entire "Force" on THE CONSTITUTIONALIST never descend to the employment of brute "Force"; it is by facts, figures, gentle persuasions, and the "Force," strength and vigor of irresistible arguments, that we endeavor to lead all the way they should go, and that is for Tilden & Hendricks, the standard bearers of Reform and virtue. We don't have to use a "Force" pump to instil this into the minds of the wise.

Since our last, Dr. Coles has evinced commendable liberality by putting the look-out on the mountain in thorough repair. Altho' rather late in the season for picnics, the beauty of the foliage in the Fall may be seen in all its loveliness, and numerous parties will no doubt visit this favorite spot to enjoy the fine panoramic view that stretches far away below. The Dr. has made great improvements at the foot of the mountain, and has in contemplation several attractive changes, amongst others certain drives up and on the mountain.

We understand that the Spiritualists are making a considerable headway in this village. One very recent occasion the spirits (?) became so potent as to remove a portion of the front fence of our friend Mr. A. Schuyler.

The Rev. H. W. Jones, of Elizabeth, will occupy the pulpit of the Baptist Church, in this village, on next Sunday morning and evening, the pastor, Rev. J. C. Buchanan, having gone on a visit to friends in Hunterdon County.

A very dangerous nuisance exists in this village in the way of a bull dog. We hear of several parties who have actually been bitten by this dog, one a small child, bitten in the shoulder, and of several others who have been attacked by this vicious animal. Is it possible that this rabid canine is to be tolerated until hydrophobia enters their very doors?

On Monday evening the 18th inst., the friends of Rev. J. C. Buchanan, of this village, planned a pleasant surprise for that gentleman and his excellent wife. The occasion was the tenth anniversary of their wedding. The self invited guests, more than a hundred in number, reached the parsonage about 8 o'clock, well laden with refreshments for the evening's entertainment, and tinware in almost every conceivable shape, and for almost every imaginable purpose, as a reminder to their hosts of their ten years of married life. Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan gave a cordial welcome to all who came, and evidently looked upon this visit of their friends as one more proof of the love and esteem of the people among whom they live. Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan have spent a little more than nine of the ten years of their wedded life in the old parsonage in this village. Many a pleasant gathering have they seen within its walls; but rarely never have they seen a happier party than that gathered together that night to wish them many returns of this anniversary day. The evening passed swiftly and pleasantly in social intercourse; music also lent its charms. Ample justice was done to the refreshments the lady guests had provided; and before the anniversary day was altogether a thing of the past, the happy guests had all taken their departure. The guests of course were "too numerous to mention," but among them we noticed the familiar faces of the Rev. H. W. Jones and his charming wife, of Elizabeth, Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Needham, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. A. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Ackerman, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. K. Smalley, Mr. and Mrs. Levi Darby, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest L. Coyte, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Jimmerson, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. S. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. David Hand, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hayes, Mrs. Dr. Dod, Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Bucknell, Dr. J. A. Coles and his accomplished sister, Mrs. J. R. Marsh and daughter, Mrs. F. Gross, Mr. and Mrs. N. Dupn, Mrs. West and daughter, and others.

At about 9 o'clock on Tuesday evening last, an alarm of fire was given in this village. In two minutes time Excelsior Hook and Ladder Co. No. 1 were on the road with their Truck and apparatus, and in five minutes were at the scene of the conflagration, which proved to be a good-sized barn upon the premises occupied by Mr. Thomas Gere, and owned by Wm. C. Stanbury, Esq. The Company finding it impossible to save the building worked valiantly and succeeded in saving a dwelling and other buildings in the immediate neighborhood. The cause of the fire is unknown, but is supposed to be the work of tramps. Mr. Stanbury had an insurance upon the building amounting to $150. Loss about $300. There was a quantity of straw and grain in the barn belonging to Mr. S. Adair. No Insurance.

FIRE MATTERS.

An alarm was given in this city Tuesday evening last, caused by the reflection of the fire at Scotch Plains. The various companies turned out but did not proceed far before discovering that the fire was out of the limits.

No. 2 steamer tried the fire wells corner of Second Street and Madison Avenue, Second and Cherry Street, Front and Somerset Street, on Thursday evening last, with perfect satisfaction in each case except the first named, which is one of the first fire wells constructed and is dug in a sandy soil which interferes with the working of the engines.

Last Monday evening about half past seven o'clock, the watchman on the Central R. R. crossing at Church Street, discovered a bright light in Hand's Carriage Factory, corner of Third and Church Streets, and upon proceeding to investigate found that a spark from the forge in the Blacksmith Department had set fire to the floor of the building. By the application of a few pails of water the fire was extinguished without much damage being done or an alarm being given. Had the flames not been discovered as they were, the result might have been disastrous.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

Our young friend and ex-Town Clerk, E. C. Van Norstrand returned home from an *extended tour in Illinois and other West*ern States, on Tuesday last, looking physically and feeling mentally better.

Mr. R. A. Gibbs' mare "Dolly" died suddenly last Sunday of colic. The animal was a great pet of the household, and is a serious loss to Mr. Gibbs.

The portable stone cracker has been removed from Johnston Drive, it having com*pleted its work of cracking stone for the* macadamizing of the "Drive." The steam roller is now engaged in rolling the road bed of the new avenue, which will speedily be completed, weather permitting.

Friend Elliott, we would suggest that a blue stone flag walk, or one constructed of substantial plank even, would materially increase the value of your property on Somerset Street.

An enthusiastic meeting was held in Keiler's Hall, under the auspices of the Tilden & Hendricks Reform Club of North Plainfield, last Wednesday evening. The large Hall was crowded to its almost capacity with an intelligent and appreciative audience, who listened attentively to the remarks of the speaker of the evening. Hon. Wm. B. Maxson, of Plainfield. The meeting was called to order by the President of the Club, Mr. John Thickstun, who introduced Mr. Maxson to the audience, the North Plainfield Brass Band welcoming him with a lively air. In his usual eloquent manner, Mr. Maxson delivered a telling speech of an hour and twenty minutes duration, being frequently interrupted by loud and continued applause. Mr. M. is one of the host of Republicans who, becoming disgusted with the venality and corruption of the party he had always advocated, left the same when Horace Greeley was nominated for the Presidency four years ago, and has since labored unceasingly with the party of Reform, doing yeoman's service thereby. Cheers greeted him upon the conclusion of his speech by the large gathering present, all of whom would gladly have remained longer to hear his truthful remarks. The young gentlemen composing the North Plainfield Band again rendered some excellent music, after which the meeting adjourned. The large number in attendance at this, the first meeting of the Club, evidences the fact that the citizens of North Plainfield are awake to the urgent necessity of reform and the election of the People's candidates—Tilden & Hendricks.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The Helping Hand Society opened its second season at Academy Hall, Thursday evening, Sept. 14, with an entertainment of unusual excellence. We append the programme:

Music—Instrumental,	Mr. Edwards.
Reading,	Mr. J. L. Burdett.
Tableaux—"Magic Mirror."
Music—Vocal,	Mrs. W. S. Dallas.
Recitation—"The Raven,"	Mr. A. C. Webb.
Charade—"Surprising," III. scenes.
Reading,	Mr. J. L. Burdett.
Tableaux—"The Duel."
Drama—"Rough Diamond," I. act.
Music—Vocal,	Mrs. W. S. Dallas.
Tableaux—"Death of Queen Catharine."

Mr. A. C. Webb's rendition of "The Raven" surprised his friends and received the warm approbation of the audience. Mr. Burdett's readings were in that talented young gentleman's happiest vein and were repeatedly encored. The musical part of the programme was brilliantly performed by Mrs. W. S. Dallas and Mr. Edwards, and was one of the most enjoyable features.— The leading characters in "Surprising" were creditably sustained by Miss Lizzie Scudder, Miss Mary Jaques and Mr. Ernest C. Webb, the "Aunt Judy" of Miss [illegible] deserving special mention as a very clever piece of character acting. The one act farce of "Rough Diamond" was given with the following distribution of characters:

Lord Plato,	T. V. Smith.
Sir William Evergreen,	O. O. Webb.
Capt. Augustus Blenheim,	E. C. Webb.
Cousin Joe,	C. E. Young.
Margery,	Miss Mary Stitt.
Lady Plato,	Miss Lizzie Scudder.
Lucy,	Miss [illegible]

Where all done so well it is hard to discriminate, but we think the "Cousin Joe" of Mr. Chas. E. Young and the "Margery" of Miss Mary Stitt deserve the highest praise. Miss Stitt has considerable dramatic talent, and her performance on this occasion, as a piece of amateur acting, was very brilliant. A select audience filled the Hall to its utmost capacity, and the performance was thoroughly appreciated and warmly commended.

The Tilden & Hendricks Campaign Club have secured Brookmeyer's Hall for their headquarters. They propose to keep it open day and night during the campaign.

The large flag pole erected by the Republicans during the Presidential election of '72, opposite the depot, was [illegible] removed on Saturday last and again erected at the corner of Broad and Elm Sts., under the auspices of the Hayes & Wheeler [illegible] Club. They propose flying a Hayes and Wheeler pennant on it.

On Thursday of last week a large number of our citizens visited Lambert's Mills, the occasion being the raising of a barn on the site of the one destroyed by fire during the summer. Of course "Uncle Sam" entertained his visitors liberally.

Mr. Jos. Moffett has the contract for the new building—this insures good work.

The storm on Sunday last did not do any serious damage in this vicinity.

Mr. Richard Canfield returned to our village last week after an absence of a year in South America. Welcome home.

A bright light towards Scotch Plains on Tuesday night caused an alarm of fire, but the truck, as usual, was not rolled.

A large number of our citizens visited the fair at Waverly Wednesday and Thursday.

Considerable excitement was occasioned in our usually quiet town on Monday evening last by the shooting of Mr. A. Montrose by some unknown person. Mr. Montrose was walking on Broad St., near the Methodist Church, accompanied by three ladies, when some party, as yet unknown, fired a pistol from the opposite side of the street, apparently with intent to kill. The pistol was loaded with large size shot, two of which struck Mr. Montrose, one in each leg. His assailant after firing ran across the vacant lot to the railroad and escaped. Mr. Montrose has no idea who his assailant was, and is not aware that any one bears him ill-will. All attempts to detect the perpetrator of this outrage have failed, but if caught he will be summarily dealt with. The fence to the rear of Mr. Montrose and his companions was filled with shot, and it is a great wonder how they escaped serious injury.

BUSINESS LOCALS.

Although L. M. French, carriage manufacturer, on Somerset Street, did not send any carriages to the Centennial Exhibition, to receive a prize for the same, still he can show as handsome vehicles of all kinds at his establishment as any other competitor in the State.

There is growing in Pochuck, Vernon township, Sussex county, an apple tree that bears both sour and sweet apples. Not only this, but sour and sweet apples grow on the same limbs, and some of the apples are both sour and sweet. One can pick an apple and find it intensely sour; then pick another from next to it, and find it exceedingly sweet; still another can be picked from the same limb and it will be both sour and sweet—one half sweet, the other sour. Over a quarter of a century ago one Wm. Baldt, now deceased, in experimenting, took a bud from an apple tree which bore greenings, and another from a tree which bore sweet apples. Cutting them in half he placed the sour and sweet halves together, and budding them to the tree the above has been the result.— Some of the apples are entirely green in color, while others have a yellowish cast.

Scotch Plains Democracy.

BANNER RAISING.

A Rousing Meeting.

Wednesday last was a memorable event in the history of Scotch Plains, the occasion being the raising of a handsome Tilden & Hendricks Banner in the village during the afternoon and a mass meeting in the evening, it being the first political banner ever flung to the breeze in Scotch Plains. At half-past four o'clock, p. m., the committee appointed by the Tilden & Hendricks Club of the place to raise the banner, carried out that part of the programme, a number of the citizens of Scotch Plains, Plainfield and Westfield being present. The banner is of net work with the names of the St. Louis candidates inscribed thereon. It is suspended from two hickory poles opposite De Band's Hotel, across the main street.— The crowning event of the occasion was the meeting in Academy Hall during the evening. Some opposition to holding this meeting had been advocated by members of the club at a previous meeting, on the ground that it would be difficult to obtain a large enough audience to make it a success, but through the indefatigable efforts of certain gentlemen, conspicuous among whom was George R. Nicholl, Esq., the motion was carried to have a meeting—and a glorious one it was too. At an early hour the large Hall was filled by an eager and intelligent audience from Scotch Plains, Westfield, Plainfield and surrounding country to listen to the remarks of the speaker of the evening, Gen. J. Augustus Fay, Jr., of Elizabeth. Need we say that his remarks were eloquent and to the point. The frequent applause which greeted him attested that fact. Among the large assemblage present of over three hundred persons, were many prominent Republicans, who becoming tired of the corruptions of that party have left it and enrolled their names under the banner of Tilden, Hendricks and Reform. The meeting was called to order by C. W. L. Martine, Esq., President of the Scotch Plains Club, and after Gen. Fay's speech, remarks were made by Mr. Wm. M. Scribner, of Plainfield, S. S. Mapes and Jas. C. Bolton of Westfield, John H. Jackson, of Plainfield, Addison S. Clark, of Westfield, and Geo. R. Nicholl, of Scotch Plains, each speaker being greeted with a storm of applause during the delivery of his remarks. The Westfield and Plainfield Drum Corps enlivened the occasion by martial music in the interval of the speeches. This meeting was a grand success, and shows conclusively that the Township of Westfield, and especially Scotch Plains district is alive to the exigencies of the occasion, and the advocates of Honest Government are organized for the campaign with the prospect and assurance of a splendid victory in that locality. All hail Scotch Plains. It will give a good account of itself at the coming election.

ORIGIN OF THE OPAL.

A lady fair without a heart,
A lovely face "one can't forget,"
[illegible]
"Genus homo"—called Coquette.

With eyes so full of tender light,
Beneath the [illegible] softened ray,
In sheen of silk and jewels rare
Plucking the leaves of her boquet.

A pretty shriek! the rose's thorn
Has pierced the hand so white and fair!
Behold! upon the satin skin
A drop of blood is shining there!

Within the drop in miniature
The [illegible] light is plainly seen,
The dream's blue—the rose's hue,
The quivering leaf of emerald green.

With pain her brimming eyes o'erflow;
A tear fell on that drop of gore!
The metamorphosis is complete—
Behold THE OPAL evermore!

And thus became a Coquette's tear
Made this fair gem—'tis sadly true
However'er 'tis seen—where'er it goes
Goes grief and sorrow too. E.

CAUTION!

The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Theo. A. [illegible] some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the construction of a similar well. The testimony filled over one thousand pages and counsel were over two months in summing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an air-tight iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing stratum. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is [illegible]. Many thousands of the wells are in use. [illegible] is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defense contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement had been [illegible]."

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE SORT OF NEGROES TAFT WANTS SHOT.

At a Democratic meeting at Batesburg, S. C., on the 5th inst., there were several colored speakers, among them one Tom Watson, a hard-working field hand. He made a brave speech, and so formulated the situation in regard to the colored people of the South that an extract is well worth printing. His words, of course, are put into shape by the reporter, and this is the extract in question:

"The Radicals have been ruling this Government for ten years, and their motto has been 'lie, cheat and steal,' and to-day there is no money in the country. My colored friends, we have to labor hard every day to get bread for our little children; we have to go bare-footed and in our shirt-sleeves. I went to Edgefield the other day and went into Lawrence Kain's (a leading white Radical) palace, and I saw a carriage for his baby that would cost $100 in New York, and he had a white girl to roll it. When his wife walked across the floor, she was dressed so fine you could hear her 'rattling' a hundred yards. I tell you, my colored friends, the Radical party is rotten. They have been ruling thirteen States, twelve of them have rotted down, and the sills under the thirteenth, (South Carolina), are rotten, and it will fall on the 7th of November. There is no such thing as party now; it is honesty butting against rascality, and I tell you rascality has got to get out of the way. I have been voting for the Radical party for the last ten years, and, white folks, I will tell you why I did it. These here carpet-baggers and scalawags came around and told me to give them office, and they would tax you so that you would have to sell your land, and then we could buy it. I thought it would be mighty nice to have a big plantation, and I voted for them and told them to stick on the tax; they got land, fine horses, fine clothes and plenty of money, but I have never got anything from them yet. I tell you another falsehood they have been telling the colored folks: They tell us that as soon as the Democrats get into power they will put us back into slavery. I tell you, my colored friends, that it is impossible. The whole world is against slavery. The Constitution of the United States forbids it, and the white people could not put you into slavery if they would and they wouldn't if they could."

At the conclusion of his remarks Tom came forward to the front of the stand, and, with all the earnestness of his honest soul, cried out: "All you honest colored men come up here.—Give me your hand and God your heart, and let's have an honest Government." A number of colored men were immediately enrolled in the Democratic club.

SHOT AND SHELL.

Not a single Democratic vote has been polled in Vergennes, Vt., during the last ten years. At the recent State election 77 Democratic votes were thrown.

Now the Times will produce an affidavit to prove that Charles Francis Adams struck Billy Patterson.

We've lost Vermont and taken Arkansas. All promenade down the centre!

Blaine goes to Indiana on the 26th inst., after stumping in Maine and elsewhere. Just as soon as Congress adjourned Mr. Blaine became very suddenly a well man. It was that investigation what made him so very sick.

As General Grant and friends are resurrecting all the old war appliances to carry on the Hayes campaign,—suppose the War Department brings out a revised edition of General Grant's celebrated order against the Jews, and a revival of order No. 11.

For several days past the patriotic ladies of Newburgh have held a Centennial tea party at Washington's Headquarters, and for the special benefit of that much neglected place. It closed last night. At each entertainment a ballot box was opened to allow visitors to vote for their Presidential preference, a handsome young lady officiating as inspector. The whole number of votes cast was 1,709, Tilden and Hendricks receiving 936, and Hayes and Wheeler 773, giving Tilden and Hendricks a majority of 163. It cost five cents to vote.

THE CURE FOR GOSSIP.

What is the cure for gossip? Simply, culture. There is a great deal of gossip that has no malignity in it.—Good-natured people talk about their neighbors because, and only because, they have nothing else to talk about.—As we write, there come to us the picture of a family of young ladies. We have seen them at home, we have met them in galleries of art, we have caught glimpses of them going from a book-store, or a library, with a fresh volume in their hands. When we meet them, they are full of what they have seen and read. They are brimming with questions. One topic of their conversation is dropped only to give place to another in which they are interested. We have left them, after a delightful hour, stimulated and refreshed; and during the whole hour not a neighbor's garment was soiled by so much as a touch.—They had something to talk about.—They knew something, and wanted to know more. They could listen as well as they could talk. To speak freely of a neighbor's doings and belongings would have seemed an impertinence to them, and, of course, an impropriety. They had no temptation to gossip, because the doings of their neighbors formed a subject very much less interesting than those which grew of their knowledge and their culture.

And this tells the whole story. The confirmed gossip is always either malicious or ignorant. The one variety needs a change of heart and the other a change of pasture. Gossip is always a personal confession either of malice or imbecility, and the young should not only shun it, but by the most thorough culture relieve themselves from all temptation to indulge in it.—It is a low, frivolous, and too often a dirty business. There are country neighborhoods in which it rages like a pest. Churches are split in pieces by it. Neighbors are made enemies by it for life. In many persons it degenerates into a chronic disease, which is practically incurable. Let the young cure it while they may.—Scribner.

NEW JERSEY
Enamel Paint Company,
RARITAN, NEW JERSEY,
Manufacturers of
Bradley's Enamel Paint.
Mixed Ready for Use, in any shade, Tint or Color desired.

THESE Paints are composed of the purest and best materials known to painters; the principal ingredients being Pure White LEAD, ZINC, and LINSEED OIL, which are made to unite in a homogeneous mass by the addition of other materials which add greatly to the durability, elasticity, beauty and strength of the Paint. The whole are chemically combined so that the pigments are held in permanent solution, thus forming a new compound which dries on the surface and adheres firmly to it, forming a Smooth, Glossy, Firm, Elastic, Beautiful and Durable Paint.

The Oil, which is the real life of the Paint, cannot leave it and be absorbed by the substance to which it is applied, as it does in paints mixed in the ordinary way, & thus leave the pigment dry and chalky, to wash & rub off in a few months. This paint is unaffected by changes of temperature, is perfectly impervious to the action of water, is well adapted to all classes of work, & is in every way a better paint for either in side or outside work or boat painting than any other Paint known to the trade, and will last at least three times as long as the best Lead and Oil mixed in the ordinary way.

These Paints are Ready for use,
Are easily applied by any one, require no mixing, stirring or addition of dryers.

Liberal Inducements to Dealers.
And full satisfaction guaranteed to their Customers.

Sold by the Gallon, Keg or Barrel. Orders attended to promptly. For Price List and Sample Color Card, Address,

POETRY.

For "The Constitutionalist."

STRAY THOUGHTS.

BY MRS. MARGARET A. BRITTIN.

Make up your feuds, forgive all wrongs,
Ring out the merry bells of peace,
And in this glad centennial year,
Let every bitter feeling cease;
And make with sounds of glorious glee,
This year a year of harmony.

Britannia, great, comes to our shores
And brings her choicest fabrics here;
Old Philadelphia shows her zeal
And friendship, this centennial year;
And yet we celebrate the day,
That tore us from her arms away.

E'en oriental nations come,
With cordial friendship grasp our hand,
And join with us in praising God,
That we have here a happy land—
So broad, so glorious, happy, free,
Mighty in independence.

The cars go thundering through our plains,
Carrying the old, the young, the gay,
Unto the exposition grounds,
In glorious Philadelphia;
May streams of patriotism roll,
Kindle a fire in every soul.

Then fling our banner to the breeze,
Shout freedom! this centennial year,
Bury your feuds, let words of love
Be wafted round from ear to ear;
Thus each one in his turn may strive,
To keep our nation free alive.

THE JUDGE'S ADVENTURE.

Judge Crane, of New York, was a very eccentric man. He was very wealthy, and was highly respected for his public and private virtues, especially for his charitableness to the poor; but he always dressed in a plain garb, and would hardly ever wear an overcoat, whatever might be the state of the weather.

On the morning of the day in which the court was to begin, the judge set out before light, and walked gently on, through the hail, rain and snow, to the appointed place. On arrival at Poughkeepsie, cold and wet, he walked to a tavern, where he found the landlady and her servants were making great preparations for the entertainment of the judges, lawyers, etc.

The Judge was determined to have some sport, and in a pleasant tone addressed the landlady:

"I have no money, and was obliged to come to court, and I have walked thro' this storm more than twenty miles. I am wet and cold, dry and hungry. I want something to eat before court begins."

The landlady put herself in a magisterial posture, and put on a countenance of contempt.

"Very well," said she, "I will give you some cold victuals, if you will go into the back yard and cut and split three armsfuls of wood, and bring it into the kitchen, where the servants want to make a good fire to dry the gentlemen's great coats, when they come; and after you get your victuals I shall want you to go away."

After some trouble the Judge secured a cold bite, and then the landlady told him to be off, as she needed the fire to dry the gentlemen's great coats and umbrellas by. "And among the rest," she said, "we expect Judge Crane."

"Judge Crane," said the judge, "who is Judge Crane?"

"The circuit judge," said she; "one of the supreme judges, you old fool."

"Well," said the judge, "I will bet a goose that Judge Crane has not had, and will not have a great coat on his back, or an umbrella over his head this day."

"You old goose," said she, "I care nothing for your bets. Eat and be off, I tell you; Judge Crane is to be here, and we've no room for you."

"I don't care," said he, "one rye straw more for Judge Crane than I do for myself, and it has got to be so late, that if he has to come at this time of day, he would be more likely to go directly to the court house and stay until dinner time, than go to any tavern; and if business was very urgent he would be very likely to stay away even from dinner. I know something about the old codger, and some people say he is a rusty, crusty, fusty old fudge."

"Pretty talk, indeed," said the landlady, "about the supreme judge."

"I tell you," said the judge, "Judge Crane is not the supreme judge, and even if he were, he is no more fit to be a judge than I am."

"Well now be off with yourself," said she.

When the judge withdrew, the landlady anxiously looked after him for some time, as he walked steadily on toward the court house, supposing him to be some poor man summoned up to court as a witness, or some vagabond who might give her further trouble in time of courts, and expressed to her servants a desire that they would see that he did not disturb the gentlemen and the judges who might put up there; while some of the girls declared if he did come, they would use some of his own expressions which he used respecting Judge Crane. "Let me see," says one, "rusty, crusty"—"yes, and fusty old fudge," says another.

When the dinner was announced, the court, not being thronged, was immediately adjourned, and the day being stormy and cold, the judges and lawyers poured into the sheriff's tavern, where they were sure of good fare, all except Judge Crane, who walked to a store and purchased a valuable shawl, and put it into his pocket on the inside of his coat; then he walked quietly to the tavern. While he was thus detained, the landlady entered the dining-room and earnestly inquired if Judge Crane had come in. The answer was:

"Not yet, madam, and perhaps he may not come."

The landlady, who was anxious to pay the highest respect to the supreme judge, retired to the kitchen not a little chagrined and disappointed.

In the meantime the judge had arrived, and being at proper times very sociable, and at all times fond of cheering the minds of those present, he began to make some pertinent remarks, and to tell some lively anecdotes, calculated to convey good morals, which kept the whole company in a continued roar of laughter. At this instant one of the waiting maids entered the room to inform the gentlemen that they might sit down to dinner.

She did her errand, and hastened back to her mistress with the tidings that the old fusty fellow with the [illegible] had on was right in among the gentlemen, talking as loud as he could, and all the judges and lawyers were laughing at him.

"Then go," says she, "and whisper to the old man that I wish him to come down into the kitchen."

The servant obeyed accordingly, and the judge said to the girl:

"Tell your mistress that I have a little business to do with some of these lawyers, and when done, I'll be off in the course of two or three days."

The girl returned and faithfully rehearsed the message, and added that she believed the old fellow was drunk, as he would not [illegible], "as long as [illegible] business is done I'll be off in two or three days."

"Well, Betty," said the mistress, "go back, and when the gentlemen begin to sit down, do you just go by the head of the table, and whisper to some gentleman that I wish a vacant place left at the head of the table for Judge Crane, and then do you hasten back."

Betty again repaired to her post at the head of the table, and softly informed a gentleman of the request of her mistress.

"Certainly," said the gentleman.

Betty then hastened back to assist John. The gentlemen now sat down to an excellent repast, and after a short ejaculatory address to the throne of grace, delivered by Judge Crane, in which he adored the Father of all mercies for feeding all his creatures throughout the immensity of space, invoking a blessing on that portion of earthly bounty then before them, and supplicated Divine mercy through the merits of our Redeemer, the gentlemen began to carve and serve round in usual form.

But as the judge was of a singular turn in almost everything, and had taken a fancy that if a person eats light food at the same meal, and that which is more solid and harder of digestion, that the light food should be eaten first; he therefore filled his plate with some pudding made of milk, rice and eggs, and placing himself in rather an awkward position, with his elbows on the table, and his head near the plate, began to eat according to his common custom, which was very fast, although he was no great eater. And some of the gentlemen near the judge, following his example as to partaking of the pudding before the meat, of course a large deep vessel, which had contained the article, was nearly emptied when Mary approached with her two additional tureens of gravy, according to the command of her mistress, and as she sat down the last near the judge, he said to her in an austere manner:

"Girl, bring me a clean plate to eat salad on."

The abrupt manner in which he addressed her, and her disgust at seeing him there in that position, so disconcerted the poor girl that she did not observe that any one except the judge had partaken of the pudding, nor did she know what he meant by salad, but she observed that the large pudding pan was nearly empty, and then hastened back with her utmost speed to her mistress.

"Why, madam, that old fellow is there yet, and he is certainly crazy or drunk, for he is down at the table, and has eaten all the rice pudding already, and his nose is right down in a plateful now, shoveling it in like a hog; and he told me, as if he was lord of the manor, to bring him a clean plate to eat salad on. Bless me, where can we get salad at this time of the year. And the gentlemen have done carving, and not one has begun to eat meat, much less a tableful of pudding."

"Aye, he'll get a clean plate," says Martha, "before gentlemen need clean plates."

"I'll clear him out," says the mistress, and starts for the dining room, burning with indignation.

The judge was remarkable for not giving unnecessary trouble to anybody where he put up, and generally ate whatever was set before him without any remarks; and seldom made use of more than one plate at a meal; but at this time he had observed near him a dish of beautiful raw white cabbage, cut up and put in vinegar (which the Germans of Poughkeepsie called "cold slaw," and which he called salad,) and he wished for a separate plate to prepare some of it for his own fancy.

The carving and serving were not yet finished, when he expected the clean plate, and when the landlady arrived at the door of the dining-room, determined to drive him out. She advanced with a firm step to the door, and fixing her keen eye firmly on the judge, when he turned his eye that way, and observed her, mildly said:

"Landlady, can I have a clean plate to eat salad on?"

"A clean plate and salad!" retorted the landlady, indignantly. "I wish you would come into the kitchen until the gentlemen have dined; I had reserved that seat for Judge Crane."

The company were struck with astonishment; and fixed their eyes alternately on the landlady and the judge, and sat or stood in mute suspense, when the judge gracefully raised himself up in the chair, carelessly folded his arms across his breast, and then putting his head very awkwardly on one side, said:

"You reserved this seat for Judge Crane, did you?"

"Indeed I did," said she.

"It was very kind," said he, in an ironical tone, "but if you will step to the door and see if he is coming, or send one of the servants to call for him, with your permission and the approbation of these gentlemen, with whom I have some business to do, I will occupy this seat until you shall find the judge."

"Find the judge!" said she with emphasis; "go look for him yourself, not send me or my servants. I gave you your breakfast this morning for chopping a little wood, because you had no money; and I supposed you would go away quietly, and keep away, and now you must come here to disturb gentlemen at dinner."

Here the whole joke burst upon the minds of the gentlemen present, who fell into a loud fit of laughter. After the tumult had a little subsided, the judge said, mildly:

"Didn't I chop wood to pay for my breakfast?"

"Indeed you did," said she, "and said you had no money."

"I told you the truth," said the judge, "but I have a beautiful shawl worth more than ten dollars, which I just now bought, and will leave it with you in pawn, if you will only let me eat my dinner with these gentlemen."

Here the gentlemen were biting their lips to keep from laughter.

"How did you buy a shawl worth more than ten dollars without money?"

"I bought it on credit," said he.

"And where did you find credit to that amount?" said she.

"I brought it from home," said he.

"That is a likely story, and something like your abuse of Judge Crane this morning," she said.

"How could I abuse the judge if he was not present?" said he.

"Why," says she, "you called him a rusty, fusty fudge, and old codger, and said you did not care a rye straw more for him than you did for yourself."

And here the whole company were in an uproar of laughter again. But as soon as it had subsided a little, one of the gentlemen asked the landlady how she knew that the gentleman she was addressing was not Judge Crane?

"He looks more like a snipe than a crane!" she said.

Here the loud laughter burst forth a third time. And after a little pause the judge said:

"I must confess that I am not a bird of very fine feathers, but I assure you that I am a Crane, and a crane is often a very useful instrument. I saw a very good one in your kitchen this morning; and sometimes an instrument called a 'crane' is of inestimable use, madam."

Before she had time to reply, some of the gentlemen with whom she was acquainted, assured her that she was talking to the presiding judge.

Astonished and confounded, she attempted some excuse, and hastily asked his pardon for her rudeness.

The judge had by this time, unobserved, taken from his pocket the beautiful shawl, and folding it at full length one way, and in a narrow way the other, and it being of very fine texture, appeared more like an elegant sash than a valuable shawl. Then he arose with graceful dignity, and with a half smile, he advanced a few steps toward the landlady, saying:

"It is not my province to pardon, but to judge; and I judge that you and I shall hereafter be friends—and I judge that you will, without hesitation, receive this as a present, if not as a pawn." So saying, he gently laid it over her shoulders, and across her arms, saying, "Take it madam, and do not attempt to return it, for it was purchased on purpose for a present to you."

She hastily retired in confusion, hardly knowing what she did, and that with her the beautiful shawl worth twelve dollars instead of ten.

And here were three parties who had each two good things. The landlady had a good shawl and a good lesson to meditate upon—the gentlemen had a good dinner and a good joke to talk over—and the judge had good intentions in the joke, and a good will and ability to follow up the lesson given.

A PRIMA DONNA'S REVENGE.

When the celebrated singer Henriette Sontag began her musical career she was subjected to the same annoyances and struggles that rising talent generally find, obstructing the pathway as it would race over the burning sands of life to the haven of fame and fortune. Nevertheless her debut in Vienna was most brilliant, spite of the enormous sea of opposition that greeted her, yet the encouraging roar of the lions could not entirely drown the hissing of the snakes.

One of the most venomous of these was the failing favorite of the public, but still powerful rival, Amelia Steininger, whose vocal octave had been considerably broken and reduced by dissipation, but she counted scores of admirers who were ready to defend her position by every means, fair or foul, in their power, and eventually succeeded in driving the dangerous rival of their "Steininger" from the field.

Chagrined, if not humiliated, Sontag left Vienna harboring anything but friendly feelings towards Amelia Steininger. Some years later, while she was in the glory of her triumph, singing with the great tenor, Jager, and the never-to-be-forgotten buffo Spitzeder, at the Royal Theatre, Berlin, where her sweet warbling made her the Cataloni of her day, where tongues and pens all moved in her praise, the gardens were robbed of all their blossoms, and florists of their buds and exotics, to testify to the enthusiastic admiration of the charming songstress, when old men lifted her into her carriage that her dainty feet might not be soiled by the dust of earth, and young men dragged the conveyance through the streets to the hotel.—Truly she was the Cataloni of her time, only she possessed what the Gypsy warbler did not—beauty and virtue.

One morning during this time, accompanied by a number of gallants, she was along one of the main streets of Berlin; she was attracted by hearing an Austrian song, familiar from childhood and home, sung in on the street corner by a little girl about six years old, who led by the hand a forlorn looking blind woman. It was a sad and touching air, and the happy cantatrice immediately ordered her coupe to be halted, called the little singer to her, and said:

"What is your name, my wee Austrian echo?"

"Nannie," the child replied, with a strong Vienna accent.

"And who is the woman with you?"

"My poor blind mother, lady."

"And what is her name?"

"Amelia Steininger, lady."

"Amelia Steininger!" exclaimed Sontag in great surprise.

"Yes, lady, my mother was a great singer in Vienna some time ago, but she lost her voice, and then she wept so much that the light went out of her eyes; then our friends turned away from us, and when wealth was also gone we were obliged to beg our way or die of hunger."

Tears swelled from the kind and generous heart of the fortunate woman as she listened to the pathetic story of the little one—tears of genuine sympathy. She turned to the gallant gentlemen who gathered about her like satellites around their star.

"Gentlemen," said she, the pearling drops of heart dew glistening in her beautiful eyes, "permit me here on this public place to take up a collection for an unhappy sister from whom God has seen fit to take his greatest gift, the gift of sight. Here is my purse; do not allow it to remain comfortless in the hands of this poor child."

In an instant the gold and silver rained upon the overjoyed little girl, who imagined an angel had come to relieve her mother from poverty and care.

"Now tell me, Nannie, where do you live?"

The child gave the address.

"Give your mother my love, and tell her old friend Henrietta Sontag will go herself the pleasure of hunting her up this afternoon and have a little chit chat with her."

Crying for joy the child ran to her mother with her good luck, and repeated Sontag's words, but she could not understand the violence of the impetuous burst of tears that fell from the blind eyes, to be followed by the remorseful sobbing of her who once drove this benefactress from her native city with hisses.

Sontag came according to promise, bringing a skillful oculist, who, after the examination, shook his gray head.

He had no relief for the black cataract that had up to that time obstinately resisted skill.

With delicate considerations the conversation was led from subjects that would recall those days in Vienna.

With heartfelt expressions of good will Sontag left her former enemy and rival.—The following week a benefit "for a distressed artist" was given, Sontag's Iphigenie filling the house, and also the purse of the blind woman. Until her death Henrietta Sontag cared for her, then her daughter became her grateful protege, and received a liberal education that fitted her for an independent fortune. The slumbering nightingale left many mourning hearts, but none who loved her better or more gratefully than this girl.

HOW GIRLS GO FISHING.

There is generally about six of them in the bunch, with light dresses on, and they have three good poles, with as many hooks and lines among them.

As soon as they get to the river they look for a good place to get down on the rafts, and the most venturesome one sticks her boot heel in the bank and makes [illegible] steps down; then she suddenly finds herself at the bottom with both hands in the water and feeling that everybody in the world is looking at her. The other girls, profiting by her example, turning round and go down the bank on their hands and [illegible] back-ward.

Then they scamper over the rafts until they find a shallow place, where they can see the fish, and shout:

"There's one."

"Where?"

"There."

"Let's catch him."

"Who's got the bait?"

"You lazy-thing, you're sitting on my pole."

"Show me the wretch that stole my worm."

All the exclamations are gotten off in a tone that awakens every echo within a mile around and sends every fish within three acres square into galloping hysterics. Then they manage to get a worm on the hook, and "throw in" with a splash like the launching of a wash-tub. After awhile a feeble-minded sunfish contrives to get fastened on the hook of a timid woman, and gives vent to her tongue.

"Oh! something's got my hook!"

"Pull up, you little idiot!" shouted five excited voices as poles and hooks are dropped and they rush to the rescue. The girl gives a spasmodic jerk, which sends the unfortunate sunny into the air the full length of forty feet of line, and he comes down on the nearest curly head with a damp flop.

"O, murder! take it away. Ugh! the nasty thing!"

Then they hold up their skirts and gather about the fish as it skips and jumps over the logs, one all the time holding the line in both hands, with her foot on the pole as though she had an evil disposed goat at the other end. They talk over it.

"How ever will he get off?"

"Ain't it pretty?"

"Poor little thing; let's put it back."

"How will we get the hook from it?"

"Pick it up," says a girl who backs rapidly out of the circle.

"Good gracious, I'm afraid of it. There it's opening its mouth at me."

Just then the sunny wriggles off the hook and disappears between two logs into the water, and the girls try for another bite.

But the sun comes down and fries the back of their necks, and they get three headaches in the party, and they all get cross and scold at the fish like so many magpies. If an unwary chub dares to show himself in the water they poke at him with their poles, much to his disgust. Finally they get mud all over and throw their poles away, hunt up the lunch basket, climb up into the woods, where they sit around on the grass and caterpillars, and eat enough of dried beef and rusk and hard boiled eggs to give a wood horse the nightmare; after which they compare notes about their beaux until sundown, when they go home and plant envy in the hearts of all their friends by telling what "just a splendid time" they had.

BOY NATURE.

I have thought that the boy is the only true lover of Nature, and that we who make such a dead set at studying and admiring her come very wide of the mark. "The nonchalance of a boy who is sure of his dinner," says our Emerson, "is the healthy attitude of humanity." The boy is a part of Nature; he is as indifferent, as careless, as vagrant as she. He browses, he digs, he hunts, he climbs, he halloos, he feeds on roots, and greens, and mast. He uses things roughly and without sentiment. The coolness with which boys will drown dogs or cats, or hang them to trees, or murder young birds, or torture frogs or squirrels, is like Nature's own mercilessness.

Certain it is often we get some of the best touches of nature from children. Childhood is a world by itself, and we listen to children when they frankly speak out of it with a strange interest. There is such a freedom from responsibility and from worldly wisdom. There is no sentiment in children, because there is no ruin; nothing has gone to decay about them yet—not a leaf or twig. Until he is well into his teens and sometimes later, a boy is like a bean pod before the fruit has developed—indefinite, succulent, rich in possibilities which are only vaguely outlined. He is a pericarp merely. How rudimental are all his ideas. I know a boy who began his school composition on swallows by saying there were two kinds of swallows—chimney swallows and swallows.

Girls come to themselves sooner; are indeed from the first more definite and "translatable."—John Burroughs, in The Galaxy, for September.

VULGAR WORDS.

A distinguished author says: "I resolved, when I was a child, never to use a word which I could not pronounce before my mother without offending her." He kept his resolution, and became a pure-minded, noble, honored gentleman. His rule and example are worthy of imitation.

Boys readily learn a class of low, vulgar words and expressions, which are never heard in respectable circles. The utmost care on the part of parents will scarcely prevent it. Of course we cannot think of girls as being so much exposed to this peril. We cannot imagine a decent girl using words she would not give utterance to before her father or mother.

Such vulgarity is thought by some boys to be "smart," the "next thing to swearing," and yet "not so wicked." But it is a habit which leads to profanity, and fills the mind with evil thoughts. It vulgarizes and degrades the soul, and prepares the way for many of the gross and fearful sins which now corrupt society.

Young reader! keep your mouth free from all impurity and your "tongue from evil;" but in order to do this, ask Jesus to cleanse your heart and keep it clean, for "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."—N. Y. Observer.

A SUDDEN REPENTANCE.

A farmer entered a Detroit restaurant, hat on the back of his head and a joyful look in his eyes, and flinging his hat on the floor exclaimed:

"Whoop! Sold my wood, and now I want a Thanksgiving dinner!"

He was invited to sit down to a table, handed a bill of fare, and asked to name his dishes.

"I want chicken, turkey, oysters, fish, quail, snipe, pie, cake, soup, wine—bring on the best you've got in the shanty!" he said, as he pushed the bill away.

The waiter started out, and the farmer hauled out his wallet and counted his money. His face grew serious after a moment, as he began to realize that luxuries cost money, and in another minute he pounded on the table and called out:

"I want to see that waiter!"

The waiter entered, and the farmer continued:

"You hold on a little. You may scratch out that other order and bring me in some meat and 'taters and bread. I've sold my wood, as I said before; but I just happened to think that the corn crop may beat on me, and where'd quail on toast be then?"—Detroit Free Press.

BLEACHING COTTON.

It is a well-established fact that cotton cloth that is bleached by chemical processes before it goes into market, does not wear as well as that which is unbleached, and is very liable in time to turn yellow; also, it is very much harder to sew upon it. I have for some years past used the unbleached in preference. Sheets and pillow-cases can be made up for bleaching before cotton has been wet, and allowance can be made for shrinking; indeed, any garment can be made if this item be borne in mind. Make a good suds of soft water and lye soap, if you have it; put the cotton cloth in cold suds and bring it to a boil; then take the cloth or garment out and when cool spread out on the grass. Have a tub of suds close by so as to dip the goods in once each day. In three days they will be bleached to a snow whiteness, and keep white till worn out. When the appletrees are in bloom, spread out garments that have turned yellow, after boiling in suds, and they will be cleansed white as snow.

L. H. K. SMALLEY,
Ch'n Last Meeting.
Scotch Plains, N. J., Sept. 25th, 1876.

ATTENTION! VOTERS!

From an address recently issued by the Tilden and Hendricks Central Club of the City of New York, we extract as follows:

"The experience of all constitutional governments goes to prove the truth of the maxim that when a political party enjoys uninterrupted success for years, the tendency has ever been toward the decline of public virtue and the growth of an arrogant and irresponsible power.

The history of the Republican party is no exception to this rule, and had any other party been in the ascendacy during the same epoch, it might have succumbed to the same influences and made a change of administration at the present time, safe, if not indispensable.

The ebb and flow of the sea are not more essential to the purity of its waters than the recurring changes of political parties to the purity of governments.

Trusted as no other party has ever been trusted, and enjoying a profound peace for the last eleven years, the Republican party has demonstrated its incapacity to bring the country back to its wonted career of prosperity and peace, or to solve the financial problem.

With the absolute control of the National Government, for ten years they have failed to meet the just expectations of the country.

What the Republican Administration has failed to accomplish for the United States in ten years Republican statesmen have achieved for France in two.

What a pitiable spectacle does our country present before the world to-day!

Favored by nature with all those blessing which could contribute to a nation's glory and prosperity, we see her

Staggering under the weight of taxation.

Despoiled of her commerce.

Her Treasury plundered.

Her high officials dishonored.

And robbed of her good name, imperial Europe exultingly points the finger of scorn across the Atlantic at our model republic.

Yet the party responsible for all this demands a new lease of power.

In response to the popular and reasonable demand for an account of their stewardship, they flaunt the bloody shirt, emblematical of civil strife, and try to make up for lack of statesmanship and honesty by the intensity of sectional hate.

After the close of her great civil war the Roman Senate, actuated by a spirit of true patriotism, decreed the destruction of every memento which might serve to keep alive the embers of civil discord, or commemorate the triumph of brother over brother.

In what contrast the vindicitive policy of the Republican Senators!

The time has come when we must tell the abettors of sectional strife that we will have conciliation, and that the men of the North are ready to clasp hands with their brethren of the South, remembering only that their ancestors fought shoulder to shoulder in their long struggle for American liberty, and that their ashes commingle in a common grave.

National ties of friendship, a community of interests and a common destiny unite us together in spite of frenzied appeals of partisan zealots.

The industries of the nation are paralyzed.

Capital seeks in vain for profitable investment.

Trade languishes for want of confidence among business-men.

In every commercial centre of the country, rich in inexhaustible resources, thousands of skilled artisans seek employment and can find none.

To a calm but stern appeal for a remedy of these varied and suffering interests, it is not enough for the governing party to fall back on the bloody memories of a fratricidal war.

The hope of the country in the present crisis is in electing a bold, pronounced and aggressive reformer for President, backed by an honest, healthy public sentiment.

Samuel J. Tilden, our Governor, meets the requirements of the times.

Within the short space of five years he has succeeded in making official dishonesty odious, crushing two powerful rings.

What man better fitted to undertake the task of regeneration at the National Capitol than he who has been so eminently successful in his own State!

Having shown his capacity, his industry and honesty at home, let us give him a wider field to operate him.

From the present deplorable condition of affairs, none will deny the imperative necessity for a complete and absolute reform in the administration of the Government.

In his aggressive warfare on corruption and corruptionists Governor Tilden has antagonized the enemies of honest government; has broken up two plundering rings, imprisoned or forced into exile the principal offenders many of whom belonged to his own party.

The National Democracy of to-day could not have given to the people of the United States stronger proofs of its earnestness of purpose, or of its sympathy with the man and his acts, than by nominating him for the Chief Magistracy."

That is a plain and truthful review of the political situation and the issues involved in the coming Presidential election.

Read and reflect, think impartially, investigate facts, estimate aright the value of overthrowing official corruption and public wastefulness, and restoring to our land the blessings of peace and prosperity.

VOTE FOR TILDEN AND HENDRICKS!

OUR CANDIDATE FOR CONGRESS.

On Tuesday last the Democratic Convention for the Third Congressional District of this State, held at Freehold, N. J., re-nominated Hon. Miles Ross, of New Brunswick, for the office of Congressman from this District. Mr. Ross was triumphantly elected to Congress 2 years ago from this District, over Amos Clark, by an overwhelming majority, and by his straightforward and manly course in the discharge of his duties there has gained the approbation of his constituents and many friends in the District. His unanimous re-nomination attests the fact that he has been tried and found to be true to the best interests of his constituents and the country. Miles Ross is a man of large capabilities and learning and eminently fit for the high office bestowed upon him. He fills the requirements so often urged by us upon the selection of such candidates. He is honest, he is capable. With him to represent the people of this Congressional District, we will have a Representative that will not wink at fraud and corruption, but one who will fearlessly advocate and stand by the grand principles advocated by the Democratic party—Honesty and Reform. While the adherents of his political opponent, Mr. Atherton, loudly proclaim the purity of their candidate and his collegiate learning, they have not one word to say against Mr. Ross, because his course in Congress during the past two years will bear scrutiny. We predict for Miles Ross an overwhelming majority in the Third Congressional District at the coming election.

On Sunday last the long talked of blast at Hell Gate took place with satisfactory results. To enable our readers, who may not have read an account heretofore of the stupendous work which has been carried on for years at the above mentioned locality, we would state that some seven years ago work was commenced by the Government to remove dangerous rocks and reefs in the East River, above New York city, at the point termed Hell Gate on account of the dangerous locality of the place to sailing and other vessels. Gen. Newton, who was placed in command of the great work, commenced undermining the point known as Hallett's reef, by excavating the rock below the river bed, leaving as supports to the roof numerous pillars of stone. For seven years this undermining was carried on until an area of two and one-half acres of surface had been undermined. Then these pillars were drilled into and charges of dynamite, nitro-glycerine and powder inserted in the holes until over 52,000 pounds of explosive material were used. To this immense charge was attached wires leading to an electrical battery. On Sunday last, everything being in readiness, at 2:50 p. m., the blast was exploded by the two and a-half year old daughter of Gen. Newton, who merely had to touch a small key or knob to send the electric fluid to the charges in the cavern. The blast was highly satisfactory and successful, and witnessed by over 50,000 spectators. No damage whatever to property or injury to person occurred. Many persons from this city went to New York on the Sunday train to witness the explosion. It will now take a year, or more, to remove the broken rocks left at the bottom of the river bed by the force of the explosion.

New York City is alive to the coming contest. On last Friday night alone there were no less than seven ratification meetings held at various localities within her borders, at all of which immense enthusiasm prevailed. Senator Bayard is doing gallant service in the campaign and is proving his devotion to Democratic principles by his constant efforts in behalf of the candidates of the party. It is a noticeable feature of these meetings, as remarked by the New York Herald, that a large number of business men, a class not usually seen at political gatherings, are always in attendance, and apparently taking a deep interest in their proceedings.

It was the Democratic majority in the Congressional House of Representatives that brought to light the iniquities of the Belknaps and Babcocks of Grant's Administration. Had the House been Republican these corruptions would have [illegible] up. The people [illegible] investigation and [illegible] honor.

REFORM! REFORM!

Hon. George Opdyke, ex-Mayor of the City of New York, stands high as a gentleman of moral worth and business integrity, and politically he is a strong Republican.

A few days ago, the World sharply criticized Mr. Opdyke for presiding at a Grant-Hayes meeting, and that brought forth a letter reply, which we give entire as follows:

To the editor of the World:

SIR,—My attention has been called to an editorial in The World of the 16th inst., attacking me in regard to my suretyship upon the official bonds of Joshua F. Bailey as Collector.

Permit me to inform you of what you might have ascertained from an inspection of the records of the United States Circuit Court in this city, viz., that there were ten sureties upon Mr. Bailey's bonds, Messrs. Schell, Davies, Raymond, Kirkland, Durant, Clews, Cowdin, Dungan, Dilleber and myself; that suits were brought against all the sureties by United States District Attorneys Pierrepont and Davis in 1870 and 1871; that defences were interposed, and that in February, 1874, the suits were compromised and settled with the approval of the Treasury Department and the District Attorney and the bonds thus discharged.

If The World or the public take further interest in the matter, I will add that the deficit actually alleged was about $135,000, as nearly as I can now recollect; that the sureties defended upon the ground that the alleged deficit accrued during Mr. Bailey's service after his appointment to the Thirty-second Revenue District, which appointment was made when the Treas*ary Department had the means of know*ing, and ought to have known, that Mr. Bailey was in default as Collector in the Fourth Collection District; and that the Department allowed this deficit to be made up from funds collected in the Thirty-second District without communicating the facts to the sureties, thus failing to inform them of facts material to the risks assumed; that our counsel advised us that we had a perfect legal defence in the suits, while we felt that we had a good moral defense, and that for the sake of settling an unpleasant litigation we paid upward of $50,000 to the Government.

I for one feel that the Government received more than it was justly entitled to, and regret that while I have in this, as in other cases helped to pay for the defaults of others to the Government, I receive only abuse and misrepresentation therefor.

GEORGE OPDYKE.

New York, Sept. 18, 1876.

What damaging testimony against the Grant Administration, now seeking to perpetuate its evil deeds under the name of Hayes, that single communication makes public.

We quote Mr. Opdyke's own expressed language, Republican authority, and he is a gentleman of veracity.

He declares that a Revenue Collector was continued in the handling of the peoples' money "when the Treasury Department had the means of knowing and ought to have known that he was a defaulter."

What think you of that style of carrying on the Government, Taxpayers!

Transferring a defaulter from one Collection District, by re-appointment, to enable him to steal freely in another District.

Then letting the thief escape, and compromising with his bondsmen at thirty-seven cents on the dollar.

That reveals official profligacy at Washington of the most dangerous kind, and, there is reason to believe, only a small portion of it.

Every day proves more and more the vital necessity of Democratic REFORM.

We boldly avow, had Samuel J. Tilden been President, the disgrace and damage of keeping a known defaulter in office would never have occurred.—NEVER!

The Democracy of Brooklyn met in mass meeting on Thursday evening last. The speakers were Senator Bayard, and other gentlemen of prominence. A most marked sensation was produced by the following statement, made during his speech by Hon. Heister Clymer, Chairman of the Committee that presented Articles of Impeachment against Secretary Belknap:

"For I say to you—and I say it well understanding the responsibility which may attach to my remarks and willing to back it—that if ever there was an officer deserving of impeachment and liable to its penalties, it is the present President of the United States. And I say to you that of my own knowledge, by reason of the investigations made by my own Committee, that he has been defiant of law and that he has purposely required the provisions of the statutes, and that he has been guilty of high crimes and misdemeanors. He has perverted his powers to corrupt purposes. And I say, too, that if it were not that his term is to end within a few months by the will of the people, he would have been presented to the Senate of the United States for trial for high crimes and misdemeanors, and all this, that we know by the name of Grantism, is to be perpetuated if Rutherford B. Hayes is elected President; because he was nominated by the men within the ranks of the Republican party, who represent Grantism pure and simple."

We need do no more, in view of the authority from which this comes, than to submit it to the earnest attention of all thinking men.

About 85,000 office-holders, paid agents of the Grant-Hayes administration, are now drawing salaries from the National Treasury, while hundreds of thousands of honest and industrious workingmen can scarcely earn bread for their families. Of the above named swarm of Treasury leeches, probably 30,000 drones are a useless expense upon the country. Never before, in the whole history of the world, was there ever such an urgent need of REFORM as at the present day, in these United States. VOTE FOR TILDEN!

Andrew G. Curtin, Governor of Pennsylvania during the war, and one of the founders of the Republican party, has become disgusted with the errors of that political organization, and now advocates the election of Tilden and Hendricks, as does likewise Austin Blair, the Republican War Governor of Michigan.

Only by the election of Tilden and Hendricks, and the reform they will [illegible] just reward of their [illegible] compensation for their enterprise, and mechanics and laborers the employment they now seek in vain.

Was the Government of the United States administered upon the basis of strict economy and integrity, paying only for necessary wants, and lopping off every species of fraud and corruption, at least fifty million dollars a year might be saved to the people. What an immense aid that would be toward the restoration of business prosperity! It can be secured, but only through absolute Reform. There is no other way. Going on as the Government has been under Grant will be from bad to worse, and finally into hopeless ruin. It is time to change Engineers. There is danger ahead.

Andrew Jackson, when a candidate for President, was assailed with the vilest calumny; falsehoods without stint were concocted against him personally, yet the popular will triumphantly elected him, and his stern honesty and clear-headed judgment as Chief Magistrate silenced opposition. Samuel J. Tilden, as a Presidential candidate, is now the object of the same kind of base hostility, but truth and the people are on his side, and as President he will earn the illustrious fame of a second Andrew Jackson.

Ex-Senators Trumbull, of Illinois, Ross, of Kansas, Tipton, of Nebraska, and Cowan, of Pennsylvania, have all abandoned the corrupt Republican party of Chandler, Cameron and Company, and support the nominations of Tilden and Hendricks.

"I have no hesitation in saying that I am earnestly and heartily in favor of the election of Tilden and Hendricks. I think the early prosperity and welfare of the country are entirely dependent on their success."—General Bartlett, of Massachusetts.

VIGO, September 27.—Last night William M. Tweed, escorted by a troop of Spanish soldiers was taken from the Castillo del Castro and marched through the most unfrequented streets of the city to the pier, when he was put into the Franklin's boat and taken aboard of that vessel. The citizens of Vigo are incensed and indignant at the Spanish authorities for surrendering Tweed to the American Government.

WASHINGTON, September 27.—There is a very hopeful feeling at the Indian Bureau that the treaty just concluded with the most powerful of the Sioux tribes will have such an effect upon the other few hostile tribes as to cause them to sue for peace and to abandon their murderous warfare. If the tribes signing the treaty remove to the Indian Territory, as provided, it is confidently believed that the Indian problem will be solved, and that Indian hostilities in the future will be confined to a few straggling bands without sufficient strength to resist or encounter the troops.

WASHINGTON, September 27.—Considerable excitement was caused in and about the capitol yesterday afternoon by the desperate attempt of an unknown insane man to commit suicide by jumping from the balcony around the rotunda of the capitol. He was secured and taken to the Seventh precinct station, where he became very violent and tore his clothing to shreds even while having handcuffs on him.

There are a great many fast maidens, but Goldsmith Maid beats them all.—She now has the fastest heat, fastest second heat, fastest third heat, fastest fifth heat, fastest sixth heat, fastest two consecutive, three consecutive, and four consecutive heats and the fastest time on a half-mile track.

The Supreme Court of Indiana has decided that if a promise of marriage is, by its terms, not to be performed within one year, it is void unless it is reduced to writing and signed by the parties.

SHOT AND SHELL.

The Georgia State election comes off October 4th, and Indiana and Ohio will "go and do likewise" October 10th. It's in the air.

Carl Schurz isn't pleased with the appearance of things in Ohio. He admits that the German vote will go almost solid for Tilden and Hendricks.

Tilden clubs are rapidly increasing in number among the colored people in the South. The Vicksburg Herald reports several in that section of Mis*sissippi, and we hear of them even in* South Carolina.

The marriage of a negro to a white girl of Newport, Rhode Island, a few days ago, which created such great indignation with the people that the married couple were stoned and otherwise maltreated by the mob, provokes a Southern editor to cry out: "Hurrah for civil rights! Is this not a fit case for military interference by the President?"

At the election of town officers at Abbeville, S. C., the entire Democratic ticket was elected by over one hundred majority. The colored vote was one hundred and forty-three, and 100 of them voted the Democratic ticket. A dispatch to the Columbia (S. C.) Register announcing the result says "there was no disturbance, the election was quietly conducted." This is a good beginning.

The radicals are whistling to keep up their courage.

They have whistled over the loss of Arkansas, with its six electoral votes.

They have whistled over the loss of Alabama, with its ten electoral votes.

They have whistled over the loss of Oregon, with its three electoral votes.

And they are now whistling "down" the wind for the ghost of a chance to elect Hayes.

They have whistled over the loss of Connecticut, with its six electoral votes.

They have whistled over a largely reduced majority in Vermont, with its five electoral votes.

They are preparing to "pucker" over Ohio, with the probable loss of its twenty-two electoral votes.

They have whistled over Maine and [illegible]

They are actually "[illegible] by a whistle" over Indiana, with the certain loss of its fifteen electoral votes.

Well, whistle away!

Governor Tilden has shattered a thieving Canal Ring into fragments, and vastly reduced taxation in the State of New York. He is the very man for President.

The only antidote for the paralysis of hard times is the election of an able and determined reformer like Samuel J. Tilden.

Col. Nicholas Smith, son-in-law of the late Horace Greeley, is for Tilden and Hendricks.

Gideon Welles, President Lincoln's Secretary of the Navy, cannot stand Grant-Hayesism. He too goes for Tilden and Hendricks.

Murder Will Out.

A few years ago "August Flower" was discovered to be a certain cure for Dyspepsia and Liver complaint, a few thin Dyspeptics made known to their friends how easily and quickly they had been cured by it. The great merits of GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER became heralded through the country by one sufferer to another, until without advertising, its sale has become immense. Druggists in EVERY TOWN in the United States are selling it.—No person suffering with Sour Stomach, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, indigestion, low spirits, etc., can take three doses without relief. Go to your Druggist, Wm. H. Voorhees, and get a bottle for 75 cents and try it. Sample bottles 10 cents.

LOOK!
The wildest excitement exists in many localities on account of the immense number of tramps who are perambulating over the country.
Out
of work, and many of them would not work if it was tendered them. The most of them are a ragged, thieving, dirty and worthless crew. The exception can be granted to an occasional few.
For
a whole flock of black sheep is truly a rarity. The general depression of business, and lack of employment everywhere has forced many to roam in search of work, and others travel, beg, and steal, because they don't want to work. In this connection we wish to call
Your attention to the fact that we propose to do our level best to keep up the high standard for respectability of this section of country as far as GENTEEL APPEARANCE IN DRESS can do it, and while the wearing of good clothes is no particular safeguard for your Lives and Property
there is no denying the fact that a neat appearing, well dressed man is not likely to end up a scene, equal to a tough and ragged individual. This brings us to
The
great question at issue which is to inform you that our new stock of Clothing is now in, and we are prepared to fit neatly every Man or Boy, who will come with the cash, in a suit, to please in every respect. Our prices are so very low that the
Tramps
Themselves can readily see that it will be cheaper for them to buy than undertake to beg or steal a new suit. We propose to keep the lead in our line of business. If you

COMMON COUNCIL meets next Monday evening.

"SHOUTING the battle cry of—"Tilden." How nicely it goes.

THE mosquito club endorses and sucks both political parties.

THE silk hat worn by gentlemen fourteen years ago is fashionable this fall.

OYSTERS this year are extraordinary large. A great many of them weigh five pounds.

BUSINESS men are now making their notes payable next Spring in order to shorten the Winter.

REV. DR. VINCENT will preach next Sunday morning, October 1, in the Methodist Episcopal church.

THERE will be a grand shooting match at Campbell's Club House next Monday, Oct. 2d. Four hundred pigeons will be provided.

REV. CYRUS DICKSON, D. D., of N. Y., will occupy the pulpit of the Crescent Ave. Pres. church next Sunday morning and evening.

THE lover of nature will soon admire the landscape, arrayed in Autumn leaves and wanderers with carpet-bags and green umbrellas.

WE are glad to learn that a friend of the Y. M. C. A. has kindly offered to donate them as much as the Concert by the "Apollo Club" nets them.

A PIGEON Shooting Match is announced to take place at Scotch Plains, near Britton's Hotel, next Friday, Oct. 6th, at which there will be over 300 birds and perfect satisfaction guaranteed.

THE lovers of dancing should not forget the Annual Ball of the A. O. H. Society, No. 4, of this city, at Laing's Hall, Wednesday evening, Oct. 11th, next. Tickets $1.00, admitting gentleman and ladies.

MR. G. RANKELKAMP has opened a new hotel at Springfield, N. J., known as the "Washington Hotel." Mr. R. has the reputation of being a good hotel keeper, and the public are invited to give him a call.

THE retail price of coal per ton in this city is as follows:—Stove, $5.25; Egg, $5.00; Nut, $4.75 against $7.50, $7.50 and $7.00 for same last year. Read the advertisements of our coal merchants who advertise in THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

AT the head of the first column on the Second page of this issue, will be found the call of the Chairman of the last Assembly Convention of this District, calling upon the Democrats to select delegates to attend the next Assembly Convention at Summit. Read it.

SUNDAY last was not a very pleasant day for church goers on account of the disagreeable state of the weather. Dr. Smith delivered a very interesting sermon at the Congregational Church, there being a very fair attendance present notwithstanding the rain.

A YOUNG daughter of Mr. F. E. Busby, of this city, aged about three years, fell from a stone stoop in front of a residence in Brooklyn, N. Y., where she was visiting, on Friday last and broke her collar bone, besides sustaining a serious wound on her head.

TWO of our fellow townsmen were honored with appointment to office at the late Congressional Convention at Freehold: Hon. J. W. Yates as permanent chairman, and His Honor Mayor J. C. Sutphen as one of the committee to wait upon and inform Mr. Ross of his nomination.

THE Somerset County Fair will be held at Somerville on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of the first week in October. This has always been a favorite Institution with the public, and this year the extra attractions offered will make it still more so. Besides the best stock and horses in the vicinity, there will be a Tournament on Wednesday, and a novel Mule Race on Thursday.

WE paid a flying visit to our old Democratic friend, H. E. Agens, at Springfield, the other day, and found Hank well and hearty as usual. The hotel kept by him is one of the best way-side inns in the state. As a note of our old friend's prosperity, we observed a handsome new gilt-lettered sign —"Springfield Hotel"—suspended over the door. Give Hank a call when you pass that way.

NOTWITHSTANDING the stormy weather last Sunday evening, a large audience was present at Rev. J. L. Hurlburt's lecture upon "The reasons why we Believe in the Bible." The third and last lecture of the course will be delivered next Sunday evening. The blackboard will be employed in illustration. The service will commence at half-past seven o'clock, fifteen minutes earlier than has been the custom.

AT a meeting of the Union County Democratic Executive Committee, held at the Sheridan House, Elizabeth, on Wednesday afternoon last, it was decided to call a County Convention to meet at Wirsching's Washington Hall, Elizabeth, Oct. 17th, for the purpose of nominating two Coroners to be supported at the approaching election, also to elect representatives to the County Executive Committee from each ward and township. The primaries are to be held Oct. 10th.

MINERAL WOOL.—A curiosity in the shape of mineral wool, manufactured at the Greenwood Iron Furnace (a station on the New York and Erie railroad), has been left at this office by Mr. H. S. Bilyeu, of North Plainfield, to which we invite the attention of those curious in such matters. It is made of the slag from the furnace, and has many of the excellent properties of asbestos, which mineral it closely resembles. It is used as building sheathing, packing for water and steam pipes, refrigerators, water coolers, etc., and is already a source of a considerable revenue to the company manufacturing it; the slag until last year being altogether useless. The mineral wool is furnished at the works by the car load for two cents a pound. There is said to be a similar material, blown from volcanoes on the Sandwich Islands, locally known as "Maiden's Hair." Since the manufacture was commenced last year at Greenwood the works have been visited by hundreds of scientists and others to witness the operation, which is said by Mr. Bilyeu to be very interesting.

The New Election Law.

The Secretary of State has sent to the Clerks of the several counties copies of the new election law, sufficient to supply every polling district in the State. As the Legislature made several material and important changes in the law, it is of the greatest importance that the copies should be in the hands of the Clerk of the district at the earliest possible time. Those district clerks who have not received their copies will find them with the Clerk of their county.

The Young Apollo Club.

The Concert to be given by this popular Club composed of the best Boy singers in America, and who have for the past two seasons sung nightly at the "Gilmore Garden" Concerts, will undoubtedly please all lovers of good music. The programme is varied, and consists of Solos, Duets, Trios and Choruses. As the Association make no extra charge for reserved seats, we suggest that our readers procure their tickets without delay.

THE Democrats of this city are holding a grand ratification meeting at Laing's Hall this evening.

Bill Posting.

WE again call the attention of parties desiring bills posted to the facilities afforded by us for doing such work. We have recently erected, at considerable cost, several handsome three-sheet bill boards, and have besides many desirable stands throughout the city. Those wishing bills posted in a thorough and conspicuous manner should bear this in mind and not give the work to any party who has no prominent places on which to post. We furthermore desire to inform certain parties who are in the habit of posting bills on our bulletin boards without consent, that there is a law imposing a penalty against such acts, which law will be enforced one of these days if the practice is not discontinued.

Musical Concert.

The Young Apollo Club of New York has been engaged by the Young Men's Christian Association, to give a second concert in the Congregational Church on Thursday night of next week, October 5th. All who listened to the first concert given on the night of Decoration Day will certainly receive this announcement with pleasure, while those who spent that day at the Centennial and failed to get home in time to attend, will have an opportunity to retrieve the loss they then sustained. An interesting incident relating to this Concert is an offer which has been made voluntarily by one of our prominent citizens to give to the Association an amount equal to the net proceeds of the Concert, that is to say, for every dollar received over the actual cost of the Concert, he will give another dollar, adding as he made the offer, "I hope the house will be filled to overflowing—the more I shall have to pay the better I shall like it." Now, in view of the reputation of the Young Apollo's and the pleasure which the Concert is sure to give, as well as the benefit which will accrue to the Association, we bespeak for the occasion a crowded house. The price of tickets has been fixed at fifty cents, which entitles the holder to a reserved seat, on application at either of the drug stores of Reynolds & Stelle.

Personalis.

That good-looking disciple of Faust, H. S. Bilyeu, returned last week from a three month's sojourn among the hills of Orange county, N. Y. He reports the Tilden and Reform element predominant in that locality and predicts that New York State will excel "Excelsior" this Fall.

Sherbert Sleeper, a former resident of Plainfield, died at his residence, Dunellen, on Thursday last, after a short illness from consumption. Mr. Sleeper served for several years on our police force and was an efficient officer.

We regret to learn of the death of Mr. M. S. Wadley, an esteemed resident of North Plainfield. Mr. Wadley had made many warm friends since he came to this section who will learn with sorrow of his sudden demise.

John Stewart, the popular vender of kerosene, accompanied by his wife and sister, left the city for Philadelphia yesterday (Thursday) to be absent a week.

Plainfield Athletic Club.

Next Thursday, October 5th, the annual tournament of the Plainfield Athletic Club will take place on the grounds of the Driving Park Association, Park Avenue, and the event promises to be one of interest to all concerned. The members of the club, and in fact all those competitors outside of that body, who have enlisted in the games, have given much time to practice and will earnestly strive for the prizes, which are well worth earning. Ample accommodations will be provided on the grounds on the day of the tournament for all who may attend, especially the ladies. Below we give the programme for the day:

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

The Third Concert in aid of All Saints' Church, at Academy Hall, Wednesday, Sept. 27th, was a grand and successful affair. The commodious hall was filled by an appreciative and highly respectable audience, who attested their appreciation of the efforts of the well known artists by frequent encores. The programme was well selected and was fully carried out. Much praise and credit is due Miss [illegible] for her efforts in making this concert what it was—a grand success.

The Regular Quarterly Meeting of "The Scotch Plains Mutual Theft Detecting Society" will take place on Monday evening, Oct. 2nd, at 7:30 o'clock.

We regret to learn that while our old friend, Mr. James C. Lyons, of this village, was [illegible]

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

A long-needed improvement has been made by L. H. Rheaume in repairing the plank walk on Somerset street, extending from his residence, to that of Mr. Allen, opposite Linden avenue.

One of the neatest rustic arbors we remember having seen is that recently put up in the garden of L. H. Rheaume on Somerset street, corner of Grand View avenue.

Mr. Edward Higgs, for thirty years a resident of this vicinity, has sold his property on the mountain, near Washington Rock, and intends taking up his residence at Elizabeth. Before his removal, however, he proposes having a general clearing out sale of all his stock, farming utensils, household and kitchen furniture, on Monday, Oct. 2d, at 10 a. m., at his residence as above described. We are sorry to lose Mr. H. as a resident.

Per call of the chairman of the last County Convention of Somerset county, the Democratic voters of North Plainfield township will meet at Dealer's Hotel on Saturday, Oct. 7th, to elect five delegates to attend the County and Assembly Convention, to be held at the Court House in Somerville, Tuesday, Oct. 10th, for the purpose of nominating a Member of Assembly and three coroners to be supported at the coming election. The delegates to the County Convention will meet at the Court House, Somerville, at 10 o'clock a. m. The delegates to the Assembly Convention will meet at 11 o'clock a. m. same day.

Messrs. Lewis and Woodland having finished their fine double house on Somerset street, near Greenbrook road, it is now occupied by our Democratic friend, John Woodland and our Republican friend, Harry Couch. We trust the example and influence of such Democratic neighbors as Esquire Verdon and Mr. Woodland will tend to enable friend Couch to see the error of remaining with the other party.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Bishop Scarborough will occupy the pulpit at Grace Episcopal church on Sunday next, morning and evening services.

Mr. Judson N. Miller, of the firm of E. Miller & Sons, was united to Miss Sarah McFarland, adopted daughter of J. W. McCune, on Wednesday evening last. The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride's parents on Westfield avenue, Rev. Mr. Earle officiating.

We learn with deepest regret since writing the notice of the marriage of Rev. H. C. Rush, that the bride's mother, Mrs. Gilpin, was visited with a stroke of paralysis while on the way to the church, and that her recovery is doubtful. The sympathies of the entire community are extended to the afflicted family.

Road Overseer Pierson deserves mention for repair of walk in front of Clark's lake. Those of our citizens who attend Grace Episcopal church should give him a vote of thanks.

The political canvass is gradually growing livelier, both parties having opened their club rooms—the Hayes and Wheeler club on Broad street near Prospect and the Tilden and Hendricks club in Brocksmith's Hall. The Republican headquarters in point of interior decoration are the most attractive, being profusely decorated with flags, banners, pictures, &c., but the Democratic club have decidedly the handsomest transparency. The Republicans practiced economy in this instance, having their transparency used in the campaign of '72 repainted, while the Democrats purchased a new one.

The past week might justly be called "Matrimonial week" in Westfield to judge from the numerous marriages, four of these interesting events taking place.

Who made a natural? Who called for cologne? Who is partial to chess? are questions of leading importance and are being daily discussed in this community.

The marriage of Rev. Harris C. Rush, Rector of Grace Episcopal Church, to Miss Caroline Gilpin, was the occasion of a large attendance at the Church on Wednesday morning last. The ceremony was performed by Bishop Scarborough assisted by Dean Rodman. The happy couple left in the afternoon for a short wedding tour accompanied by the best wishes of our citizens.

THIRD CONGRESSIONAL CONVENTION.

The Third Democratic District Convention assembled at Freehold, Monmouth County, last Tuesday, and was one of the most enthusiastic assemblages of the kind ever held in this District.—Every delegation was full and composed of some of the most leading men in the political party they represented in their District.

Promptly at 12 o'clock, M., Col. Alfred W. Jones, of Middlesex, Chairman of last Convention, called the meeting to order and made a most excellent speech, being frequently applauded during the delivery of the same.

Mr. C. D. Deshler was made Temporary Chairman with Addison S. Clark as Temporary Secretary. Mr. Deshler made a long speech, and after the appointment of a Committee on Permanent Organization, the Convention adjourned to meet at 2 o'clock.

On reassembling, the Committee announced the following gentlemen as permanent officers:

President—Joseph W. Yates, of Union.

Vice Presidents—Judge A. P. Provost, of Middlesex; Thos. S. R. Brown, of Monmouth, and Dr. H. R. Cannon, of Union.

Secretaries—Chas. F. Morgan, of Middlesex; Dr. James H. Patterson, of Monmouth; Peter B. Bonnett, of Union.

Upon taking the Chair Mr. Yates said:

I thank you for the honor of being selected to preside at this Convention, and with your kind co-operation in the transaction of its business, I am hopeful of a favorable result of our deliberations, a result not only to be sanctioned by your action here to-day, but by the influence this conservative body of gentlemen are to wield in this Congressional District, and throughout the State during the present campaign.

When we consider the disgraceful record which our political opponents have made for themselves and the country, to be perpetuated as a part of the history of this great nation, the unparalleled energy they have manifested for partisan and personal purposes at the expense of the poor tax-paying people of this country, [illegible] to warrant his election in November next; but the straightforward and persistent course pursued by a Democratic House in exposing the frauds of our rulers to the public has made them desperate and unscrupulous as to the means to be used to deceive the people and thus gain unlimited possession of their rights and liberties; therefore it is expedient for us, after doing our work well here to-day, to continue our efforts until the polls are closed on the 7th of November next.

Further, It is reasonable that the Democracy should hope for success, having nominated for the Presidency the Hon. Samuel J. Tilden, a statesman and a practical reformer, who has saved for the people of his State an amount exceeding Eight Million Dollars [illegible]; And for the Vice-Presidency, the Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks, the favored statesman of the West, [illegible]

Against these considerations our opponents offer the people the privilege of continuing the Grant Administration and its dishonest and demoralizing following, in the election of Hayes and Wheeler, which alone should be sufficient to warrant the success of the Democracy at the ballot box in electing a Reform President and Vice President [illegible] corruption.

Again: The action of the Democratic House of Representatives, which by its untiring efforts has succeeded in saving to the people of the United States, during one session of Congress, Thirty nine Million Dollars, ought of itself (when properly considered) to secure a much larger majority for the candidate you nominate to-day than was given in 1874. This saving of Thirty nine Million Dollars per annum at Six per cent. interest for the past eleven years (since the close of our civil war) would have amounted in round numbers to Five hundred and eighty Million Dollars, sufficient to have paid off in full every dollar of the paper legal-tender circulation now due and amounting to about Three hundred and fifty-six Millions Dollars, and have left to the credit of the people in the United States Treasury, Two hundred and twenty-eight Million, Six hundred and forty-four thousand Dollars; sufficient of itself to run the Federal Government for at least a full year without the aid of taxes.

It might be said by many, and with some truth, that the Republican party, with its full control of both Houses of Congress and the Executive Departments, should have made a far better showing per annum than a saving of Thirty-nine Million Dollars, as accomplished by a Democratic House with the Senate and Executive Departments politically opposed to it; but the taxpayers should make due allowance in favor of the Republicans, they having been hampered with a following of safe burglars, whiskey rings, army bummers and Credit Mobilier disciples, who have become experts from their long experience, commencing sixteen years ago, while the Democrats of the House of 1876 entered upon their duties with clean hands, fresh from the people and without any corrupt or entangling embarrassments whatever. I think we should feel encouraged for the people of our State are thoughtful and mindful of their interests and proud of their country, and will, without doubt, give a much larger majority for the Democratic candidate you may select here to-day than was given in 1874.

For a moment let us look at some of the arguments used by our political opponents, to show why the Democrats ought not to be supported by the people at the polls in the coming contest. They say that the Democrats are not honest and cannot be trusted with the control of the Government. We will not go into particulars to answer this remarkable charge made to the sensible voters of the country with apparent sincerity, and that, too, when the larger proportion of the Republican officials are either under indictment or censure for malfeasance in office. They also say if we Democrats get the power that the Democracy of the North and South will again reduce to slavery from Four to Five Millions of colored people who, it is well-known are guaranteed, in the strongest language possible, under amendments to the Constitution, every right a white man can possibly enjoy. More; that we Democrats will resume the payment of thousands of millions of Rebel obligations contracted during the Civil war, for the purpose of destroying the Federal Union, and to add this vast and unlimited amount to our National Debt to be paid by the tax-ridden people of this country.

Both of these propositions are absurd and sheer nonsense, and prohibited by the Constitution of the United States, and will require a two-thirds vote of the States of the Union to make it possible, even if there were fanatics enough in the country to entertain such a mad scheme.

I cannot think such arguments as these will go far towards reducing the Democratic majority in this District in November next. The people have more to fear in the coming election from the policy recommended to the Republican candidate for President by General Kilpatrick, who is reported to have said that "money and the bloody shirt" are the essentials for the success of the Republican Campaign in Ohio and Indiana. The General may come here after the October elections are over in the West to tell us what we want in New Jersey. Whether he favors us with his presence or not, I am satisfied for the present that the voters of this State know that they want honest, efficient and high-toned men at the head of the National Government, such as will ensure us respect at home and abroad, and disburse the people's money for the interest of the people, such gentlemen as Samuel J. Tilden and Thomas A. Hendricks and the members of Congress whom we expect to elect to support them in their laudable efforts for Reform. We want confidence established in the business and monied community so that capital and industry may find its legitimate channel, to the end that labor may be abundant and remunerative; we want a happy and contented South, where the rights of all classes will be respected; we want less partisanship and more patriotism.

It has been stated, as coming from the official records, and is doubtless correct, that we have one hundred and two thousand three hundred and fifty civil employees drawing pay from the Public Treasury—whether on duty or not—against Fifty-three thousand one hundred and thirteen at the close of our Civil war; so we evidently want honest, faithful and competent civil employees in the service of the Federal Government, and the number reduced to at least 50 per cent. of those who are now employed or registered on the pay roll in an official capacity, without rendering any service to the people whatever.

We want a prosperous and happy North; we don't want to foster feelings of sectional hatred and strife; we want one people, strong, prosperous, united and contented; we want prosperity in our commerce, that we may see once more, as in times of old, the ships, floating the American flag, lining the shores of New Jersey and engaged in a prosperous business with all parts of the globe. We want Tilden as President, and Hendricks as Vice President, and the candidate you nominate here to-day, for our next Member of Congress, elected from this Congressional District.

The Committee on Resolutions then reported as follows through their Chairman, Edward J. Pitcher, of Monmouth:

Resolved, That we cordially endorse the nominations made by the Democratic National Convention at St. Louis, and the platform adopted—recognizing in Samuel J. Tilden and Thomas A. Hendricks, statesmen who come fully up to the Jeffersonian standard of honesty and capability, and to the principles declared such as are conducive to the welfare of the republic and the happiness of its people.

Resolved, That the Democratic House of Representatives for its successful struggle for retrenchment, whereby the government expenditures were reduced thirty millions of dollars, in spite of the opposition of the Republican Senate, and for its labors in exposing official fraud and venality, by which the Republicans were brought to a sense of their accountability to the people, deserve the thanks of the country, and should receive its endorsement.

Resolved, That Honorable Miles Ross having cooperated in the reformatory measures of the House, is entitled to share in the thanks due that body, and we fully endorse the record he has made as a faithful, industrious and able representative of his district.

The reading of each resolution called forth applause, and the report was adopted.

The Convention was called by Counties for nomination for a Representative in Congress, and each County responded with the name of Miles Ross, amid great enthusiasm and loud cheering.

Dr. Henry R. Cannon moved that the nomination be made by acclamation.

The motion was adopted with a rising vote and a renewal of the cheering.

Mr. James Ritchie, of Union, moved that a Committee be appointed to wait upon Mr. Ross and apprise him of the action of the Convention; which was carried and a committee of three from each county appointed:

Monmouth—Wm. V. Conover, J. H. Patterson, P. Hendrickson.

Union—[illegible], James [illegible], Dr. J. C. Sutphen.

Middlesex—C. D. Deshler, M. O'Gorman, David M. Perine.

Mr. Thomas McElroy moved that the next Congressional Convention of the District to be held at Elizabeth, and that the Chairman be empowered to call it. Adopted.

Telling speeches were made by Judge [illegible], Thos. J. Raynor and Colonel Hamilton, and at 4 o'clock the Convention adjourned.

The Union County delegation organized by the election of Thos. P. Kingsland Chairman and Peter B. Bonnett Secretary. [illegible] was appointed for the Committee on Rules, John Egan for the Committee on Resolutions, [illegible] for the Committee on Credentials and Joseph T. Crowell for the Committee on Permanent Organization.

The following gentlemen were selected by the Counties as the Executive Committee of the District:

Middlesex—D. M. Perrine, D. B. Boice, Thomas [illegible].

Monmouth—[illegible].

Union—James [illegible], John J. Fay, Lewis E. Bye.

The hardware store of Abraham C. Wiseman, at Somerville, was broken open at an early hour one morning this week, and robbed of pocket knives and revolvers valued at $200. The drug store of Joshua Doughty was visited, but the burglars failed to force an entrance.

What! have you not heard the news to-day,
Of things which I will now convey?—
About some guns and pistols rare?
At Vanderbeek's they now appear!
Visitors come and oft declare
No one dare with his compare.
Some go with shot and some with shell,
Others in Greenbacks—'tis well.
If you want one that can't be beat,
Come right along—be in a hurry—
To Vanderbeek's store; remember the street,
Corner of North avenue and Cherry.

Pigeons are quite plenty in Morris and Warren counties. Many have been taken about Dover, and in the mountains around Hackettstown. The mild Winter has increased the usually good supply of partridge and quail, and rabbits are very plenty in the stony fertile section of the State.

Go to Crane & Terrill's for your silk hats.

The commission appointed by Congressman Hardenbergh to examine competitors for the cadetship within his gift concluded their labors in the City Hall, Jersey City, Saturday. Benjamin E. Handforth, of Seventh street, Hoboken, was the successful competitor. Thirteen boys attending the public schools of the county contested for the prize.

The United States Grand Jury in Trenton on Wednesday afternoon returned indictments against Jeremiah E. Fairbanks, late assistant cashier of the National State Bank, and E. P. Williams, of Elizabeth, charged with embezzling $88,000 of the funds of the bank. It has been generally believed that these cases had been compromised, as it was reported that the bank officials had consented not to prosecute, provided the loss was made good. This, it is alleged, has been done. At all events, Mr. Williams has again opened his store and is doing a prosperous business, while Mr. Fairbanks has been rusticating. The trial is set down for next week.

Parties wanting Monuments and Headstones cannot do better than go to Manning's City Marble Works next to M. E. Church Front Street, as he has a large assortment and good marble. 1y

AUTUMN FASHIONS.

Purses for carrying specie are in fashion again. They are made of fine silver wire, and are suspended from the chatelaine.

The "Newport" wrap is the name given to a pretty woolen shawl with white ground, wrought with blue or scarlet stars or circles.

The fashion of cutting the edges of over-skirts and polonaises into squares is much followed for plain costumes of silk, cashmere, or alpaca.

New braids for trimming dresses are of woolen twills, through which are threads of chenille. The fringe used with these has chenille threads also.

Basques of new dresses have vests in front, and the back is designed to represent a postilion back, and join with the trimming on the back of the skirt.

New belts of velvet and of leather are wide girdles pointed behind and in front, and laced with silk cord. Straight belts are ornamented all around with square plaques of silver.

The colored nets for the hair are fast becoming popular with young ladies. The hair is not now braided before being put in the net, but is tied in a straight loop, which is called the Catogan loop.

English collars of linen remain the favorite shape but are worn very high behind, with the points in front turned over widely, leaving the throat exposed. The novelty is to bind the hem with small bars of embroidery.

The novelty in Chambery gauze. Cream velvet stripes of delicate colors, with dots and dashes in the thin alternating stripe of gauze. Cream velvet-striped grenadine is exceedingly handsome, also pale rose and blue, and these are to be made up with velvet skirts.

English calicoes are brought out in foulard patterns, with soft finish that makes them resemble the fine French foulard cambrics. They are shown in stripes, dots, cross-bars, and in damask patterns in the stylish gray-tints, brown, and navy blue colors. They cost 25 or 30 cents a yard, and are a yard wide.

Among rich and stylish materials for polonaises is the fine damask camel's-hair, thick, soft and pliable, and of the darkest shades of gray or brown; it comes in Oriental designs that are very indistinct, but when traced out are found to be palms, arabesques, and ferns of lighter shade laid over a thick dark ground.

Ragged stuffs promise to be popular with lovers of novelty. These are dark wool grounds with stripes of raised, knotted, or tufted threads, either silk or wool, in gay colors like those seen in Turkish and Servian scarfs. This bright stripe is so slight that it is not too striking for good taste, and is to be made up with pipings of bright color.

Transparent materials for the overdresses of evening toilettes show brocade and damask designs closely worked up to cover the whole material, while others have open lace-worked grounds. There are corded gauze grenadine, and are shown in new shades of lilac, canary-color, cream, the linden green (which is almost as pale as cream-color), Indienne blue, and bottle green.

Among late novelties is Dove's lever buckle.—This buckle is made self-adjusting by means of a lever, and is capable of supporting a weight of ten pounds. It is applied to various articles with very good effect, such as garters, drawers, and stocking supporters. An improvement in stocking supporters is to have two suspending straps from [illegible]. The same principle of the lever clasp is also applied to buttons, which are thus attached to the garment without being sewed, and are therefore very convenient for [illegible].

The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company sold Wednesday at noon 100,000 tons of Scranton coal at the Company's salesroom, No. 26 Exchange Place. John H. Draper was the auctioneer, and there was a large attendance of buyers. The bidding was brisk and spirited but the prices were below those of a week ago. The prices were as follows: 9,000 tons of steamboat was started at $2.50 and sold for from $2.57 to 2.72½ per ton; 25,000 tons of grate started at $2.80 and sold all the way up to $2.97½ per ton; 12,000 tons of egg was started at $2.90 and sold all the way from $3.15 to $3.30 per ton; 30,000 tons of stove began at $3.50 and was sold for from $3.60 to $4.00; 12,000 tons of chestnut [illegible] all the way from $2.90 to $3.22½.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A STRONG APPEAL FOR MONEY.

The following circular has been issued by a business man in New Carlisle, Ind., and may serve a good purpose for New Jersey merchants similarly situated:

MY DEAR SIR:—I want to ask you a plain question in all kindness and sincerity, and I would like to have you answer it honestly and candidly, not in two or three years or months, but now, this week. Supposing you were as poor as Job's turkey and had invested $2,000 or $3,000 in an enterprise you designed to make an exclusively cash business; supposing, as a matter of accommodation and good nature, you had trusted it out all over the country from hell to Jericho; supposing you had kept adding to your means and still putting it on the books for a few days until your funds were played out, like old Foot's prayer-meeting; supposing you had claims against you in the hands of business men who had accommodated you in good faith and needed their money; supposing you had some pride in you, and meant to be square-toed and punctual and hated to see the man you owed when you didn't have your legal tender in your trousers to pay his just and lawful demands, worse than you would to see an Indian or the devil, and suppose those whom you had accommodated felt perfectly easy and contented, shied the track when you went to see them, and told the wife of their bosom to answer "not at home," or came into town and left without even paying a part; supposing they held your money and waited patiently for wheat to come up to 90 cents or $1, or pork to bring $5 or $6 a hundred—what would you do? Would you let your debtors go and smile and smile and be a villain, or would you sue every mother's son of them that did not pay, if it was the last thing you did in town? If you were an honest man you would do the latter, and that's just what I shall be compelled to do if the Lord is God or there is a king in Israel. I don't want money to look at; I can earn enough for that; don't want any to salt down (I never could make it keep); but out of several thousands trusted out I humbly want a few hundreds, and I'll be —— if I won't have it or an execution returned nulla bona. I love you myself as a mother loves her first-born, but I love to pay my debts better than I love any man, woman, or child on the face of God Almighty's green earth, and, by the great Jehovah and the Continental Congress, I propose to do it, if I have to make costs for every man in Olive Township or in St. Joseph's County owing me. Now let us have the "spondulix" and see how sweet and pretty I can smile upon you. Yours, courteously.

OLD JOHN HORKER.

About two o'clock yesterday afternoon a house painter, swinging on a scaffold attached to a high building on Woodward avenue, heard some one calling upon him to come down. Thinking it was the owner of the block, he descended and met a wrinkled faced old chap who was holding an ancient umbrella over his head.

"Is your name Duke?" inquired the old man in a soft voice.

"No, sir," was the reply. "My name is Ogden."

"There it is, you see!" cackled the stranger. "Your name isn't Duke because it is Ogden. A plainer case never came to my attention. If your name was not Ogden it would be Duke."

"Did you want to see me?" asked the painter.

"Nominally, yes. Did you ever devote any time to the study of philosophy?"

"Philosophy be hanged!" growled the painter. "If you didn't want me what did you call me down here for?"

"You illustrate another principle!" chuckled the old man. "Why do you betray vexation? Simply because you are vexed. If you were pleased you would smile. Let us go back 1800 years, to the first principles of mind formation."

"You'd better go back to the lunatic asylum!" muttered the painter.

"Why are lunatic asylums necessary?" asked the old man. "Because we have lunatics. Why do we have lunatics?"

"Don't talk to me," replied the painter, starting to enter the building.

"Why do I talk?" inquired the quaint old character, barring the doorway.—"I talk because I have a voice. Fish do not talk, and why not?"

"I don't want any more fooling around!" exclaimed the painter, trying to pull the old man out of his way.

"We will go back to what is known as the stone age," said the stranger, spitting on his hands, as if he meant to resist. "Did you ever reflect that you might have been a hill or a valley as well as a man? Suppose you had been a side-hill? What would have been your policy?"

"Just about this!" gasped the painter, as he got a collar-hold and jerked with all his might.

"I sometimes think," said the old man, as he kicked the painter in the stomach twice in succession, "that man may have descended from earth. I may have been a hill, you a knoll, that man over there a glade."

There was a pause for a minute, as the painter hit on the mouth. He retaliated by a left-hander on the nose, and securing a hold on the painter's hair he held him against the wall, and went on.

"Why do we fight? Because we are mad! Go back to the days of Adam and let us see how madness came to exist."

They were about half way back there when a policeman came along and collared the old philosopher and marched him off. He was recorded as John Horker, and as he was placed in the cell, he remarked:

"Why this prison jug? Because these are jaggers. Let us retrace our steps to the drift period and discover who was first incarcerated in a cooler."

The painter looked after the old man as he walked off, and giving his bleeding nose another wipe, he said:

"If that's what they call philosophy I'm going into training to-morrow!"

NEW JERSEY
Enamel Paint Company,
RARITAN, NEW JERSEY,
Manufacturers of
Bradley's Enamel Paint.
Mixed Ready for Use, in any shade, Tint or Color desired.

THESE Paints are composed of the purest and best materials known to painters, the principal ingredients being Pure White LEAD, ZINC, and LINSEED OIL, which are made to unite in a homogeneous mass by the addition of other materials which add greatly to the durability, elasticity, beauty and strength of the Paint. The whole are chemically combined so that the pigments are held in permanent suspension, thus forming a new compound which dries on the surface and adheres firmly to it, thus forming a Smooth, Glossy, Firm, Elastic, Beautiful and Durable Paint.

The Oil, which is the real life of the Paint, cannot leave it and be absorbed by the substance to which it is applied, as it does in paints mixed in the ordinary way, & thus leave the pigment dry and chalky, to wash & rub off in few months. This paint is unaffected by changes of temperature, is perfectly impervious to the action of water, is well adapted to all classes of work, & is in every way a better paint for either in side or outside work or boat painting than any other Paint known to the trade, and will last at least three times as long as the best Lead and Oil mixed in the ordinary way.

These Paints are Ready for use.

Are easily applied by any one, require no mixing, stirring or addition of dryers.

Liberal Inducements to Dealers.

And full satisfaction guaranteed to their Customers.

Sold by the Gallon, Keg or Barrel. Orders attended to promptly. For Price List and Sample Color Card, Address,

CAUTION!

The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Theo A. Carman some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filled over one thousand pages and counsel were over two weeks in summing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an air-tight iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing stratum. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is of steel, made sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Carman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defence contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement had been clearly proved.

POETRY.

A PATRIOTIC APPEAL.

With hopeful hearts we hail once more
The voice that rings from shore to shore,
A voice which freemen loud proclaim,
To gain once more our nation's fame.

Voters, this voice loud calls on you;
Will you mad folly still pursue,
And strong persist in party pride,
The great your folly will deride?

Shall we in silence fold our arms,
While freedom has so many charms,
And not regard our country's call,
Or try to save her name from fall?

Shall this once proud republic die—
This home of freemen prostrate lie
Deep buried in a shameful grave,
While her we yet have power to save?

Shall we in passive silence view
Another tyrant placed anew
Into the lofty seat of power,
To pluck our nation's fairest flower?

To vote for fickle-minded Hayes
Will shorten fast our nation's days;
And send to sink in dismal woe
Our rights which Grant had laid so low.

'Twill place in office men who prize
Their pockets at a nation's sighs;
Who will in highest circles move,
To money make—themselves behoove.

Men who will quite indifferent feel,
Who'll care not for their country's weal;
Whose only aim is wealth and power,
Whose only care is pleasure's hour.

Then may each patriot this Fall
Respond to his dear country's call,
And join in tearing down the throne
Which tyrants love to call their own.

And vote for Tilden and reform,
To guide our old ship through the storm,
O'er tempestuous seas and rugged waves,
Where victory waits on virtuous braves.

THE LOST BRIDAL GIFT.

"It is very nice to be married and settled in a house of one's own."

So spoke young Mrs. Clinton, the first week she was settled in here. Her husband, a struggling lawyer, whose office was in the heart of the quiet country village that had been the home always of both of them, was away at the said office, and the young wife was alone.

Neither of them was overburthened with this world's goods. But they had resolved to marry and struggle along together, rather than wait apart until they were old and rich.

He would strive to steadily make money; she to be economical and saving at home, and so make both ends meet. It might not be amiss if some other young ladies and gentlemen of the present day tried the same.

Tom Clinton took his wife home; and here she was, setting about her duties with a good heart, and intending to become the most active little housewife in the world. Of course she began by superintending the cookery; the young maid seemed good for little but to make beds and stare at her pretty new mistress.

Such meals! Such dainty little dishes put upon the table, made up after the best receipts in the new cookery book. They ran after this fashion:

"To cook salmon: Boil it till it's done. Serve with lobster sauce and sliced cucumbers."

"Good gracious!" cried poor Mrs. Clinton. "I wonder how long it must be boiled; and whether it should be put into hot or cold water!"

Neither maid or mistress knew. But difficulties are soon surmounted when hearts and hands are willing. Sometimes, though, the young wife caught herself wishing that she and Tom had rather more ready money.

One piece of their rather small stock of furniture was an old bureau, or rather bureau and desk combined, which was filled with small drawers, pigeon holes, &c. This had belonged to Tom's grandfather, and was handed down to Tom as an heirloom. Eunice Clinton had looked through it every day since she came home, and yet found something to admire and to wonder over. Tom had shown her two secret receptacles for papers, placed beneath the small drawers; and one day Eunice found a prize.

She had taken out a remote drawer yet behind it. Of course, she opened this at once, and there found wrapped in a piece of yellow paper, a silver watch. It was very old and battered, the hands were broken off, and it had no glass.

She took it up and shook it, but it did not tick in answer to the shake, as, no doubt, a well regulated watch ought to do; it only rattled, as though the inside works were loose and broken. She tried to open it, and got the outer case off without trouble; but the watch itself resisted all her efforts. It seemed never to have had an opening yet.

How it was Tom had never found this, she wondered. But Tom had no genius for exploring old places as she had. The probability was Tom had never looked thoroughly into it since the piece of furniture came to him; and besides, Tom could never see a thing though it stared him in the face. How she wished Tom had been at home when she found the watch; it would be so long to wait until dinner time.

Eunice quitted the watch and the bureau, and went singing about the house for an hour or so trying so hard not to feel dull; but the day appeared unusually long. Looking from the window she espied a peddler with a monstrous pack on his back coming up the village street.

Now, did you ever know a woman who did not like to deal with a peddler if she had a sly chance? At any rate, Mrs. Clinton, so much at a loss what to do with her time that day, did not send him away. He was allowed to enter the small, neat dining room, and soon every chair and table it contained was covered with articles from the pack.

Our young housekeeper was sorely tried. She had very little money in the house, and well she knew Tom's purse was low just now. She took two aprons for Sarah, and a neat handkerchief that was cheap; and no more. The polite peddler talked and flattered all in vain; Eunice was firm, she must not think of those pink ribbons, that fine neat chintz. Oh, how she did wish for plenty of money! She could not bear to see him folding all of those pretty things, "and so cheap, too." As the peddler, with remonstrance, finally put up the last of his goods, he took out a small tin case, and opened it, showed a set of very handsome silver teaspoons.

The very things she had secretly mourned for! The truth was, all their little store of plates was but Birmingham plate, and she had so wished for just a few teaspoons in silver.

The peddler saw at once that the spoons had caught her eye, and he handed them to her, saying:

"Now, madam, there is the last set of spoons I have, and you shall have them at a bargain. Feel their weight—the best pure silver; and there's a place for the engraving of your name. Do you fear they are not real? Look at the mark."

Mrs. Clinton did not fear that; she knew silver when she saw it.

"Yes, they are very tempting; but I have not the money," said poor Eunice, looking at the much coveted spoons.

"What of that?" cried the peddler; "you can borrow of some one surely. Or I will take any old silver or gold, or clothing you may have to spare."

Eunice caught at the words old silver, and thought of the watch she had discovered only an hour before. She went to the drawer, and holding it out to him, said:

"What will you allow me for this?"

The peddler took the watch in his hand, and went to the door as if to examine it better by the light, while Eunice, trembling, she knew not why, gazed at the coveted spoons.

"I cannot give you more than twenty shillings for this," he said, "and it is not worth that."

Eunice felt her heart sink; she had but twelve shillings in the house, and she must have the spoons. Tom knew nothing of the watch; and of course he could not care what was done with that old battered thing. But the watch and the twelve shillings would not buy the spoons.

"Have you no old clothes?" asked the man.

No, she had no old clothes, she was about to say; when all at once she remembered a pair of heavy winter pantaloons of Tom's she had seen hanging up. It would be a long time before winter; she would get them; if the peddler would only take them the spoons were hers!

While she went up stairs, the peddler took another look at the watch, opened the inner case and started to his feet; but instantly sat down again when he heard Mrs. Clinton coming. He seemed in such haste to close the bargain that he scarcely looked at the pantaloons. Flinging them over his arm, he placed the case of spoons within the eager hands of his young customer, took up his pack and departed.

Mrs. Clinton fairly kissed the spoons. Now she could invite friends to tea, and not be ashamed when they glanced at the mark on her silver.

Dinner time came; the table was laid, and she stood at the window looking for Tom. For the first time the thought came to her mind "Had she done right?" Could she tell Tom? He might not like it about the watch. And would he make a fuss at her dealing with a peddler? Perhaps she had better not show the spoons to Tom just yet. How strange it would be to keep any thing back from him! Why, what should she talk about? She could not plague him about her being the first to find any treasure in her old bureau. But there he was coming!

They met with the usual embrace; and Mr. Clinton did not observe any change in his wife until dinner was over, and she came in to sit by him; he fancied then that she was very silent.

Eunice was thinking of the spoons. Somehow she did not take so much pleasure in them as at first. She had laid the little case on the shelf in the cupboard. What if Tom should go there for a glass? He had often done so. She left her seat, and put water and glasses on the table, and sat down again.

"What is that water for?" asked Mr. Clinton.

"I thought, perhaps, you might want some."

"And what has my little wife been doing all the morning?"

"Oh, nothing much; just stirring about, and——"

"And what?" said Tom, drawing her nearer to him. "Have you been overhauling the old desk again, finding old deeds and all sorts of treasures?"

"I fear there will never come any treasures to us," said Eunice, almost sobbing.

"Why, what's the matter?" cried Tom.—"Are you tired, darling?"

Eunice muttered something about "loneliness." Any excuse to save telling of the peddler and the watch.

"You are tired and nervous, Eunice.—Shall we send for one of your sisters to stay here a week or two?"

Eunice fairly burst into tears. She was finding the secret a heavy one, and yet she dared not confess; and then, to account for her low spirits, she said she had a headache.

They fell into easy conversation. Something led the topic to Tom's family; he told her for the first time, a long story of his grandfather, his mother's father, who had once been considered very rich indeed. He was a great traveler, and was seldom at home after the death of his wife, who had left him two children, a son and a daughter.

"The children were left alone with an old housekeeper, in a beautiful cottage, surrounded by an extensive garden," said Tom. "The garden was the care of the housekeeper's husband, an old Scotchman, who took much delight in it, and was so fond of symmetry that it was of him the story is told which has since become almost a proverb—"

"What story?" interrupted Eunice.

"I'll tell you," said Tom. "This Scotchman had a son about the age of the master's son. One day, when the master was home, the young Scot was impudent, or committed some misdemeanor, when his master seized him by the collar, and locked him in the lodge at the gate. Coming out some hours after, my grandfather was surprised to hear his own son crying out from the lodge on the other side of the gate. He was also locked in.

"'What does this mean?' he exclaimed, releasing his son and heir and turning to the gardener for an explanation.

"'Symmetry,' said the stolid Scotchman; 'there is nothing like symmetry!' And the answer was so unexpected that the offence was forgiven."

Eunice laughed.

"But the gardener's boy was a wild youth, and soon led his master's son into all sorts of scrapes," resumed Tom. "The master was absent so much of the time, he forgot that his own son was growing up and needed a guardian's care. At the age of fifteen, both boys left suddenly in the night, after committing some folly in a neighboring town, and although search was made, they could not be traced. The honest gardener did not admire the 'symmetry' of the thing so much this time. He grieved over the loss of his boy, gave up work, and died just before the return of his master. My grandfather never got over this blow to his pride; he sent his daughter, my dear mother, off to boarding school, and shutting himself up in the once happy home, allowing no one to speak to him but his faithful old friend the housekeeper. His son and the other boy were never heard from."

"What a sad history!" cried Mrs. Clinton.

"The old man, after secluding himself for some years, again started on his travels. He did not return until my mother was in her twenty-second year. He was looking old and careworn, apparently poor. He never made much of his daughter, but settled his affairs, giving the house, furniture and grounds to his only child, telling her that he had a small bridal gift ready for her, provided she should marry to please him. What the gift was she could not learn. He had often spent hours at the old desk—that bureau, my dear, that you are so fond of exploring—and he often gave orders that it should be the first care of any of the household in case of fire, or other accident. Poor old man, he was found one morning sitting by his favorite desk stiff and stark; he had evidently died in the night, alone and unheard. Of course, my mother was stunned, but she could not be expected to mourn for such a parent. He—"

"And what of the small bridal gift, Tom?"

"Nothing. There was not one. The old desk was searched, but nothing of value found. Some old letters, papers and such like, were there in plenty: but the promised bridal gift was nowhere to be seen."

"My mother married soon afterwards," continued Mr. Clinton after a pause, "And I was born in the old house. But alas! that dear place is mine no longer. After my father's death it became necessary to sell it for our support, and when my poor mother died, leaving me nothing but her love and kind precepts, and the little that remained of her household furniture, the old bureau-desk among it."

"It is handsome still, Tom, though it is old."

"Very handsome. And now, my dear, I must leave you," he added, "for I have some work to do at the office yet. As to the old bureau, we will treasure it; for, do you know, I used to fancy there must be some treasure in it, though whence I derived the notion I can't tell. Of course you'll laugh at that, Eunice!"

He went off laughing, himself. Mrs. Clinton gave a sigh of relief, took out the new spoons, and tried hard to take as much delight in them as she had done in the morning. What good could they ever do her if Tom was not to see them? Even if she should invite company to tea, she would not dare to use the spoons! That old watch was surely no treasure, but she heartily wished it back again. If she could only take it to Tom, and tell him she had found it in the old desk! He certainly had never discovered the watch, or he would have mentioned it to her. But a strange repentance clung to her for what she had done, and for so trifling a matter she really could not tell why it should.

Mrs. Clinton sat back in her chair and cried harder than she had ever cried before. To think of keeping a secret from Tom; that was what she could not bear; and yet to tell him of the bargain—that she had dealt with a peddler—had even chaffered off his winter pantaloons! how Tom would laugh at her, tell her father and sisters, and —and—she would never hear the last of it.

Tom came in to tea, full of news, and quite excited about a man who had been taken suddenly ill at the village inn.

"I cannot walk out with you as I promised, Eunice," said the young lawyer, "for I have to be at the inn by nine o'clock, to make the old fellow's will. Fancy a peddler making a will."

"A peddler making a will," repeated Eunice, her thoughts running upon the peddler.

"It's what the landlord said when he came to me at the office. And now I must go. Good-bye, dear."

Mrs. Clinton sat on, in the dusk of the evening. By and by a gentleman, whom she slightly knew, came to the house, asked to see her, and addressed her without ceremony."

"Mrs. Clinton, your husband has requested me to call here and ask you to accompany me to the inn. He is engaged there, and could not come for you himself."

Eunice was surprised, but did not hesitate. In another minute they walked down the street together. The swinging sign of the Brown Bear was in sight, when it suddenly occurred to the young wife that all this was curious.

Why had Tom sent for her? It was one of Tom's tricks! Some of their friends had come, and were stopping at the Brown Bear. Yes, that must be it.

But she found no friends. She was shown into a parlor and waited there alone.

Presently Tom came in, looking flurried.

"Eunice," said he, sternly, "was there a peddler at our house to-day?"

"Ye-es," answered the trembling wife.

"And did you deal with him? What did you give him?"

"Oh, oh—please Tom, don't look at me! I only feared you would laugh at me and tease me—and—perhaps not like it. I—I will never do so again."

"Just tell me what you did do," commanded Mr. Clinton.

Eunice, wishing she could sink through the floor, but trying to be brave, now it had come to this, made a clean breast of it—the watch, pantaloons and all.

Tom stood aghast. Then taking Eunice by the hand, he led her up stairs, to the bedside of the sick man. It was the peddler of the morning, but alas, how changed! A few cases of sad epidemic, had occurred in the village during the past week, and the peddler was stricken with it, after eating a very hearty dinner.

The physician who was called in told him he had no chance for life, and the poor man sent at once for Mr. Clinton, asking for him as "the husband of the lady who lived in the white house at the corner." For after the bargain, he had informed himself who the Clintons were.

Tom received the message, and responded to it immediately. What was his surprise to hear between groans and paroxysms of pain, an unintelligible tale of spoons, watch, pantaloons, and his wife.

For a time he could not understand, and when he did understand, could not believe. But the peddler kept asking to have the lady sent for, and Tom sent. Now he had heard her story, he waited the denouement.

Eunice approached the sick man trembling. He took something from between the bed and mattress, and held it in the lady's hand.

"I am dying," he said; "they tell me I am dying; and I want you to forgive me, for I cheated you this morning and the Lord has laid his hand upon me—my sins have found me out. Here is the watch; take it, and all that is in it! I do not know what it is worth, but the spoons would never pay for it. Keep them and pray for me. Oh, pray for me!" And the poor man rolled in agony.

Mr. Clinton took his wife down stairs and out into the street, hurrying her along without speaking, until they reached their own gate.

"Go in, now, darling," he said, "and I will go for old Dr. Ray; he may be able to help the man yet."

She went slowly into the house, lighted the lamp, and once more tried to examine the watch.

"What can there be about this old thing to cause so much grief and remorse to that poor man, I wonder?" she cried.

But the watch would not open. It could not be that. Then the thought struck her that there might have been something valuable in the pockets of those pantaloons. She had not looked before she gave them, and they were still at the Brown Bear. Getting out the case of spoons, she placed them, with the watch on the table, and waited for Tom.

She had not long to wait; he had left the old doctor with the sick man, and hurried back to his wife, for he longed to have the events of the day explained. After kissing Eunice, he took up the watch and said, "Now, show me where in the desk you found this."

Eunice went to the desk, took out the drawer, then the one back of it, in which remained the old paper wrapper. Mr. Clinton seized upon this at once, examined it carefully, and then looked up with a suppressed, eager smile.

"Eunice, the long-lost bridal gift is found at last."

And sure enough, the little yellow paper told it all. A very valuable diamond was concealed in the interior of the battered watch; a diamond that was almost priceless. The son's young wife had found what the poor mother had so long searched for—the splendid bridal gift that the old man had died without bestowing.

"No more struggles, Eunice," said Mr. Clinton, with heartfelt satisfaction; "no more need for my little wife to roast her face over the kitchen fire, or to debar herself of innocent pleasures, because they would cost shillings and sixpences."

And Eunice burst into a storm of happy tears, and cried on his arm.

And in time, while Tom went plodding on, making himself into a renowned lawyer, little children played in the pretty garden, and climbed on papa's knee, and begged to hear again and again the pretty story of the lost diamond.

Nor must I fail to tell of the recovery of the poor, frightened peddler. Dr. Ray had him up and about in no time, and his first walk was to the "white house" on the corner, again begging Mrs. Clinton to accept the spoons as a small gift, and as having been the means of making an honest man of him.

They were real silver, and they are still in the family, with the name "Eunice" engraved on each, and they are called the "diamond spoons."

"You see, Eunice, how you were robbing me," her husband would say, with grave lips and laughing eyes. "What would your poor husband have done when Winter came, and the chilly winds did blow, without any thick trousers to put on?"

WANTED WORK.

A robust tramp called at a house out on Ninth street, yesterday, for something to eat, averring that he had not tasted food this week.

"Why don't you go to work?" asked the lady to whom he preferred his petition.

"Work!" he ejaculated. "Work! And what have I been doing ever since the middle of May but hunting work? Who will give me work? When did I ever refuse work?"

"Well," said the woman, "I guess I can give you some employment. What can you do?"

"Anything!" he shouted in a kind of delirious joy. "Anything that any man can do. I'm sick for something to fly at. Why, only yesterday I worked all day, carrying water in an old sieve from Flint river and emptying it into the Mississippi, just because I was so tired of having nothing to do, that I had to work at something or I would have gone ravin' crazy. I'll do anything, from cleaning house to building a steamboat. Just give me work, ma'am, an' you'll never hear me ask for bread agin."

The lady was pleased at the willingness and anxiety of this industrious man to do something, and so she led him to the woodpile.

"Here," she said, "you can saw and split this wood, and if you are a good, industrious worker, I will find work for you to do nearly all Winter."

"Well, now," said the tramp, while a look of disappointment stole over his face, "that's just my luck. Only three days ago I was pullin' a blind old cow to a well for a poor widow who had nothin' in the world but a cow to support her, an' I spraint my right wris till I hain't been able to lift a pound with it since. You can jest put your hand on it now and feel it throb, it's so painful and inflamed. I could jest cry of disappointment, but it's a bible fact, ma'am, that I couldn't lift that axe above my head if I died for it, and I'd just as lief let you pull my arm out by the roots as to attempt to pull that saw through a lath. Jest set me at something I kin do, though, if you want to see the dust fly."

"Very well," said the lady, "then you can take these flower beds, which have been very much neglected, and weed them very carefully for me. You can do that with your left hand, but I want you to be very particular with them, and get them very clean, and not injure any of the plants, for they are all very choice and I am very proud of them."

The look of disappointment that had been chased away from the industrious man's face when he saw something else to do, came back deeper than ever as the lady described the new job, and when she concluded, he had to remain quiet for a moment before he could content his emotion sufficiently to speak.

"If I ain't the most onfortinit man in Ameriky," he sighed. "I'm just dyin' for work, crazy to get somethin' to do, and I'm blocked at every turn. I jest love to work among flowers and dig in the ground, but I never dassen't do it fur I'm jest blue ruin among the posies. Nobody ever cared to teach me anythin' about flowers, and it's a gospel truth, ma'am, I can't tell a violet from a sunflower, nor a red rose from a dog fennel. Last place I tried to git work at, the woman of the house set me to work weedin' the garden, and I worked about a couple of hours, monstrous glad to get work, now you bet, an' I pulled up every last livin' green thing in that yard. Hope I may die ef I didn't. Pulled up all the grass, every blade of it. Fact. Pulled up a vine worth seventy-five dollars, that had roots reachin' clear under the cellar and into the cistern, and I yanked 'em right up, every fibre of 'em. Woman was so heart broke when she come out and see the yard just as bare as the floor of a brick yard that they had to put her to bed. Bible's truth they did, ma'am; and I had to work for that house three months for nothin' and find my board to pay for the damage I had done. Just gimme suthin' I kin do, I'll show you what work is, but I wouldn't dare to go foolin' around no flowers. You've got a kind heart, ma'am, gimme some work; don't send a despairin man away hungry for work."

"Well," the lady said, "you can beat my carpets for me. They have just been taken up, and you can beat them thoroughly, and by the time they are done, I will have something else ready for you."

The man made a gesture of despair and sat down on the ground, the picture of abject helplessness and disappointed aspirations.

"Look at me, now," he exclaimed. "What is goin' to become o' me? Did you ever see a man so down on his luck like me? I tell you, ma'am, you must give me somethin' I can do. I wouldn't no more dare to tech them carpets than nothin' in the world. I'd tear 'em to pieces. I'm a awful hard hitter, an' the last time I beat any carpets was for a woman out at Creston, and I just welted them carpets into strings and carpet rags. I couldn't help it. I can't hold in my strength. I'm too glad to get to work, that's the trouble with me, ma'am, it's a bible fact. I'll beat them carpets if you say so, but I won't be responsible for 'em; no makin' me work for nothin' fur five or six weeks to pay fur tearin' 'em into slits, yer know. I'll go at 'em if you'll say the word and take the responsibility, but the fact is I'm too hard a worker to go foolin' around carpets, that's just what I am."

The lady excused the energetic worker from going at the carpets, but was puzzled what to set him at. Finally she asked him what there was he would like to do and could do, with safety to himself and the work.

"Well, now," he said, "that's considerit, and I'll take a hold and do something that'll give ye the worth of your money, and won't give me no chance to destroy nothin' by workin' too hard at it. If you'll just kindly fetch me out a rockin'-chair, I'll set down in the shade and keep the cows from liftin' the latch of the front gate and gettin' into the yard. And I'll do it well and only charge you reasonable fur it, for the fact is I'm so dead crazy fur work that it isn't big pay I want so much as a steady job."

And when he was rejected and sent forth, jobless and breakfastless, to wander up and down the cold, unfeeling world in search of work, he cast stones at the house and said in dejected tones—

"There, now, that's just the way. They call us a bad lot, and say we're lazy and thieves, and won't work, when a feller is just crazy to work and nobody won't give him nary job that he kin do. Won't work! Land alive, they won't give us work, an' when we want to an' try to, they won't let us work. There ain't a man in Amerky 'ud work as hard and as stiddy as I would if they'd gimme a chance."—Burlington Hawkeye.

THE FALL TERM.

The public schools opened for the Fall and Winter season, and every child in Detroit felt happy for an hour or two, if not longer. A boy going down Second street from the Cass school at noon met a boy going up from the Porter street school, and the Cass boy called out:

"Hain't school bully though?"

"You bet it! was the prompt reply. "How's your teacher?"

"Nicest person you ever saw. I snapped six paper wads this forenoon and never got licked once!"

"Just like mine," called the other.—"When she saw me sticking a pin into a boy she smiled and smiled, and I believe she's got a heart like an angel."

Those lads may meet a week later, and when they compare notes the first one will remark:

"I'm licked regularly three times a day, and for nothing at all."

"Soam I," will be the mournful echo of the other.

SOME THINGS WE NEVER SAW.

We never yet saw a man but what would pass off his ragged money first. They likewise give scraps to the poor and then give conscience credit for dispensing choice cuts.

We never saw a little girl just learning how to put on her stockings, but what she invaribly got the heel part of the stocking on the top of her foot, and then cried.

We never saw a stout, healthy man hanging around a grocery door waiting for somebody to treat, and cussing the niggers because they wouldn't work, but what we felt sorry for that man—sorry that lightning wouldn't strike him.

We never saw a boy with a stone bruise on his foot that kept him from school, but what could make things howl with an Alabama sling.

A witness for the prosecution in a murder case was thus questioned by his Honor:

"You say you saw the man shot at and killed?"

"Yes, sir."

"You said, I think, that the charge struck the deceased, in his body, between the diaphragm and the duodenum?"

Witness—"No, sir, I didn't say no such thing. I said he was shot between the hog-pen and the woodhouse."

A Paris scene: There's a crowd on the street around a man who has fallen into an apoplectic fit. The doctor arrives. All make way for him. He feel's the sufferer's pulse, places his ear to his heart, and says that the man is dead. "Oh!" exclaimed a bystander; "If the doctor had only arrived sooner."—The man of science smiles, and replies:—"He is dead! I, myself, could have done nothing more!"

A Northern Iowa farmer offered a tramp his daughter and half his farm for three days' work in the harvest field: The tramp wavered a little at first, but then the color of the girl's eyes didn't suit, and he thought the farm laid a little too low, so he declined the proposition, stole a hame strap and went on his workless way.

In Hartford an old man was converted to Christianity by this occurrence: As he was in church seeing his grandson baptized, and was wondering why if the rite was acceptable to God, no visible sign was given, a dove flew in at the window and alighted on one of the boy's shoulders.

A correspondent of the Philadelphia Day suggests that the old independence bell be repaired so that it may be rung again. He says it can be done by putting in a lighter tongue and sawing out the crack, and leaving an opening similar to that of a tuning fork.

"Doctor," said a lady to her physician, "don't you think the small bonnets that the ladies wear now-a-days have a tendency to produce congestion of the brain?" "No, madame; where you see one of those bonnets there is no brain to congest."

"On one occasion," says Dr. Chas. Hodge, "I went into the room of my old classmate, Bishop Johns, of Virginia, and, picking up one of his vestments, threw it over my shoulders, and asked, "John, is there any grace in these clothes?" "Not now, Charlie," retorted the bishop.

"It is strange," muttered a young man, as he staggered home from a supper party, "how evil communications corrupt good manners. I have been surrounded by tumblers all the evening, and now I am a tumbler myself."

POETRY.

A PATRIOTIC APPEAL.

With hopeful hearts we hail once more
The voice that rings from shore to shore,
A voice which freemen loud proclaim,
To gain once more our nation's fame.

Voters, this voice loud calls on you;
Will you! mad folly still pursue,
And strong persist in party pride,
Till good your folly will deride?

Shall we in silence fold our arms,
While freedom has so many charms,
And not regard our country's call,
Or try to save her name from fall?

Shall this once proud republic die—
This home of freedom prostrate lie
Deep buried in a shameful grave,
While her we yet have power to save?

Shall we in passive silence view
Another tyrant placed anew
Into the lofty seat of power,
To pluck our nation's fairest flower?

To vote for fickle-minded Hayes
Will shorten fast our nation's days;
And send to sink in dismal woe
Our rights which Grant has laid so low.

'Twill place in office men who prize
Their pockets at a nation's sighs;
Who will in highest circles move,
To money make—themselves behoove.

Men who will quite indifferent feel,
Who'll care not for their country's weal;
Whose only aim is wealth and power,
Whose only care is pleasure's hour.

Then may each patriot this Fall
Respond to his dear country's call,
And join in tearing down the throne
Which tyrants love to call their own.

And vote for Tilden and reform,
To guide our old ship through the storm,
O'er tempestuous seas and rugged waves,
Where victory waits on virtuous braves.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE LOST BRIDAL GIFT.

"It is very nice to be married and settled in a house of one's own."

So spoke young Mrs. Clinton, the first week she was settled in hers. Her husband, a struggling lawyer, whose office was in the heart of the quiet country village that had been the home always of both of them, was away at the said office, and the young wife was alone.

Neither of them was overburthened with this world's goods. But they had resolved to marry and struggle along together, rather than wait apart until they were old and rich.

He would strive to steadily make money; she to be economical and saving at home, and so make both ends meet. It might not be amiss if some other young ladies and gentlemen of the present day tried the same.

Tom Clinton took his wife home; and here she was, setting about her duties with a good heart, and intending to become the most active little housewife in the world. Of course she began by superintending the cookery; the young maid seemed good for little but to make beds and stare at her pretty new mistress.

Such meals! Such dainty little dishes put upon the table, made up after the best receipts in the new cookery book. They ran after this fashion:

"To cook salmon. Boil it till it's done. Serve with lobster sauce and sliced cucumbers."

"Good gracious!" cried poor Mrs. Clinton. "I wonder how long it must be boiled; and whether it should be put into hot or cold water!"

Neither maid or mistress knew. But difficulties are soon surmounted when hearts and hands are willing. Sometimes, though, the young wife caught herself wishing that she and Tom had rather more ready money.

One piece of their rather small stock of furniture was an old bureau, or rather bureau and desk combined, which was filled with small drawers, pigeon holes, &c. This had belonged to Tom's grandfather, and was handed down to Tom as an heirloom. Eunice Clinton had looked through it every day since she came home, and yet found something to admire and to wonder over. Tom had shown her two secret receptacles for papers, placed beneath the small drawers; and one day Eunice found a prize.

She had taken out a remote drawer yet behind it. Of course, she opened this at once, and there found wrapped in a piece of yellow paper, a silver watch. It was very old and battered, the hands were broken off, and it had no glass.

She took it up and shook it, but it did not tick in answer to the shake, as, no doubt, a well regulated watch ought to do; it only rattled, as though the inside works were loose and broken. She tried to open it, and got the outer case off without trouble; but the watch itself resisted all her efforts. It seemed never to have had an opening yet.

How it was Tom had never found this, she wondered. But Tom had no genius for exploring old places as she had. The probability was Tom had never looked thoroughly into it since the piece of furniture came to him; and besides, Tom could never see a thing though it stared him in the face. How she wished Tom had been at home when she found the watch; it would be so long to wait until dinner time.

Eunice quitted the watch and the bureau, and went singing about the house for an hour or so trying so hard not to feel dull; but the day appeared unusually long. Looking from the window she espied a peddler with a monstrous pack on his back coming up the village street.

Now, did you ever know a woman who did not like to deal with a peddler if she had a sly chance? At any rate, Mrs. Clinton, so much at a loss what to do with her time that day, did not send him away. He was allowed to enter the small, neat dining room, and soon every chair and table it contained was covered with articles from the pack.

Our young housekeeper was sorely tried. She had very little money in the house, and well she knew Tom's purse was low just now. She took two aprons for Sarah, and a neat handkerchief that was cheap; and no more. The polite peddler talked and flattered all in vain; Eunice was firm, she must not think of those pink ribbons, that fine neat chintz. Oh, how she did wish for plenty of money! She could not bear to see him folding all of those pretty things, "and so cheap, too." As the peddler, with remonstrance, finally put up the last of his goods, he took out a small tin case, and opened it, showed a set of very handsome silver teaspoons.

The very things she had secretly mourned for! The truth was, all their little store of plate was but Birmingham plate, and she had so wished for just a few teaspoons in silver.

The peddler saw at once that the spoons had caught her eye, and he handed them to her, saying:

"Now, madam, there is the last set of spoons I have, and you shall have them at a bargain. Feel their weight—the best pure silver; and there's a place for the engraving of your name. Do you fear they are not real? Look at the mark."

Mrs. Clinton did not fear that; she knew silver when she saw it.

"Yes, they are very tempting; and I have not the money," said poor Eunice, looking at the much coveted spoons.

"What of that?" cried the peddler; "you can borrow of some one surely. Or I will take any old silver or gold, or anything you may have to spare."

Eunice caught at the words old silver, and thought of the watch she had discovered only an hour before. She went to the drawer, and holding it out to him, said:

"What will you allow me for this?"

The peddler took the watch in his hand, and went to the door as if to examine it better by the light, while Eunice, trembling, she knew not why, gazed at the coveted spoons.

"I cannot give you more than twenty shillings for this," he said, "and it is not worth that."

Eunice felt her heart sink; she had but twelve shillings in the house, and she must have the spoons. Tom knew nothing of the watch; and of course he could not care what was done with that old battered thing. But the watch and the twelve shillings would not buy the spoons.

"Have you no old clothes?" asked the man.

No, she had no old clothes, she was about to say; when all at once she remembered a pair of heavy winter pantaloons of Tom's she had seen hanging up. It would be a long time before winter; she would get them; if the peddler would only take them the spoons were hers!

While she went up stairs, the peddler took another look at the watch, opened the inner case and started to his feet; but instantly sat down again when he heard Mrs. Clinton coming. He seemed in such haste to close the bargain that he scarcely looked at the pantaloons. Flinging them over his arm, he placed the case of spoons within the eager hands of his young customer, took up his pack and departed.

Mrs. Clinton fairly kissed the spoons. Now she could invite friends to tea, and not be ashamed when they glanced at the mark on her silver.

Dinner time came; the table was laid, and she stood at the window looking for Tom. For the first time the thought came to her mind "Had she done right?" Could she tell Tom? He might not like it about the watch. And would he make a fuss at her dealing with a peddler? Perhaps she had better not show the spoons to Tom just yet. How strange it would be to keep anything back from him! Why, what should she talk about? She could not plague him about her being the first to find any treasure in her old bureau. But there he was coming!

They met with the usual embrace; and Mr. Clinton did not observe any change in his wife until dinner was over, and she came in to sit by him; he fancied then that she was very silent.

Eunice was thinking of the spoons. Somehow she did not take so much pleasure in them as at first. She had laid the little case on the shelf in the cupboard. What if Tom should go there for a glass? He had often done so. She left her seat, and put water and glasses on the table, and sat down again.

"What is that water for?" asked Mr. Clinton.

"I thought, perhaps, you might want some."

"And what has my little wife been doing all the morning?"

"Oh, nothing much; just stirring about, and——"

"And what?" said Tom, drawing her nearer to him. "Have you been overhauling the old desk again, finding old deeds and all sorts of treasures?"

"I fear there will never come any treasures to us," said Eunice, almost sobbing.

"Why, what's the matter?" cried Tom.—"Are you tired, darling?"

Eunice muttered something about "loneliness." Any excuse to save telling of the peddler and the watch.

"You are tired and nervous, Eunice.—Shall we send for one of your sisters to stay here a week or two?"

Eunice fairly burst into tears. She was finding the secret a heavy one, and yet she dared not confess; and then, to account for her low spirits, she said she had a headache.

They fell into easy conversation. Something led the topic to Tom's family; he told her for the first time, a long story of his grandfather, his mother's father, who had once been considered very rich indeed. He was a great traveler, and was seldom at home after the death of his wife, who had left him two children, a son and a daughter.

"The children were left alone with an old housekeeper, in a beautiful cottage, surrounded by an extensive garden," said Tom. "The garden was the care of the housekeeper's husband, an old Scotchman, who took much delight in it, and was so fond of symmetry that it was of him the story is told which has since become almost a proverb—"

"What story?" interrupted Eunice.

"I'll tell you," said Tom. "This Scotchman had a son about the age of the master's son. One day, when the master was home, the young Scot was impudent, or committed some misdemeanor, when his master seized him by the collar, and locked him in the lodge at the gate. Coming out some hours after, my grandfather was surprised to hear his own son crying out from the lodge on the other side of the gate. He was also locked in.

"'What does this mean?' he exclaimed, releasing his son and heir and turning to the gardener for an explanation.

"'Symmetry,' said the stolid Scotchman; 'there is nothing like symmetry!' And the answer was so unexpected that the offence was forgiven."

Eunice laughed.

"But the gardener's boy was a wild youth, and soon led his master's son into all sorts of scrapes," resumed Tom. "The master was absent so much of the time, he forgot that his own son was growing up and needed a guardian's care. At the age of fifteen, both boys left suddenly in the night, after committing some folly in a neighboring town, and although search was made, they could not be traced. The honest gardener did not admire the 'symmetry' of the thing so much this time. He grieved over the loss of his boy, gave up work, and died just before the return of his master. My grandfather never got over this blow to his pride; he sent his daughter, my dear mother, off to boarding school, and shutting himself up in the once happy home, allowing no one to speak to him but his faithful old friend the housekeeper. His son and the other boy were never heard from."

"What a sad history!" cried Mrs. Clinton.

"The old man, after secluding himself for some years, again started on his travels. He did not return until my mother was in her twenty-second year. He was looking old and careworn, apparently poor. He never made much of his daughter, but settled his affairs, giving the house, furniture and grounds to his only child, telling her that he had a small bridal gift ready for her, provided she should marry to please him. What the gift was she could not learn. He had often spent hours at the old desk—that bureau, my dear, that you are so fond of exploring—and he often gave orders that it should be the first care of any of the household in case of fire, or other accident. Poor old man, he was found one morning sitting by his favorite desk stiff and stark; he had evidently died in the night, alone and unheard. Of course, my mother was stunned, but she could not be expected to mourn for such a parent. He—"

"And what of the small bridal gift, Tom?"

"Nothing. There was not one. The old desk was searched, but nothing of value found. Some old letters, papers and such like, were there in plenty; but the promised bridal gift was nowhere to be seen.

"My mother married soon afterwards," continued Mr. Clinton after a pause, "And I was born in the old house. But alas! that dear place is mine no longer. After my father's death it became necessary to sell it for our support, and when my poor mother died, leaving me nothing but her love and kind precepts, and the little that remained of her household furniture, the old bureau-desk among it."

"It is handsome still, Tom, though it is old."

"Very handsome. And now, my dear, I must leave you," he added, "for I have some work to do at the office yet. As to the old bureau, we will treasure it; for, do you know, I used to fancy there must be some treasure in it, though whence I derived the notion I can't tell. Of course you'll laugh at that, Eunice!"

He went off laughing, himself. Mrs. Clinton gave a sigh of relief, took out the new spoons, and tried hard to take as much delight in them as she had done in the morning. What good could they ever do her if Tom was not to see them? Even if she should invite company to tea, she would not dare to use the spoons! That old watch was surely no treasure, but she heartily wished it back again. If she could only take it to Tom, and tell him she had found it in the old desk! He certainly had never discovered the watch, or he would have mentioned it to her. But a strange repentance clung to her for what she had done, and for so trifling a matter she really could not tell why it should.

Mrs. Clinton sat back in her chair and cried harder than she had ever cried before. To think of keeping a secret from Tom; that was what she could not bear; and yet to tell him of the bargain—that she had dealt with a peddler—had even chaffered off his winter pantaloons! how Tom would laugh at her, tell her father and sisters, and—and—she would never hear the last of it.

Tom came in to tea, full of news, and quite excited about a man who had been taken suddenly ill at the village inn.

"I cannot walk out with you as I promised, Eunice," said the young lawyer, "for I have to be at the inn by nine o'clock, to make the old fellow's will. Fancy a peddler making a will."

"A peddler making a will," repeated Eunice, her thoughts running upon the peddler.

"It's what the landlord said when he came to me at the office. And now I must go. Good-bye, dear."

Mrs. Clinton sat on, in the dusk of the evening. By and by a gentleman, whom she slightly knew, came to the house, asked to see her, and addressed her without ceremony.

"Mrs. Clinton, your husband has requested me to call here and ask you to accompany me to the inn. He is engaged there, and could not come for you himself."

Eunice was surprised, but did not hesitate. In another minute they walked down the street together. The swinging sign of the Brown Bear was in sight, when it suddenly occurred to the young wife that all this was curious.

Why had Tom sent for her? It was one of Tom's tricks! Some of their friends had come, and were stopping at the Brown Bear. Yes, that must be it.

But she found no friends. She was shown into a parlor and waited there alone.

Presently Tom came in, looking flurried.

"Eunice," said he, sternly, "was there a peddler at our house to-day?"

"Ye-es," answered the trembling wife.

"And did you deal with him? What did you give him?"

"Oh, oh—please Tom, don't look at me! I only feared you would laugh at me and tease me—and—perhaps not like it. I—I will never do so again."

"Just tell me what you did do," commanded Mr. Clinton.

Eunice, wishing she could sink through the floor, but trying to be brave, now it had come to this, made a clean breast of it—the watch, pantaloons and all.

Tom stood aghast. Then taking Eunice by the hand, he led her up stairs, to the bedside of the sick man. It was the peddler of the morning, but alas, how changed! A few cases of sad epidemic, had occurred in the village during the past week, and the peddler was stricken with it, after eating a very hearty dinner.

The physician who was called in told him he had no chance for life, and the poor man sent at once for Mr. Clinton, asking for him as "the husband of the lady who lived in the white house at the corner." For after the bargain, he had informed himself who the Clintons were.

Tom received the message, and responded to it immediately. What was his surprise to hear between groans and paroxysms of pain, an unintelligible tale of spoons, watch, pantaloons, and his wife.

For a time he could not understand, and when he did understand, could not believe. But the peddler kept asking to have the lady sent for, and Tom sent. Now he had heard her story, he waited the denouement.

Eunice approached the sick man trembling. He took something from between the bed and mattrass, and held it in the lady's hand.

"I am dying," he said; "they tell me I am dying; and I want you to forgive me, for I cheated you this morning and the Lord has laid his hand upon me—my sins have found me out. Here is the watch; take it, and all that is in it! I do not know what it is worth, but the spoons would never pay for it. Keep them and pray for me. Oh, pray for me!" And the poor man rolled in agony.

Mr. Clinton took his wife down stairs and out into the street, hurrying her along without speaking, until they reached their own gate.

"Go in, now, darling," he said, "and I will go for old Dr. Ray; he may be able to help the man yet."

She went slowly into the house, lighted the lamp, and once more tried to examine the watch.

"What can there be about this old thing to cause so much grief and remorse to that poor man, I wonder?" she cried.

But the watch would not open. It could not be that. Then the thought struck her that there might have been something valuable in the pockets of those pantaloons. She had not looked before she gave them, and they were still at the Brown Bear. Getting out the case of spoons, she placed them, with the watch on the table, and waited for Tom.

She had not long to wait; he had left the old doctor with the sick man, and hurried back to his wife, for he longed to have the events of the day explained. After kissing Eunice, he took up the watch and said, "Now, show me where in the desk you found this."

Eunice went to the desk, took out the drawer, then the one back of it, in which remained the old paper wrapper. Mr. Clinton seized upon this at once, examined it carefully, and then looked up with a suppressed, eager smile.

"Eunice, the long-lost bridal gift is found at last."

And sure enough, the little yellow paper told it all. A very valuable diamond was imbedded in the interior of the battered watch; a diamond that was almost priceless. The son's young wife had found what the poor mother had so long searched for—the splendid bridal gift that the old man had died without bestowing.

"No more struggles, Eunice," said Mr. Clinton, with heartfelt satisfaction; "no more need for my little wife to roast her face over the kitchen fire, or to debar herself of innocent pleasures, because they would cost shillings and sixpences."

And Eunice burst into a storm of happy tears, and cried on his arm.

And in time, while Tom went plodding on, making himself into a renowned lawyer, little children played in the pretty garden, and climbed on papa's knee, and begged to hear again and again the pretty story of the lost diamond.

Nor must I fail to tell of the recovery of the poor, frightened peddler. Dr. Ray had him up and about in no time, and his first walk was to the "white house" on the corner, again begging Mrs. Clinton to accept the spoons as a small gift, and as having been the means of making an honest man of him.

They were real silver, and they are still in the family, with the name "Eunice" engraved on each, and they are called the "diamond spoons."

"You see, Eunice, how you were robbing me," her husband would say, with grave lips and laughing eyes. "What would your poor husband have done when Winter came, and the chilly winds did blow, without any thick trousers to put on?"

WANTED WORK.

A robust tramp called at a house out on Ninth street, yesterday, for something to eat, averring that he had not tasted food this week.

"Why don't you go to work?" asked the lady to whom he preferred his petition.

"Work!" he ejaculated. "Work! And what have I been doing ever since the middle of May but hunting work? Who will give me work? When did I ever refuse work?"

"Well," said the woman, "I guess I can give you some employment. What can you do?"

"Anything!" he shouted in a kind of delirious joy. "Anything that any man can do. I'm sick for something to fly at. Why, only yesterday I worked all day, carrying water in an old sieve from Flint river and emptying it into the Mississippi, just because I was so tired of having nothing to do, that I had to work at something or I would have gone ravin' crazy. I'll do anything, from cleaning house to building a steamboat. Just give me work, ma'am, an' you'll never hear me ask for bread agin."

The lady was pleased at the willingness and anxiety of this industrious man to do something, and so she led him to the woodpile.

"Here," she said, "you can saw and split this wood, and if you are a good, industrious worker, I will find work for you to do nearly all Winter."

"Well, now," said the tramp, while a look of disappointment stole over his face, "that's just my luck. Only three days ago I was pullin' a blind old cow to a well for a poor widow who had nothin' in the world but a cow to support her, an' I spraint my right wris till I hain't been able to lift a pound with it sinst. You can jest put your hand on it now and feel it throb, it's so painful and inflamed. I could jest cry of disappointment, but it's a bible fact, ma'am, that I couldn't lift that axe above my head ef I died for it, and I'd just as lief let you pull my arm out by the roots as to attempt to pull that saw through a lath. Jest set me at something I kin do, though, if you want to see the dust fly."

"Very well," said the lady. "then you can take these flower beds, which have been very much neglected, and weed them very carefully for me. You can do that with your left hand, but I want you to be very particular with them, and get them very clean, and not injure any of the plants, for they are all very choice and I am very proud of them."

The look of disappointment that had been chased away from the industrious man's face when he saw something else to do, came back deeper than ever as the lady described the new job, and when she concluded, he had to remain quiet for a moment before he could content his emotion sufficiently to speak.

"If I ain't the most onfortinit man in Ameriky," he sighed. "I'm just dyin' for work, crazy to get somethin' to do, and I'm blocked at every turn. I jest love to work among flowers and dig in the ground, but I never dasen't do it fur I'm jest blue ruin among the posies. Nobody ever cared to teach me anythin' about flowers, and it's a gospel truth, ma'am, I can't tell a violet from a sunflower, nor a red rose from a dog fennel. Last place I tried to git work at, the woman of the house set me to work weedin' the garden, and I worked about a couple of hours, monstrous glad to get work, now you bet, an' I pulled up every last livin' green thing in that yard. Hope I may die ef I didn't. Pulled up all the grass, every blade of it. Fact. Pulled up a vine worth seventy-five dollars, that had roots reachin' clear under the cellar and into the sisters, and I yanked 'em right up, every fibre of 'em. Woman was so heart broke when she come out and see the yard just as bare as the floor of a brick yard that they had to put her to bed. Bible's truth they did, ma'am; and I had to work for that house three months for nothin' and find my board to pay for the damage I had done. Jest gimme suthin' I kin do, I'll show you what work is, but I wouldn't dare to go foolin' around no flowers. You've got a kind heart, ma'am, gimme some work; don't send a despairin man away hungry for work."

"Well," the lady said, "you can beat my carpets for me. They have just been taken up, and you can beat them thoroughly, and by the time they are done, I will have something else ready for you."

The man made a gesture of despair and sat down on the ground, the picture of abject helplessness and disappointed aspirations.

"Look at me, now," he exclaimed. "What is goin' to become o' me? Did you ever see a man so down on his luck like me? I tell you, ma'am, you must give me somethin' I can do. I wouldn't no more dare to tech them carpets than nothin' in the world. I'd tear 'em to pieces. I'm a awful hard hitter, an' the last time I beat any carpets was for a woman out at Creston, and I just welted them carpets into strings and carpet rags. I couldn't help it. I can't hold in my strength. I'm too glad to get to work, that's the trouble with me, ma'am, it's a bible fact. I'll beat them carpets if you say so, but I won't be responsible for 'em; no makin' me work for nothin' fur five or six weeks to pay fur tearin' 'em into slits, yer know. I'll go at 'em if you'll say the word and take the responsibility, but the fact is I'm too hard a worker to go foolin' around carpets, that's just what I am."

The lady excused the energetic worker from going at the carpets, but was puzzled what to set him at. Finally she asked him what there was he would like to do and could do, with safety to himself and the work.

"Well, now," he said, "that's considerit, and I'll take a hold and do something that'll give ye the wuth of your money, and won't give me no chance to destroy nothin' by workin' too hard at it. If you'll just kindly fetch me out a rockin' chair, I'll set down in the shade and keep the cows from liftin' the latch of the front gate and gettin' into the yard. And I'll do it well and only charge you reasonable fur it, for the fact is I'm so dead crazy for work that it isn't big pay I want so much as a steady job."

And when he was rejected and sent forth, jobless and breakfastless, to wander up and down the cold, unfeeling world in search of work, he cast stones at the house and said in dejected tones—

"There, now, that's just the way. They call us a bad lot, and say we're lazy and thieves, and won't work, when a feller is just crazy to work and nobody won't give him nary job that he kin do. Won't work! Land alive, they won't give us work, an' when we want to an' try to, they won't let us work. There ain't a man in Ameriky 'ud work as hard and as stiddy as I would if they'd gimme a chance."—Burlington Hawkeye.

THE FALL TERM.

The public schools opened for the Fall and Winter season, and every child in Detroit felt happy for an hour or two, if not longer. A boy going down Second street from the Cass school at noon met a boy going up from the Porter street school, and the Cass boy called out:

"Hain't school bully though?"

"You bet!" was the prompt reply. "How's your teacher?"

"Nicest person you ever saw. I snapped six paper wads this forenoon and never got licked once!"

"Just like mine," called the other.—"When she saw me sticking a pin into a boy she smiled and smiled, and I believe she's got a heart like an angel."

Those lads may meet a week later, and when they compare notes the first one will remark:

"I'm licked regularly three times a day, and for nothing at all."

"Soam I" will be the mournful echo of the other.

SOME THINGS WE NEVER SAW.

We never yet saw a man but what would pass off his ragged money first. They like to give scraps to the poor and then give conscience credit for dispensing choice cuts.

We never saw a little girl just learning how to put on her stockings, but what she invariably got the heel part of the stocking on the top of her foot, and then cried.

We never saw a stout, healthy man hanging around a grocery door waiting for somebody to treat, and cussing the niggers because they wouldn't work, but what we felt sorry for that man—sorry that lightning wouldn't strike him.

We never saw a boy with a stone bruise on his foot that kept him from school, but what could make things howl with an Alabama sling.

A witness for the prosecution in a murder case was thus questioned by his Honor.

"You say you saw the man shot at and killed?"

"Yes, sir."

"You said, I think, that the charge struck the deceased, on his body, between the diaphragm and the duodenum?"

Witness—"No, sir, I didn't say no such thing. I said he was shot between the hog-pen and the woodhouse."

A Paris scene: There's a crowd on the street around a man who has fallen into an apoplectic fit. The doctor arrives. All make way for him. He feel's the sufferer's pulse, places his ear to his heart, and says that the man is dead. "Ah!" exclaimed a bystander; "If the doctor had only arrived sooner."—The man of science smiles, and replies:—"He is dead; I, myself, could have done nothing more."

A Northern Iowa farmer offered a tramp his daughter and half his farm for three days' work in the harvest field. The tramp wavered a little at first, but then the color of the girl's eyes didn't suit, and he thought the farm laid a little too low, so he declined the proposition, stole a hame strap and went on his workless way.

In Hartford an old man was converted to Christianity by this occurrence: As he was in church seeing his grandson baptized, and was wondering why if the rite was acceptable to God, no visible sign was given, a dove flew in at the window and alighted on one of the boy's shoulders.

A correspondent of the Philadelphia Day suggests that the old independence bell be repaired so that it may be rung again. He says it can be done by putting in a lighter tongue and sawing out the crack, and leaving an opening similar to that of a tuning fork.

"Doctor," said a lady to her physician, "don't you think the small bonnets that the ladies wear now-a-days have a tendency to produce congestion of the brain?" "No, madame; where you see one of those bonnets there is no brain to congest."

"On one occasion," says Dr. Chas. Hodge, "I went into the room of my old classmate, Bishop Johns, of Virginia, and, picking up one of his vestments, threw it over my shoulders, and asked, 'John, is there any grace in these clothes?' 'Not now, Charlie,' retorted the bishop."

"It is strange," muttered a young man, as he staggered home from a supper party, "how evil communications corrupt good manners. I have been surrounded by tumblers all the evening, and now I am a tumbler myself."

REFORM.

Sub hoc signo vinces.

The Democratic voters of the Township of Westfield, and their friends in the great Reform movement, are requested to meet at the Rooms of the Scotch Plains Tilden and Hendricks Association (Dean's Building) on TUESDAY evening OCTOBER 10th, at 7½ o'clock, sharp, for the purpose of electing delegates to the County Convention to be held at Wieschigg's Washington Hall in the city of Elizabeth, on Tuesday, Oct. 17th, at 2 p. m.; also to elect delegates to the 3d Assembly District Convention to be held at Summit on Thursday, Oct. 19th, at 2 p. m., and also to elect a member of the County Executive Committee.

By order,
L. H. K. SMALLEY,
Chairman last Meeting.

ANOTHER DEMOCRATIC MASS MEETING

Will be held at Laing's Hall, Thursday evening next, 12th inst. Some of the ablest speakers in the State will be present and address the meeting.

POLITICAL DEPRAVITY.

Mr. Vance was Governor of North Carolina during the war, and, of course, warmly espoused the Southern side of the controversy.

A book containing copies of all letters written by him as such Governor was captured and taken to Washington.

Mr. Vance applied for permission to get copies of those letters.

He was refused, being told that no copies could be made without permission of Congress.

Mark the ground for refusal—the assent of Congress must be obtained.

The House of Representatives by resolution gave that assent, which the Senate rejected.

Mr. Vance is now stumping North Carolina and finds that the Republicans opposing him has for campaign purposes about fifty copies of those letters, part of them in full and part with portions left out, the vacant spaces being filled with asterisks, but all certified to by Secretary Cameron as true copies and sealed with the seal of the United States.

How can fair-thinking men support a party whose Cabinet Officers will stoop so low in the work of trickery?

Look at it!

Was there ever a more contemptible thing on the face of earth?

The War Department refuses to give without authority of Congress, copies of public documents in its keeping, and then, with the hope of continuing in power the corruption of Grantism, turns round, and devoid of any Congressional permission, furnishes a political henchman with garbled statements, falsely attested as truthful copies by the War Secretary, and, according to his own ruling, unlawfully sealed.

There never was a time when the public good more urgently called for a thorough official clearing out at Washington than now.

Governor Tilden will scatter the scurvy, crowd, Governor Hayes will keep them in high favor.

That's the difference.

VOTE FOR TILDEN!

SAMUEL J. TILDEN.

Malignity has about spent its force. The many infamous falsehoods coined by unprincipled seekers after a new lease of corrupt political power, and circulated by a reckless partisan press against Samuel J. Tilden, the Democratic candidate for President, have fallen to the ground, injuring their authors and abettors, and raising the distinguished citizen whose personal reputation they cowardly sought to assassinate higher in the estimation of all just thinking men, Republican as well as Democratic.

There is not an American citizen better qualified, on the score of unsullied private character, practical business information, and thorough statesmanship, to discharge with fidelity and for the public good the varied and responsible duties of the Presidential office than Samuel J. Tilden.

He is eminently fitted for the position, and most especially so, in view of the disjointed times now afflicting our country and depressing its interests.

Thousands of political opponents admit that and will vote for Governor Tilden, not as a Democrat, but because they are fully convinced he is the right man to reform deplorable evils, and re-inaugurate national dignity and the peoples' prosperity.

That Governor Tilden possesses both the ability and courage to accomplish as President of the United States,

He is familiar with the details of industrial and commercial pursuits generally, and can of his own knowledge form an intelligent opinion of what is required to promote the public welfare.

He is a rigid economist, and the foe of wasteful extravagance of every name and nature. Under his supervision as President, the multitude of leaks in the National Treasury would be effectually closed and millions of money thereby saved to the taxpayers.

He is a resolute man, striking down wrong without fear or favor, and no official or other thieves would find a resting place within or around his administration of the Government.

The exigencies of the public service and the wants of a suffering people, national honor and individual happiness, alike demand the reforming Presidential hand of

SAMUEL J. TILDEN.

FRIGHTFUL CORRUPTION.

Investigation into the management of the Government Printing Office by a Committee of the National House of Representatives, proved that to be a sink of political corruption, and a prodigal squanderer of the peoples' money.

The disclosures were terrible, showing among other nefarious practices—

Charges for work done, in some instances, one hundred per cent. beyond the regular rates.

Articles purchased for the office at more than the ordinary retail price.

Books kept in such a loose and unreliable manner as would ruin any private business establishment.

Machinery and material loaned to private parties.

Men totally unfit to earn wages employed because of political influence.

Employees paid while absent electioneering.

Records and documents sold in violation of law.

Waste gold leaf (binding Department) pilfered to the extent of several thousand dollars.

Balances forced and accounts falsified.

In summing up, the Committee declared that the Government Printing, as managed, cost $500,000, half a million dollars a year more than to have the work done by responsible private parties under a proper contract system.

The foregoing is a mere sketch of investigated results, but it is enough to show the corrupt condition of Government affairs at Washington.

Every Department, from base to dome wants overhauling and purifying.

Reform is the only fraud exterminator.

HOW THE MONEY GOES.

We recently called attention to the scandalous outrage of a Government steamer being fitted up in costly style for the purpose of transporting the Prince Imperial, Fred Grant, and a lot of other dead heads, on a lengthened pleasure excursion along the coast, at the peoples' expense, and now extract from a Republican journal the following bit of information:

"General Sherman and Secretary Cameron visited the Bonanza mines of Virginia City, Nevada, on the 20th of this month. They are accompanied by Mrs. W. T. Sherman, Miss E. Sherman, Miss Cameron, Miss V. R. Cameron, Miss Burnside, T. E. Sherman, Master P. T. Sherman, H. A. Cameron, and J. W. Duffy.

There is more of the same kind of public waste, a further unjustifiable draft upon your pockets, Taxpayers!

The Secretary of War goes on a Western tour with the ostensible object of inspecting Government Fortifications.

Doing that may be all right.

But, he takes with him a retinue of ladies and gentlemen, to explore the Pacific slope and have a jolly fine time, at the nation's expense.

That we denounce as a fraud upon the Treasury.

Thousands of dollars will go out of the public purse to foot the bills.

It is nonsense, to suppose the Don pays any portion from his private funds. That would be antagonistic to the life-long custom of the House of Cameron, whose loyalty ever grabbed and never gave, except for a mercenary return.

Small leaks will empty the largest vessel, and continued waste makes ruin.

There are hundreds of wasteful leaks in the National Treasury to-day, yearly aggregating millions of dollars; to stop them is both sound policy and patriotic duty, and the only reliable application is REFORM! REFORM!!

E. C. Holske, of the Harlem Athletic Club, winner of the Ridgewood games, and Charles Connor, of the Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium, winner of the seven mile walk at the New York Athletic Club Championship games, are entered for the ten mile walk at the Athletic Club games.

The New York Times made thirteen distinct charges relative to Mr. Tilden's income tax. Twelve of those charges have been proven false, lies cut out of the whole cloth, and the thirteenth only to a trivial extent true. That is a specimen of the political stock in trade of Blaine, Boutwell and Butler. They cannot hide the festering mass of corruption in Mr. Hayes' party, and therefore madly strive to raise a cloud of fictitious issues. It won't do. The die is cast.—The Augean stable at Washington must and shall be cleaned by SAMUEL J. TILDEN, THE NEXT PRESIDENT.

Mr. Hewitt, on behalf of the Democratic National Committee, respectfully asked the proper Department at Washington for a certified copy of Mr. Tilden's income tax return, and never received the common courtesy of a reply to his letter, but, for the furtherance of partisan malignity, the document, or something doctored up and put forth as such, was eagerly furnished to a libel monger sheet in New York for garbled publication. Public records are the property of one party just as much as another, and the base prostitution of official rectitude for political ends, as above stated, will cost Mr. Chandler's candidate not a few independent votes.

Another sore-headed Democrat has been found in the State of New York who publicly opposes the Presidential nomination of Mr. Tilden. The real motive of the wounded patriot's defection is the very best reason in the world why Tilden should be elected President. It is because, as the Governor, he broke into fragments the rascally Canal Ring. That is what hurts many thieves, but benefits the honest masses. There are several of the same kind of Rings which need smashing at Washington, and President Tilden will be the man to do the good work. Vote for Tilden!

Ohio, Indiana and West Virginia hold their State Elections, next week, and if honestly conducted, will, no doubt show favorable Democratic results. The official corruptionists at Washington, fearing the bad effects a Republican loss in those States will have on the Presidential election in November, are doing their utmost to pollute the ballot boxes with bribed and fraudulently imported votes, but, we hope, the popular will cannot be defeated by such dastardly appliances.

There cannot be stronger evidence of Governor Tilden's superior personal worth and public ability than the fact of his being made the target for such wholesale and vulgar partisan defamation. No second rate man would be assaulted in that way. Calumny seeks a shining mark whereat to aim its poisoned darts.

Colorado, the youngest State in the Union, held an election on Tuesday last, and, as every one expected, went Republican, although by a much smaller majority than was expected by the Republican Managers. She elects the first electors in the coming Presidential contest.

If the money wantonly wasted by and fraudulently abstracted from the Government during Grant's Administration was now in the National Treasury, where it rightfully belongs, the country could witness the resumption of specie payments ere the close of the Centennial year.

Professor Sumner, of Yale College, the Republican who wrote the party platform as adopted by the Connecticut State Convention two years ago, now openly proclaims as his opinion that the national good calls for the election of Tilden and Hendricks.

George W. Julian, of Indiana, formerly a member of Congress, the Free Soil candidate for Vice President in 1852, and one of the original founders of the Republican party, now supports Tilden and Hendricks as the right men to steer the Ship of State.

For the coming fiscal year the Democratic House of Congress cut down extravagant asked for appropriations so as to save the people of the United States over thirty million dollars.—That is a fact worth remembering.

Official thieves tremble at the prospect of Governor Tilden becoming President. They have cause to fear, because every mother's son of them will be forced to flee the country for its lasting good, or meet a felon's doom.

Traffickers in Government frauds, large and small, are violently opposed to the election of Tilden. They think him a very unsuitable man for President, much inferior to Hayes. Honest citizens entertain views directly the opposite.

The Grant-Hayesites derived no fun from the monster Tilden and Hendricks meetings held in Plainfield last week.—Even the jolly Republican editor's visage looked like a hay fork handle—very long.

"Republicans always attend Democratic meetings in large numbers for the fun of the thing," says a Grant-Hayes editor. How loudly some boys whistle when trembling with fear.

The Grant-Hayes organs have become so accustomed to uttering falsehoods about Tilden and Democracy, that they scarcely know what truth means.

Colonel A. H. Fenn, last year the Republican candidate for Lieutenant Governor of Connecticut, this year votes for Tilden and Hendricks.

Judge Gooding, a Lincoln Elector in Indiana twelve years ago, is now for Tilden and Hendricks.

The man who predicted the final destruction of the Democratic party in November, is undetermined whether to commit suicide or join the Millerites.

Official returns in Maine cut down the claimed Republican majority very considerably. Truth is mighty and will prevail.

An expression now frequently heard in New York is this—"False as a Times Supplement."

GEORGIA.

All hail, Georgia, true to her old-time record rolled up a tremendous Democratic majority at the State election held there last Wednesday. The Republicans were sanguine of reducing the Democratic majority, and some enthusiastic journals even predicted a Republican majority at the election, but instead of a reduced majority Georgia gives a decided Democratic gain.

Seventy entries have been made for the Athletic Sports postponed till Saturday, October 7th.

NAILED AGAIN.

The New York Tribune, evidently jealous of the infamous Times, has been trying its hand at political lying.

It recently declared that the Democratic House of Congress allowed improper Southern war claims to a large amount.

What is the truth?

Official records prove that all such claims passed by the Democratic House were purely of loyal origin, moderate in amount, and reported by a Southern Claims' Commission, which a Republican Congress created for the express purpose.

Bring forward more of your absurd campaign lies, gentlemen of the Grant-Hayes circle!

They are piling up a mountain of votes for Tilden and Hendricks.

The people are intelligent, and not only see through your false statements, but readily perceive the base object of their invention—a desperate effort to retain corrupt power.

The October term of the Union County Courts convened at Elizabeth on Tuesday last, Judge Van Syckel presiding. The following named gentlemen compose the Grand and Petit Jurors from Plainfield.

GRAND JURORS—G. W. F. Randolph, Jeremiah Manning, Jacob G. Laing.

PETIT JURORS—Edward C. Morse, Elmore D. Moffett, France Hetfield.

Mr. W. B. Curtis, of the N. Y. A. C., and the Northwestern Rowing Crew, is entered for the Athletic Club Games. Mr. Curtis lifts 2,700 pounds without and 3,300 with harness, outdoing the celebrated Winship, and is a wonderful specimen of physical development.

The Republicans held a grand ratification meeting in the Old Presbyterian Church last Tuesday evening, at which the Hon. Elliott L. Shephard delivered a lengthy address full of venom and vituperation against the Democratic party. The Times re-produces the speech in its columns for the edification of its readers, which will be a good thing for the friends of Tilden, Hendricks and Reform. During the evening the Plainfield Hayes and Wheeler Legion, accompanied by delegations from Elizabeth and a colored "Legion" from Westfield proceeded through the principal streets of the city. About 150 torches were in line, including 25 young lads, designated as "Boys in Blue."

ADAMS.

Charles Francis Adams is the son and the grandson of a President. In his veins flows the patriotic blood of the Revolution. He is a citizen of ripe statesmanship, independent thought, and broad culture. He is not a partisan, but an honest advocate of all that will promote the public good. He supports Tilden and Hendricks. Read his letter:

QUINCY, Sept. 23, 1876.

Daniel Magone, Jr., Chairman New York State Democratic Committee:

DEAR SIR:—Absence from home has prevented me from answering promptly your letter of the 20th inst.

If I were younger it would be an agreeable duty to perform the task to which you invite me. But I have not done anything of the kind for fifteen years, and am now in my seventieth year. Should I accept your invitation I should probably give rise to others which would have an equal claim. My judgment is that I had better stay at home. Yet I think I fully appreciate the importance of this canvass. It is narrowing itself daily more and more into a struggle between the people and the managers, who hold the official organization of the country—for their own exclusive benefit. From the days of the Credit Mobilier down to the last exposures, made by the investigations of the last Congress, there is only one conclusion to be drawn, and that is the prevalence of corruption almost everywhere in the Republican organization. The honest men do, indeed, make brave and sincere efforts to resist this baneful influence, but they are too often defeated to raise any just hopes of ultimate success. This struggle has been going on for years, and no material change for the better has yet been effected. The time has now come for a radical change and the substitution of a wholly new influence, tied up by no restrictions other than the genuine wishes of honest men of all parties.—When in a great popular convention of a party to nominate a candidate for the Presidency, one gentleman, deeply compromised by the investigations of a committee of the House of Representatives, comes within twenty-five votes of a nomination, and another, who really did honor to himself by fearless and effective exposures of corruption in high places, could not command many more than a hundred votes, it seems to me that it is high time for a change in public opinion. Neither is the case improved by a view of the manner in which the canvass has been carried on. The great effort of the Republicans seems to be to operate on the popular passions excited during the late civil war. Instead of repeating the honorable call of President Grant, "Let us have peace," the cry is for raising what may prove another war.—And why is this? Only because the people of the Southern States choose to vote as they please, without regard to the corrupt combinations of office holders all over the country, wielded by equally corrupt combinations of legislators at the seat of government, to perpetuate their own power. Verily, verily, if the people are wise they will lay down party and seize the present opportunity to make a change.

I am very truly yours,
CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS.

George C. Ludlow, a young and rising lawyer of New Brunswick, has been nominated for State Senator by the Democrats of Middlesex County, and will be elected, too, leaving his ancient competitor, Levi Jarrard, at home, where he belongs.

In the town elections held in Connecticut on Wednesday last, the Democrats made decided gains. The tide is turning in Connecticut.

"They (the Democrats) changed the patriotic and capable officers of the House, and changed into their places rebels, rascals and thieves. * * * * In every case within their power, they changed out of office every Union soldier and changed into their places adherents of the lost cause of rebellion."—Extract from speech of Hon. Elliott F. Shephard at the Republican union meeting last Tuesday evening.

Of all the campaign falsehoods, which form the entire stock in trade of the Republican party, none is more utterly baseless than the one that ex-Confederate soldiers have been given a monopoly of positions in the House of Representatives. The lie has been repeated on every Republican stump from Maine to Texas, and by every Republican speaker from Blaine, the arch corruptionist, down to the most insignificant cross-road spouter. The whole story is the exact reverse of the truth and known to be an utter fabrication by nearly every one who has made the charge. The employees of the House are 232 in number, and of these only 28 are ex-Confederate soldiers. The Union States have 175 positions, while only 57 are held by persons from States engaged in the Rebellion, and of these 57 many were loyal to the Union during the war. 37 of the old employees are retained, and the list includes 15 colored men and 56 Union soldiers, of whom 10 were wounded in the service. The number of Union soldiers employed is exactly double the number of Confederate soldiers, and the employees from Union States are over three times as great as those from Rebel States.

The Union soldiers employed by the Republican House in the 43d Congress, numbered, as far as can be ascertained, only 38, so that the Democratic House has given employment to more Union soldiers than the Republican House which preceded it. In other words, the Democratic House appointed three Union soldiers for every two appointed by the Republicans.

Scarcity of Money.

There is no doubt but the present situation of all kinds of business and industry is fearfully depressed, and it behooves every family to look carefully to their expenses. Winter is coming on when children are liable to Croup, Whooping Cough, etc. Coughs and Colds will prevail everywhere, and Consumption with other Throat and Lung disease will carry off many.—These diseases should not be neglected, Doctor Bills are expensive, and we would advise our people to use BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP. It never has failed. One bottle at 75 cents will keep your whole family well during the winter. Two doses will relieve any case. Sold in all towns in the United States, and by your Druggist, William H. Voorhees.

LOOK!
The wildest excitement exists in many localities on account of the immense number of tramps who are perambulating over the country.
Out
of work, and many of them would not work if it was tendered them. The most of them are a ragged, thieving, dirty and worthless crew. The exception can be granted to an occasional few.
For
a white flock of black sheep is truly a rarity. The general depression of business, and lack of employment everywhere has forced many to roam in search of work, and others travel, beg, and steal, because they don't want to work. In this connection we wish to call
Your attention to the fact that we propose to do our level best to keep up the high standard for respectability of this section of country as far as GENTEEL APPEARANCE IN DRESS can do so, and while the wearing of good clothes is no particular safeguard for your Lives and Property
there is no denying the fact that a neat appearing, well dressed man is not likely to get up a scare equal to a rough and ragged individual. This brings us to
The
great question at issue which is to inform you that our new stock of Clothing is now in, and we are prepared to fit neatly every Man or Boy, who will come with the cash, in a suit to please in every respect. Our prices are so very low that the
Tramps
Themselves can readily see that it will be cheaper for them to buy than undertake to beg or steal a new suit. We propose to keep the lead in our line of business. If you
Are thinking of going to the Centennial, and want a suit that will pass you through in good style, a substantial, stylish and good fitting suit, you don't want to delay coming
and taking a look through our store, because we mean just what we say, we will sell you Clothing for yourselves or boys that will give you satisfaction in style, fit, good wear, and what is of vital importance these hard times VERY LOW IN PRICE.

DR. GEO. W. BEACH, of Indianapolis, will occupy the pulpit of the Crescent Ave. Pres. Church next Sunday, Oct. 8th, morning and evening.

THE office of Mr. Nash, on Peace street, was entered by thieves on Sunday night last and robbed of about $15 in tobacco, segars, &c.

WE publish the amended game laws of the State of New Jersey in another column. Pot hunters should read its provisions and beware of violating the same.

FRED CASPAR is now dispensing Schalk's celebrated lager beer to the thirsty at his fine saloon on Second street, just above the City Hotel. Lunch during the day.

"Collier, the Plainfield Jeweler," has been in business here for seven years, and we are happy to certify to his honest dealing with the public. All of his goods can be relied on as being found to wear as he represents. See adv.

THE Second Annual Ball of Division No. 4, of the A. H. O., will be held at Laing's Hall next Wednesday evening, Oct. 11th, and promises to be a fine affair, as the previous ball of the Society was. The tickets are only one dollar, admitting gentleman and ladies.

COLD weather is approaching and soon stoves will be in demand. Those in want of such an advertisement should read Demens's advertisement in another column. He has a fine lot of new and second hand stoves of all kinds, also house-furnishing goods, which he intends to close out at cost.

TIMOTHY DEGAN, a prominent resident of Metuchen, and well known to many of our citizens, was instantly killed on Wednesday last at Metuchen, in attempting to jump from a moving train of cars. Mr. Degan was a gentleman of impulsive and generous temperament of mind.

IN consequence of a new polling district having been created in this city, the new or Third district will poll its vote in Mr. Boice's building, east side of Fifth street, near Cherry street, hereafter. The new district embraces all that part of the city lying between Fifth street and the city line south east of Cherry street.

CO. E., 3rd Reg. N. G. S. N. J., held an inspection at their armory rooms last Tuesday evening, at which was present a staff officer of the regiment. The Company made a fine appearance and were highly complimented by said officer. The command will go on a target excursion to Flemington next month.

SOME gentleman (?) retaliated for the alleged throwing of a missile by some miscreant into the ranks of the "Invincibles" during one of their recent parades, by pelting our staunch and tall Democratic friend, John M. C. Marsh, of Westfield, in the head with a rotten tomato, as the Westfield delegation were passing through Front street on the occasion of the late Democratic mass meeting in this city.

WM DEAN, former proprietor of the Dunellen Hotel, has purchased the interest of Wm. Peck in the Avon Park House, just off Park avenue, and will hereafter conduct the business of the same. Mr. Dean is thoroughly conversant with the manner in which a first-class road house should be kept, and his many friends will no doubt give him their patronage. Mr. Peck proposes engaging in mercantile pursuits in New York city.

WE notice that members from the following celebrated clubs will participate in the exercises of the Plainfield Athletic Club next Saturday:—Harlem Athletic; New York Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium; N. Y. Athletic; Union County Caledonian Club; Silver Stars; Chicago Foot Ball; Union Athletic, Boston; Crescents, Columbia College; Yonkers Lyceum; Paterson Board of Trade; Paterson Rowing Club, and last, tho' not least, the Rusholme Gymnastic Club of England.

A PORTION of the uniformed participants in the Republican parade last Tuesday evening, amused themselves by visiting the residences of several citizens and cheering them. When opposite the house wherein resides our fellow townsman, John H. Jackson, President of the Young Men's Tilden and Hendricks Club, three hearty cheers were given for "President Jackson." What does this mean? Is there treason in the camp, or was it because they had just come from Fred's.

LAST week a bill in Chancery was filed at Trenton praying for the appointment of a receiver of the Central R. R. Co. of N. J. The bill declares that the Company is insolvent, and prays for the appointment of a receiver of all its property, assets, etc.; also for an injunction restraining the contemplated issue of $4,000,000 of additional mortgage bonds, and for an order that the receiver shall take charge of the avails of any bonds which may have been disposed of. It is represented that the Central R. R. Co. had no authority to endorse the paper of the Wilkesbarre Coal Co., and no power to issue bonds for the purpose announced by the management of that corporation. Chancellor Runyon received the papers and gave the R. R. Co. until 12 o'clock of that day to show cause why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted. At that hour exhaustive arguments were heard by the Chancellor, whereupon he refused to grant the petition, on the ground that the allegations of the complainant were not accompanied with proof sufficient to convince him that the Central R. R. Co. were exceeding the powers vested in them by their charter.

Union Meetings.

The Union Prayer Meetings of the Y. M. C. A. will be resumed in their rooms on Saturday evening of this week, commencing at 7½ o'clock. You are invited to attend.

Attention, Democrats!

According to a call made by the Chairman of the last Democratic Assembly Convention for the Third District, which appears at the head of our editorial page, it will be observed that primaries to select delegates to attend the Convention are to be held Tuesday, October 10th, although no call to that effect has as yet been issued by the officers of the Democratic Association of Plainfield.

P. A. C.

The annual games of the Plainfield Athletic Club, which were to have taken place to-day on the Driving Park Grounds, have been postponed to Saturday, Oct. 11th, in consequence of the rainy state of the weather. This day was appointed at a special meeting of the club held at the Park House this afternoon in view of the fact that competitors from Chicago and other place, having imperative engagements which called them home on Wednesday, Oct. 11th, the day designated for adjournment by the Athletics when it was found the rain would necessitate a postponement.

Y. M. C. A.

The Grand Vocal Concert by the Young Apollo Club takes place to-night at the Congregational Church and bids fair we learn to be a success in every respect. A large number of seats have been sold but there are sittings that may still be procured. The Club is composed of 25 of the best boy singers in America, and the programme is one that will please everybody. Seats may be obtained during the day at either store of Reynolds & Stelle for the moderate price of fifty cents.

Quoits—Plainfield vs. Elizabeth.

A match game of Quoits for a prize medal (best of three games), was played on Saturday, Sept. 30th, at Elizabeth. Some weeks ago a friendly match game was played on the grounds of Mr. John Lindsey of this city, between seven representatives of Plainfield and an equal number from Elizabeth, which resulted in an easy victory for the former, Plainfield winning by sixty-four points. The Elizabeth boys went home after spending a pleasant afternoon, beaten but not discouraged. Mr. Robert Simpson (of the firm of Wilson & Simpson), of this city, a few days since received a challenge from Mr. Campbell, chief of the Union County Caledonian Club, to play a match game of quoits for a prize medal, game to be played at Elizabeth on Saturday, Sept. 30th, at 2 o'clock. The challenge was promptly accepted, and the Plainfield team, composed of our genial Street Commissioner, John Wilson, Robert Simpson, John Donald and John Lindsey, repaired to the grounds, arriving there at about 2 o'clock, as per agreement. The Elizabeth members of the club were out in full (?) force; said club being represented only by the opposing team, Alex. Kerr, John Troop, John Kirk, and James McGregor, and notwithstanding the rain a good game was played. Plainfield again winning by eighteen points. Refreshments in great abundance were provided, and all enjoyed themselves. Strange to say the medal played for and won was not to be found. It seems it had not been purchased yet, but presume it will be soon forthcoming and presented with some novel ceremony to the winning team. The following is the score:

PLAINFIELD—J. Wilson, 33; R. Simpson, 32; J. Lindsey, 29; J. Morton, 24—118.

ELIZABETH—A. Kerr, 30; J. Troop, 32; J. McGregor, 14; J. Kerr, 28—104.

Another match will be played on J. Lindsay's Nursery grounds, Plainfield, on Saturday, Oct. 14th, for silver medal.

Personals.

Rev. Dr. Joseph Stockbridge and family are stopping at the City Hotel, after an extended tour through the Southern States.

Thanks to Hon. Miles Ross (our next Congressman from the Third district) for valuable public documents.

Mr. John Demeza, of Ohio, is spending a few days with his brother George of this city.

Mr. Alex. Titsworth, engaged in the clothing business at Selma, Alabama, and who has been on a visit to his home in this city for some months, started on his return trip to his place of business this (Thursday) afternoon, where he proposes remaining during the winter months. Wednesday evening Mr. Titsworth was tendered a parting supper at the City Hotel, by a few of his many warm friends in Plainfield, who appreciate and honor his worth as a friend and gentleman. The evening was spent in discussing the good things set before the guests by friend Van Arsdale, and in relating stories and reminiscences of by-gone days. Mr. Titsworth, in a few well chosen remarks, thanked his friends present for the slight token of friendship this gathering demonstrated, and a safe journey and a speedy return to Plainfield was the parting toast to "Alex." by all present.

It is rumored that our esteemed fellow-citizen, Ex-Judge Suydam, is about to lead to the hymeneal altar one of Plainfield's fairest daughters.

Fire.

About quarter past eleven o'clock Sunday night last an alarm was struck from the tower and the fire companies quickly responding to the call were soon on their way to the fire which proved to be the dwelling house of Gottlieb Freehan, in the locality known as "Frogtown," North Plainfield, about half a mile beyond the fire limits.—When the firemen reached the scene Freehan's house was burned nearly to the ground and an adjoining dwelling was in flames, while a third house was just taking fire on the side, with the nearest point to water some 1,500 feet away to Stony Brook. "Warren" hand engine, No. 3 was the first apparatus to arrive and immediately attempted to procure water from a well near by, but found it was some forty feet deep.—The members of "Zephyr" Hook and Ladder Co., No. 1, upon arriving, immediately mounted to the roof of the third building mentioned above and despite the scorching heat passed water in buckets along a line to the roof, where it was dashed against the side of the house. Chief Doane, perceiving there was no chance to get water from the engines in time, issued orders to pull down the middle building, which was one mass of flames. The "Zephyr's" responded to the call and soon had a chain hook attached to a corner post of the front of the building; then with a cheer and a strong pull on the long rope attached, the whole front of the structure was pulled out and drawn away. Quickly the hook was attached to the side of the building next to that of the dwelling imperilled and that too was speedily pulled down, but before the energetic firemen could drag the burning mass away the cry of—"the water is here," followed by a stream from a nozzle was answered by a ringing cheer from the crowd and all further danger was averted. "No. 2" steamer had been drawn across fields and down steep banks to the brook by her brave and willing laddies and by the combined use of her own hose and that of "Alert" Hose Co., No. 1 and "Warren" Eng. Co., No. 3, assisted by their members, a line of hose fifteen hundred feet in length was stretched to the fire and soon the steamer was sending a fine stream on the flames, drafting the water some ten feet perpendicular from the brook and forcing it up over an embankment twenty feet high. "No 1" steamer proceeded as far as the end of the fire limits and was then ordered back to the house in case of an emergency arising by a fire breaking out in the city. The firemen, one and all present, worked heroically and in splendid harmony. Chief Doane was early on the ground and issued his orders in a cool and calm manner and was ably assisted by Assistants Kriney and Coriell. It is supposed the fire was caused by the explosion of a kerosene lamp left burning in a lower room of the building. The family of Mr. Freehan, consisting of wife and five children, barely had time to escape from the building in their night clothes, saving nothing whatever of their effects. Upon gaining the open air and gathering his family around him, Mr. F. found one of the children missing and immediately rushed into the burning building to rescue it and was terribly burned about the face and hands in the attempt.—The child, however, had sprang from a second story window when awakened by the fire and alighting uninjured on the ground had run to a neighbor's house. Mr. Freehan and family were removed to a neighbor's house and attention bestowed upon them.—Dr. Hart, of Craig Place, was called in and the unfortunate man's burns dressed, which are painful and serious. The building in which the fire originated belonged to Mr. Freehan, although the Plainfield Building & Loan Association hold the fire insurance policy of $750 in the Hillsborough Fire Insurance Co. of Somerset. His furniture was insured in the same Company for $200.—The second house was the property of James Y. Wilson, of Dunellen, and was insured in the same company for $400. This building was unoccupied. The total loss is about $3,000.

GRAND DEMOCRATIC RALLY.

The ratification meeting at Laing's Hall, last Thursday evening, under the auspices of the Young Men's Tilden and Hendricks Club, was the largest political gathering ever held in Plainfield. Before the speakers made their appearance on the stage it was evident that the large hall would not hold the multitude anxious to hear them, and arrangements were accordingly made for an overflow meeting on the outside. The hall was tastefully decorated with flags and bunting, and the stage occupied by prominent and leading citizens of Plainfield, Westfield and Scotch Plains, and representatives from the various political clubs of the party in this city. Mr. John H. Jackson, President of the Young Men's Tilden and Hendricks Reform Club, called the meeting to order and Wm. B. Maxson, Esq., was chosen chairman of the evening. Upon accepting the position, Mr. Maxson, in a few brief remarks, returned thanks for the honor and introduced the first speaker of the evening, Hon. John T. Bird, who was received with deafening cheers. Mr. Bird delivered an eloquent address in his clear, logical manner, which impressed his hearers with its truthfulness. Of course we have not space to reproduce in print his or other speeches of the evening, but those who were fortunate enough to be present will long remember the rich treat bestowed by each speaker. Hon. Charles Winfield, of Jersey City, followed Mr. Bird in an address which was frequently interrupted by prolonged applause, after which Gen. Martin T. McMahon, of New York city, who had been addressing the overflow meeting, was loudly called for, and finally was induced to address the multitude. It is unnecessary to state that the General's remarks were received with loud applause. At the close of the meeting rousing and repeated cheers were given for Tilden and Hendricks and the speakers.

The overflow meeting was called to order by James Parker, Esq., who introduced to the large gathering Gen. M. T. McMahon, who delivered a forcible address. He was followed by our fellow townsman, James E. Martine and James H. Parker. There was fully five hundred persons listening to the speakers at the outdoor meeting, while seven hundred persons would be a fair estimate for those who filled the large hall.

The Raritan Cornet Band furnished excellent music for the occasion, and headed a procession formed at the club rooms, composed of the three clubs of the city, and marched in a body to the hall. A delegation of about one hundred from Westfield and some fifty from Scotch Plains attended the meeting, coming in wagons, and were accompanied by drum corps. The North Plainfield Cornet Band was also in attendance and discoursed very good music during the outside meeting. The meetings were the most orderly gatherings ever witnessed in this city.

Game Laws.

The existing game laws of the State of New Jersey, prohibit the killing, exposing for sale, or having unlawfully in possession, by any persons in this State, the kinds of birds and animals below described, within the periods respectively stated and under the penalties in each case provided, viz:

Ruffed Grouse, (Partridge or Pheasant) prohibited from Jan. 1st to Nov. 1st; penalty, fifteen dollars.

Quail, Jan. 1st to Nov. 1st, fifteen dollars.

Woodcock, Jan. 1st to July 4th, ten dolls.

Wood Duck, (Summer Duck) Jan. 1st to Sept. 1st, five dollars.

Rail or Reed Bird, Dec. 1st to Sept. 1st, five dollars.

Hare or Rabbit, Jan. 1st to Nov. 1st, five dollars.

Squirrel, Gray, Black or Fox Squirrel, Jan. 1st to July 1st, five dollars.

The penalty for taking, at any time or place, any sort of Deer whatsoever, or any Ruffed Grouse (Pheasant or Partridge,) Quail, Snipe, Reed Bird or Rail, by means of any, blind, trap snare, net or device whatever, is Fifteen Dollars for every such bird so trapped, snared, or taken; and for every Woodcock so trapped, snared or taken, Ten Dollars.

SEC. XI.—"And be it enacted, That no person shall, at any time, within this State, kill, trap or expose for sale, or have unlawfully in his or her possession after the same is killed, any Nighthawk, Whip-poor-will, Sparrow, Thrush, Lark, Finch, Martin, Barn Swallow, Woodpecker, Flicker, Robin, Oriole, Reed or Cardinal Bird, Tanager, Cat Bird, Blue Bird, or any other insectiverous bird under a penalty of Five Dollars for every bird killed, trapped, exposed for sale or had in possession.

And it is further enacted, That no person shall rob or destroy the eggs or nests of any wild bird whatsoever, save only those of a predatory character and destructive of game and insectiverous birds, under a penalty of Ten Dollars for each offence.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

In the absence of the pastor of the Baptist church, the desk was supplied on Sunday last, morning and evening, by the Rev. H. V. Jones of New Brunswick.

We notice a substantial and unique fence recently constructed in front of the beautiful cottage of Mr. Peter Frazer, the enterprising mason and builder of this village. If this fence is not patented, we would say to his neighbors, "go ye and do likewise."

On Thursday evening next, as will be seen by notice in another part of this paper, the Conservative voters of Westfield township will meet with the Tilden and Hendricks Club of this village, for the purpose of electing delegates to the County Convention, &c., after which we are told that an interesting song will be sung by our friend "Prince B."

The Rev. Joseph C. Buchanan, who has been absent for several weeks on a visit to his relatives in Hunterdon county, has returned, and will occupy his pulpit as usual on Sunday morning next. By the way, isn't that staunch old Democratic county of Hunterdon a good place to go to in these times that try men's souls?

"Our Republican friends," as the Hon. John T. Bird would say, of this village, have "made a move." We understand that two bedroom caucuses have been held, under the hospitable roof of the worthy post master, on Mountain avenue. The "attendance," of course, was meagre, and the enthusiasm(?) flat, under their discouraging circumstances.

The Scotch Plains Mutual Theft Detecting Society will hold its next quarterly meeting on Monday evening, October 9th instant, at 7:30 o'clock; the regular meeting night having been changed from the first Monday in January, April, July and October to the second.

At the meeting of the Tilden and Hendricks Club of this village on Monday evening last there was a good attendance. Several new names were added to the roll and two "erring ones, hopefully converted," were reported. And so the good work goes bravely on.

On a recent visit to Scotch Plains, we noticed a team of fine large bay horses attached to a wagon containing, we should judge, two tons and a half of "black diamond" and a stalwart colored man, who, upon enquiry, we found was George Burrill, an old employee of Mr. George Squiers, the well-known coal merchant of Scotch Plains, whose yard is near Fanwood Station, and who, although engaged in the business a little over a year, is doing a flourishing business in consequence of his strict and fair manner of conducting the same.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

We understand also that the Westfield Presbyterian Church difficulty regarding its pastor, Rev. Alexander McKelvey is to come up again before the present session of the Presbytery now being held in Westfield.—We hope, for the sake of the good people of Westfield that this much talked of difficulty will be permanently settled at this time.

The North Plainfield Band is to be congratulated upon the improvement made by them in their profession.

Read the corrected time table.

An Appeal.

The sympathies of a liberal public is solicited in the case of Mr. Gotlieb Freehan, who was so seriously burned while endeavoring to rescue one of his children from his burning dwelling last Sunday night in North Plainfield. Himself and family of wife and five children are destitute and without clothing or means, having lost everything by the fire, and escaping only in their night clothes. Several of our generous hearted citizens have responded to the call of willing citizens who have started a subscription for the purpose of assisting the family but more is needed. Any contributions of clothing, fuel or money left at the office of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST will be thankfully received and forwarded to the destitute family.

PROCEEDINGS COMMON COUNCIL.

MONDAY EV'G, Oct. 2, 1876.

Council met in regular meeting.

Members all present except Mr. Brown.

Pres. Mr. Smith in chair.

Hedden, regular and special duty, $42 92; H. Vannese, special, $2 50; Geo. Eaton, regular, $41 67; Jas. Daly, special, $2 50. On motion, these claims were referred to the Com. on Police.

Mr. Harris presented report of Capt. of Police for month of September: Number of arrests, 5; number of tramps entertained, 226. On motion, report was received and ordered on file.

Mr. Ryder, from Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps, reported the following claims correct: Spicer & Hubbard, $23.82; Plainfield G. L. Co., $626 60; N. Y. & N. J. Globe G. L. Co., $105 75. On motion, report received and claims referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Voorhees, from Com. on Printing, reported the claim of J. C. Runyon & Co., $34 50, correct, and on motion, report was received and claim referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Voorhees, from Com. on Salaries, Offices & Elections, reported the following claims correct: P. P. Good, $75; Wm. B. Perrine, $12 50; J. A. Hubbard, $139; N. Runyon, $87 50. On motion, report received and claims referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Harris, from Com. on Police, reported the following claims correct: Wm. Hedden, $42 92; P. Breen, $50; Jno. R. Clark, $43 92; J. Tingley, $2 50, John Harding, $5 25; Jas. Daly, $2 50; George Eaton, $41 67; H. Vannese, $2 50. On motion, report received and claims referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Simpson, from Aud. Com., reported the following claims correct: N. Y. & N. J. Globe G. L. Co., $105 75; Plainfield G. L. Co., $626 60; Spicer & Hubbard, $23 82; Geo. C. Gwen, $50; D. Hand, $28 99; P. Breen, $16 67; Alex. M. Runyon, $12; Jno. M. Schorb, $123; N. Y. Globe G. L. Co., $207; J. S. Cutter, $99 50; H. H. Lowrie, M. D., $42. On motion, report was received and warrants ordered drawn for the several amounts.

Mr. Harris presented petition of John L. Laing for permission to build an addition to his dwelling on 2d St., near Cherry. On motion, referred to Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps.

Mr. Harris also presented com'n from N. W. Pike in reference to nuisance near his residence, praying the Council to take some action in the matter. Mr. Young moved that the matter be referred to Com. on Sts. and Pub. Health, (with an amendment by Mr. French, "with power.") Adopted.

Claim of Lewis Harris, $34, was reported correct by Alms Com., and on motion, report was received and claim referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Simpson presented petition of Evan Jones and others, property owners on Putnam and La Grande Aves., for the erection of lamps in that vicinity. On motion, referred to Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps. Also, petition from same parties in same vicinity, for the laying of crosswalks, &c. On motion, referred to Com. on Sts.

Mr. Mulford presented grievance of Jno. L. Everett, W. R. Clarkson and others, property owners on Front St., relative to the bad condition of said street, from Peace to Berkman Sts., and praying Council to take action relative thereto. On motion, referred to Com. on Sts.

Mr. Simpson, from Aud. Com., reported correct the following claims: Wm. Hedden, $42 72; P. Breen, $50; J. R. Clark, $43 22; J. Tingley, $2 50; Jno. Harding, $5 25; J. Daly, $2 50; Geo. Eaton, $41 67; J. Vannese, $2 50; L. Harris, $34. On motion, report received and warrants ordered drawn for the several amounts.

Mr. French offered a res. that $200 be appropriated for work on Sts. Adopted. All aye.

Mr. Voorhees offered a res. that the salary of the city Assessor be fixed at $125 per annum. Adopted. All aye. Also, that the salary of the city Collector be fixed at the same amount, ($125 per annum.) Ad'pd. All aye.

Mr. French offered a res. that the Com. on Sts. have power to superintend the work on streets in accordance with amount appropriated. Adopted.

Mr. Voorhees called from the table petition of John H. Evans and others for the location of lamps on Plainfield Ave., near 7th St. Petition was then read by the Clerk, and on motion, referred to Com. on Fire, Water and Lamps.

Mr. Thorn stated that they had secured the building of Mr. Boice on the east side of 5th St., near Cherry, for the 3d polling district. Report received and location accepted. All aye.

Mr. Harris moved that the petition of John L. Laing, presented the early part of the session, and referred to the Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps, be reconsidered. Carried.

Mr. Mulford moved that the petition be referred to the Com. on Fire, Water and Lamps, with power. Considerable discussion prevailed upon this motion, pro and con, when, upon the motion of Mr. Mulford being put to vote, was carried.

Council then adjourned.

The taxes of North Plainfield Township are $1.10 on the $100, against $1.40 on the same last year.

MESSRS EDITORS:

As the time for nominating Assemblyman is fast approaching, let Plainfield wield her heavy gun into position by bringing to the notice of our Independent voters the name of that stalwart young Democrat,

JOHN H. JACKSON,

And now evidence is produced in the shape of a letter written by Gov. Hayes' Private Secretary to the Secretary of the secret society known as the American Alliance, acknowledging the acceptance of Mr. Hayes as a member of that fraternity, he having been elected an honorary member. This order is hostile to all foreign-born citizens and every member is sworn to oppose the voting or holding of office of any foreign-born citizens. What think you of that foreigners! Below we give the letter:

COLUMBUS, OHIO, JULY 10, 1875.

DEAR SIR.—Gov. Hayes desires me to acknowledge receipt of your valued favor of July 7, enclosing resolutions of the American Alliance, and to say in reply that he is deeply gratified by this expression of confidence. The importance of carrying the States of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut in the approaching canvass is fully recognized, and at the proper time references will be given you to Committees for such aid and co-operation as seems to be advisable.

Very Respectfully,
ALFRED E. LEE, Sec.

To L. S. Tyler, Box 2,071, New York.

MR. ROSS ACCEPTS.

The following correspondence explains itself. It will be seen that Hon. Miles Ross accepts the Democratic nomination for this Congressional District:

FREEHOLD, N. J., Sept. 28, 1876.

HON. MILES ROSS—Dear Sir:—It was made the agreeable duty of the undersigned, a committee appointed for the purpose by the Democratic Convention of the Third Congressional District, assembled this day at Freehold, to notify you that you were unanimously nominated by that body for the position of Representative in the next Congress for this District; and that by a cordial and unanimous vote your past course in Congress was heartily approved and indorsed.

We take great pleasure in officially notifying you of your re-nomination; and also in conveying to you the gratifying assurance from all parts of the district that you will be re-elected by an increased majority to the position which you have filled so satisfactorily to your constituents.

Yours respectfully,
WILLIAM R. CONOVER,
SAMUEL H. PATTERSON,
PIERSON HENDRICKSON,
of Monmouth county;
CHAS. D. DEBBLER,
MATTHEW O'GORMAN,

J. C. SUTPHEN, of Union county;
Committee.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Sept. 30, 1876.

GENTLEMEN:—Your favor of the 28th inst. was duly received. In reply I beg leave to state that I accept the nomination so kindly and freely given me by the Democrats of the Third Congressional District of New Jersey, in convention assembled at Freehold on Tuesday last. I shall use every honorable means to secure my election, and the success of the entire Democratic ticket; and, if elected, pledge myself to do all in my power to advance the interests of this District and State.

I remain yours, etc.,
Very respectfully,
MILES ROSS.

To Messrs. William R. Conover, Chas. D. Debbler, Patrick Sheridan, Com.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A WOMAN'S WIT.

A gentleman, not unconnected with the Boston press, was in St. Louis recently, and while here confided to a friend the details of an adventure in a Boston hotel, so remarkable as to deserve a life in print.

The story is brief, but with an immense moral as showing how, in some things, a lovely woman will always come to the relief of a sister in distress to outwit the tyrant man.

The journalist above referred to, stopping at the hotel, a private one where the guests were accustomed to the entire freedom of the house, felt, one night, the imperative necessity of eating some fruit before retiring.

It was too late to send out to buy any; he did not want to arouse the servants of the house at so late an hour, and yet fruit or preserves or something toothsome of the kind seemed to him a personal necessity.—He knew where the storeroom was, knew that the door was left open, and finally he resolved to go down quietly and prig enough of the sweetmeats to satisfy his need.

No sooner was the thought conceived than acted upon, and within five minutes he was in the storeroom hooking preserves out of a jar and enjoying himself immensely in satisfying the craving which had come upon him.

For a few minutes the enjoyment of the man at the preserves was complete. Then he was startled by a light, swift step in the hall, there was a whisk and rustle of garments, the door opened suddenly and some one bounded in with such suddenness as, coming squarely against the form of the midnight raider, to knock him half way across the room and fairly off his feet. Leaping up at once he closed with his unconscious assailant, to be startled by a subdued shriek and to find that he had captured a woman:

Further and more terrible still, he discovered that the plump form of the lady, who had wanted something to eat as well as he, was clad only in a night dress. Still, though trying, the occasion was not one of unmixed horror by any means, and in a moment the gentleman's nerve returned and his curiosity rose to fever heat.

"Who is this!" he demanded of the plump figure in his arms.

No answer.

"Who is this!" he repeated. "You'll not get out of this untill you tell."

Still no answer, but a struggle in the darkness, the plump figure trying to get away.

Again the query was repeated, with equal lack of response, but this time a resounding slap in the face from a hand that was doubtless pretty, but which hit with decided force, was the reward of the questioner.

He was put on his mettle at once. "You think you'll get off unknown! We'll see about that!" he exclaimed. "I've a device that'll work, I think."

And then, after a silent but determined struggle, he caught a little bit of the lady's right cheek between his teeth, and bit it—not badly so as to break the velvety skin, but sufficiently hard to leave a mark which he knew could not disappear for a day or two.—Then he released his unknown prisoner and she fled like the wind along the passage, disappearing in some room impossible to locate in the darkness.

The next morning the gentleman with a mystery to solve came down to breakfast early. No ladies had yet appeared, but at his table were one or two intimate male friends, and to them he confided the story of his adventure in the night, relating also the means he had taken to secure the indentification of the unknown lady.

The most intense curiosity at once prevailed at the table, and the advent of the ladies was awaited with an impatience scarcely to be controlled. Five minutes later the door opened and the belle of the hotel entered demurely, glided across the room, and seated herself at the breakfast table.

Eager eyes followed her, and as her face was fairly exposed there was a sensation among the gentlemen. Upon her right cheek was a strip of court plaster an inch long! The excited men exchanged glances and whispers and smiles.

The mystery was solved early. But just then another lady entered, a dignified matron. As she seated herself there was disclosed upon her right cheek a piece of court plaster identical in appearance with that upon the face of the belle! Another and another lady entered. Upon the right cheek of every one of them appeared a piece of court plaster. The tables filled up, and not a lady at one of them but wore court plaster on the right cheek!

And then the gentlemen looking confidently for a revelation wilted. They comprehended the situation. The lady who had been captured in the night had confided her extremity to her friends, and they had come to the rescue to outwit male humanity. They had succeeded, too. The discomfitted men at that particular table knew that beneath one of the many pieces of court plaster in the room were hidden the marks of teeth, but which was the identical piece of court plaster they could not tell. And they never learned.

The pensive male is not usually regarded as susceptible to pathetic emotion. And yet he occasionally drops a male-teer.

A young poet of the realistic school writes: "Time marches on with the slow, measured tread of a man working by the day."

An exchange asks, "Is Sitting Bull a West Pointer?" His name implies that he is more of a "setter" than "pointer."

The young lady who always wanted her sweetheart close at hand explains it on the ground that 'twas only a nigh dear of her own.

"A prudent man," says a witty Frenchman, "is like a pin: his head prevents him from going too far.

When a young lady and gentleman have a controversy about kissing, they generally put their heads together.

NEW JERSEY
Enamel Paint Company,
RARITAN, NEW JERSEY.
Manufacturers of
Bradley's Enamel Paint.
Mixed Ready for Use, in any shade, Tint or Color desired.

These Paints are composed of the purest and best materials known to painters; the principal ingredients being Pure White LEAD, ZINC, and LINSEED OIL, which are made to unite in a homogeneous mass by the addition of other materials which add greatly to the durability, elasticity, beauty and strength of the Paint. The whole are chemically combined so that the pigments are held in permanent solution, thus forming a new compound which dries on the surface and adheres firmly to it, thus forming a Smooth, Glossy, Firm, Elastic, Beautiful and Durable Paint.

The Oil, which is the real life of the Paint, cannot leave it and be absorbed by the substance to which it is applied, as it does in paints mixed in the ordinary way, & thus leave the pigment dry and chalky, to wash & rub off in few months. This paint is unaffected by changes of temperature, is perfectly impervious to the action of water, is well adapted to all classes of work, & is in every way a better paint for either in side or outside work or boat painting than any other Paint known to the trade, and will last at least three times as long as the best Lead and Oil mixed in the ordinary way.

These Paints are Ready for use,
Are easily applied by any one, require no mixing, stirring or addition of dryers.
Liberal Inducements to Dealers.
And full satisfaction guaranteed to their Customers.

Sold by the Gallon, Keg or Barrel. Orders attended to promptly. For Price List and Sample Color Card, Address,

CAUTION!

The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Theo. A. Carman some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filled over one thousand pages and counsel were over two months in summing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an straight iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing stratum. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is of steel, made sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Carman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defence contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement had been clearly proved.

LEGAL NOTICES.

SHERIFF'S SALE.—New Jersey Supreme Court. Louis Mundy vs. Sarah E. Mitchell and Joseph Mitchell, her husband. In debt. Fi. fa. de bon. et ter.

By virtue of the above-stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale at public vendue, at the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on Wednesday, the 18th day of October, A. D., 1876, at 2 o'clock, p. m. of said day, all the following described tracts or parcels of land and premises situate, lying and being in the city of Plainfield, in the county of Union and State of New Jersey.

First Tract—Beginning at a stone in the centre of Fourth Street and is a corner of J. Van Dyke's land; thence running in a southeasterly course along said line two chains and seventy-eight links to a point in line of James Leonard's land, and in corner of J. Van Dyck's land; thence along said Leonard's line in a southwesterly course thirty (30) feet more or less, to a corner of land belonging to the Second Baptist Church; thence along the line of said Church lands in a northwesterly course two chains and seventy-eight links to a point in the centre of said Fourth Street; thence along the centre of said street in a northeasterly course 30 (30) feet, more or less, to the place of beginning, containing five thousand five hundred square feet of land, be the same more or less.

Being the same land and premises conveyed by deed recorded in book 67, page 314 of deeds for Union County.

Also, all the right, title and interest of the above-named defendants, in and to the Second Tract—situate in the township of Westfield, Union County New Jersey.

Being the farm of which Anna Roll, widow of Dr. Wesley Roll died seized, and which she inherited from her mother, Elizabeth Smith—containing about one hundred and sixty-four acres.

N. K. THOMPSON, Sheriff.
NELSON RUNYON, Att'y.

POETRY.

THE BABY AND THE ELECTRIC GIANT.

To the ends of the earth,
Till the close of time,
Mary Newton's name—
Shall ring as a chime.
And young men and maidens,
Grey matron and sire,
Shall tell the true story,
At the household fire:
She sprang the mine, she gave the shock,
That blasted the famous Hell Gate rock.
All hidden from sight,
There wrapped in his might,
The giant slept in his cavern below—
But Mary's wee hand,
Was a magic wand—
She pressed with her finger, white as snow,
A tiny key,
We all could see—
That sprang the mine, and gave the shock,
She rent asunder old Hell Gate rock.

* * * * * *

Ten thousand voices,
Raised a shout,
Star-spangled banners
Floated out.
And the church bells rang a merry chime,
And the poet sung in a cheerful rhyme—
For the victory won
On that Sunday wild—
For the brave deed done,
By a little child. R.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE BLACK PATCH.

A TRUE STORY.

This is a simple relation of facts which actually occurred. It is one of a series of sketches under the title of "Ultra Montaine;" the scenes and incidents of which are laid beyond the Alleghanies, which the author has written for publication at some future day in a pair of volumes.

One Christmas eve, not many years ago, the long, paved room of an old and renowned café, near the cathedral in Chartres street, New Orleans, was brilliant with lights and gay with the sounds of many voices.—Nearly every one of its marble tables, arranged at regular intervals around the wall, was occupied by one or more individuals, either sipping strong Arabian coffee, (for which this house was famous,) from cups the size of half an egg-shell; playing at the everlasting game of "domino," smoking, reading the Gazette, or, by the loud energetic conversation, adding to the confusion characteristic of a well-frequented restaurateur. Waiters in white jackets, white aprons and red caps, were flying, jostling to and fro, bearing on little salvers, coffee, in pots and cups, in size and appearance like children's tea-sets; liquors of every name and hue; cigars and multitudinous glasses of brandy and water, a favorite New Orleans beverage. A canopy of tobacco smoke, the density of which all were contributing to increase with commendable industry, (for nearly every one smoked either cigar, pipe, or cigarito,) concealed the upper part of the columns supporting the ceiling, and hung low above the heads of the crowd, which, judging from costume, speech and complexion, represented every Christianized nation on the globe.

Apart, at the upper extremity of the room, sat a young gentleman, who, from his dress and air, was evidently a Parisian. He was not more than twenty-five years of age, with a slight, almost feminine figure, of strikingly elegant proportions. His eyes were of a clear, gray color, with an eagle-like expression. In his small, beautifully-shaped mouth, softness, I may say sweetness and manly decision, were equally blended. His dress was rich and in the fashion of 1830, the period of our story.—He had been taking coffee with a companion who had just departed, and was now seated facing the room, with one arm on the table and a foot upon a chair, and with his hat off, leaving exposed his fine head and temples, over which rich brown curls fell with natural grace. He was smoking and surveying the motley assembly, occasionally, as it seemed, by a slight smile, or a humorous twinkle of his eyes, amusing himself with the indiscreet features which an apt and observing mind will always detect in such a scene. He had finished his third havana; the hour waxed late, and by degrees the tenants of the tables took their departure. The comparative stillness of the room first appeared to rouse him to a consciousness of the lateness of the hour. Hastily rising, he threw a crown upon the table, and was about to depart, when two persons who had entered as he rose from his chair, advanced up the room. One of them was a tall, handsome Englishman, with a large, muscular frame; his fine features were bloated by dissipation, and his whole air was that of a fashionable roue. His companion, by the brown cheek, full black eye, light and symmetrical form, small hand, profusion of jewels and general indolence of action, betrayed the wealthy Mexican exile, many of whom were at this period in New Orleans. He threw himself into the seat vacated by the young Frenchman, and ordered the officious "garcon" to bring a glass of absinte. The Englishman was about to take the opposite chair, calling at the same time for refreshments in a boisterous voice, as if he was partly intoxicated, when fragments of cigars, little heaps of ashes, empty cups, and other signs of the recent occupancy of the table, met his eye.

"What the deuce, Garcia! Take another table. Some cursed Frenchman has just left this. Faugh! It smells of garlick!—Come, senor, take the table opposite. These Frenchmen! with their frogs and onions! Pah! come along."

As the speaker turned, his eyes encountered those of the young Frenchman, sparkling fierce resentment. For a moment he bore his steady gaze then looked away, as if ashamed; but the next instant, as if to show that he meant what he had said, and would abide by it, (for the Frenchman's eyes conveyed a menace,) he doggedly added, as men sometimes will do in such cases, "yes frogs and garlick soup, I say—ay, and all Frenchmen to boot!"

He fixed his eyes for an instant after he had spoken, with a brow-beaten look upon the young man, and then sitting down, carelessly repeated his own order to the "garcon." The Frenchman gazed on him fixedly for a few seconds longer, and then advanced a step and spoke, while his eagle eye sparkled with angry excitement.

"Was that remark meant for me?"

"As you please," replied the Englishman. "Garcon, a sardine with my brandy and water."

"I must consider your words as personally aimed, monsieur, and shall expect satisfaction."

"Lest you should be in doubt as to its personality, take that! and be careful how you interfere with my remarks a second time."

With the word, the Englishman gave the Frenchman a blow in the face, which staggered him. For a moment he stood as if bewildered between surprise and pain, surveying his antagonist with a burning cheek and a heaving breast. He thrust his hand into his bosom as if to grasp a weapon, but instantly withdrew it and placed it upon his cheek where he had received the disgraceful blow. Then, as if governed by some new feeling, he approached the Englishman with a look and manner from which all excitement was banished, and bending to his ear, as he sat by the table, whispered so as to be heard only by him, "Your blood, sir, shall wash out this disgrace. I bide my time. If it be a year hence, I will be revenged."

"I will give you a year and a day to win back your honor."

"A year and a day."

The next moment the young Frenchman disappeared.

Eugene Berthoud was the only son of a wealthy Parisian banker. His grandfather lost his head on the guillotine for the crime of being noble. His father had been bred a merchant, to which pursuit he educated Eugene; and when he became of age, gave him a copartnership in his extensive house, of which there were three branches, in the cities of Liverpool, Cadiz and New Orleans. Once a year Eugene made the tour of these marts to transact the immense which flowed through these channels from the parent fountain. He had arrived in New Orleans but ten days before we met in the café, and had not yet completed the object of his visit. He had withdrawn to the restaurateur with one of the partners of his house after a laborious day, to take coffee; and, as we have seen, was about to retire, when the language of the Englishman arrested his ear. A Frenchman is, perhaps, above other men, keenly sensitive in all that concerns national honor. His country—"la belle France"—is his idol. To praise or censure it, is to praise or censure him individually. They are one and indivisible. Eugene Berthoud felt like a Frenchman; and like a Frenchman resented as personal the insult cast upon his countrymen. Who would not have done the same?

When he received the blow, his first impulse was to take the life of the aggressor upon the spot. But he was unarmed. Next, the physical power of the tall, muscular Englishman, left him no chance in an encounter, where success would depend wholly upon physical superiority; and defeat he knew would only add to his disgrace. His mind rapidly surveyed these features of his position, and grasped them in all their bearings. There was yet another argument which had its weight upon a mind so honorably balanced as his, and which alone prevented him from making a certain sacrifice of his life to wipe out his disgrace. This was the consequences of his death to others. This reflection is too apt to be disregarded by honorable minds. A man's honor is as much bound for the interest of others as for its own reputation; and there can be no greater absurdity than for a man rashly to stake his life to uphold his honor, when the loss of his life would bring ruin upon those to whom he is bound by some one of the ties of life. It is with honor to purchase dishonor. The reflection of the injury to his father's commercial affairs, of which he had almost the sole management, would receive by any fatal rashness on his part, checked his hand, as he was about to throw the Englishman his card preparatory to a meeting the ensuing morning. And feeling that it was his duty before he acted for himself, to be able to do so without involving the interests of those with whom he was connected, he instantly decided on the course he should pursue; and signifying to his foe that he should hold him accountable for the insult he had received, he left the apartment. We leave the most finical of our readers to decide whether Eugene Berthoud acted in this instance as a gentleman and merchant should have done, or whether it would have been more honorable for the gratification of personal hostility to have sacrificed the fortunes of his commercial partners.

"Have I been struck?" he groaned in mental anguish, giving vent to his emotion as he gained the street. "Struck! and the man is free who gave the blow! That Eugene Berthoud should have lived to suffer such disgrace!"

He hurried along Rue des Chartres with his hand to his cheek, which he had not uncovered since the blow, as if he would hide the spot from human eye. Arriving at his hotel, and answering no question, returning no nod of recognition from friends who passed him in the halls, he sought his room, shut and locked the door behind him, and cast himself upon his bed.

"A blow!" he cried, as he buried his face in the pillow, "and revenge is forbidden me!"

The feelings of a high-minded man under the circumstances in which he was placed—injured honor pointing to instant revenge—but a more sacred and legitimate honor, withholding, for a time, the expression of his resentment, are better left to the imagination than to the pen.

The following day, and, indeed, for several days afterward, a young man might have been seen in the streets of New Orleans, apparently absorbed in business, wearing a large black patch covering one side of his face. He answered no questions from inquisitive friends, and left strangers to wonder. It was Eugene Berthoud. In a few days it was known that the "stranger with the black patch," as he was designated, had left the city. Men shrugged their shoulders, wondered, guessed, and grew no wiser. A few months afterward, "the stranger with the black patch" excited successively the curiosity of the citizens of Liverpool and Cadiz. At length one evening, about the first of November, 1831, the diligence rumbled up to the door of one of the principal hotels in Paris. A gentleman wrapped to the eyes in a cloak descended from it, and walked away at a rapid pace.—Hastily traversing Rue de Richelieu, he entered a narrow alley and soon emerged in an open square, surrounded by stately dwellings. He crossed the area to one of them, ascended the steps, and without ringing, applied a master-key, entered and closed the door. He passed through the hall with familiar footsteps, and opened a door at its extremity, and entered what might be either a library or a counting-room. Before a table covered with check and account books, bills of lading, receipts, and all the abstract signs and appendages of commerce, sat a fine-looking gentleman about sixty years of age, pouring over an invoice. He raised his eyes; the stranger dropped his cloak, and Eugene Berthoud stood before his father.

The parent rose to embrace him.

"Forbear, sir! I am unworthy of your embrace."

"Wounded, Eugene?" he exclaimed, his eyes having been arrested by the black patch.

"To the heart's core. I have been struck!"

"Ha!" cried the chivalrous old Frenchman, with a sparkling eye. "But you gave back the blow?"

"I did not."

"A Berthoud struck and the man unscathed who did it!"

"Lives, and untouched."

"Then Eugene Berthoud you are not my son," said the old Frenchman, turning from him with indignant contempt.

"Sir!—"

"Not a word. In your person the blood of a chivalrous race has been attainted."

In a few words, Eugene, with a burning cheek, related the scene in the café, and his motives in delaying his revenge.

M. Berthoud commended his high sense of honor, and restored him to his affection.

"My affairs," concluded Eugene, "and those of our house are all settled. I have devoted the last ten months to it. You will find by these papers that everything is correct. I had no right to expose my life to the injury of others. Adieu, sir! when we meet again, the son shall not be ashamed to encounter the eye of his parent."

Placing a packet on the table, he wrapped himself in his cloak, left the house, and hastened to the hotel. The next evening but one, the hills of "sunny France" were just sinking beneath the horizon, as the eyes of the young Frenchman surveyed from the deck of a packet ship, perhaps for the last time, the shores of his native land.

On Christmas eve, one year after the events related in the commencement of this sketch, the café St. Louis presented a scene very similar to that we have before described. There stood the same little marble tables arranged along the sides—there sat what appeared to be the same domino players—the same smokers—the same brandy and water and liquor bibbers—the same newspaper porers, and the same garcons in white jackets and red caps with little salvers in their hands, running the same endless round; and, as usual, there was the same coming and going of hungry and thirsty bipeds. By and by their number decreased, till not more than twenty individuals remained in the room. No one had entered for some time, when the door swung open, and Eugene Berthoud, with the black patch upon his cheek, came in. He passed up the apartment, attracting all eyes, but indifferent to observation. His piercing glance rested an instant on every countenance, as he traversed the apartment; but the face he sought was not among them. He had been ten days in New Orleans, and night and day had been seeking the Englishman, whom he knew to be a resident of the city, in all his haunts. For the tenth night had he entered the café St. Louis, and waited till midnight, if perchance he might make his appearance. "The year expires to-night," he thought, as he leaned against a column, and with folded arms fixed his eyes steadfastly on the distant door, with the intenseness of a tiger lying in wait for his prey. Who, in the slight, elegant figure and youthful face of the young Frenchman, would have looked for that deep, settled determination of spirit which he possessed—for the least trace of that fearful vengeance which he was about to exhibit?

Nine—ten—eleven o'clock passed, and he continued to lean against the column with his gaze concentrated on the door. At length it opened and a party of young gentlemen entered in high spirits. From their conversation they evidently had just come from the theatre. One after the other he examined their features till six had entered. The door was still ajar—there was a moment's delay, and a seventh came in. It was the "Englishman!"

Reader! you should have witnessed the expression of Eugene Berthoud's face at that moment! The party walked up the length of the room; and all had passed him but the Englishman. He came opposite the column and Eugene stepped out and confronted him.

"The time has come!" he said, in a low and calm, but strangely impressive voice.

"Who are you, sir?"

"Your foe!"

"I never saw you before."

"Do you not remember that just one year ago this night, on this spot, you struck a Frenchman in the face?"

"Yes."

"I am he. This patch has ever since hid the spot."

This was said in the even, quiet tones of familiar conversation. There was no sign of passion visible in his countenance. The companions of the Englishman had gathered around and listened with surprise.

"But it is so long ago—there is no cause for quarrel," said the Englishman.

"That you may have cause, I will strike you," said Berthoud, quietly.

Instantly the Englishman received a blow on the face, from his open hand, which made the apartment ring again. Eugene then took a step backward and coolly folded his arms. The Englishman would have returned the blow, had not his friends held him back, with cries of "No, no! all fair. He is right!—blow for blow! you must meet in the morning!"

After a few moments of excitement and loud talking, during which Eugene remained calmly standing before them, as if an unconcerned spectator, cards were exchanged, and the parties separated.

The ensuing morning witnessed a scene by no means rare in the metropolis of the southwest. In a sheltered field, in the suburbs of the lower Faubourg, or what is termed the "Gentilly road," two hostile parties were discovered preparing to engage in mortal combat. They were the Englishman and Eugene Berthoud. They have taken their stand at ten paces, with pistols in their hands.

"Are you ready?" asked Berthoud's second.

"All ready," was the reply of the second of the opposite party.

"One—two—three—fire!"

The two pistols went off with one report. The Englishman leaped half his height into the air and fell dead, pierced through the heart. Berthoud at the same time clapped his hand to his side and staggered backward. Recovering himself, he walked steadily towards his antagonist and sunk down by his side. Then, as the warm crimson spouted from his breast, he tore the black patch from his cheek, bathed his hand in it, and washed the place it had covered.

"Now has his blood wiped out the foul blot his hand placed there. The honor of Berthoud is without stain. I am satisfied!"

Eugene Berthoud, then, with a smile on his lips, breathed out his spirit, and the aggressor and avenger lay side by side in death.

AGNES.

BY WILLIAM VINCENT.

I had gone through fire to save her. To do that, I needed no other incentive than a woman's cry for help. But when I had borne her safely from the burning wreck, and had seen the full glory of her beauty, all scarred and blistered as I was, I would have braved the perils of a pathway sevenfold more fiery, to keep and call my own a treasure so precious.

It was one of those fearful railroad collisions, in which a tremendous shock and crash, followed by bursting flames and shrieks of agony and terror, are all the mind has time to note; nor is much more ever known about them beyond the names of the killed and wounded, and the fact that nobody was to blame.

My charge had fainted in my arms when an elderly gentleman, one of the fortunate few who had escaped unhurt, rushed excitedly to the spot, and relieved me of my charge.

"Agnes! dearest Agnes!" he wildly exclaimed, kissing her inanimate features in an ecstacy of grief, which changed to one of joy as she revived and assured him of her perfect safety.

The elderly gentleman was the rich Mr. Claremont. I knew him by sight, but not otherwise. He had lately, rumor said, married a young and beautiful wife, whose father he was old enough to be. It was doubtless his charming wife whose life I had just saved. My romantic dreams—for I had had time to dream such, short as was the interval—were dissipated into thin air. I certainly bore the old gentleman no ill-will, but had his name appeared in the list of killed or mortally wounded the next morning, I think I could have summoned fortitude enough to stand it.

"Accept my most heartfelt thanks, sir," said Mr. Claremont, warmly pressing my hand. "You have placed me under an obligation I can never repay. But this is not the time or the place for words. Hereafter, under my own roof, where I expect to see you a frequent guest, I hope to make more fitting acknowledgment of the debt I owe to the preserver of my—"

But there was enough for those to do who were not disabled, in affording succor to those who were; and Mr. Claremont, leaving his speech unfinished, hastened to offer his services where they were most needed. I felt it my duty to do likewise, and soon we were both busy ministering as best we could, to the wants of those who had been less fortunate than ourselves.

Before we parted, Mr. Claremont took my name and address, and exacted from me a promise to pay him a visit shortly. I could not help wondering if he would have been quite as cordial had he known the exact state of my mind at that moment. If he had known it, and nevertheless pressed his invitation with the same urgency, he would certainly have deserved the commendation due to "one not easily jealous."

It was many weeks before I could decide to trust myself in the presence of her who had so completely led me captive. It was very wicked, I know, to entertain the feelings I did. Had I known she was another's wife at the time I bore her, sheltered in my arms, through flame and smoke, a timely remembrance of what is said in the catechism against "coveting" might have put me on my guard; but I didn't know it until some minutes afterwards, and it was then too late.

Mr. Claremont was absent when I called, but Agnes, for so I ventured to call her to myself, was there to receive me. She did it graciously, and with a rosy flush on her face, which made me feel how sorely I had overtasked my strength in venturing once more within the sphere of her dazzling and dangerous beauty.

I had resolved once again to feast my eyes on her surpassing loveliness, and then, flying to some distant land, to spend the rest of my days in secret adoration of the idol I was forbidden openly to worship. No one, least of all she, should ever know the pangs I suffered. But alas, for good intentions!

"I have not before had an opportunity to thank you for saving my life," said she, after we were seated, accompanying the words with a look which I would have thought cheaply purchased with my own life ten times over.

"The act was its own recompense," I stammered, with a vague apprehension I might as well have followed copy and said, "Virtue is its own reward."

We were both silent for some moments.

"Being on the eve of leaving the country," I mustered courage to say, "I have taken the liberty—that is, I have done myself the honor—"

"Shall you be long absent?" she inquired, coming to my relief.

"I expect never to return!" I answered, dolefully.

She looked shocked, I thought, and turned pale.

"I am sorry," at length she said, with a perceptible quiver in her voice: "we had counted on seeing so much of you, and the disappointment is so unexpected."

The tender glance with which she spoke these words, the half formed tear glistened in her eye, and the tremulous music of her tones, were too much for my bewildered senses. I became desperate. I would tell her all, and fly from her, from myself, from everything, but the despair of my hopeless passion!

"Agnes!" I exclaimed, throwing myself at her feet, and clasping her hand, "I love you dearly, madly! The fervor of my passion is consuming my very life. I know it is hopeless, but—"

What could be the meaning of the blushes that mounted to the very roots of her hair, and of the gentle pressure with which her trembling hand returned that of my own? Was it that, instead of being spurned, my unworthy avowal had met with a kindred one in her own breast? Would she fly with me? for in my frenzy, I was now prepared even for that.

I was recalled from my rhapsody by Agnes starting up in confusion; and, looking about, I saw Mr. Claremont, whose entrance we had both been too much occupied to observe, standing supervising the scene with a smile that proved him at once the most hospitable of hosts and complaisant of husbands.

"I fear my intrusion is a little inopportune," he remarked, with a quizzical look.

"Mr. Vincent has called to bid us good-bye, father," said Agnes, "before leaving the country."

"Father!" I exclaimed, in perfect bewilderment; "you—you don't mean to tell me he is your father!"

"Why, what else should I be?" was the question with which Mr. Claremont took it upon himself to answer my own. "But I'm afraid," he continued, "you hadn't done saying good-bye; so I'll leave you to finish it;" whereupon he withdrew.

Well, I didn't finish saying it. The fact is, I suddenly discovered there was no necessity at all for going away. What I did say to Agnes, and what she said in return, is nobody's business but ours. Suffice it to say, it was perfectly satisfactory on both sides.

I mustn't forget to say that Mrs. Claremont, to whom I was introduced in due form, was a very comely and agreeable lady, quite eligible as a stepmother, but, in point of personal attractions, of course not to be compared with Agnes.

HER LAST OFFER.

Among the tide of people pouring into the circus yesterday was a benevolent looking woman of forty, carrying an umbrella on her shoulder and a shinplaster in her fingers. She handed out the quarter and was pushing along when the ticket agent called out:

"See here, madam, I must have fifty cents."

"It's all right—I'm a good Democrat," she replied, trying to get in.

"Another quarter, madam," he said as he detained her.

"I say I'm a good Republican, and I say two shillings is enough," she exclaimed, beginning to look mad.

"More money, or you must stand aside," said the doorkeeper in a firm voice.

"Now I won't do it!" she bluntly replied. "I've walked four miles to see the show and I'm going to see it. Seems to me you're mighty high-toned about it, and seems to me that I am just as good as you are, if I don't own no mammoth aggravation of animals."

"Two shillings more, madam," was his song.

"I'll say thirty," she remarked, feeling in her pocket.

"Can't do it, madam."

"Then I'll say thirty one."

"Can't do it."

"Thirty-two."

"Don't block the way, madam."

"See, here, mister showman with a cage of hyenas, that's my last offer. If you don't why say the word."

"Stand one side, madam, if you please," was the reply, and she stood. She went over to a stand and bought a glass of red lemonade, and then took a scout along the canvas. Just as the show began some boy caught sight of a pair of shoes kicking the air under the edge of the tent, and some people inside were surprised to see a woman's head come up between the benches. A body followed the head, an umbrella followed the body, and as she got a seat and a brace for her back, she smiled benignly and remarked:

"Thirty-two cents saved to buy pickles for winter, and now let the performance go on!"

THE RISING PUGILIST.

He was a small man but a perfect reservoir of liquor and language. From nine o'clock until eleven o'clock last night he carried an eye full of blood about Danbury. He brought up finally in front of McCoffin's saloon, and a small rabble soon gathered about him, awed by his prowess. He was perfectly willing to meet anybody and "whale lightning out of him," but what he particularly craved was the presence of that man in all Danbury who cherished an impression that he could lay him out.

"Where's the man who thinks he can lay me out?" he screamed. Then he would yell, "Whoop!" as a sort of postscript, and spring up into the air.

The crowd stared at him in dismay. He was, without doubt, what he claimed to be, "a regular snorter." He had just delivered the challenge and P. S., and was jumping backwards and squaring off at ten thousand men at once, when Steve Irving appeared, on his way home with a basket of groceries. Steve is a broad-chested man, and of a height that would make him invaluable in case of a sudden and disastrous flood.

"Are you looking for me?" inquired Steve, in a tone of hoarse solicitude, as he loomed up above the pugilist.

The little man ceased his manœuvres, looked up to the bronze face, and promptly explained—

"You keep away from me. I don't know you, and I can't strike a stranger."

Steve smiled grimly, extended the basket of groceries to the warrior, bade him take hold of it, which he did with alacrity, and directed him to start on ahead.

"What's this for?" asked the fighter, having all he could do to keep up under the burden.

"I want you to carry it home for me," was the unexpected reply of the giant.

"Carry—c—" gasped the gladiator in a bewildered voice—"carry——"

"Git," said Steeve, opening his large hands in a painfully suggestive way.

The rising pugilist hastened ahead with the load, looking as if he very much doubted the stability of the universe.—Danbury News.

HIGH HASH TALK.

A dialogue occurred at a Lafayette avenue boarding-house, Saturday afternoon, between an effeminate, shabbily-dressed young man, and the landlady, which for ponderous rhetoric exceeds anything of a similar nature that has seen the light for some time. The landlady appeared at the front door, in answer to the bell, and was accosted by the young man as follows:

"If you are the manager of this domicile I wish to know if you could be persuaded to provide me with apartments and provender during my sojourn in this city, which may be of two or three days' duration, and may possibly extend through a greater period."

The mistress of the house, catching the style and spirit of the inquirer, responded:

"Unfortunately a great demand exists at present, which so crowds the capacity of my apartments and the contents of my larder that I cannot conscientiously provide the accommodations you desire."

Evidently the young man had expected to completely crush the landlady with his command of the English language, but his disappointment was plainly shown in the look of blank amazement which he bestowed upon her after hearing her reply.—He was not completely annihilated, however, for he continued:

"Provided you could, madam, pray what amount of money would you impose upon me for accommodating me?"

"Eight dollars a week in advance" was too suggestive, and as the young man backed down the steps he simply said "good day."—Detroit Free Press.

REFORM.

The clouds of false charges and foul slanders evoked by Chandler and his fellow conspirators fail to hide from public view the grand Democratic purpose of Reform.

It is, briefly, as follows:

Reform in Public Expenditures, cutting off all needless expenses and every wasteful extravagance.

Reform in the Civil Service, abolishing all sinecures, discharging all drones and keeping under pay none but faithful and efficient officers and only in numbers sufficient to do the public work.

Reform in the Army and Navy, reducing their enormous annual cost and making them conform to the requirements of peace.

Reform in the Diplomatic Service, sending abroad as national representatives only those qualified, both morally and intellectually, to confer honor upon the American name.

Reform in the Administration of Justice, bringing to condign punishment every official robber, whether a Cabinet Minister or a Post Office Clerk.

Reform in the Currency, transforming it, through judicious preparation, into coin redemption at the earliest practicable period.

Reform in the Contract System, exterminating thieving jobbery and instituting rigid honesty and practical utility.

Reform in Taxation, raising only enough revenue to meet plighted national faith, the current demands of Government economically and wisely managed, and for the gradual extinguishment of the public debt.

These are the urgent Reforms the Democratic party will surely establish, for the welfare of each individual citizen and for the credit of the whole nation, through the election of

TILDEN AND HENDRICKS.

WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?

It is bright and clear. The Star of Democracy is in the ascendant, and guides to a glorious triumph in November. The murmurs of discontent from a badly governed and outrageously robbed people are swelling in tone, and the distant thunder of indignation is rumbling its approach! Beware! Beware! the people have cried heretofore, and warned their public servants to hold back or they would be punished. But the pampered men of place turned a deaf ear to the warnings, and went on scheming to make all they could, regardless of consequences. The day of reckoning is at hand! The terrible seal of their fate has been impressed! The handwriting is on the wall, reveals their doom and points to the verdict against Radicalism. "Thou art weighed in the balance and found wanting!"—Wanting in honesty, wanting in regard for the faithfulness of trusts, wanting in everything save a purpose and ability to turn every trust to partisan plans and personal plunder!

THE INCOME TAX.

There never was a law enacted in this country more obnoxious to public sentiment than that for raising revenue through taxation on personal incomes. It caused a greater amount of individual opposition than any revenue measure ever put into execution.

The income tax was not only repugnant to the American idea of freedom and propriety because of its interference with the sanctity of private affairs, but because of the many complicated conditions it imposed upon the citizen, making an intelligent answer to the absurd questions asked almost an impossibility.

As a natural consequence, hundreds of people, the recipients of mixed and varying incomes, allowed the Federal Assessor to make his own estimate and paid the tax on the sum he returned, with the penalty prescribed by law.

That was the course pursued by very many citizens of the highest respectability, and neither they, nor the revenue officials, for a moment entertained the thought that it was doing violence to law.

Now, however, a Federal Judge in Rhode Island is said to have made the singular discovery, that the Government can collect any excess of tax on proven incomes over and above the sums previously assessed, and notwithstanding the penalty incurred and legally discharged.

That may be the opinion of a very grave Judge, but to an ordinary mind it bears slight resemblance to common sense.

You fine a man for an alleged offense, and after he has fully paid every demand according to specific law, you sue him for more penalty.

That appears to be the tenor of the decision, and it is certainly a muddy specimen of equity.

Should the Rhode Island profundity be sustained by the Supreme Court of the United States, which is quite doubtful, it will become the duty of Government to commence legal proceedings for the recovery of additional income tax from a vast number of individuals and estates.

What a glorious work you will have before you, Mr. Attorney General!

Go ahead promptly and impartially. Don't single out a prominent political opponent here and there for loyal vengeance, but haul up every scamp in the whole land, rich Republicans as well as rich Democrats, who obeyed written law by paying its imposed penalty, and, if you can, make them pay more.

Be quick! Life is short!

ECONOMY AND REFORM.

A Tilden and Hendricks banner at Bergen Point is surmounted with the motto "Economy and Reform."

These two words truthfully declare the real issues of the Presidential campaign as contended for by the Democratic party.

Tilden and Hendricks were nominated to carry into practical operation, through every branch of the public service, the full meaning of those two words, and if elected, they will faithfully accomplish the task, to the people's satisfaction and for their lasting welfare.

Economy and Reform are the things now more urgently needed in national affairs than aught else. That will be admitted by all observing citizens who are engaged by party and unfed with public pap.

Thousands of independent Republicans openly acknowledge the fact, and thousands of others think so, although they may not convert thought into language.

The enormous and annually increasing cost of the Federal Government, and the myriad of profligate and utterly reckless expenditures of public money, cry aloud for Economy, while the proven existence of official corruption in high places, and the unnecessary horde of office-holders, drawing pay without honest equivalent, as clearly demand immediate and sweeping Reform.

TILDEN AND HENDRICKS!
ECONOMY AND REFORM!

That is the ticket which every voter, who has his own and the country's good at heart, should deposit on the coming November day.

A COLORED WITNESS.

The wavers of the bloody shirt, in their unprincipled zeal for Grant Hayesism, point with horror to a united Democratic South, and endeavor, because thereof, to re-kindle the embers of sectional strife.

No sensible man can be duped by such a trick.

It has been played too often.

The war ended a dozen years ago, never to be renewed.

Hear what a colored citizen of Mississippi recently said in a public speech. It was this—

"We are weary of being the victims of the lies of the carpet-baggers, the instruments of demagogues and office seekers. The Democrats of Mississippi have fulfilled every promise made to colored citizens last year. They have reduced taxation half, also the expenses of government, and, instead of depriving us of educational privileges, they give our children five months of schooling, while they only had four under the Republicans." "We are not the enemies of the whites; we have need of their friendship, and their influence and counsels."

That is the testimony of one who knows all about the situation—ex Senator Revels, a colored man, and a Christian Minister.

He speaks the truth from personal knowledge, and he tells us why the South is Democratic:

"The Democrats have fulfilled every promise made to colored citizens."

"The Democrats have reduced taxation half, and also the expenses of government."

"The Democrats have given colored children five months schooling, while they only had four under the Republicans."

That is what the Democrats have done in Mississippi, and what they are ready to do and capable of doing in every State of the American Union.

One fact like the foregoing is worth more than a thousand bloody shirt phantoms. One plain truth is better than ten thousand campaign lies.

The October Elections!

Indiana Democratic,

Also West Virginia.

Ohio Republican by small and greatly reduced Majority.

Now for the final Struggle.

The Election sure for Tilden and Hendricks!

GLORY ENOUGH FOR ONE DAY!

Our Rooster is Reserved for November!

Tuesday's battle is over and the results of the October elections tend to point to a Democratic victory in November. For weeks past the Administration has left no stone unturned to carry Indiana and Ohio, using every means in their power to do so. Colonization was resorted to by importing colored voters from adjoining States, and the best speakers of the party were sent into the State, who by incendiary speeches desperately strove to carry the same for Harrison, the Republican candidate for Governor, but their efforts were without avail. Blue-Jean Williams, the honest old farmer candidate of Democracy and Reform has swept the State by a handsome majority, and denounced in no unmistakable tones the acts of the corrupt party now in power. Up to the present writing the returns indicate 5,000 majority for Williams.

In Ohio the Democracy have made a gallant fight and so reduced the Republican majority as to require a microscope to find out how much it is. The great and unexpected gains in the large cities show a reduction of at least 50 per cent. over the majority received last year by Hayes over Allen for Governor. The German vote was cast largely for the Democratic candidate for Secretary of State, Bell, while the Prohibitionists voted for Barnes, the Radical candidate. In the rural districts the Democratic gain is some four thousand over the Republican vote of 1872 when Grant carried the State by over 40,000 majority and over the average October returns of Presidential years of more than twelve thousand.

West Virginia, too, rolls up a heavy Democratic majority of from 5,000 to 10,000. Since its organization as a State, save in a triangular fight when the present Gubernatorial incumbent was elected, it has invariably heretofore gone Republican.

The fight has been a gallant one, and gives heart and encouragement to the friends of Reform in the coming final contest in November. Let the friends of Tilden, Hendricks and Reform buckle on their armor anew and resume the fight in earnest and victory will perch on their banners in November. The October elections are straws showing which way the wind blows, but in the language of the N. Y. World, "We repeat that it becomes us all to accept this splendid triumph simply as a summons to new and more vigorous exertions in the great cause. The unexpected defeat which they have suffered will simply exasperate our antagonists; and they must be met henceforward at every point with renewed determination and an invincible purpose on the part of the Democrats of the East not only to rival but to surpass in November the discipline, the spirit and the united energy which have been so successfully displayed by our brethren and our allies in the West."

LATEST NEWS.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Oct. 12, 1.45, P. M.—563 townships and wards give 258 Democratic majority. The same places in 1872 gave 1,456 Republican majority.

As a matter of record, it may be interesting to state that in the twenty-six last elections in Ohio, from 1855 on, only three have gone Democratic.—Governor Allen was elected, not by a majority vote, but by a plurality of 817, and last year was defeated by Governor Hayes by a majority of 5,544; but last year the vote of the State was forty thousand more than ever before, and exceeded the vote of the tidal wave year (1874) by 130,000!

Indiana was carried by Republicans for the first time in 1860, and in the State election preceding that for President a Republican Governor was chosen. Excepting in 1862, the State remained Republican for ten years. In 1870 the Democrats carried the State by twenty-five hundred. Two years later Gov. Hendricks was chosen by thirteen hundred majority, and was the only successful candidate on his ticket. One month later the Republicans carried the Presidential election in the State by 21,000 majority.

This was in 1872, and comparing the October election of 1876 with that of 1872, which is the proper thing to do, the result we pronounce grand and satisfactory. Still more is this true of Ohio, and still more of Maine and Vermont, to say nothing of West Virginia, Arkansas, Alabama, and the magnificent majority in Georgia. All's well, we repeat, if Democrats and Conservatives but do their duty.

ALL FOR TILDEN.

There is one very significant fact in the present political campaign and it speaks powerfully against the corrupt cabal of Grant, now striving to prolong existence under the name of Hayes, and that fact is the many prominent men heretofore actively identified with the Republican party, but who have severed connection therewith and openly proclaimed themselves supporters of Tilden and Hendricks.

We have before made public the names of several and now add the following:

Cassius M. Clay, of Kentucky, President Lincoln's Minister to Russia.

General John M. Palmer, ex Governor of Illinois.

David A. Wells, of Connecticut, the eminent political economist.

Parke Godwin, of New York, Republican editor.

Colonel F. A. Conkling, of New York, brother of Senator Conkling.

Frank W. Bird, of Massachusetts, one of the founders of the Republican party.

E. S. Cleveland, late Republican Postmaster of Hartford, Conn.

Ex-Senator Cowan, of Pennsylvania.

Ex-Congressman Farnsworth, of Illinois.

Ex-Congressman Ashley, of Ohio.

Charles A. Dana, of the New York Sun.

Alex. K. McClure, of the Philadelphia Times.

General Jacob Brinkerhoff, of Ohio, and a host of others.

The example thus set by so many distinguished citizens in all parts of the country is one of the strongest possible arguments in favor of the Democratic nominees. It dispels as noxious vapor the reckless assertions of Blaine, the vulgarity and atheism of Bob Ingersoll, and the malicious slanders of a Times Supplement—

For President,
SAMUEL J. TILDEN.
For Vice President,
THOMAS A. HENDRICKS.

The champions of HONESTY, ECONOMY, REFORM and NATIONAL PROSPERITY.

That's the ticket!

SAMUEL J. TILDEN.

Mr. Watson, Assistant Secretary of War under President Lincoln, in a speech delivered 23rd ult., at Ashtabula, O., effectually dispelled the silly charges of disloyalty circulated by Credit Mobilier Blaine and fellow conspirators against Mr. Tilden.

Mr. Watson spoke from personal knowledge, and paid Mr. Tilden a splendid tribute for the valuable services magnanimously rendered by him in various ways to the Union cause during the war. Both President Lincoln and Secretary Stanton called Mr. Tilden to Washington for consultation in the dark and trying days of the conflict and relied greatly upon his loyal devotion.—After enumerating the many patriotic deeds of Mr. Tilden when the Republic was struggling for national unity, Mr. Watson concluded as follows:

"Such patriotic liberality, on the part of Mr. Tilden and his associates of the Trenton Iron Company, you may safely believe, was emulated by none of the men who now are so bold in his detraction. It would, I think, be difficult to find one of those who in the essential attributes of good citizenship is worthy to unloose the latchet of his shoe. If it were necessary I could go on multiplying instances and evidence in support of my averment to you, that on my personal knowledge the charge of disloyalty against Mr. Tilden is untrue; and I have no doubt that all the other charges made against him are equally untrue, for they are inconsistent with the high character which he has borne through a long and very active business life, and with the cordial friendship and esteem of so many good men, who would scorn instead of respecting him if he were the calculating villain which his political enemies paint.

So abhorrent to the sense of justice and fair play is the deliberate defamation of an upright and respectable man, that it is only possible to a person of average sense and morals, who is laboring under the law-lowering influence of fear and dread of some impending calamity, and hopes by such means to avert the threatened catastrophe. The unexpected nomination of Mr. Tilden who had shown himself, by his admirable reform administration of the Government of New York, to be the foremost, bravest and most skillful and uncompromising foe in all the land to public plunderers was an occasion which presented such an overpowering motive to an influential body of men, the following of the Credit Mobilier, Pacific Mail, Crooked Whiskey, Indian-supply, Post-trader, Land-grant, Naval-contract, and a host of other rings, who see in Mr. Tilden's election the sure portent of swift destruction, personal punishment and degradation.

If it could have been foreseen that the St. Louis Convention would have nominated Mr. Tilden, it cannot be doubted that a very different man from Mr. Hayes, however good his intentions, would have been the nominee at Cincinnati. A man of higher power and greater civic erudition and achievement, would, in that case, have been thought indispensable.

But the Democratic party of to-day is not controlled by jobbers and their following. It consists largely of that class of voters drawn from all parties who, wanting neither place nor contract nor job of any kind, and caring nothing for party name or tradition, are in dead earnest to secure a wise, frugal and honest administration of the Government. Nominated under such favorable auspices, nothing could prevent his triumphant election, if his fair fame could not in some way be obscured, or his towering superiority over his competitor be in some way dwarfed; for no process of inflation could swell Mr. Hayes to the large proportions of Mr. Tilden.

Nothing true could be said to the disparagement of Mr. Tilden. His action, generally, in administering the Government of New York, and specially in purifying the judiciary by causing the impeachment, deposition and degradation of corrupt judges, and in crushing the Tweed and canal rings, had attracted the public attention so strongly that his transcendent ability and fidelity were known in such detail as forbade all hope of misrepresenting his public character without instant detection by every reader of a newspaper.

But Mr. Tilden's private life has always been simple and unobtrusive, hence his very modesty and retiracy have exposed him to attack by personal detraction, the only weapon with which he could be reached by even the most reckless and rancorous hostility; hence, this foul and infamous weapon was not taken up by choice, but from necessity. No other was left to his opponents, and these unclean champions of the Republican candidate must hurl their stink-pots or abandon the contest in despair."

That is the testimony of a gentleman who was Assistant Secretary of War under President Lincoln, and who enjoyed his confidence and esteem.

It speaks volumes, and portrays in truthful colors the wickedness of personal detraction for base political ends.

VOTE FOR TILDEN!

Among the ladies who have taken a sufficient interest in politics this year to express a preference for Hayes, the Cour.-Journal notes Misses Mollie Maguire, Emma Mine and the widow Butler, all of whom exert no small influence in the circles in which they move.

There were twenty-two candidates for the West Point Cadetship at the disposal of Col. Hamilton in the Fourth District. After a competitive examination, conducted by Charles J. Roe, E. M. Allen and Dr. Jonathan Havens, the position was awarded to Walter R. Stoll, son of Moses Stoll, of Mt. Salem, Sussex county.

Hon. A. W. Cutler has been re-nominated for Congress by the Democracy of the Fifth District, comprising the counties of Bergen, Passaic and Morris. He defeated W. Walter Phelps by 7 votes—this time he will beat Alfred Mills "out of sight."

Murder Will Out.

A few years ago "August Flower" was discovered to be a certain cure for Dyspepsia and Liver complaint, a few thin Dyspeptics made known to their friends how easily and quickly they had been cured by it. The great merits of GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER became heralded through the country by one sufferer to another, until without advertising, its sale has become immense. Druggists in EVERY TOWN in the United States are selling it.—No person suffering with Sour Stomach, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, indigestion, low spirits, etc., can take three doses without relief. Go to your Druggist, Wm. H. Voorhees, and get a bottle for 75 cents and try it. Sample bottles 10 cents.

LOOK!
The wildest excitement exists in many localities on account of the immense number of tramps who are perambulating over the country,
Out
of work, and many of them would not work if it was tendered them. The most of them are a ragged, thieving, dirty and worthless crew. The exception can be granted to an occasional few.
For
a whole flock of black sheep is truly a rarity. The general depression of business, and lack of employment everywhere has forced many to roam in search of work, and others travel, beg, and steal, because they don't want to work. In this connection we wish to call
Your attention to the fact that we propose to do our level best to keep up the high standard for respectability of this section of country as far as GENTEEL APPEARANCE IN DRESS can do it, and while the wearing of good clothes is no particular safeguard for your Lives and Property
there is no denying the fact that a neat appearing, well dressed man is not likely to get up a scare, equal to a rough and ragged individual. This brings us to
The
great question at issue which is to inform you that our new stock of Clothing is now in, and we are prepared to fit neatly every Man or Boy, who will come with the cash, in a suit to please in every respect. Our prices are so very low that the
Tramps
Themselves can readily see that it will be cheaper for them to buy than undertake to beg or steal a new suit. We propose to keep the lead in our line of business. If you
Are thinking of going to the Centennial, and want a suit that will pass you through in good style, a substantial, stylish and good fitting suit, you don't want to delay coming
and taking a look through our store, because we mean just what we say, we will sell you Clothing for yourselves or boys, that will give you satisfaction in style, fit, good wear, and what is of vital importance these hard times VERY LOW IN PRICE.

"NEARER NATURE'S HEART," Rev. E. P. Roe's latest work, has been placed in the Library of the Y. M. C. A.

ATTENTION is directed to the auction sale of superior furniture by T. J. Gillies next Tuesday, advertisement of which will appear in another column.

WE are given to understand that the prospects are good toward the early commencement of the erection of a fine Public Hall in our city by a company of capitalists.

EX-MAYOR John H. Evans, has sent to the Treasurer of the Y. M. C. A. $185.75, in accordance with his promise that he would donate the association as much as the net proceeds from the Young Appolo Club Concert amounted to.

OUR fellow-townsman, L. M. French, carriage manufacturer on Somerset street, was awarded the first premium at the Somerset County Fair, last week, for side-bar wagon. He afterward sold the vehicle to James Van Pelt, proprietor of the County House, Somerville.

IN the resignation of John Taylor Johnston, as President of the Central Railroad, the road has lost an efficient and capable officer. Plainfield has reason to remember the services of Mr. Johnston, as many of the improvements in this section for the past five years, are due to his liberality and generosity.

At a regular meeting of the Democratic Workingmen's Club, held in their rooms, North avenue, Oct. 5th, Richard L. Tobin was elected Secretary of the Club. This association has a large number of names on its member's roll, and have a considerable sum subscribed by citizens towards the purchase of uniforms. They earnestly ask further co-operation in this direction.

OUR worthy townsman and landlord of the City Hotel, Chris Van Arsdale, enthusiastic over the capture of Ohio by the Republicans, flung to the breeze a handsome American flag from the top of the hotel building this morning, but unfortunately ran the flag up with the union down. The error was seen and prompt information given by an honest Democrat in time to avert any serious consequences in the election returns.

THE ball of Division No. 4, A. O. H., at Laing's Hall Oct. 11, was something long to be remembered by all participants. A large number were in attendance and dancing was continued without intermission until early morn, assisted by inspiring strains from Manahan's celebrated band of New York city. Father Morris was present and occupied a seat on the stage, where he viewed with pleasure the enjoyment of the assembled crowd. The floor committee, Messrs. P. Kiely, E. F. Flynn and E. Riordan, did all in their power to make the occasion one of enjoyment. Many prominent citizens were present as spectators and participants. Everything passed off successfully and to the credit of all concerned in the management.

Y. M. C. A. Lecture Course.

The Lecture Course of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., for the coming winter, promises to be more than usually attractive. A glance at the array of talent engaged, which will be found advertised in another column, will bear us out in the assertion. Next week we shall give an extended synopsis of the various lectures, in the meantime we advise our readers who desire to secure good seats to procure them next Monday morning. The lectures and entertainments heretofore given under the auspices of this Association have given general satisfaction and pleasure, and we think the proposed course will excel all predecessors.

Notice.

Grace Church, corner of Sycamore and 6th Sts., will (D. V.) be opened on Sunday morning next.

Poisoned by Eating Toadstools.

Miss Emma Baker, a step-daughter of Ira Skinner, of Orange, and Miss Martha Poole, a daughter of James Poole, of the Newark Savings Institution, went to Connecticut Farms on Monday, last week, to visit a daughter of Ambrose Crane. During the afternoon a boy 10 years old, employed on the farm, collected a quantity of what he supposed to be edible mushrooms, but which proved to be poisonous, and he, with the young ladies, ate some of them. Miss Poole did not like the taste, but the boy maintained that they were all right if she would only put a little vinegar on them. She refused to eat them, however, having taken but a portion of the first one. At an early hour on Tuesday morning all who had partaken of them became sick, and, their symptoms growing rapidly worse, doctors were summoned and remedies administered, but without effect. On Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock, Miss Baker died. Miss Crane and the boy has since died. Miss Poole was removed to her residence, in Newark, on Thursday, and it is thought she will recover, as the quantity of poison taken by her was small.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

Messrs. Wilson & Simpson, ice merchants, lost a valuable horse, one of a span prized at $500, on Saturday last. A workman driving them, was turning from a newly made road into the main road, opposite the ice house, in Washington Valley, and ran against a fence post, the jolt from the wagon throwing him out and into the road. Loosing his hold upon the reins, the affrighted animals ran away, and in crossing the bridge opposite Mr. Wm. Spencer's residence the wagon struck one of the guard rails of the same, which caused the animals to break loose from the wagon. A short distance on one of the horses struck his fore leg against an iron post of a fence in front of Mr. M. French's residence, suffering a compound fracture of the same, necessitating his being killed, which was promptly done. The driver suffered severe injuries by his being thrown from the wagon.

About three o'clock Wednesday afternoon last, an alarm of fire was raised, caused by the igniting of the roof of Peter Wooden's residence on Somerset street, it is supposed, from sparks out of a tinner's furnace in use on an adjoining building. The fire was first discovered by Mr. H. N. Spencer, who gave the alarm, and a few pails of water soon extinguished the flames, although the alarm brought to the scene the entire department.

Plainfield Athletic Club!

Their Annual Games.

Saturday last was a gala day among our young athletes, and the grounds of the Plainfield Driving Park Association was crowded by citizens and visitors to witness the annual Fall Games of the Plainfield Athletic Club, which is composed of our most respectable young men. The games were advertised to take place on Thursday, Oct. 5th, but in consequence of the inclement weather on that day, the same were postponed to Saturday, 7th inst., which day dawned bright and clear with rather a strong wind, however, for the exercises. The track was in fine condition, and the attendance large, over six hundred persons, among whom were many ladies, being present.—Promptly on time the games commenced and were successfully terminated as follows: The ten mile walk was won by Charles Connor, of the Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium, New York, in 1hr. 26m. 59sec. In the 100-yard dash, in three trial heats, the first was won by John Donald, of the Union County Caledonian Club, in 12¼ seconds; second by E. Hart, Jr., of the Plainfield Athletic Club, in 11¾ seconds; and third by C. J. Williams of the Chicago Foot Ball Club, in 11¼ seconds. The running broad jump was won by Isaiah Frazier, of the Yonkers Lyceum, who cleared 16 feet, 5½ inches; the 440 yard run by Wm. Conklin, of the S. S. B. B. Club, Plainfield, in 55¾ seconds; the throwing of the base ball by D. M. Demarest, of Plainfield, who threw 330 feet; the one mile run by C. H. Harriot, of the New York Athletic Club, in 5m. 43½ seconds; the 3 mile walk by W. A. Bass, Jr., of P. A. C.; the 100-yard dash by G. H. Parker of the N. Y. Athletic Club, in 10¾ seconds; vaulting with pole by Bennet Greig, of the Rusholme Gymnasium Club, England, who cleared 7ft 10 inches; the 440-yard run by C. J. Williams, in 1 minute; the hurdle race by Bennet Greig, in 19¾ seconds; the half mile run by C. J. Williams, in 2m 28½ sec.; the 100-yard dash, final heat, by C. J. Williams, in 11½ sec.; and the sack race of 100 yards by Chas. Weir, of Elizabeth, in 17½ seconds.—In the ten mile walk, but four of the contestants entered appeared when time was called, Holske, of the Harlem Athletic, Connor, of the Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium, N. Y., Chas. J. Noel, and E. M. Young of Plainfield, the latter the winner of the ten mile walk last year. At the end of the sixth mile Holske left the track, complaining of a sprained ankle or sore foot. He, as well as Connor, are expert walkers and Holske has beaten Connor in a previous trial. The latter showed great power of endurance and made some spurts that were loudly applauded by the spectators. Young came in second in 1 h. 50 m. 30 sec.; with Noel a mile and a half behind the winner, in 1h. 52m. and 36 sec.

The final heat in the 100 yards handicap dash created considerable excitement. It was the opinion among the spectators that Hart, of the Plainfield Club, won the heat, but the judges decided the same a dead heat. In a renewal of the heat, Williams was declared the winner.

Mr. C. H. Pierce, of New York, was the judge; Mr. M. D. Stearns, referee, Mr. Jno. Welscher, starter and Mr. Robert Simpson, Clerk of the Course. The prizes, which were very fine silver and gold medals, worth from $10 to $25 each, were presented the winners at a supper given by the Plainfield Club at the Park House in the evening. Speeches, toasts, music and dancing was afterwards the order of the evening. The Plainfield Athletic Club are to be congratulated upon the perfect success attending the tournament, which evidenced conclusively that among its members are enrolled many who can lay claim to being considered as worthy contestants among members of athletic clubs of greater renown and practice. Those members of the club who were fortunate in securing prizes will undoubtedly prize them as well-earned souvenirs in years to come.—Vive la our home club.

The Young Apollo Club.

The concert on Thursday evening last by this Club, given in the Congregational Church, was certainly one of the most enjoyable entertainments it has been our privilege to attend. The large audience present was exceedingly enthusiastic and demanded numerous encores. The singing of Masters Raisbold, Foster and Balken were truly marvelous and for richness of quality hard to surpass. The choruses were rendered with precision and power, and, had a little more attention been given to the expression, might have been considered almost perfect. Mr. Forman sang the "Infelice" very satisfactorily, his rich, clear, ringing voice falling pleasantly on our ears. Master Christy, with his characteristic Irish songs, was a favorite with the audience and responded promptly to their repeated demands for more. He must belong to the "rale ould stock." Mr. Williams has reason to be proud of his "boys" and we congratulate him on the success of his training. We are pleased to learn also that financially the concert was a success. The mention of the name of Mr. John H. Evans as the gentleman making the generous offer to give the Y. M. C. A. an amount equal to the profits of the concert, was enthusiastically received. We learn the amount realized was $185.

Personalia.

Mr. C. B. Rogers returns to his home in Jacksonville, Fla., the first of next week.

We congratulate our Seventh-day friend, N. P. Rogers, upon having again assumed the matrimonial yoke at his stage of life.

Mr. John Cuthbert and family have taken up their residence in Plainfield for the winter, having spent the summer at Woodsburgh, Long Island.

Thanks to friend Schermerhorn, the gentlemanly and efficient telegraph operator at our station, for favors.

Mr. Isaac Connett, who has been in the employ of I. D. Ten Eyck, butcher, on Cherry St., for the past 11 years, has opened a meat market at Metuchen, to which place he removed with his family on Tuesday last. We wish "Ike" success in his new enterprise.

We notice with pleasure the re-nomination of Hon. James Bergen, of Somerset, for Assembly in the 1st District. This nomination is a good one. Mr. Bergen has proven himself an efficient legislator in his capacity as such last Winter.

Our esteemed young friend C. A. Corlell, of Dunellen, assumed the cares of matrimonial life last evening. We wish him joy in his new venture.

And now our esteemed young friend, John Vetterlein, has entered the matrimonial lists. May the happy couple never have a shadow of trouble cross their path.

Our valued friend and fellow-citizen, John M. Gilligan, Esq., has recently met with a severe family affliction in the death of his estimable wife. After months of languishing illness, her mortal remains were committed to the silent tomb on Monday last. Death under any circumstance is a sad and solemn event, but especially so when it breaks asunder the fond relationship of wife and mother, yet, how happy the *reflection that the spirit freed from sorrow*ing earth breathes the endless joy of Heaven. We sincerely condole with Mr. Gilligan and his worthy children upon the loss they have sustained.

Postponement.

The Y. M. C. A. are obliged to postpone their Monthly Meeting, which was announced for Thursday evening next, on account of the political demonstration to occur at that time in the building adjoining their Hall. The meeting will be held on the 19th inst.

ANOTHER change in the time table of the Central Railroad took place on Wednesday last. See adv. column.

COL. MOORE has succeeded Col. Hickok as General Superintendent of Central Railroad.

Democratic Primary.

The Democrats of Plainfield Township assembled in the Club Rooms on North avenue, last Tuesday evening for the purpose of electing delegates to attend the County and Assembly Conventions soon to be held. The following named gentlemen were selected to attend the County Convention: Levi Hetfield, D. J. Marshall, J. B. Brown, W. W. Gamble, W. H. Voorhees, C. K. Thiers, W. H. McClure, John Illod, J. B. Becker. Assembly Convention—James Parker, D. J. Marshall, J. E. Martine, W. W. Gamble, W. H. McClure, C. K. Thiers, W. J. Tobin, E. C. Morse, J. B. Becker.—County Executive Committee—E. P. Morse, P. Casey.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

Some time since, soon after the news reached us of the terrible ravages in consequence of that fearful scourge, the yellow fever, in Savannah, Ga., Captain Bolton, from his mountain home, at the "Hawk's Nest," volunteered to go down to the afflicted city, offering his services as nurse, or in any capacity that it should be thought most fit, in order to assist in alleviating the suffering, and aid in restoring confidence among that stricken people. Although the performance of such favor was not actually thought necessary, his "Christian kindness and friendly offer" was duly appreciated, and he has received "the sincere thanks" of some of the leading medical men of the place, as well as the authorities of the city.

"Hotel" is the designation applied to "a genteel inn." An inn is a house of entertainment for travellers. The Scotch Plains Hotel, of which our respected citizen, A. Debaud is proprietor, and has been for the past twenty-five years, has always been conducted in the most legitimate manner for the comfort and convenience of its patrons, and their name is legion. The cuisine of this establishment is admirable, presided over as it is by that culinary artiste, Madame D., while all the refreshments supplied to the guests are of first class quality. A good hotel is a public convenience and this one is no exception. Besides this, Mr. Debaud is a man of strict integrity and private worth. His generous liberality is acknowledged by all, and his donations for public improvements, as well as private charity, are unsurpassed by any in the village. We are glad to know that the court has granted a renewal of his license.

The Scotch Plains Mutual Theft Detecting Society held their quarterly meeting on Monday evening last. Their annual meetings are held on the second Monday evening in July of each year, and their quarterly meetings on the second Monday evening of July, October, January and April. This society is organized under a special act of the Legislature passed March 24th, 1868. Its object is the mutual protection of the property of its members from theft. Article Third of their Act of Incorporation reads as follows:—"And be it enacted, that every member of said society shall be empowered to make arrest of any person or persons whom they may find stealing, or in whose possession stolen property may be found, and bring them before a magistrate, to be dealt with according to law." Since the organization of this society it has accomplished much good in recovering stolen property and in being a terror to evil doers. Its members are as follows:

L. H. K. Smalley, president; W. B. S. Taylor, vice president; W. H. Brower, treasurer; C. M. Putnam, secretary; Joseph Clark, M. D., W. C. Stanberry, J. A. Baker, Wallace Vail, L. Miller, Jr., Geo. Kyte, Theo. Ritter, G. R. Nichol, J. C. Lyon, Rev. Drake, B. Bristin, Wm. Cooper, Fred. J. Greer.

At the Westfield township Democratic primary, held at Dean's building, this village, on Tuesday evening last, to elect delegates to the County and District Conventions, and to elect members of County Executive Committee, Messrs. G. W. Pierson, W. H. Clark, J. V. Coles, Jos. G. Patterson and C. W. L. Martine were elected to the County Convention, and Messrs. G. R. Nicholl, L. H. K. Smalley, Geo. Squier, J. C. Bolton, L. Thiers and Isaac Lambert were elected to the District Convention, and Messrs. A. S. Clark and James Ritchie members of the Executive Committee.

L. H. K. Smalley, Esq., of Scotch Plains, represents that place on the Grand Jury at the present term of the Union County Court, and Mr. Wm. Van Valkenburg the Petit Jury.

Some time ago we took occasion to speak of the impassible condition of that part of the Scotch Plains road district leading from the village to Fanwood. We are now able and happy to announce that this very same road has been so improved under the direction of Mr. W. H. Dean, the overseer, as to be, as it should be, one of the very best drives to be found in the county. Much credit is due the citizens of this village for providing the "wherewithal" for making this improvement.

We notice that there is a movement on foot in this village to raise money for remaking the sidewalk from the village to Fanwood station. All well disposed persons will see the need of this work and if they have the means will subscribe toward its accomplishment. A subscription list is in the hands of W. H. Dean, Esq.

The few friends of "Wheze and Hester," in this village, at the head of which, as is usual, are two or three who feed at the public crib, made their debut on Thursday evening last in their "seven by nine headquarters" over the barber shop for the purpose of electing (?) delegates, &c., &c. They have, however, a very respectable transparency bearing the names of their candidates upon it at one of their windows.

MR. CHAS. ZIMMER, tobacconist, Front street, is lowering the floors of his store, putting in a new front, and otherwise improving the same.

MR. ISAAC PANGBORN is building a handsome brick store building, 50x56 feet in dimensions, for Mr. Frank McIntyre, on North Avenue, next to A. L. Rowe's building, which will be a fine improvement to surrounding property when completed. Mr. J. W. Apgar is now excavating the cellar.

"REBELS ARE IN OFFICE."

Is the clamor of the Republican journals, and the city, for a wonder, is true. Here are some samples cases, and very bad cases some of them are. For example read the following:

"William H. Chapman, Lieut.-Col. of Col. John S. Mosby's guerrilla band, is now special agent in the Post Office Department at $8 a day. Samuel F. Chapman, his brother, Capt. of Co. E, same command, is now a post car clerk, receiving $1,400 per annum, running between Washington and Richmond.

"W. H. Chapman is the man who tied a Union soldier to a tree, and horribly mutilated his person. He also assisted in the hanging of six soldiers belonging to the Sixth Michigan Cavalry."

The atrocious facts were reported to Postmaster Jewell, and he dismissed him, but Grant made Jewell re-instate him, which was the direct cause of Jewell leaving the Cabinet. These facts cannot be successfully denied, as the evidence is on file in the War Department, and our authority is the best. The influence in these cases is Grant and Mosby.

"Elias Griswold, appointed by Grant through the influence of Mosby, to an $1,800 clerkship in the Treasury Department, August 24, 1876, was a Major and Assistant Adjutant General on General John H. Winder's staff and in charge of Andersonville Prison pens during the war; also in charge of Castle Thunder and Tobacco Warehouse at the close of the war.

"John G. Hester, Second Lieutenant on the rebel ram Alabama, is now a special agent in the Department of Justice, through the influence of Senator Morton and Colonel Mosby.

"Miss Jackson, whose father killed young Ellsworth at the Marshall House in 1861, is now a nine hundred dollar clerk in the Treasury Department, thro' the influence of President Grant Col. Mosby.

"Mrs. Mumford, whose husband cut down the stars and stripes in New Orleans, is in the Treasury Department at $1,000 per annum, under the influence of Senator Morton and Col. Mosby.

"William M. Catlin, major and quartermaster in an Alabama regiment, is now in the General Land Office, receiving $1,600 per annum, through the influence of General Babcock and President Grant.

"Marcy Adison, a Sergeant in the famous Black Horse Cavalry, is now a clerk at $1,400 per annum in the Surgeon-General's office, through the influence of Colonel Mosby and General Grant.

"Miss Mosby, a sister of Col. John S. Mosby, is a $1,200 clerk in the patent office, through the influence of Colonel Mosby and General Grant.

"Thomas Y. Mosby, brother of J. L. Mosby, was a bushwhacker during the war, was appointed by General Grant, on the 15th day of August, a ganger in the Fifth Virginia district.

"There are now twenty-seven of Mosby's guerrillas in the Government Departments, including nine more in the Navy Yard."—N. Y. Express.

Have you heard from Indiana?

TROOPS THAT ARE NOT WANTED IN THE SOUTH.

Company D, of the Eleventh United States Infantry arrived in a Western city on Sunday, and were obliged to lay over until Monday. They were from Fort Worth or some other post in Texas, and on their way to the Indian country in Dakota. A meddlesome Radical politician met the boys soon after they had pitched their tents on a hill above the depot, and called out:

"Hurrah, boys, for Hayes!"

Not a solitary cheer responded. One of the sergeants stepped out of the crowd and remarked:

"You have made a mistake; we don't cheer for Hayes; we are Tilden men."

"What! do you mean to say you oppose the men who gives you food and clothing?"

"Yes, we do. We are tired of Grant and his gang, and as for our food and clothes, we will excuse him for that if he will let us loose."

"Oh, nonsense, boys; you don't mean to go back on Grant and Hayes?"

"Yes, we will go back on any man who keeps two-thirds of our boys in blue down in 'Dixie' to keep white men down beneath the niggers, and who sends a handful of us North to be scalped and killed by the Indians armed with guns and bullets furnished by Grant's brother Orvil and his deputy post-traders, and I will bet you a keg of beer that three-fourths of my company are Tilden men."

"I will take that bet."

A vote was taken, and the vote in Company D, Eleventh United States Infantry stood: Tilden, 40; Hayes, 4.

Hayes is worth $700,000.

And he listed his two milch cows to the Internal revenue man at 12.50 each.

And his favorite sheep fell in value in one year from $5 to $2.

And his only horse he valued at $50.

And his "pleasure carriages, wagons, &c.," did he hand in at $75.

And all his household goods, jewelry, silver plate, and a score of other enumerated articles, did he swear were worth only $1,000.

And all the money he had in possession, "subject to draft demand, with banks, or in other way," did he swear was but $100!

And he further swore that his watches depreciated in value, in one year, from $300 to $200.

And his "4 hogs" did he put down at $25, when pork was a shilling a pound.

"It is a miserable poor "hog"—and a man worth $700,000 is not supposed to keep poor hogs—that will not weigh 250 pounds. It is a common thing for mere "pigs" to go to that much. At a reasonable estimate of the heft of those "hogs" they were worth four times the money the Republican candidate swore them at. Zach Chandler is a "hog," and knows how it is himself.

Is Hayes a "swindler and a perjurer?" New York Times, please answer.—Free Press.

On Tuesday last Governor Bedle approved an order of Brigadier General Uriah DeHart, commanding the Second Brigade, N. G. S. N. J., ordering the annual review and parade of his command (the Third, Sixth and Seventh Regiments, and Fourth Battalion of Infantry, and Co's. A and B, Cavalry), to take place at Camden on next Friday week, the 20th inst. The Governor also grants permission to take the Brigade to Philadelphia, on that day.

Grant has saved another vote for Hayes. James K. Hill, one of the members of the Indianapolis whiskey ring, sentenced to two and a half years imprisonment, has been pardoned by the President.

There are now twenty-seven of Mosby's guerillas in the Government departments and nine more in the navy yard. Among them are the rebel's brother and sister.

JOHN AND HIS WIFE.

Wife—Well, how did you make out—did you get that job?

John—No, confound it—there were no less than eight ahead of me, and now I don't know what to do.

Wife—And I'm afraid I'll lose one of my customers after this week, for Mrs. Jenks says she thinks she'll manage to do her own washing until the times get better.

John—And it seems to me times are getting worse and harder every day.—If I could only get something to do—I believe I'd work for forty cents a day rather than live as we have been living for months past—on dry bread and water nearly all the time. I mean to go and see the chairman of the county committee and try and secure a job of posting bills and doing such work as that during the campaign, and if I succeed I can make something now and then to help us buy bread.

Wife—Now John, I have been thinking, and I'm almost satisfied that it's about time to quit that sort of work—that it would be better for a little while longer to suffer even more severely, than again to help keep up these terrible hard times. I have been thinking—

John—But, Mary, I'm sure we must keep up the party, for if we don't work very hard this time TILDEN will run in as sure as you live.

Wife—Well suppose he does, don't you think times might get a little better then, for a change, you know, couldn't make matters any worse.

John—Why you talk as if you'd want me to vote for a regular copperhead? Surely you don't mean that?

Wife—I don't know what to say in regard to copperheads, but if one-half what we read is true, and I'm beginning to believe it's all true, and more too, it would be a great blessing if just such a man as TILDEN would run the Government and the times for about four years.

John—And then be branded as a renegade, a traitor and a rebel, and all the Republicans going back on me!

Wife—And suppose they call you all that and go back on you, what of it? What are they doing for you? When you applied for a letter carrier's route they didn't even give your application respectable consideration, and when you wanted a job breaking stones on the street, they didn't give it to you because they knew you'd vote the regular ticket anyhow, for they look on you as simply a faithful, regular party machine. Now suppose you'd do as George Benson says he means to do, and Fred Sims and Jack Dill, and a good many others—just come out like an independent man and vote for the one they call Uncle SAMMY TILDEN.—And then we'll see whether we won't have a change for the better. I am satisfied that these big office-holders who pocket their hundreds, thousands and millions every year are keeping up the silly cry about copperheads and rebels and war and all that, just for the purpose of operating on the patriotic feelings and prejudices of such men as yourself, whilst they attend to their ownselves, and let the interests of the working people slide.

John—Why Mary what's got over you—you talk like a regular old school Democrat.

Wife—I'll tell you what's got over us all under our Republican party rule—hard times, poverty, want, and no hope for relief as long as the bad men now in office are permitted to go on as they have been going on.

John—Well, all this talk won't give me work—what I want is something to do.

Wife—And all this slavish and blind support of a party who have brought about these terrible times won't give you work or bread, or anything else than want and starvation.

John—Well Mary, I'll be switched if I don't kind o' half b'lieve you are a little bit nearer right than wrong. I'll see George Benson and them fellows about it and see what they are going to do.

What has become of Mr. Wheeler, the Republican candidate for Vice President; not a word has been heard from him since that unfortunate speech in Vermont, wherein he declared himself to be the direct representative of Quaker hanging and Baptist whipping Puritanism. Has Boss Chandler ordered him into retirement?

NEW JERSEY

Enamel Paint Company,

RARITAN, NEW JERSEY.

Manufacturers of

Bradley's Enamel Paint.

Mixed Ready for Use, in any shade, Tint or Color desired.

THESE Paints are composed of the purest and best materials known to painters; the principal ingredients being Pure White LEAD, ZINC, and LINSEED OIL, which are made to unite in a homogeneous mass by the addition of other materials which add greatly to the durability, elasticity, beauty and strength of the Paint. The whole are chemically combined so that the pigments are held in permanent solution, thus forming a new compound which dries on the surface and adhered firmly to it, thus forming a Smooth, Glossy, Firm, Elastic, Beautiful and Durable Paint.

The Oil, which is the real life of the Paint, cannot leave it and be absorbed by the substance to which it is applied, as it does in paints mixed in the ordinary way, & thus leave the pigment dry and chalky, to wash & rub off in few months. This paint is unaffected by changes of temperature, is perfectly impervious to the action of water, is well adapted to all classes of work, & is in every way a better paint for either inside or outside work or boat painting than any other Paint known to the trade, and will last at least three times as long as the best Lead and Oil mixed in the ordinary way.

These Paints are Ready for use,

Are easily applied by any one, require no mixing, stirring or addition of dryers.

Liberal Inducements to Dealers.

And full satisfaction guaranteed to their Customers.

Sold by the Gallon, Keg or Barrel. Orders attended to promptly. For Price List and Sample Color Card. Address,

CAUTION!

The undersigned would caution the public against the use of sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.:

"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Theo. A. Carman some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filled over one thousand pages and counsel were over two weeks in summing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an air-tight iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing stratum. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is of steel, made sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Carman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defence contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement had been clearly proved.

POETRY.

A RUSTIC COURTING.

The night was dark when Sam set out
To court old Jones' daughter;
He kinder [illegible] as he must,
And kinder hadn't oughter;
His heart against his waistcoat throbbed,
His courage had a tussle
Which nearly conquered him, with his
Six feet of bone and muscle.

The candle in the window shone
With a most doleful glimmer,
And Sam he felt his courage ooze
And through his fingers simmer;
Says he: "Now, Sam, don't be a fool—
Take courage, shaking doubter;
Go on and pop the question right,
For you can't live without her."

But still, as he drew near the house,
His knees got all atremble,
The beating of his heart near beat
His efforts to dissemble.
Says he: "Now, Sam, don't be a goose,
To let the female wimmin
Knock all your thoughts a-skitter so,
And set your head a-swimmin."

So Sam he kinder raised the latch,
His courage also rising,
And in a moment sat inside,
Old Jones' crops a praising.
He tried a while to talk the farm,
In words half dull, half witty,
Not dreaming that old Jones well knew
His only thoughts were—Kitty.

At last the old folks went to bed—
The Jones' were but human;
Old Jones was something of a man,
And Mrs. Jones—a woman.
And Kitty she the pitcher took
And started for the cellar;
It wasn't often that she had
So promising a feller.

And somehow when she came up stairs,
And Sam had drank the cider,
There seemed a difference in the chairs,
And Sam's was close beside her;
His stalwart arm dropped round her waist,
Her head dropped on his shoulder,
And Sam—well, he had changed his tone,
And grown a trifle bolder.

Her ripe, red lips were turned to his,
His head dropped slowly over—
What happened then? Go ask the bee
If honey dwells in clover?
The tale is always new, but old,
And always sweet and tender;
And Sam—I guess, can fight his way,
And Kit—I shan't defend her.

But this, if you live long enough,
You surely will discover;
There's nothing in this world of ours
Except the loved and lover.
The morning light was growing gray
As Sam the farm was leaving;
His face was surely not the face
Of one half grieved or grieving.

And Kitty she walked slowly back,
With blushing face, and lowly;
There's something in the humblest love
Which makes it pure and holy.
And did he marry her? you ask;
She stands there with a ladle,
A skimming off the morning's milk;
That's Sam who rocks the cradle.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

AN UNEXPECTED RACE.

In one of the larger towns of Massachusetts used to live a clergyman, whom we will call Ridewell. He was of the Baptist persuasion, and was rigid in his ideas of moral propriety. He had in his employ an old negro named Pompey, and if this latter individual was not so strict in his morals as his master, he was at least very cunning, and passed in the reverend household for a pattern of propriety. Pomp was a useful servant, and the old clergyman never hesitated to trust him with the most important business.

Now, it so happened that there were, dwelling in and around the town, sundry individuals who were not in the fear of the dreadful penalties which Mr. Ridewell preached about before their eyes, for it was the wont of these people to congregate on Sabbath evening upon a level piece of land on the outskirts of the town, and there race horses. This spot was hidden from view by a dense piece of woods, and for a long while the Sunday evening races were carried on there without detection by the officers, or others who might have stopped them.

It also happened that the good old clergyman owned one of the best horses in the county. This horse was one of the old Morgan stock, with a mixture of the Arabian blood in his veins, and it was generally known that few beasts could pass him on the road. Mr. Ridewell, with a dignity becoming his calling, stoutly declared that the fleetness of his horse never afforded him any gratification and that for his own part he would as lief have any other. Yet money could not buy his Morgan, nor could any amount of argument persuade him to swap.

The church was so near to the good clergyman's dwelling, he always walked to the meeting; and his horse was consequently allowed to remain in the pasture.

Pompey discovered that these races were on the tapis, and he resolved to enter his master's horse on his own account, for he felt sure that old old Morgan could beat anything in the shape of horseflesh that could be produced in that quarter. So on the very next Sunday evening he hid the bridle under his jacket, went out into the pasture and caught the horse, and then rode toward the spot where the wicked ones were congregated. Here he found some dozen horses assembled, and the racing was about to commence. Pomp mounted his beast, and at the signal he started. Old Morgan entered into the spirit of the thing and came out two rods ahead of anything. So Pomp won quite a pile, and before dark he was well initiated in horseracing.

Pomp succeeded in getting home without exciting any suspicion, and he now longed for the Sabbath afternoon to come, for he was determined to try it again, and again he won; and this course of wickedness he followed up for two months, making his appearance upon the racing ground every Sunday afternoon, as soon as "meeting was out." And during this time Pompey was not the only one who had learned to love the racing. No, for old Morgan himself had come to love the excitement of the thing, too, and his very motion when upon the track showed how zealously he entered into the spirit of the game.

But these things were not always to remain a secret. One Sunday a pious deacon beheld this racing from a distance, and straightway went to the parson with the alarming intelligence. The Rev. Mr. Ridewell was utterly shocked. His moral feelings were outraged, and he resolved to put a stop to such wickedness. During the week he made many inquiries, and he learned that this thing had been practised all summer, on every Sabbath afternoon. He bade his parishioners keep quiet, and he told that on the next Sunday he would make his appearance on the very spot, and catch them in their deeds of iniquity.

On the following Sabbath, after dinner, Mr. Ridewell ordered Pomp to bring up old Morgan and put him in the stable. The order was obeyed, though not without many misgivings on the part of the faithful negro. As soon as the afternoon services were closed the two deacons and some other members of the church accompanied the minister home with their horses.

"It is the most flagrant piece of abomination that ever came to my knowledge," said the indignant clergyman as they rode on.

"It is, most assuredly," answered one of the deacons.

"Horse racing on the Sabbath!" uttered the minister.

"Dreadful!" uttered the second deacon.

And so the conversation went on until they reached the top of a gentle eminence which overlooked the plain where the racing was carried on, and where some dozen horsemen, with a score of lookers on, were assembled. The sight was one which chilled the good parson to the soul. He remained motionless, until he had made out the whole alarming truth, then turning to his companions:

"Now, my brothers," said he, "let us ride down and confront the wicked wretches, and if they will get down upon their knees and implore God's mercy, and promise to do so no more, we will not take the legal action against them. O, that my own land should be desecrated thus!" for indeed it was a portion of his own farm.

As the good clergyman thus spoke, he started on toward the scene. The horses of the wicked men were just drawing up for a start as the minister approached. Some of the riders who at once recognized old Morgan, did not recognize the reverend gentleman who rode him.

"Wicked men!" commenced the parson, as he came near enough for his voice to be heard, "children of sin and shame—"

"Come on old hoss," cried one of the jockeys, turning toward the minister. "If you are in for the first race, you must stir your stumps. Now we go."

"Alas! O, my wicked—"

"All ready!" shouted he who led the affair, cutting the minister short. "And off it is!"

And the word for starting was given. Old Morgan knew the word too well, for no sooner did it fall upon his ears than he stuck out his nose, and with one wild snort he started, and the rest of the racers, twelve in number, kept him company.

"Who oa! who-oa-oa!" cried the parson, at the top of his voice.

"By the powers, old man, you're a keen one!" shouted one of the wicked men, who had thus far managed to keep close by the side of the parson. "You ride well."

"Who-ho-ho-oo-oo!" yelled the clergyman, tugging at the reins with all his might.

But it was all of no avail. Old Morgan had now reached ahead of all competitors, and he came up to the judge's stand three rods ahead, where the deacons were standing, with eyes and mouths wide open.

"Don't stop," cried the judge, who had now recognized Parson Ridewell, and suspected his business, and who saw at once into the secret of old Morgan's joining the race. "Don't stop," he shouted again; "it's a two mile heat this time. Keep right on, parson. You are good for another mile. Now you go—and off it is!"

These last words were of course known to the horse, and no sooner did Morgan hear them than he stuck his nose out again, and again started off. The poor parson did his utmost to stop the bewitched animal, but it could not be done. The more he struggled and yelled the faster the animal went, and ere many moments he was again at the starting point, where Morgan now stopped of his own accord. There was a hurried whispering among the wicked ones, and a succession of very curious winks and knowing nods seemed to indicate that they understood.

"Upon my soul, parson," said the leaders of the abomination, approaching the spot where the parson still sat in his saddle, he having not yet sufficiently recovered his presence of mind to dismount, "you ride well. We had not looked for this honor."

"Honor, sir?" gasped Ridewell, looking into the speaker's face.

"Ay—for 'tis an honor. You are the first clergyman who ever joined us in our Sabbath evening entertainments."

"I—I, sir! I joined you?"

"Ha, ha, ha! O, you did it well. Your good deacons really think you tried to stop your horse; but I saw through it; I saw how you put your horse up. But I don't blame you for feeling proud of old Morgan, for I should feel so myself if I owned him. But you need not fear; I will tell all who may ask me about it that you did your best to stop your beast; for I would rather stretch the truth a little than have such a good jockey as you are suffer."

This had been spoken so loudly that the deacons could hear every word, and the parson was bewildered; but he soon came to himself, and with a flashing eye, he cried:

"Villains, what mean you? Why do ye thus—"

"Hold on," interrupted one of the party, and as he spoke the rest of the racing men all mounted their horses; "hold on a moment parson. We are willing to allow you to carry off the palm, but we won't stand your abuse. When you had determined to try if your horse would not beat us all, we agreed to let you in. We have done so, and you have won the race in a two mile heat.—By the hokey, but you did it well. When you want to try it again just send us word, and we'll be ready for you? Good bye!"

As the wretch thus spoke, he turned his horse's head, and before the astounded preacher could utter a word, the whole party had ridden away out of hearing. It was some time before one of the churchmen could speak. They knew not what to say. Why should their minister's horse have joined in the race without some permission from his master? They knew how much he set by the animal, and at length shook their heads with doubt.

"It's very strange," said one.

"Very," answered a second.

"Remarkable," suggested a third.

"On my soul, brethren," spoke Ridewell, "I can't make it out."

The brethren looked at each other, and the deacons shook their heads in a very solemn and impressive manner.

So the party rode back to the clergyman's house, but none of the brethren would enter nor would they stop at all. Before Monday had drawn to a close, it was generally known that Parson Ridewell raced his horse on the Sabbath, and a meeting of the church was appointed for Thursday.

Poor Ridewell was almost crazy with vexation, but before Thursday came, Pompey found out how matters stood, and he assured his master that he could clear the matter up; and after a day's search he discovered the astounding fact that some of those wicked men had been in the habit of stealing old Morgan from the pasture, and racing him on Sabbath afternoons. Pomp found out this much—but he could not find out who did it!

As soon as this became known to the church, the members conferred together, and they soon concluded that under such circumstances a high-mettled horse would be very apt to run away with his rider when he found himself directly upon the track.

So Parson Ridewell was cleared, but it was a long while before he got over the blow, for many were the wicked wags who delighted to pester him by offering to "ride a heat" with him, to "bet on his head," or "put him against the world on a race."

But Ridewell grew older, his heart grew younger, and finally he could laugh with right good will when he spoke of this unexpected race. Be sure there was no more Sabbath racing in that town.

Now is the time to carry your right hand in a sling if you don't want it shaken off by aspiring candidates.

Man is born to sorrow, as the other side of the barrel hoop is to fly upwards.

A REPORTER'S STORY.

I had been stopping for a short time in the city of Jackson, Michigan, engaged in the capacity of traveling reporter for one of the New York journals, when one rainy, disagreeable day, I resolved to visit the State's prison, in search of some items of interesting news. I did so.

After having passed through the entire establishment, I was at last shown into the cell of a young man doomed to suffer death.

The occupant of this cell was a fine, sad, intelligent-looking personage of about twenty three years of age. His high, classical forehead, deep blue eyes, and noble, polite bearing, indicated him to be no common villian. His face was thin and pallid, but from those pure, expressive eyes flashed a depth of character, an unendurable sorrow, a soul-destroying remorse, which no cold-blooded murderer could possess.

At his first words, "Pray, be seated," I was surprised at the deep, full, musical intonations of his voice. It at once proclaimed him a scholar.

I soon entered into a long conversation with him, and little by little learned the following sad, but truthful tale, which I give as nearly as possible in his own language, and which I hope will prove a warning to many weary foolhardy thousands who are swiftly drifting into that fearful, whirling, domestic vortex—jealousy.

My name is George Melville. My father was a clergyman in the western part of this State, and descended from one of the best families in those parts.

I received a good education, and at the age of twenty, entered a large mercantile house in New York city. I soon, by close application and indefatigable energy, gained the entire confidence of my employers; and after having been in their service one year, I was selected by them to visit the West Indies as their agent on some business of importance, and which would require considerable tact and forethought to execute faithfully, and promptly transact.

Previous to my departure for those islands, I became acquainted with a Miss Reynolds, who was a few years younger than myself, and the daughter of a gentleman who had recently purchased and removed to an estate near my father's.

Everything that was graceful and lovely appeared centered in her form; everything that was virtuous and excellent in her mind. I sought her hand. Our souls soon became united by the indissoluble bonds of sincere love; and as there were no parental or other impediments to our union, it was agreed that as soon as I returned from the West Indies, where it was expected my stay would be short, the marriage solemnities would be performed. Solemn oaths of love and constancy passed between us, and I sailed with a light heart for the West Indies. While there, I received from her, and returned to her, letters filled with the tenderest expressions of anxiety and regret of absence. Oh, that I had never, never returned! What pain, anguish and remorse I would have been saved.

The moment I got on land, I hastened as fast as the rail-way train could carry me to the house of Mr. Reynolds, to see the charmer of my soul.

She received me with all the ardency of affection, and even shed tears of joy in my presence. I urged her to name the day which was to perfect our union and happiness; and the next Sunday, four days only distant, was agreed upon for me to lead her to the altar. How did my heart bound at the prospect of making Miss Reynolds my own, of possessing in her all that could render life agreeable!

I hastened home to my family, and informed them of my approaching bliss.—They all sympathized in the anticipated joy which swelled my bosom. I had a sister some years older than myself, who had been the friend and companion of my angel in my absence. They were now almost every day together, so that I had frequent opportunity of Emma's company.

One day she had been with my sister, at my father's; and, as usual, I accompanied her home. On my return my sister requested me to attend her in a private room. We therefore retired, and when we were seated, she thus addressed me:

"Georgie, you know that to promote your peace, your welfare, and your happiness, has ever been the pride of my heart. Nothing except this could extort the sad secret which I now disclose, and which has hitherto remained deposited in my own bosom. My duty to a brother, whom I esteem dear as life, forbids me to remain silent. As an affectionate sister, I cannot tacitly see you thus imposed upon. I cannot see you the dupe and slave of an artful and insidious woman, who does not sincerely return your love; nor can I see your marriage celebrated with one whose soul and affections are placed on another object." Here she hesitated, while I, with anguish of mind almost insufferable begged her to proceed.

"About six or eight months after your departure," she continued, "it was reported to Miss Reynolds that she had a rival in the West Indies; that you had there found an English beauty on whom you lavished those endearments which belonged of right to her alone. This at first made a deep impression on her; and whether from this cause, from fickleness of disposition, or that she never sincerely loved you, I know not; but this I know, that a youth has been for some time past her constant companion. To convince you of this, you need only visit the old, uninhabited house bordering on the river, about nine or ten this evening, when you will undoubtedly surprise Miss Reynolds and her lover, enjoying one of their pleasant loving interviews. If I should be mistaken, I will submit to your censure; but should you find it as I have predicted, you have only to rush from your place of concealment, charge her with her perfidy, and renounce her forever."

Of all the plagues, of all the torments, of all the curses which torture the soul, jealously of a rival in love is the worst.

Enraged, confounded, and astonished, it seemed as if my bosom would instantaneously burst. To conceal my emotions, I left my sister's apartments, and having thanked her for her information, and proceeded to obey her injunctions. I retired to my room, and there poured out my execrations.

"Cursed woman!" I cried, "is it thus you requite my tender love? Could a vague report of my inconsistency drive you to infidelity? Did not my letters breathe constant adoration, and did not yours portray the same sincerity of affection? No; it was the wretched passion for novelty which more or less holds a predominancy over your whole sex. To a new lover you will sacrifice your most sacred engagements, though made in the face of heaven!"

Thus did I rave through the entire day. The proceedings of that day are a vacuum in my memory. Every fiend in Hades were pointing their accursed bony fingers at me, and with derisive sneering, laughter, and sarcastic tones were urging me on to "revenge."

The clock struck the hour of ten. I sprung from my seat, and rushed into the street. The "trysting hour" had come, but the storm without had made me oblivious to the hell within. The season, externally and internally, well-fitting to the black and damning deed I was that night destined to perform.

I was alone in the street. Not one of the hardy inhabitants of that town dared venture out on such an evening as that. On I went, with a burning fever consuming my inmost soul. On and on, unmindful of the terrible aspect of the raging elements. The boiling, seething, turbulent river, as it flowed angrily on, the howling winds, the lurid lightning, the loud bolts of thunder, were unnoticed and unheeded by me. I arrived in view of the old house by the river side. I looked—all was dark, silent and gloomy. I closed my eyes, clenched my hands, and swore by the blackest heavens above me to be revenged.

I opened my eyes, and a bright, lurid, fantastic light was streaming from one of the lower windows. The light at first was so dazzlingly brilliant that it almost blinded me. I crept stealthily up nearer to the window, and there witnessed a scene which paralyzed every fibre in my organization, and caused every drop of blood to congeal in my veins. I saw Miss Reynolds closely locked in the arms of a young man elegantly dressed, and of a singularly delicate appearance. They were earnestly conversing in a low tone of voice, and the hand of my fair one was gently pressed in the hands of the stranger. I drew close to the window, applied my ear to a crevice, and, with the fury of pandemonium in my heart, I listened.

The stranger clasped Miss Reynolds in his arms.

"Dearest angel!" he exclaimed, "what an interruption to our bliss by the return of my hated rival!"

With very fond caresses and endearing blandishments, she replied, "Fear nothing. I have promised, and must yield him my hand; but you shall never be excluded from my heart. We shall find sufficient opportunities for private conference."

I could hear no more. My brain was on fire; and, rushing from my concealment, I, with a bound, sprang through the window and confronted them.

"Ungrateful and false-hearted woman!" I exclaimed, "is it thus you return my idolatrous love? You have deserted me; you have perjured your most sacred vows; and thus am I avenged!"

And placing a pistol at her breast, I shot her through the heart; and turning to her companion,—"And thou, perfidious contaminator and destroyer of my bliss, go attend thy companion in iniquity, a death too good for so foul a crime!"—and immediately drawing my knife, I stabbed him to the hilt in the breast.

With the words, "Oh, George! Your wife, your sister!" he fell fainting to the floor.

My God! That voice! It rang in my ear like a funeral knell! It rings to-day, and will continue to ring a requiem of agonizing remorse as long as time shall last.

It was, indeed, my betrothed wife; it was, indeed, my beloved sister. The one lay dead before me, the other weltering in her blood.

I raised my sister's head into my lap. In a faint and dying voice she told that, in a weak moment, they had concerted this plan to test my jealousy. She had dressed in male attire, intending, as soon as I had discovered them, to reveal herself, and laugh at my discomfiture.

"Forgive me, George," she pleaded, earnestly,—"forgive me! A mad, unwomanly freak has robbed me of the happiness of a lifetime."

She said no more, for, with her arms entwined lovingly around her murderer's neck she, without a struggle, was wafted on angels' wings to her Creator. What words can describe such agony, such utter desolation as mine! By one rash act I had robbed myself of more than life, and I would not live to endure such bitter remorse as mine. I placed my pistol to my head; but ere I could fire, my arm was grasped by a hand of steel, and the weapon dashed upon the ground.

My firing had awakened those living close by, and they came just in time to save me the crime of a triple murder.

I made no resistance, and was conveyed to prison, there to await my trial, which came off two months ago. I was condemned to death. My execution will take place in four weeks from to-morrow. I shall cheerfully meet my fate, for who would endure life when rendered so peculiarly miserable?

The wretched Melville here ended his tale of woe. No tears moistened his eyes; his grief was too despairing for tears; it preyed upon his heart, drank the vital streams of his life; and burst in convulsive sighs from his burning bosom.

The day appointed for his execution drew near; his past and approaching fate filled my breast with sympathetic sorrow.

He saw his venerable father, his mother, his friends and acquaintances, with several pious clergymen, who entered his cell to comfort him. His mind softened by their advice and counsel. Frequently would he burst into tears. Often in the solitary hours of the night was he heard addressing the Throne of Grace for mercy and forgiveness.

But the grief that preyed at his heart had wasted him to a mere skeleton. A slow but fatal fever had consequently implanted itself in his constitution. Exhausted nature could make but a weak struggle against disease and affliction like his; and about a week previous to the day appointed for his execution he expired in his mother's arms, with the name of his loved and lost one upon his lips—leaving a conclusive, incontrovertible evidence of the evil influences of jealousy.

Their dresses are so tight now that when a lovely woman stoops to folly, she has to wait for some one to pick her up again.

Self-denial is the most exalted pleasure, and the conquest of evil habits the most glorious triumph.

A long-standing engagement was broken up Sunday, because he fanned her so hard in church as to spoil her crimps.

It is only by a terrible strain on the muscles of his face that a doctor can look solemn when his neighbor remarks to him that there is a great deal of sickness in the city.

They never use a bulletin board on the Worcester Press. They merely take the insole of the editor's slipper and lean it out of the second story window against the sidewalk, and chalk their dispatches on that.

Much has been said of the enormous consumption of tobacco, and yet you will be surprised to find how few men use it when your supply gives out and you ask for a chew.

A New Orleans man announces in a circular that, "having returned from a scientific trip through Europe, he is now better prepared than ever for cleaning clothes and carpets."

The Boston tramp does not wreck trains, steal clothes left on the line all night, nor frighten the servant girls. He called upon a farmer's wife in a Middlesex county town, last week, and begged for something to eat. The good woman, convinced that he was deserving of her charity, gave him supper, and he was grateful. Ay! he called for pen, ink and paper, and traced in ornamental penmanship the motto, "God bless your home."

A GRAND
MASS MEETING!
WILL BE HELD
BY THE FRIENDS OF
Reform, Economy & Better Times,
WITHOUT REGARD TO PREVIOUS PARTY TIES, ON Thursday Evening, Oct. 26th,
AT 8 O'CLOCK,
—AT—
LAING'S HALL.

EX-GOV. JOEL PARKER,
AND OTHER EMINENT SPEAKERS,
WILL BE PRESENT AND ADDRESS THE MEETING.

☞ All who love their country and desire its prosperity, and the restoration of the Constitutional Government of the days of Washington, Jefferson and Jackson, are cordially invited to be present.

ATTENTION!

The Hon. A. H. H. Dawson, of Ga., will address the citizens of Plainfield and vicinity, at Laing's Hall, on Tuesday, October 24th, at 8 o'clock P. M., on the political issues of the day. All citizens, irrespective of party, are cordially invited to attend.

VICTORY.

The October political battles have been fought and the banner of Democratic Reform waves in triumph.

A glorious result!

From the Atlantic to the Pacific honest hearts throb with joy, because October omens November's crowning victory—the downfall of Wrong and the dominion of Right.

October's record is grand.

Look at it!

Notwithstanding the tremendous efforts of Grant's 80,000 office-holders, fighting like wolves for public plunder, in spite of Chandler's $2,500,000 corruption fund and legions of voting frauds, regardless of lying Times Supplements, Blaine's bare-faced falsehoods and the bloody shirt tirade of Morton, Kilpatrick and Bob Ingersoll—with its former 30,000 Republican majority is made a doubtful State for Hayes.

OHIO,

INDIANA,

gives a decided Democratic majority, which Tilden and Hendricks will increase by thousands in November.

WEST VIRGINIA,

goes overwhelmingly Democratic.

Now for November!

The Chandler, Cameron and Morton corruptionists will stop at nothing to retain evil power, but, if every friend of Reform will only do his individual duty, their bad designs cannot succeed and AMERICA WILL AGAIN BE FREE!

Then bring out the big gun and let her roar!

Push the good work onward Democrats and Independent Republicans!

Let the popular verdict be so emphatic that the corruption of Grantism will never again show its head.

Every man to his post!

Then close ranks and forward to the grand victory in November.

There is a colored Tilden and Hendricks Club in the City of New York and the Custom House patriots want to disperse it. A chance for Grant's bayonets to uphold civil rights. A colored citizen has as much right to vote for Tilden as an office-holder has for Hayes.

LET US HAVE PEACE.

The man who would, for partisan or any other purpose, stir up the embers of sectional animosity, and thereby jeopardize the continuance of national unity and prosperity, is not a loyalist, however loudly he may prate about rebels and rebellion. He is an enemy to the well being of the American people, of every class and color, and therefore a traitor in action.

Rebellion no longer exists at the South. The attempt made to withdraw from the Union was vanquished and forever upon the battle field. The Southern people will never again appeal to the arbitrament of war for the redress of grievances, real or imaginary. They did so once and were fearfully punished, but they surrendered honorably, and in good faith accepted the conditions of defeat.

To now charge them with rebellious designs is malicious slander, used only to inflame prejudice and passion for political effect, as the very demagogues who utter it well know.

The South wants peace and plenty, as does the whole land—East, West and North.

The products of the South are gold in the markets of the world, and it is directly to the interest of every merchant, mechanic, farmer, artisan and laborer of the North that the South should be prosperous.

The Southern States are co-equal under the Constitution with the Northern, and common justice requires they should be protected in the enjoyment of civil rights, and not be trodden down by the iron heel of a military despotism.

The Southern people are as fully entitled to the privileges of citizenship as those of any other section, and both policy and patriotism bid us extend the hand of friendship and withhold the lash of resentment.

Every patriotic citizen should rebuke at the polls the perfidy that would for partisan ends foment discord and reanimate hostile feelings.

"Let us have peace."

We want an era of national good will, firm obedience to law, justice and honesty in the administration of public affairs, and a revival of productive industry.

That will make the North as well as the South prosperous and happy.

That can only be secured through the election of

TILDEN AND HENDRICKS.

MONEY WASTED.

Chandler's $2,500,000 corruption fund raised to assist the up-hill cause of Grant-Hayesism, found considerable outlet in Plainfield the other night.

A torch light procession, composed of many men and a vastly larger number of beardless boys, imported from Newark, Elizabeth, Jersey City, and possibly from Philadelphia, Kentucky and Michigan, with all the drums Zach could hire between Washington and Boston, paraded through our streets to the annoyance of peaceable citizens.

It is said they came prepared to celebrate the great anticipated Western victories.

They didn't do that, however, because victory illuminated the Democratic banner.

Poor fellows, they tried to whistle.

To pay the expense of transportation, equipments, music, hired torch-bearers, &c., the affair no doubt cost several thousand dollars.

Did it make any votes for Hayes?

Not a vote!

The time for such tom-foolery is past. The people now think intelligently and are determined to vote independently. Even in Plainfield, a large number of citizens heretofore acting with the Republicans openly declare themselves in favor of the election of Tilden and Hendricks.

Why so?

Because they are convinced the ruling party is corrupt and extravagant, and the election of Hayes would surely continue it.

Hence, they argue, a change is needed, both for public and private good, for national honor and business prosperity.

They reason from facts.

They will do what they believe to be right, and torch-light processions, reaching from the Hudson to the Delaware, have no more effect upon sensible men than water has upon a duck's back.

TILDEN AND REFORM!

HONESTY AND ECONOMY!

These are the conquering watchwords in this Presidential campaign.

Zach is wasting money.

Whose money is it?

The Commercial Advertiser, a reckless Hayes organ in New York, says "the Gubernatorial campaign in one of the Southern States came very near an untimely settlement, the other day, by a vicious team of horses running away with the Republican candidate, and bouncing him out of the vehicle. A sprained wrist, a rent in his pantaloons, and the total loss of a two-gallon demijohn of campaign oratory comprised the list of casualties." That is no doubt slander, because, it is reasonable to suppose, a journal so constantly freighted with vicious falsehoods against Democratic candidates, incapable of telling the truth about anything, not even its own political friends.

The Cabinet of President Tilden will be constructed of substantial statesmen material. There will not be a rotten Belknap, Robeson, Cameron, Chandler stick about it. Not a chip of the kind.

The zealous Hayesite who promised to destroy the Democratic party this year, meditates a trip to Central Africa in search of the head-waters of the Nile. He fears the climate of Salt River.

The colored voters of the South are going over to the Democratic party in crowds. Carpet-Bag thieves and Freedmen Bank swindlers helped on conversion to the side of truth and justice.

Charles Francis Adams, of Massachusetts, and all his sons are out-spoken advocates of Tilden and Reform.

The Democratic majority in Indiana, official returns, is 5,119.

LIBERTY SUPPRESSED.

The Republican party in its first appeal to the people for their suffrages, avowed itself to be the representative of freedom in its broadest sense. It inscribed on its banners "Free Soil, Free Speech and a Free Press." "A free land for a free people" was the great principle for which it professed to contend, and which, it pretended, it sought to establish. The people took it at its word and gave it their support, and for sixteen years, through war and peace, have continued the general government in its hands. How has it kept its promises? What has been the condition of the country during the last four years under the rule of Grant—and what does it promise to be, in the light of to-day's transactions, under the administration of Gov. Hayes should he be, unfortunately, elected? We all know the history of the unwarranted interference in Louisiana and Mississippi. We have read, with bitter indignation, of the tampering with the Supreme Court of the United States, to whose bench judges were appointed to accomplish certain results. Act after act in contravention of the plainest provisions of the Constitution, has been unblushingly and defiantly committed. Public ministers and officials, for the expression of an opinion or a protest against arbitrary proceedings, have been removed and sent into retirement. Corruption in high places has been almost universal, and we have witnessed with mortification men of known ability and of presumed honor, go down under a cloud of shame and disgrace from which there never can be a resurrection. All these and more are the results accruing from Republican rule. But the end is not yet. Presuming on their power and on the ascendancy they believe they have acquired over the people, the leaders of the party still hesitate at nothing to perpetuate their rule. Already we are apprised of arbitrary, illegal arrests of prominent citizens in South Carolina under orders from Federal marshals, for no other reasons than that they are opposed to the re-election of Gov. Chamberlain. The Republican Judges of the Supreme Court of that State, together with a large number of its most influential citizens of both parties, assert that there is no lawlessness either present or anticipated, in South Carolina, to give even the shadow of a justification to these proceedings. The intention of Chamberlain is evidently to secure his own election. We find that he has arranged a Board of State Canvassers of Election and a Returning Board, a majority of whose members are candidates on his ticket, and will necessarily have to pass on their own elections. We find, further, that of the ninety-six commissioners of election in the country, seventy are his declared friends. But to still farther secure the success of this scheme, he summons Federal troops and Federal marshals, and orders the arrest of all influential citizens from whose opposition he has anything to apprehend.

And all this has occurred and is occurring in the United States of America; the land in which, of all the earth, it is popularly supposed, the people rule and liberty reigns. But it is, alas! the liberty of tyrants and thieves who flourish, while patriots and honest men are obliged to submit, apparently without redress.

We cannot believe that this last phase of Republicanism will be allowed to pass with impunity. Supine, as we know, a large part of the people have become, we are persuaded that this added outrage will cause the scales to fall from their eyes, and that, recognizing their peril, they will hurl from power the miscreants who are by their violation of every principle of that freedom they profess to love, making our country a stench in the nostrils of every lover of liberty and good government throughout the world.

The Chairman of the last County Convention appointed the following gentlemen the Democratic Executive Committee of Somerset County for the ensuing year:

Bridgewater—Eugene S. Doughty, Ch'n.
Branchburg—Calvin Corle.
Bedminster—— Todd.
Bernards—John H. Lyon.
Franklin—Daniel J. Somers.
Hillsborough—F. V. L. Disborough.
Montgomery—A. J. Skillman.
North Plainfield—John A. Thickstun.
Warren—David D. Smalley.

The Committee are requested to meet at Fritts' Hotel, in Somerville, on Saturday, Oct. the 21st inst., at 2 o'clock, P. M.

The Republicans of the Fourth Congressional District met at Somerville on Monday last, with the purpose of putting in nomination a candidate to defeat the Democratic nominee for Congress in that District, ALVAH A. CLARK, hoping, with the assistance of the disaffected, disappointed and sore-head Democrats to nominate a man from the Democratic ranks, (and it is stated to us that Mr. Rynear Veghte was to be the man) to run against the regular nominee, Mr. Clark. Upon calling the roll of Counties, however, 34 delegates were in favor of making a straight Republican nomination and 38 were in favor of making no nomination, with the understanding that the party (Republican) would support Mr. Rynear Veghte, thus leaving the nomination of Mr. Veghte with the sore-heads and disappointed. Now we desire to ask the disaffected and disappointed Democrats of Somerset County if they know what they are doing when they attempt to make division in their own camp by a coalition with the Republicans. Mr. Clark is an able man for the position he has been nominated for, and is a safe man with whom to entrust the interests of the people he represents. Why then this talk of an independent candidate? Close up your ranks, think of the recent glorious victories achieved by the Democracy for Right and Reform, and vote for ALVAH A. CLARK, who will be elected in spite of intriguing politicians.

POLITICAL POOL-SELLING.

Some few pools were sold at Morrissey's rooms, New York, last Tuesday evening on the results of the elections in November. Odds of 100 to 60 were steady figures that Tilden carried the State of New York. Offers were freely made to bet a "thousand" even that Tilden had 10,000 majority in New York, also a "thousand" against "fifteen hundred" that Tilden was next President, neither of which found takers.

THE CAMPAIGN IN NEW JERSEY.

"What of New Jersey?" we are asked by those desiring to know the progress of the campaign in our State. We answer as we are answered by friends from all parts of the State. The Democracy are everywhere united and thoroughly in earnest; and, more than this, they are daily gaining recruits.—The people of no State deplore the political condition of the country, and earnestly desire a change, more than the people of New Jersey, and we hear from every direction of men who have heretofore been opposed to the Democracy, but who openly avow themselves in favor of the election of Tilden as the only means of securing a reform in the public service.

Nor is there the least danger that the people of our State can be turned from their settled purpose by a repetition here, by stump speakers who have so vainly labored in the West, of the stale appeals which form the stock-in-trade of the Republican campaign. The difficulty under which Republican orators labor is that their party exigencies compel them to avoid a free discussion of the question in which, above all others, the people are interested. They dare not, for fear of offending the Administration to which they look for aid in the campaign denounce its abuses as they ought to be denounced, and the people have no faith in men whose political alliances are such as to compel them to shut their eyes to mal-administration and to refrain from condemning it.

New Jersey may be counted among the States that will vote for a change—a change of men and of measures.—Nothing can prevent this but over-confidence among the friends of a change. A full vote of the Democracy in November will give New Jersey's electoral victory to Tilden and Hendricks.—Trenton True American.

TILDEN AND REFORM.

We commend to the attentive perusal of every voter who desires a political change that will re-establish honest government and prosperous times, the following address issued by the Democratic National Committee:

FELLOW-CITIZENS: We congratulate you as patriots, as partisans with us in the common destiny of American freemen, upon the results of the October State elections. We rejoice in the victory which the people's ballots have bestowed upon the friends of reform in the valley of the Ohio, where the Republican party had an overwhelming ascendency in every Presidential election since 1856. We rejoice in the assurance these elections convey that your ballots will bestow decisive majorities to the allied forces of Democracy and Reform in the November elections throughout the Union. But we rejoice not as partisans; we rejoice with you as fellow citizens.

And when the decision of this week of one million voters along the valley of the Ohio shall be ratified next month by the [illegible] of eight million voters throughout the whole republic, we shall still rejoice, chiefly for the reason that not one of its citizens can [illegible] who are Democrats, in the [illegible] peace and good will which will then [illegible] be established among all sections, races, classes and conditions of men, and in the prosperity of which political peace, based on equal rights and fraternal good will, is the first condition.

Upon the three States of West Virginia, Ohio and Indiana [illegible] of the Administration, all their efforts and all the vast sums of money [illegible] from the one hundred thousand office holders of the party in power.

These were fought while, not [illegible] to be contested against so concentrated, for in the November elections [illegible] in every one of thirty-eight States upon the same day.

[illegible] against these odds the Democrats and Reformers of West Virginia and Indiana have been victorious, and in Ohio they have all but reached a State hitherto deemed hopeless, and have created an assurance of victory in November.

[illegible] as a National Democratic Committee to congratulate the people of the Union upon this victory in the first part of the Reform campaign, it is only because Democrats have been honored to be the leaders of the people in the work of national regeneration.

The victory won, the victory still to be won, will be a deliverance as much to Republicans as to Democrats.

The patriotic masses of the Republican party may be thankful that the misdeeds of their unworthy leaders have been rebuked and are to be arrested. The suffering whites of the South may lift up their heads to greet the dawn of a better day for them, as well as the nation at large. The colored citizen may share the general joy that he will soon cease to be the stock in trade of corrupt politicians, but shall enjoy his rightful liberties and his equality before the law amid universal good will.

As for the Reform Democracy, to whose standard victory has been tied, with all her [illegible], it only remains for them to welcome every ally, every friend, close up the ranks and press on, shoulder to shoulder, under the banner and with the one watchword, Reform.

Fellow citizens, peace between all sections; prosperity in all our homes; of these you have been for years deprived by the [illegible] of patriotic Republicans, played upon by selfish and corrupt leaders, who have kept fanning the dying embers of civil strife in order to escape inspection of the trusts which they have betrayed.

For eleven years you have had the name of peace. At no time have you had the substance of peace. In lieu thereof you have had the grinding taxation and [illegible] expenditures of war. Just before every election every year you have had the preaching of a new crusade against a section utterly defeated in war, and anxious only to be completely reconciled in peace.

For eleven years the power of the men who have seized away the control of their party from the hands of its statesmen and leaders has been supreme in almost every department of the Federal Government.

Discarding the hope of prolonging their domination by beneficent public measures, they have created and trafficked upon public calamities. The policy they adopted has been worked out. Its failure has been absolute.

In place of past performances these same corrupt and selfish leaders now proffer promises already broken as their titles to further trust.

Having prostrated our manifold industries by the vast aggregates and the worst methods of Federal taxation, they now again solicit your confidence as the instruments of retrenchment and reform.

Having debauched the public service and having just now, in the face of open day, summoned their army of a hundred thousand office holders—the people's servants—paid by the people's taxes—in order to create immense corruption funds to frustrate the people's will, they now profess to be the champions of civil service reform. Having imposed upon the Southern States the rapacity, fraud and plunder of the carpet-bag governments, having almost ruined the prosperity of the North by destroying the prosperity of the South, having created terror, uncertainty and confusion in all the productive industries of the South, which furnish most of the exports of our whole country, keep in motion the commerce and manufactories of the North and East, and furnish a market for the agricultural products of the West, they now propose, by renewal of the same fatal policy, to prolong their own power in the hope of concealing their misdeeds, and for this purpose they do not hesitate to renew the cry of intolerance; to revive the dying memories of fraternal strife, and to appeal to the fears and prejudices of the timid and the ignorant.

Fellow citizens, these men and their measures have been completely tried and have completely failed. An oppressive taxation, an exhausted South, an impoverished North, a fluctuating currency, the enterprise of an industrious people locked fast in the paralysis of hard times—such is the outcome of their political policy, such are the achievements of their long supremacy. Your ballots in November can alone dictate a change of measures and a change of men. Shall not the uprising of patriotism along the valley of the Ohio go on to a complete and beneficial revolution in the administration of the Government of the United States? Will you not by the voice of overwhelming majorities at the polls, proclaim your invincible faith, after all these years of corruption and passion, in the high immortal principles of government by the people for the people, in simple honesty and strict economy, as the supreme wisdom of public policy, in justice as the mother of power, and in civil freedom as the be-all and the end-all of a true Republican nationality?

Will you not build up a new prosperity for all the people on the old foundations of American self-government, on peace, reconciliation and fraternity between all sections, all classes, and all races embraced within our system of American commonwealths; on the frugality and economy in all governments; on honesty and purity of administration, and having lost your prosperity through governmental misrule, regain that prosperity through governmental reform? We commit this great issue to the intelligence and conscience of the American people, with an unfaltering trust in the wisdom and justice of their decision.

By order of the National Democratic Committee.

ABRAM S. HEWITT, Chairman.
FREDERICK O. PRINCE, Secretary.
NEW YORK, Oct. 12, 1876.

GREENFIELD, N. H., Oct. 14.—Work upon the Manchester and Keene Railroad has been entirely suspended, owing to the inability of the contractors to meet their liabilities, and as a result a large force of workmen are without means and have become so riotous that the Governor was called on for the militia, but refusing to grant them a police force has been sent from Nashua and Manchester.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—A special despatch to the Times from Calcutta reports that distress prevails in the Deccan and Southern Mahratta because of failure of the crops. The Government have opened relief-works. Scarcity is also expected in Khandeish and Nassick.

Harrison is not Governor elect of Indiana. Williams is the man. 5,119 cheers for Indiana.

Hayes is not sure of Ohio. Chandler is making a fresh money assessment.

DEMOCRATIC NOMINATIONS.

The Democratic Convention of the Third Assembly District of Passaic County, N. J., met at Ramsey's Tuesday last and nominated Garrabrant Ryerson, of Paterson, by acclamation.

Hon. Charles A. Campbell, of Woodbridge, has been re-nominated by the Democracy of the Second District of Middlesex County.

Hudson County.—Fifth District, for member of Assembly, Gerrit D. Van Reypen, Democrat.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 16.—The Pioneer-Press special from Bismarck says the Indians at Standing Rock signed the treaty relinquishing the Black Hills on Wednesday. The treaty was so far modified as not to insist on their removal to Indian Territory.

The troops intended for the expedition go into camp to-morrow, and will probably leave about Wednesday.—General Sturgis is en route to join his regiment and will probably command the expedition, unless General Terry goes in person.

Scarcity of Money.

There is no doubt but the present situation of all kinds of business and industry is fearfully depressed, and it behooves every family to look carefully to their expenses. Winter is coming on when children are liable to Croup, Whooping Cough, etc. Coughs and Colds will prevail everywhere, and Consumption with other Throat and Lung disease will carry off many.—These diseases should not be neglected. Doctor Bills are expensive, and we would advise our people to use BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP. It never has failed. One bottle at 75 cents will keep your whole family well during the winter. Two doses will relieve any case. Sold in all towns in the United States, and by your Druggist, William H. Voorhees.

MARRIAGES.

LOOK!
The wildest excitement exists in many localities on account of the immense number of tramps who are perambulating over the country,
Out
of work, and many of them would not work if it was tendered them. The most of them are a ragged, thieving, dirty and worthless crew. The exception can be granted to an occasional few.
For
a whole flock of black sheep is truly a rarity. The general depression of business, and lack of employment everywhere has forced many to roam in search of work, and others travel, beg, and steal, because they don't want to work. In this connection we wish to call
Your
attention to the fact that we propose to do our level best to keep up the high standard for respectability of this section of country as far as GENTEEL APPEARANCE IN DRESS can do it, and while the wearing of good clothes is no particular safeguard for your Attention! Young Men's Tilden and Hendrick's Club.

All active members are urgently requested to attend the next regular meeting of the Club, held on Monday, October 23d, at 8 o'clock p. m., as there will be business of importance brought before the meeting which will concern all members.

WALTER L. HETFIELD,
Cor. Secretary.

THE bell has rung for straw hats and linen dusters.

P. M. FRENCH & SONS are selling new Buckwheat flour.

GO HEAR ex-Gov. Parker at Laing's Hall, next Thursday evening.

BLAINE commenced his lying in this State, at Newark, last Tuesday.

THE last wind that blew from the West has brought with it no end of straws, but very little Hayes.

MR. LEMUEL HART has sold his new house, corner of Front street and Netherwood avenue, to P. M. French, Esq.

A YOUNG SON of James Parker, Esq., of this city, fell from a chestnut tree the other day, sustaining severe injuries.

THE Centennial is to close on Friday, November 10th, the day originally chosen, the managers having decided not to extend it.

THERE will be no Coroners elected in New Jersey this year. Those elected last November hold office for three years, the same as Sheriffs.

BUCKWHEAT cakes will soon be passed around at the morning meal. The farmers are making ready to gather the crop, which it is said will not be a large one.

T. M. PAYN, Front street, opposite Laing's Hall, is using Rockaway and Blue Point Oysters for stews, frys, etc., and is selling them by the quart to his customers.

CARDINAL RED is now the favorite dress color with the ladies. How charming they look, putting one in mind of the "fire laddies," with their bright red cuffs and collars.

AUTUMN, the golden-clasp of the year, is upon us, and the hardy husbandman may now sit contentedly down and look with an air of satisfaction upon the fruits of his labors.

A SOCIAL SURPRISE PARTY was given in honor of Miss Mary Roll, at her residence on Peace street, on Monday evening last, at which all enjoyed themselves to their heart's content. Frazee furnished the music.

MR. SANKEY'S songs are becoming national hymns. "Pull for the shore," sings the tow-boy behind his mules on the Morris Canal. "I love to tell the story," whistles the Elizabeth reporter with his nose in the air.

CO. E, of this city, will participate in the review of the Second Brigade, N. G. S. N. J., at the Centennial grounds, next Friday, leaving Plainfield at 5:40 a. m., returning next day. We wish the boys a pleasant time.

PARTIES wishing to practice "Real Economy" should purchase one of those fine sewing machines of Mr. Theo. Macy, whose office will be found at E. M. Laing's Hat and Cap Store. Read his advertisement and note the figures.

THE tax-collector has commenced filling up those little blanks, and in the course of a few days our citizens will know just what amount of money they will be obliged to fork over in order to square their accounts with the city this fall.

M. VERMEULE, Plainfield's oldest hatter and furrier, has a large and complete stock of Fall hats, caps, &c., also a full line of furs, robes, canes, umbrellas, &c., and last, but not least, he is selling a fine silk hat from $3.00 to $3.50.

ATTENTION is directed to the advertisement of Mr. J. E. Dowley in another column.—Mr. D. should receive the thanks of the public for reducing the price of pure milk.—Parties wishing to board out horses the coming Winter will do well to give him a call.

THE cold snap and snow in the Eastern States and Canadas have sent the woodcock toward the South, and our hunters are on the alert for this fine game bird. The Messrs. Ohl Bros. have been particularly successful in bagging this species of game the past week.

AND now the boys who follow the hazy lanterns of the Administration party desire to know when Gov. Parker is to speak in Plainfield, probably with the desire to illuminate our streets with another grand display in honor of his visit here. Keep cool, boys, we will advise you by posters.

A WHITE CAPE was found in Peace street the next morning after the Grand Republican demonstration on Thursday evening last in honor of their victories (?) in Ohio, Indiana and West Virginia. The wearer probably got "tired" and "took a rest" during the parade, forgetting his cape when time to start for home.

THE Y. M. C. A. offer a pleasing programme for their monthly reception on Tuesday evening. Mrs. Montanye, the former popular soprano of Grace church choir, and Miss Roberts one of our own favorites is announced. The address will be delivered by Rev. Dr. Yerkes. Exercises begin at a quarter before 8 o'clock.

NEARLY three hundred seats were sold on Monday for the Y. M. C. A. course of entertainments. There is however a good supply of desirable seats yet remaining, and we suggest to those who contemplate patronizing the course to secure their seats without delay. It is the cheapest way of enjoying one the best series of entertainments ever offered in our city.

JOHN KANE is still selling fresh fish at his well-known reasonable rates. His wagon will stop in front of your door for orders. John, being incapacitated for doing heavy manual labor in consequence of injuries received some time since, has taken up the present business and desires a share of public patronage. He deserves it.

A HORSE and buggy, left hitched to a tree in Laing's Stable Yard by the owner, last Thursday evening, on the occasion of the Republican procession, was stolen by some parties unknown and has not since been recovered. Persons should not leave their animals hitched on the occasion of such great gatherings, when so many strangers are in town, without first informing the hands about the place.

THE danger consequent in the practice of young lads jumping on and off passing coal trains, in the vicinity of the depot, was well illustrated on Tuesday noon last, when a young lad named Gilligan, going to school, caught on a passing train, and in attempting to jump off, fell, and narrowly escaped being run over. As it was his hands and knees were cut and bruised. It is about time it became our painful duty to record a serious accident happening from this careless and forbidden practice.

MANY of Newark's roughs accompanied the companies of torchlight processionists from that city last Thursday evening on the occasion of the grand Republican demonstration in Plainfield in honor of the Democratic victories achieved in Indiana and West Virginia, also gains in Ohio. They could be distinguished by a portion of them being armed with pickets from some poor unfortunate's fence, with which they marched along the sidewalk, jostling, pushing and ready to hit over the head any one who dared [illegible]

JOHN L. LAING, Esq., is building an addition to his residence on Second Street.

A NEW shingle should be hung out at Evona, inscribed with the name of Dr. Sills.

THE Grand Jury of Union County have been discharged after finding seventy-two bills of indictment.

LOOK OUT for large sale of furniture at Laing's Hall next week. Date will be announced by posters.

GOV. PARKER will address the voters of Plainfield and surrounding country at Laing's Hall, next Thursday evening.

THE Young Men's Tilden and Hendricks' Reform Club, also the Workingmen's Club, hold weekly meetings in their Club Room on North Avenue.

MRS. PROUTY will give a concert in the old Second Baptist church next Monday evening for the benefit of Rev. Mr. Burch, pastor of the colored people's church.

SNOW fell on Sunday morning last so as to cover the ground with its whiteness. The oldest inhabitant in this section fails to remember snow falling so early in October.

THE Democratic banner bravely withstood the tremendous strain caused by the high wind Saturday evening last. The Republican banner was drawn in when the wind began to blow.

THE Central Times publishes a vote taken on a train of cars on the Central railroad the other day, which favored Hayes and Wheeler, and calls it another "straw." We think the recent elections were "straws," showing which way the election is going.

PRIVATE amateur pigeon shooting matches and rifle practice among some of our young men and merchants is now of frequent occurrence, and considerable skill is often displayed among the contestants. Prizes are sometimes shot for, the last being a silver cup.

THE second meeting of the Plainfield Sabbath-School Normal Class will be held Monday evening, Oct. 23d, in the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association, at 8 o'clock. The subject will be a Specimen Lesson, to be conducted by James McGee, Esq.

MANY new buildings are in course of erection in Plainfield, among which we notice a fine mansard roof dwelling house in course of erection corner of Sycamore and Sixth Streets, by Murphy & Brewster. Go where you will about our beautiful city, the signs are in favor of prosperity.

A LARGE delegation from Scotch Plains, who attended the Democratic ratification meeting last Thursday, came in a hay rigging, driven by Uncle Jake Coles, of Scotch Plains. They attracted much attention along the route; cheers, and waving of handkerchiefs by the ladies, greeting them.

GRACE CHURCH, corner of Sixth and Sycamore street, was formally reopened last Sunday, Bishop Scarborough presiding. The services where of an impressive character. The interior of the church was handsomely and appropriately trimmed and decorated with flowers; &c. A fine overture was rendered on the organ.

MR. G. MAYNER'S new residence on Park avenue is now completed and is the handsomest building in that section. The workmanship reflects credit upon the builders, Messrs. Isaac Pangborn, mason, and John Chandler, carpenter. Mr. Robert Searles, landscape gardener, has handsomely graded and sodded about the building.

DURING the parade of the Republicans on Thursday evening last (in honor of the recent victories?) a cannon was fired in front of Dreier's Clothing Store on Cherry Street, which shattered to atoms four large panes of glass in one of the show windows of the establishment. It is stated that clothing was abstracted from the windows afterward by parties unknown.

UNION COUNTY is to have the pleasure (?) of a murder trial. Ellen Shelton, the colored woman, who a short time ago was arrested for throwing her deformed infant child in an old well at Westfield, thereby causing its death, has been indicted by the Grand Jury for murder in the first degree. She plead not guilty and the trial has been set down for the 23d instant.

OUR young friend, Wm. H. Egbert (formerly with R. MacDonald) has leased the new and handsome store in Coward's building, Cherry street, near Front, and proposes opening the same on or about the 26th instant as a first-class grocery store, with a new and carefully selected stock. Mr. Egbert has a thorough knowledge of the business and we bespeak for him a liberal patronage.

THE probabilities are that the coming winter will be a severe one, for one season generally sets off another—warm summer a cold winter; dry spring a wet autumn. If this theory be accepted as true, then we may expect a cold and severe winter. And now, before the severity of it sets in, every one should be getting ready. As there will be need of help, humane people should inaugurate some plan by which the poor may be assisted.

FEW of our citizens are probably aware that there is an extensive gum drop manufacturing establishment in our city. The Clark Manufacturing Company, of New York, occupy two large buildings on Church Street, adjoining the railroad, and employ a large number of hands, turning out on an average 1,000 pounds of gum and licorice drops a day. The establishment is under the charge and supervision of our fellow townsman, John D. Titsworth.

THE recent sudden frosts have caused consternation to the housewife, who suddenly found her choice and favorite plants blighted in a single night by the pinching touch of Jack Frost. Those beautiful plants and flowers which were so much admired in the dooryard of the late Dr. Martin's residence, have suddenly disappeared in consequence of the appearance of Master Jack, but through the careful foresight of their guardians, the Misses Martins, they have been removed to warmer quarters to live until another Fall.

A NUMBER of young lads, ranging in age from seven to twelve years of age, created quite an excitement on Saturday evening last, by marching through our principal streets with flags, banners and lanterns emblazoned with the name of Tilden and Hendricks, headed by a drum corp (?) composed of a son of Ham, who vigorously rattled away on a tin pan with a pair of drum sticks, and a son of Erin who furnished music (?) from a fife. They numbered about thirty and heartily cheered for Tilden and Hendricks as they passed under the Republican banner on Front Street.

RUMORS have been current in New York city, Newark and other papers, the past few days, of a row between the processionists of the Republican party in Plainfield last Thursday evening, and a Democrat, wherein the latter was severely beaten by a negro and has since died from his injuries. The whole truth of the matter is this: While the procession was passing through North avenue, near the depot, one of the many roughs who accompanied the visitors from Newark and Elizabeth, forming a part of the sidewalk brigade, caught up a brick from the pile in front of the new building being erected by Frank McIntyre, and threw it into the ranks of a company of colored processionists. One of the company immediately left the ranks and catching the offender gave him just what he deserved, a good thrashing; but as to his dying, there is no fear of that. He will be found at the polls next November voting early and often for the party whose cause he espoused when he received his drubbing.—Hayes and Wheeler.

Target Practice.

Co. E, 3d Reg., of this city, will go to Flemington, Nov. 2nd, to indulge in target practice. Those who desire to contribute something toward constituting a prize, may do so by informing Capt. Wm. Smith of their desire, who will thankfully receive the [illegible]

ANOTHER DEMOCRATIC RALLY.

Last Thursday evening the Democracy of Plainfield held another of their grand meetings at Laing's Hall, which was packed with the friends of Reform and Honest Government, despite the fact that the Republicans were holding a grand rally meeting in the old Presbyterian church, in honor of their "recent victories," including Indiana and West Virginia, and had a grand torchlight procession besides, which no doubt was anticipated by the managers to draw listeners away from the democratic meeting. Not so, however; the large and respectable assemblage present were too much interested in the sound and sensible talk of the speakers to leave the Hall to look at a tinselled show until after the meeting was over, when, with transparency emblazoned with the names of the States carried by the friends of Tilden and Hendricks, with the majorities obtained, were carried to the sidewalk in front of the Hall, and the cheers and enthusiasm which everywhere greeted its appearance manifested the joy of the people at this omen of victory for the great cause of Reform. The meeting was opened by Mr. John H. Jackson, President of the Young Men's Tilden and Hendrick's Reform Club, after which Hon. Joseph W. Yates was chosen chairman of the evening. The first speaker was Hon. Andrew H. Dawson, formerly of Georgia, who in his animated and spirited manner entered into a thorough analysis of the inner spirit and motives governing the Republican party in their position towards the South. They say they hate the South because they are Southerners and were rebels—but Generals Longstreet and Mosby are both Southerners and were rebels, yet they do not hate Longstreet and Mosby; but on the contrary they pat them on their backs and give them front seats and fat offices. But Longstreet and Mosby are Republicans and the other Southerners are Democrats. Then, after investigating the matter, we find that the reason the Republicans hate the Southerners is not because they are Southerners and rebels, but for the same reason that they hate us, because they are Democrats. Then he went into a vivid description of the eloquent appeal of his cousin "Jim Blaine" to the Widow Mulligan's son, depicting in truthful colors the utter degradation of the railroad jobber and the disgrace that would be brought upon our country if he should be made Secretary of State, as he most assuredly would be in case of Hayes' election. He then entered into a soul-stirring appeal in behalf of our oppressed and tyrannized Southern brethren, who, though years ago led into the fearful error of secession, have since heartily repented of the false step and are now earnestly and prayerfully in humiliation of spirit seeking for that protection from the National Government which all its citizens are entitled by its Constitution to receive. And he showed clearly and conclusively how the whole country would be benefitted by restoring to all parts of our land that liberty, happiness and sincerity for which their forefathers as well as ours so bravely fought to establish in the grand old Revolutionary days. He took his seat amid round after round of applause. He was followed by Hon. D. F. Sawyer, closing with Hon. Hugh L. Cole. In each case the speakers presented facts for the consideration of their hearers, weighing heavily against the present corrupt administration, facts that were stubborn, as all who listened to them will testify. Sound argument, not bombast, bloody shirt and funny stories, were the tenor of the remarks of each speaker. The quiet attention which was devoted to the remarks of the talented speakers by the large assemblage present betokened that they were there to hear the truth, not to witness a tinselled display of torch-bearing men and boys. The meeting adjourned with hearty cheers for Tilden, Hendricks and Reform.

Personals.

WM. MOORE, Esq., owner of the City Hotel property, and well-known railroad contractor, has taken up his residence near Plainfield, on the Jacques property, in the vicinity of Evona. We extend a hearty welcome to "Uncle Billy," and trust his change of base will prove beneficial to him—both financially and socially.

WE cordially welcome our young friend and fellow-citizen, Judge Suydam, into the matrimonial ranks.

IN THE LIST of passengers who sailed for London last Saturday in the steamer Erin, we noticed the name of Thos. B. Stillman, eldest son of Dr. Chas. H. Stillman of this city. He intends spending a year or more at the celebrated German University of Heidelberg, perfecting himself in the special branches of science which have occupied his attention for the last few years. For the last two years he has been Assistant Prof. of Chemistry in Stevens' Institute, Hoboken, N. J.

We this morning received a visit from our friend and school-mate, Albert Coles, son of Jacob Coles, Scotch Plains, who has been engaged in the Nursery business in Mississippi for several years. Bert is a staunch Democrat and says Mississippi is going all right for Tilden and Reform.

We are pleased to announce that our young friend George F. Brown, of North Plainfield, has formed a copartnership with his brother and cousin, under the firm name of G. F. & G. E. Brown & Co., who will continue the Window Shade business at the old stand of the well-known and established house of Joshua Brown, deceased, No. 315 Canal street, New York. The business will be conducted by the new firm on the same honest and fair dealing basis which characterized the former proprietor. We wish the new firm success.

HON. JOSEPHUS SHANK, former editor and proprietor of a paper in Rahway, has purchased the interest in the Hudson County Democrat, and has made the journal politically for Tilden and Hendricks. We extend greetings and well wishes for the future prosperity of the Democrat under its new departure.

We are sorry to learn of the continued illness of our young friend John Mahl, who is suffering from a relapse of typhoid fever.

It is with regret we learn of the sudden death of Mr. Edward Whitehead, son of Frazee Whitehead, of this city. He had visited his parents in this city last week and returned to his home in Newark on Saturday and on Sunday was taken suddenly ill and died. He was consumptive. His funeral occurred in this city on Wednesday.

Mr. Samuel D. Frazee and daughters rendered some fine vocal music at the Republican mass meeting last Thursday, which was loudly applauded.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Last Wednesday afternoon, as Mr. John E. Caffrey, wife and daughter, of this place, were taking a pleasure drive over the mountain road leading from here to Feltville, the breeching of the harness broke as the carriage was descending the hill on the Feltville side, and the horse becoming frightened ran away, overturning the carriage at the turn of the road at the foot of the hill, burying the inmates beneath the debris, the horse freeing himself and running a short distance. Four young gentlemen from Plainfield and Evona, who were hunting in the vicinity, witnessed the accident, and hastening to the scene righted the wrecked carriage and freed Mr. and Mrs. Caffrey who were beneath. The daughter, who had alighted at the top of the hill to walk down, escaped the accident. Mr. Caffrey was found to be uninjured, but Mrs. C. received a shocking scalp wound over the right eye, the skull being laid bare. The gentlemen promptly procured handkerchiefs and water and succeeded in stopping the blood and binding up the wound; afterward conveying the three unfortunates to Scotch Plains in their own vehicle, from whence they were taken to their home in Westfield in a friend's carriage, where Mrs. Caffrey's wound was dressed by Dr. Gale. It was a most miraculous escape from severe injury or death, and it was a most providential circumstance that help was at hand.

THE plans for the proposed new Public Hall on the site of the old Presbyterian church may now be seen at J. B. Coward's office. Already there has been subscribed about two hundred and fifty shares of the stock, which, when issued, will be $100 each. It is the intention to organize under a charter granted by the Legislature in 1874. $10,000 of the stock must first be paid in. The building will be devoted to stores on the first floor, offices on the second, and large lodge room on third. The Hall will be on the ground floor in the rear. The lot is 64 feet in width by 142 feet deep, with privilege of purchasing an additional strip of 20 feet in rear. The Hall will be 64x120 feet in dimensions with suitable stage. There will be two galleries and the hall will seat from 1,200 to 1,500 persons. The approximate cost will be $65,000.

LAING'S HALL will be packed next Thursday evening to listen to honest Joel Parker.

State Agricultural Society Fair.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Directors of the New Jersey State Agricultural Society, was held at Elizabeth yesterday, October 18th. The report of the Treasurer was made, showing:

Balance on hand July, 1876		$5,722 40
Receipts for year 1876		9,804 41
Paid on Loan	$2,000 00
Expenses, Fair Premiums, &c.	10,618 94
		12,618 94
Balance		$2,908 16

After which reports were made of the losses and failures of New York and other State and County fairs. New York State loses $6,000 by her fair. New Jersey is the only State known thus far to have realized money from fairs this year, which evidences the fact that the management of the Society is well conducted by its officers. The success of the fair was due to the untiring efforts of the Executive Committee, who brought forward and introduced new features this year, to make the fair pleasant and interesting, with an eye to keep down expenses. Mr. Sam'l Manning, of this city, is Treasurer of the Society.

JOEL PARKER, New Jersey's favorite son, will address the Democrats and all friends of Reform, at Laing's Hall, Thursday evening, October 26.

FIRE MATTERS.

Tuesday last, about 1.30, flames were discovered issuing from the roof of a dwelling house belonging to the Joseph Clark estate, on Fourth street, two doors above the gas house. A neighbor immediately rushed up into the attic and by kicking a hole into the roof where the fire originated, soon put out the flames with a few pails of water. An alarm, however, called out the department, which was, as usual, prompt in answering to the call. The fire was caused by sparks from a locomotive. The building was insured in the Manufacturers' Insurance Co., of Newark, B. Frank Webster, of this city, agent, who promptly adjusted the slight loss occasioned by the fire.

Sparks from a tinner's furnace on top of Bolce's new building, Somerset street, again set fire to the roof of Peter Wooden's residence adjoining, on Monday afternoon last. The flames were promptly extinguished, although an alarm of fire was raised which called out the entire department.

About half-past eight o'clock, Monday evening last, a bright light in the drying room of Perine's Hat Factory, adjoining Stiger's Lane, indicated that a fire was in progress there, and an alarm was sounded in consequence, which brought the entire department to the scene. By that time, however, the flames were extinguished by the application of few pails of water dashed on the fire by neighbors and citizens who entered the room. The fire originated from a stove which had ignited the window casing and surrounding wood work.

AN alarm of fire was caused about half-past eight Wednesday evening last by the reflection from a fire in Washington Valley, beyond the "Rock." The department turned out.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

The new brick warerooms of L. B. Bolce, on Somerset street, are rapidly nearing completion.

Messrs. Wadley & Hoxie, contractors for macadamizing Johnson Drive, have fenced up the entrance to that thoroughfare at both ends to keep vehicles from traversing the same until the road is completed.

The "Rock House" still attracts numbers of visitors to its hospitable portals, despite the cool weather. Many visit this historic spot to view the magnificent panorama below the mountain top. The Messrs. Staats Bros., proprietors, propose giving a series of socials the coming winter, so that those fond of a delightful drive and a splendid moonlight view, besides enjoying the pleasures of dancing, may be afforded an opportunity of so doing.

Mr. Peter Wooden has caused a substantial board walk to be laid in front of his property on Emily Street, between Somerset and Duer Streets, which is a needed improvement.

The voters of Somerset County, comprising the First Assembly District, should not fail to return their candidate for Assembly honors, Hon. James J. Bergen, to Trenton, by a handsome majority. Mr. Bergen proved himself an able and honest representative at the last session of the Legislature.

Mr. Wm. Smalley is moving the old house from off the lot adjoining his property on Somerset Street, opposite Emily Street, and proposes to erect thereon a handsome brick building.

Mr. Freshan, who was so severely burned on the occasion of the burning of his residence in North Plainfield, Sunday night, Oct. 1st, still lies in a precarious state with a possibility of his not recovering.

Mr. Elias Allen shot a grey eagle on the mountain back of his residence in Washington Valley a few days ago, measuring six feet from tip to tip of wings.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

At the regular monthly meeting of Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company, No. 1, of Scotch Plains, held on Monday evening last, Geo. Squire was elected first assistant, Jas. A. Baker, second assistant, and O. M. Putnam, secretary, these offices having become vacant at this time owing to the resignation of members. After the election a fine collation was served up.

The Scotch Plains Mutual Theft Detecting Society have made arrangements to hold their regular meetings in the rooms of Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company, instead of Academy Hall as heretofore.

A very handsome Hayes and Wheeler banner was suspended over Front street, opposite the residence of Geo. Harper, Esq., in this village during the past week. While contemplating the cause it represents, we are forcibly reminded of the words, "we what have seen," &c. We understand that this "royal standard" was secured to the Scotch Plains Republicans through the influence and liberality of a distinguished gentleman and admirer of Mr. Hayes, residing here.

We are glad to chronicle another decided improvement in this village. We all remember that miserable, dilapidated old plank walk, or more properly speaking, man-trap, that for so long a time disgraced Park avenue; and many, too, have been the hard thoughts at the innumerable hair-breadth escapes, as one victim after another has undertaken to "run the gauntlet" of that walk on a dark night. The nuisance has been removed "without expense to the country," and a gravel walk is being substituted, which, when completed, will be both safe and serviceable. Next to the improvement made on the avenue, we can conceive of no enterprise on the village of [illegible]

Y. M. C. A. Lecture Course.

We think we can do no better justice to the coming Lecture Course of the Y. M. C. A. than to re-produce the following prepared article from the Central Times of last week, which covers the whole territory:

A glance at the Course of Lectures and other entertainments, announced elsewhere, to be given under the management of the Y. M. C. A. during the fall and winter, will satisfy the reader at once of its merits. There is variety enough to suit all refined tastes, as the list includes Lectures, Readings, Music, and an evening devoted to the exposure of the Secrets of Spiritualism. In the first place, there is John B. Gough, the unequalled orator, who was better and more vigorous than ever last season. The Association is exceedingly fortunate in again securing Mr. Gough, as he has declined all engagements for the East, with a few exceptions, his time being given to the West. He will open the Course October 30, with his lecture on "Habit," which has never been delivered in this city. On Thanksgiving night, Mr. W. Irving Bishop will give his wonderful entertainment exposing and also explaining the characteristic phenomena of spiritualism. While securely bound to a chair and under the eyes of a committee and the audience, he will perform those mysterious feats that have astonished so many thousands in this country and across the water, and he will also explain the deception practised by the so-called spiritualists. Mr. Bishop has undertaken these exposures at solicitation of prominent gentlemen, including Revs. Wm. M. Taylor, J. T. Duryea, Theo. L. Cuyler, W. I. Buddington, and many others. Charles Roberts, Jr., has been selected as the reader for the Course, whose fame in that capacity is unequalled; he is a favorite with Plainfield audiences; his programme will be interspersed with music. Then follows a lecture by Henry Vincent, one of England's brightest orators. It may not be generally known that Mr. Vincent is a historical personage. On account of the leading part he took in the Chartist agitation in England, he was arrested, tried for sedition and imprisoned for several years. His lectures on "Cromwell" and "Queen Elizabeth" delivered here were of unusual interest. The subject selected for this season is "Giants and Dwarfs" as illustrated in the lives of men and nations and in wise men and fools. The next in order, to assist in the variety, is the humorous DeCordova, and he will tell us about "Mrs. Grundy," who has a relative living in Plainfield. The subject is very suggestive and the lecture, we know to be full of practical common sense as well as humor. The Rev. Robt. Collyer, although the last of the lecturers, is by no means the least. Since his appearance among us some years since when he delivered his lecture on "Clear Grit," the Association has repeatedly tried to re-engage him, but until the present time were unsuccessful, as his appointments were too numerous. We believe the addition of his name will give great satisfaction. His subject will be "Our Folks and Other Folks." As a fitting close, the "Young Apollo Club" will give another of their popular concerts, on the night of "Washington's Birthday," with a new programme. The success of the Club in their recent Concert established their popularity beyond a doubt. We have given this general synopsis in order that our readers may fully understand and appreciate the excellence of the entertainments offered, and it only remains for us to suggest the importance of each one securing a seat on Monday next.—Central New Jersey Times, Oct. 12.

Sudden Death at Cranford.

Michael Iseman, a resident of Cranford, but who was employed in Washington market, came home Monday night, and went to his bath room. He was found dead there Tuesday morning by his wife, who heard him come home in the night, and go to the bath room. County Physician Gillette was summoned and decided that death was the result of heart disease. Deceased was Freeholder Iseman's brother, and was a member of Hermann Lodge of Free Masons.—Elizabeth Monitor.

POTTSVILLE, PA., OCT. 16.—To-day sentence was pronounced by the full bench on several of the Mollie Maguires previously convicted.

John Kehoe, Dennis F. Canning, Michael O'Brien and Christopher Donnelly were sent up for fourteen years each. These prisoners, with Frank McHugh and Patrick Dolan, Sr., were arrested May 6 for conspiracy with intent to murder Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Major. The first five were also convicted August 12 of assault with intent to kill Wm. M. Thomas; and Dolan was convicted August 29 of conspiracy to murder Gomer James. Dolan was sentenced to a year's imprisonment.

John Gibbons, John Norris and Edward Monaghan each received sentences of seven years. The first two were arrested May 6 and convicted August 12 of assault with intent to kill Wm. M. Thomas. E. Monaghan was arrested July 12 as an accessory before the fact of the murder of Gomer James.

Barney N. Boyle was sent up for three years, his crime being perjury in the case of the murder of Policeman Yost, for which James Carroll and others were sentenced to death. Boyle and several of his companions swore falsely to an alibi.

James Duffy and Frank O'Neal were each sentenced to two and a half years State Prison. O'Neal was arrested with Gibbons and Norris, and convicted of conspiracy as an accessory after the fact to the murder of James. Duffy was another of the false-swearing witnesses in the case of the murderers of Policeman Yost.

Thomas Donaghue, sentenced to two years, was one of the conspirators who plotted to kill Thomas and afterwards helped John Gibbons to make his escape.

Sentence upon a number of other prisoners was suspended.

Emperor Grant's Last Order.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, It has been satisfactorily shown to me that insurrection and domestic violence exist in several counties of the State of South Carolina, and that certain combinations of men against law exist in many counties of said State known as "rifle clubs," who ride up and down by day and night in arms murdering some peaceable citizens and intimidating others, which combinations, although forbidden by the laws of the State, cannot be controlled or suppressed by the ordinary course of justice; and

Whereas, It is provided in the Constitution of the United States that the United States shall protect every State in this Union on the application of the Legislature, or of the Executive when the Legislature cannot be convened, against domestic violence; and

Whereas, By laws in pursuance of the above, it is provided (in the Laws of the United States) that in all cases of insurrection in any State (or of obstruction to the laws thereof) it shall be lawful for the President of the United States, on application of the Legislature of such State, or of the Executive when the Legislature cannot be convened, to call for the militia of any other State or States, or to employ such part of the land or naval forces as shall be judged necessary for the purpose of suppressing such insurrection, or causing the laws to be duly executed; and

Whereas, The Legislature of said State is not now in session, and cannot be convened in time to meet the present emergency, and the Executive of said State, under section 4 of article 4 of the Constitution, and of the laws passed in pursuance thereof, has therefore made application to me in the premises for such part of the military force of the United States as may be necessary and adequate to protect said State and the citizens thereof against domestic violence, and to enforce the due execution of the laws; and

Whereas, It is required that, whenever it may be necessary in the judgment of the President to use the military force for the purpose aforesaid, he shall forthwith, by proclamation, command such insurgents to disperse and retire peaceably to their respective homes within a limited time; now therefore,

I, Ulysses S. Grant, President of the United States, do hereby make proclamation and command all persons engaged in said unlawful and insurrectionary proceedings to disperse and retire peaceably to their respective abodes within three days from this date, and hereafter abandon said combinations and submit themselves to the laws and constituted authorities of said State, and I invoke the aid and co-operation of all good citizens thereof to uphold the laws and preserve the public peace.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this seventeenth day of October, 1876, and of the independence of the United States 101.

[L. S.] U. S. GRANT.
By the President—
John L. Cadwalader, Acting Sec'y of State.

BAYONETS TO EXECUTE THE [illegible]

The following order was issued in pursuance of the action taken at the Cabinet meeting, for the protection of the [illegible] of South Carolina:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON CITY, October 17, 1876.
General W. T. Sherman, Commanding United States Army:

SIR: In view of the existing condition of affairs in South Carolina, there is a possibility that the proclamation of the President of this date may be disregarded. To provide against such a contingency, you will immediately order all the available force in the military division of the Atlantic to report to General Ruger, commanding at Columbia, S. C., and instruct that officer to dispose his troops in such localities that they may be most speedily and effectually used in case of resistance to the authority of the United States.

It is hoped that a collision may thus be avoided, but you will instruct General Ruger to let it be known that it is the fixed purpose of the Government to carry out the spirit of the proclamation and to sustain it by the military force of the General Government, supplemented, if necessary, by the militia of the various States. Very respectfully your obedient servant, (Signed) J. D. CAMERON, Secretary of War.

First [illegible] election, then Thanksgiving.

BUSINESS LOCALS.

A Card.

Having leased the new store of J. B. Coward on Cherry street, near Front, I propose opening the same as a first-class grocery store, about the 26th or 27th instant, with a new and carefully selected stock of choice family groceries and will be pleased to receive the patronage of my friends and the public generally. I propose to sell none but first-class goods and at the lowest cash prices. Respectfully, WM. H. EGBERT.

Two little brothers, aged respectively six and eight years, children of Mrs. Noah Hampson, of Lewis street, Paterson, while playing in the house, got possession of a seven-barrel revolver. While it was in the younger brother's hands the weapon was discharged and the ball entered the elder boy's back under the left shoulder blade and lodged against the back bone. The little fellow, who seemed greatly frightened, bravely refrained from crying, and was carried into the office of Dr. Garnett, who extracted the ball and dressed the wound. No serious results are expected.

Bonnell's Steam Excavator.

The above wonderful invention of our townsman, Mr. John P. Bonnell, was given a private trial in Spencer street yesterday in the presence of ex-Governor Randolph and a few gentlemen. In seventeen minutes it made a trench sixty feet in length, four feet wide and three feet deep. The machine worked satisfactory to all present, and was pronounced the very best machine for the purpose intended ever invented.—Eliz. Herald.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A MODEL FIRE DEPARTMENT—HOW IT WORKED.

It was in a suburban town which shall be nameless. The chief engineer of the fire department in a neighboring town came over on a visit to the chief of another department, whose name is Jacobs, and it struck Jacobs that it would be a first-rate idea to show the visitor how very efficient Jacobs' fire department is. So Jacobs got an old tar barrel, and set it upon the roof of his stable and touched it off with a match. When it began to burn pretty freely he gave the signal for the alarm, remarking at the same time to the visitor:—

"You'll see that fire put out in about four seconds by the boys."

They waited four seconds for the boys, but they didn't come. They waited fifteen minutes and still nobody came. Jacobs was furious, and as the barrel was burning very near to the roof, sent a boy round to the nearest engine house to ascertain what was the matter. When the boy came back he said the firemen were all out at a picnic excepting the members of Washy Hose, who had gone over the river to fight a couple of roosters.

By this time the roof of the barn was on fire, and Jacobs was pretty near crazy. The visitor wanted to telegraph home for his department, but Jacobs alleged that he'd let the eternal earth burn before he'd consent to such a thing. Then he sent a man on a fast horse to bring the boys in from that picnic, and by the time they reached the engine house the stable was in ashes, and Peter's stable next door had begun to burn. So when the engines arrived, Jacobs directed them to play upon that, and then they got to work; but after pumping for awhile without getting any water, Jacobs was about losing his senses, when Mr. McAllister came up and mentioned that the Supervisors had let all the water out of the reservoir so as to clean it. Then Jacobs sat down to fan himself, and to try and decide whether to commit suicide or leave the country. And the visitor went home with the idea that he hadn't much to learn from Jacobs about extinguishing fires.

HE THOUGHT IT WAS A TUNNEL.—A young couple boarded the north bound Kentucky express. It was at once observed by the passengers that they were "some spoons." The young man, evidently, was acquainted with the road, for as the train approached the tunnel, about ten miles back from Covington he prepared for business. Just before the road reaches the tunnel, however, it passes through a short, dark bridge. As the train shot into the bridge the young man, not to miss an inch more of the supposed tunnel opportunity than he could help, threw his arms around the girl's waist and proceeded to spread his mouth all over hers. Just as he got properly adjusted, had secured a moderate suction power about the girl's sweet mouth and was tightening his grip around her shoulders till the bones fairly snapped, the train as suddenly whizzed into daylight as the moment before it rumbled into darkness. The young man dropped the girl as if she were poison. To aggravate the matter still more, after they did get into the tunnel, some one in the immediate vicinity touched up a green light and nipped another embrace just about half-way. People who can't repress their freshness ought to hire a stall.

YOUNG HOUSEKEEPERS.

Be satisfied to commence on a small scale. It is too common for young housekeepers to begin where their mothers ended. Buy all that is necessary to work skillfully with; adorn your home with all that will render it comfortable. Do not look at richer homes and covet their costly furniture. If secret dissatisfaction is ready to spring up, go a step further and visit the homes of the suffering poor; behold the dark, cheerless apartments, insufficient clothing, and absence of all the comforts and refinements of social life, and then return to your home with a joyful spirit. You will then be prepared to meet your husband with a grateful heart, and be ready to appreciate the toil and self-denial which he has endured in the business world to surround you with the delights of home, and you will co-operate cheerfully with him in so arranging your expenses that his mind will not be constantly harrassed lest his family expenditures may encroach upon public payments.

Be independent; a young housekeeper never needed greater moral courage than she does now, to resist the arrogance of fashion. Do not let the Smiths or the Browns decide what you must have; neither let them hold the strings of your purse. You know best what you can and ought to afford. It matters but little what people think, provided you are true to yourself, to right and duty, and keep your expenses within your means.

NEW JERSEY
Enamel Paint Company,
RARITAN, NEW JERSEY.
Manufacturers of
Bradley's Enamel Paint.
Mixed Ready for Use, in any shade, Tint or Color desired.

THESE Paints are composed of the purest and best materials known to painters; the principal ingredients being Pure White LEAD, ZINC, and LINSEED OIL, which are made to unite in a homogeneous mass by the addition of other materials which add greatly to the durability, elasticity, beauty and strength of the Paint. The whole are chemically combined so that the pigments are held in permanent solution, thus forming a new compound which dries on the surface and adheres firmly to it, thus forming a Smooth, Glossy, Firm, Elastic, Beautiful and Durable Paint.

The Oil, which is the real life of the Paint, cannot leave it and be absorbed by the substance to which it is applied, as it does in paints mixed in the ordinary way, & thus leave the pigment dry and chalky, to wash & rub off in few months. This paint is unaffected by changes of temperature, is perfectly impervious to the action of water, is well adapted to all classes of work, & is in every way a better paint for either inside or outside work or boat painting than any other Paint known to the trade, and will last at least three times as long as the best Lead and Oil mixed in the ordinary way.

These Paints are Ready for use.

Are easily applied by any one, require no mixing, stirring or addition of dryers.

Liberal Inducements to Dealers.

And full satisfaction guaranteed to their Customers.

Sold by the Gallon, Keg or Barrel. Orders attended to promptly. For Price Mist and Sample Color Card, Address,

CAUTION!

The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, or all parties using the same otherwise put down or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.:

"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Theo. A. Carman some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filled over one thousand pages and counsel were over two weeks in summing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an air-tight iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing stratum. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is of steel, made sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Carman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defence contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement had been clearly proved."

SHERIFF'S SALE.—Union County Common Pleas—Charles T. Glen vs. Frank M. Bacon. Fi. fa. de bo. et ter. On docketed judgment.

By virtue of the above-stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale at public vendue, at the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on Wednesday, the 1st day of November, A. D. 1876, at two o'clock p. m., of said day, all the following described tract or parcel of land and premises, situate, lying and being in the township of Westfield, Union county, New Jersey:

Beginning at the southeasterly corner of the old stage road leading from Scotch Plains to Plainfield and the road leading to the old railroad depot; thence along the easterly side of said [illegible] road south forty-six degrees east [illegible] and twenty feet to a stake on the [illegible]; thence at right angles to said last-mentioned course one hundred and twenty feet; thence at right angles to said last-mentioned course and parallel with said first-mentioned course and said road leading to the depot, to the southeasterly corner of land owned by Freeman Reading; thence along said Reading's land and at right angles to said course last mentioned fifty-four feet; thence along said Reading's land and parallel with said road leading to the depot to the southerly side of said stage road and thence along the southerly side of said stage road to the place of beginning.

Excepting therefrom, nevertheless, a lot of land heretofore sold by Samuel Ward and wife to one Adaline Ward.

Being the same land and premises conveyed to said Bacon by deed recorded in Book 85 of Deeds for Union county, page 506, etc.

Also, all the following described tract or parcel of land and premises, situate, lying and being in the city of Plainfield, Union county, New Jersey:

Beginning at a stake in the west side of Rose street one hundred and twenty-five feet northerly from the northwesterly corner of Randolph road and Rose street, as shown on city map; thence northerly on the west side of Rose street two hundred feet; thence westerly at right angles to Rose street two hundred feet to Lake avenue; thence southerly along the easterly side of Lake avenue two hundred feet to a stake; thence easterly at right angles with Lake avenue two hundred feet to the place of beginning; comprising lots Nos. [illegible], in block "A" on the Wooden Placer.

Excepting there so much as was conveyed to Rose W. Titsworth by deed recorded in Book [illegible] of Deeds for Union county, page [illegible].

Being part of the same land and premises conveyed by deed recorded in Book 96 of Deeds for Union county, page 506, &c.

POETRY.

"SOME TIME."

"Some time," when all life's lessons have been learned,
And sun and stars forevermore have set,
The things which our weak judgment here has spurned,
The things o'er which we grieved with lashes wet,
Will flash on us, and light dark night,
As stars shine most in deeper tints of blue;
And we shall see how all God's plans were right,
And what we deemed reproof was love most true.

And we shall see how, while we frown and sigh,
God's plans go on as best for you and me;
And how He heeded not our feeble cry,
Because His wisdom to the end could see.
And e'en as prudent parents disallow
Too much of sweet to craving babyhood,
So God, perhaps, is keeping from us now
Life's sweetest things because it seemeth good.

And if some time commingled with life's wine
We find the wormwood, and rebel and shrink,
Be sure a wiser hand than yours or mine
Pours out the portion for our lips to drink;
And if some friend of ours is lying low,
Where human kisses cannot reach his face,
O! do not blame the loving Father so,
But wear your sorrow with obedient grace.

And you shall shortly know that lengthen'd breath
Is not the fairest gift God gives His friend;
Sometimes the sable pall of death
Conceals the sweetest boon His love can send.
If we could push ajar the gates of life,
And stand within, and all God's workings see,
We could interpret all this doubt and strife,
And for each mystery could find a key.

But not to-day. Then be content, poor heart;
God's plans, like lilies, pure and white, unfold;
We must not tear the close-shut leaves apart,
Time will reveal the calyxes of gold;
And when, through patient toil, we reach the land
Where tired feet, with sandals loosed, may rest,
Where we may clearly know and understand,
I think that we will say—"God knows the best."

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

AFTER MANY DAYS.

AN old man lay in the little chamber off the best room of Abram Linmar's unpretentious farmhouse, listening half unconscious to the sound of voices, now in stern demand, again in humble pleading and protestation. His long gray hair and beard swept the snowy linen of the pillows, against which his bronzed, sunken face seemed darker and more hollow; his bony fingers beat the coverlid in anger and sympathy, as his ear followed the words of the speakers; and a glitter sparkled in his eyes, which had for five weary weeks been glazed and dulled with fever.

"I wish they'd come in," he muttered to himself; "I want to know all about it; I was asleep at the first and can't guess how it began, but it is evident the good people of this house are in deep trouble."

He had hardly ceased when the door of the apartment opened and Dame Linmar stepped in with noiseless foot of the anxious nurse. Seeing that her patient was awake and was looking eagerly and inquiringly at her, she approached the bedside and to him in a voice as sad and mournful as sorrow can train a woman's tones to be.

"Awake, sir? Has the talking in the next room disturbed you?"

"It has not broken my rest, but what I have heard has disturbed my mind. What is it? I only know that somebody gives you till next Monday morning to leave this comfortable house."

"It is about a mortgage, sir. But here comes my poor, old husband; he will explain it better than I can."

At the word the door opened again and Abram Linmar entered with bowed head and firmly compressed lips.

"He's gone, Janet, and taken the very last grain of hope I nurtured. Not even the memory of the service I rendered him two-and-twenty years ago in saving his life when he was at the mercy of the highway men availed nothing, and we shall have to leave the roof that has sheltered us so long, doubly dear to me as the work of my own hands and the scene of genial associations."

"Farmer Lindmar, excuse the impatience of my curiosity," said the low voice of the invalid, "I know a little of your trouble. May I not know all?"

"Alas, sir," replied the hopeless host, "the story is short as our future stay within these walls will be brief. Five years ago my son in New York, being embarrassed, I borrowed from my next neighbor, a very wealthy man, the sum of eight thousand dollars and gave him a mortgage on this—my farm of one hundred acres. Instead of gaining relief, my son became more embarrassed, failed utterly, and, from the grief of his disappointment, died. I have paid two thousand of the principal and now tender a third thousand, and beg that my creditor will not proceed to extremities. But I plead to a stone. He acknowledges that for years he has coveted my land, separating, as it does, two parcels of his own, and, indeed, he has made me many offers for it; now that he has the power to compel a sale, he swears that he will force the matter and outbid any competitor, as he has the means at his command. He says that he offers me in return all the money and interest I have paid to him in consideration of my quietly surrendering possession, and I suppose I must. There's no other way."

"And I have been a charge on you in such dire extremity," said the sick man, feebly; "it would have been better for you to have left me to die by the roadside, broken down and fever parched where you found me. Many a precious dollar you must have parted with in my long illness for physicians and their nostrums. I am too weak to even thank you properly."

"Say not so. The little you have had in money or attendance will never help to impoverish us. It was bread cast upon the waters and it will return." The good farmer said this almost cheerfully, for he reflected how much better off at worst he and his dame and daughter Marian were, than the homeless, friendless old man who lay in his care.

"After many days; after many days," continued the sick man, finishing the promise. "But I am afraid, farmer, that neither you nor I will live till it comes back."

"Why, don't talk so, sir," broke in Dame Linmar, "it's been a real comfort for us to do the little we could for you. We are only paying a debt we owe. Our boy died away from home among strangers, and they were good and kind to him when things were so bad that he would not let us know, fearing our distress; the kindness he got from strangers we are glad to pay back in installments."

"Would that I could aid you, as I have read of men apparently poor and helpless doing for those who have succored or shown kindness to them, but my poverty is no disguise. I am poor, indeed; absolutely without a dollar or a friend in the world. Coming this way, I was only wandering in search of death to avoid the almshouse, and it grieves me that I should have fallen where I am so heavy and unfortunate a charge."

"Say no more, sir, or you will take from our performance all the merit which attaches to it," said the farmer, "we would be in worse need than you if we would afford so little relief, grudgingly or withhold it."

"You speak like one who knows man's constant dependence, even in his highest fortune. But you have not yet told me who is this inexorable creditor. Tell me, that I may correct good report, if such a lie comes to my ear."

"He is rich, respected and of excellent repute. His name is Asahel Pencost."

No stimulant could have so strengthened the weak muscles of the invalid as the simple pronouncing of that name did. He rose to his elbow, his deep set eyes glowing with excitement.

"Asahel Pencost," he repeated; "do you know where he came from?"

"Yes. He settled in these parts nearly forty years ago, coming from near old Gloucester in Massachusetts, I've heard say, though information on that point is not very definite."

"How old a man is he? Was he married when he came here?"

"He is about seventy years of age; he brought a wife and one son with him, but his wife died and he married again." It was the dame, true to her womanly instincts, who was readiest when neighborly news were asked or asking.

"Yes! yes!" eagerly continued the sick man, "and the son—what became of him?"

"He quarreled with his stern father, Asahel Pencost, some say, and went away over twenty years ago, and has not been heard from since," replied Mrs. Linmar. "He was too gentle and true a lad, though, to have been born of such a father."

"Triumph and defeat in a single breath," murmured the invalid, sinking back.

Presently he revived and said to the farmer, slowly, yet with firm accent:

"You need not concern yourself further. What county is this?"

"Wayne."

"Then you have the ablest man in Wayne county to help you for your debtor. I said just now I was the poorest; I was mistaken. When Asahel Pencost comes on Monday to seize your farm, tell him that Marcus Whitney is your security for further discharge of the mortgage and warn him to accept whatever terms are proposed."

Monday morning came, and with it Asahel Pencost, a deputy sheriff and a serving man. Farmer Linmar and his wife had spent an uneasy interval, notwithstanding the assurance of their involuntary guest; and every attempt they had made in their quiet, unobtrusive way to gain insight into the reason of the stranger's confidence had been met with evasion too patent to be further questioned. The first they knew of the old man's name was when he called himself Whitney; of his career, connection with the rich, arrogant neighbor Pencost, or his intentions, they were as profoundly ignorant as before they took him into their troubled confidence. He had been removed from the bed in the little chamber to the old haircloth sofa, which stood between the two windows that lighted the best room, and sat, propped up with pillows, his eyes closed and head thrown forward, while the preliminary demands were made by the creditor previous to turning the business over to the sheriff's officer.

"You can't pay, and won't accede to my most liberal proposition?" exclaimed the great man, with an unctuous and sonorous voice, "then you'll have to take the consequences." Turning to the officer, and waving his hand in a circle that seemed to sweep already with a creditor's grasp the goods and lands of the unfortunate debtor, he said:

"Mr. Bimble, you will please to"—

"Wait a minute," said the invalid, sharply, giving a termination not intended to Pencost's invocation. "Please to, wait a little, Mr. Bimble, till there is need of your interference."

"And pray, sir, who are you?" demanded Mr Pencost.

"Security for these good people's debts, and their protection against the avarice, greed, and persecution of Asahel Pencost Whitney, formerly of Little Salem, Massachusetts, who is"—

"Your only brother," interrupted the pale and terror-stricken man; "for Heaven's sake, forbear."

"You didn't lose your memory with your name," sneered the invalid, "though your presence of mind forsakes you. You never expected to see me again?"

"I knew you would come some time, sure as death, but not so very soon."

"Soon! Call you eight-and-thirty years soon? You have enjoyed the fruits of your wrong doing, fraud—aye, theft—longer than Heaven permits most men to do. I thought I was under its ban not to rise again, when I sank fainting into the ditch a mile or so from here, six weeks ago; but now I see I was simply subject to its wise, just and fortunate decrees. See! Asahel Whitney—calling yourself Pencost—here is a paper bearing your debt in money to me. You took everything I had in the world, and if I can strip you I'll do it. Here is the amount compounded annually at six per cent; it amounts to two hundred and eighty six thousand and forty dollars. Can you pay it?

"Have you no mercy? Will you not hear me," begged the now humbled man, in tears. "Farmer Linmar, plead you to him to listen to me; he will grant you so much."

"I'll say this much—he that hath no mercy on his fellows, will hardly get it in his direst need," returned Mr. Linmar.

"You almost steel my purpose, while you do dissuade me," said Marcus Whitney. "I need mercy, and I'll show it, though I am afraid it is misplaced. Thirty-eight years ago, my brother, standing there, was trustee for my portion of our father's estate. I was married and away at sea, my wife and child in his care, as well as the money that had been left to me. I had been gone for five years, during all of which time my letters to my wife were suppressed, and those to me were falsified. When I came back to Little Salem it was to find my family all gone. My wife had been persuaded of my death and married with my brother, who had sold out and gone, no one knew where. From that day to this I have wandered up and down in the land seeking my own, till my footsteps were led hither. Another time will do then, traitor, to talk of money reparation. Tell me, now, where is my son!"

This demand was made in so earnest a tone that it told of no compromise; that debt, at least, was to be atoned for.

"I don't know," replied the shrinking man. He recognized that he might be forgiven many of the paltry dollars claimed, but this claim for flesh and blood would not be forgone a jot nor tittle."

"You are telling me true?"

"It is no time to do otherwise now. When we quarreled I told him he was no son of mine, and he swore he would not bear my name; he left, and left no trace to track him by, though I tried hard at the time. Some ten years ago I heard that he had taken his mother's name and was calling himself Lambert Morrison; whether the information was true or not I cannot say; but, true or false, that is the last I have ever heard."

"Go out into the world and seek my boy till you find him; seek as I sought you, in poverty, hunger and dirt, sorrow and sadness, for weary, weary years. Bring him to me only, and I'll forgive you every penny that you wronged me of." The father spoke, and, speaking, told the sole object of his life's secret. Money is nothing to a man going down to the grave, but love and kindred all.

"Already the bread has returned," said the farmer, detaining Asahel Pencost, who was turning to leave the house. "Your son," he continued, addressing the invalid on the sofa, "is in New York, if Lambert Morrison and the handsome, bright boy Morris Pencost, I remember, be one and the same. Wife, get those letters. It was he who nursed our boy in his last illness and closed his eyes. I might have known it. They were playfellows, and he would not see his friend suffer uncared for, and he had too sorrowful remembrances to allow him to disclose his identity to us in Wayne."

The farmer was right, and within ten days the missing son was clasped in his father's arms and bore the third name of his life, the right one, at last—Lambert Morrison Whitney.

The fall of the proud squire was generally hailed in Wayne, for he was one of those men whose temperament won few friends, and whose station repelled them. He received at his brother's hands enough to yield him a modest income, and busied himself in the indistinguishable throng of the great city. Marcus Whitney lived on in Wayne, and gladly bestowed his benediction on the marriage of his son and Farmer Linmar's only remaining child, Marian; that is, she was "child" to the farmer and dame, though turned of twenty-six—and peace and happiness have crowned the succeeding days of the warm-hearted people so strangely thrown together.

She was very pretty, wore a pleasant smile, and when she entered an avenue car last Wednesday evening, seven young men immediately vacated their seats and delighted themselves by casting alternate glances at the fair one and the vacant spaces. She took the nearest seat with a nod to all and a bewitching smile; six young men bowed and sat down, while one young man bowed and stood up and imagined himself a martyr.

She carried a beautiful child in her arms, and it was very playful. One young man thought she was its aunt, and two others were quite positive she was not its mother. Meanwhile the child amused itself. It climbed and crowed, and laughed and played —and the lady laughed and petted it.

One of the young men, a sacrilegious wretch, commenced humming 'I wish I were a baby,' when the child, kicking in a playful mood, knocked a handkerchief from the lady's lap on the floor. There were four of the young men who made a simultaneous dive for the muslin, and two of them got it; they came up smiling, neither willing to relax his grasp, and two hands extended it toward the fair one. An old lady on the opposite seat tittered, and the young lady held the child in front of her face and blushed. The young men looked at each other and then at the ——. Their mouths and eyes opened; each handed it to the other; something fell upon the floor, and the two young men silently departed from the car. The other men looked out of the windows, and somebody whimpered, 'It wasn't a handkerchief.'

They came walking down the centre passage of the Main building of the Centennial to-day—two beautiful and fashionable young ladies, over whose heads probably nineteen or twenty summers had passed. They chatted pleasantly as they passed along, and turned into one of the less frequented passages, and sat down on a bench to rest, when one remarked to the other: "Minnie, where is —— stopping?" She said she had forgotten, but would look, as she had the address on a slip of paper in her pocket. When the search commenced for that slip of paper, as it was somewhere in the big pocket attached to her dress, out came a small lace handkerchief, then a large linen one, a broken bracelet, spool of thread, pocket book, two false teeth (her mother's probably, which she was taking to the dentist's to get fixed) a piece of white flannel, small box of face powder, two crooked hair pins, which looked as tho' they had done service as button hooks, a thimble, one garter about fifteen inches in length, paper of pins, a fan, a broken comb, ivory end of a parasol, knife, bottle of smelling salts, two pieces of ribbon, three No. 2 soiled gloves—different colors—paper of bon bons, cigar holder, two buttons, and at last the slip of paper which she had been looking for. We did not see anything more taken out of that pocket, so we can't say whether it was empty or not; but we began to think it was like a magician's magic bag. After looking over the above inventory, who will ever dare again to abuse a small boy about the contents of his pocket?

He walked into the drug store and said: "Gimme a glass of that sody." "What syrup will you have?" said the boy. "Syrup! don't want syrup; I want sody!" The boy put the glass under the faucet and turned on the soda water full head. As it struck the glass with a hissing noise the stranger said: "Gosh all Jerusalem! what's that?" and starting backward, fell over a stool, and as he tried to get up he brushed against a perfumery stand, which caused a bottle to fall off and strike him on the back of the head. At the same time the boy, thinking something serious had happened, dropped the glass on the marble counter, breaking it into ninety-nine pieces. The stranger with his hand to the back of his head, and his eyes protruding with fright, started for the street at a speed of twenty miles an hour, and ran plump into the arms of a policeman in the Park, who collared him and said: "What's the matter?" "Matter!" said the stranger, "why, the drug store has exploded, and I'm the only man saved!"

Mr. Merriwether paused at the gate, as he adjusted his continental oil-cloth coat and gave his torch the proper slant over his shoulder, to shout to his neighbor across the way: "It is a time that demands men; men of nerve and intelligence and courage, men of clear ideas and pure convictions, and the citizen who stands idly waiting when the country calls him, is heartless and negligent and unpatriotic." And then Mrs. Merriwether's voice was heard floating over the front fence like the song of a bird in the night: "Erastus Merriwether! If you go off without splitting up enough wood for the kitchen stove, I'll do some haymaking in that carrotty hair o'yours, that'll make you wish this country never had a president." And it is just such chilling influences as these that shut so many of our best men out of active public life.

A writer in the Lake City (Colorado) Silver World has the following to say about a ball thereabouts: We had a rude log cabin, the starlight gleaming through the chinks between the logs, vieing with the feeble gleams of tallow dips succeeded in making the darkness visible, and the very small space absolutely necessary for the dancers floored with warped and gnarled whip sawed lumber, for which we paid at the rate of $100 for 1,000 feet. Then there were but eight ladies present participating in the dance, though every lady of the town was present; there were a goodly assemblage of men, but such an uncouth party rarely graced a ball-room, for proud was he who could boast a coat to hide his woolen shirt, and the two or three who had white shirts were at once the admiration and envy of the rest.

"I don't think," said old Mrs. Prowe, "that book-keeping is a very sedative employment. They must get," she added thoughtfully, "so much exercise running up the columns."

Match factories are the best places to look for amateur pugilists. The employees are constantly engaged in boxing matches.

What piece of carpentry becomes a gem as soon as finished?—A-gate.

Fight your own battles. Hoe your own row. Ask no favors of anyone, and you'll succeed five thousand times better than one who is always beseeching some one's patronage. No one will ever help you as you help yourself, because no one will be so heartily interested in your affairs. The first step will not be such a long one, perhaps; but, carving your way up the mountain, you make each one lead to another, and stand firm in that while you chop still another out. Men who have made fortunes are not those who had five thousand dollars given them to start with, but started fair with a well-earned dollar or two. Men who have, by their own exertions, acquired fame, have not been thrust into popularity by puffs begged or paid for, or given in friendly spirit; they have outstretched their hand and touched the public heart. Men who win love do their own wooing, and I never knew a man to fail so signally as one who had induced his affectionate grandmamma to speak a good word for him. Whether you work for fame, for love, for money, or for anything else, work with your hands, heart and brain. Say "I will!" and some day you will conquer.— Never let any man have it to say "I have dragged you up." Too many friends hurt a man more than none at all.—Grace Greenwood.

In broiling a steak in an irreproachable manner, first see that the fire is clear and not too much of it; open wide all the drafts to carry off all the smoke that is made during the progress of broiling; then see that the gridiron is smooth and quite clean, rub it well with whiting or chalk, lay on your steak. Do not pound it, nor, after it is on the fire, stick a fork into it, or the juice will escape. Neither salt nor pepper it; do that on the dish. Throw a little salt on the fire, and put over the steak; place the gridiron close on the range for the first few minutes, to carbonize the surface, then turn it over quickly, to carbonize the other side. Now it should be exposed to a slower fire, to do which place two bricks on their edges and rest the gridiron on them. The steak should be turned repeatedly and carefully, and when it feels firm to the touch it is rare, and if so liked it should be taken off, laid on a hot dish, in which one and one-half ounces of butter has been melted, less than one-half teaspoonful of salt, a pinch of white pepper and one teaspoonful of chopped parsley well mixed; lay the steak on one side and then on the other. Serve immediately.

There is no book so cheap as a newspaper; none so interesting, because it consists of a variety measured out in suitable proportions as to the time and quality. Being new every week, it invites to a habit of reading, and affords an easy and agreeable mode of acquiring knowledge so essential to the welfare of the individual and the community. It causes many an hour to pass away pleasantly and profitably, which would otherwise have been spent in idleness and mischief. Reader, if you are not already a subscriber to the CONSTITUTIONALIST, send along your name and residence, and if at the end of six months you do not confess these declarations to be true, you may discontinue the paper by paying all arrearages.

During one of the expeditions into the Caucasus, Ignatieff ordered a battery of artillery under a captain named Sergueieff, to shell a column of the enemy that threatened to outflank his forces. The order was obeyed, but the shells did not explode, and produced no more effect than round shot. Ignatieff galloped to the battery and addressed the captain in language rather more vigorous than complimentary. He calmly lifted a shell in one hand and applied a portfire to the fuse with the other; then remarked to the general: "As you see, general, the powder is bad." The general sprung from his horse and embraced him, crying: "Sergueieff, my son, you are braver than I."

A man called in the other day, says the Dexter (Me.) Gazette, and requested us to stop the paper. We thought the matter over, and concluded not to do it. We have got presses and other machines in here that cost about $2,000, types almost without number, and other materials necessary for running a first class local paper and job printing establishment, and we can't and won't stop this paper and things connected therewith, to gratify the whim of man, woman, or child, in the circle of our association. We did, however, consent to remove the man's name from our list book, which was quite another thing. We hope we shall not again be requested to "stop the Gazette," for, unless our mind undergoes a great change, we shall not do it.

Neuralgia in the face and heads of women is on the increase, as compared with the number of instances of the disease among men; and this is believed to be due to the inferior protection afforded by the mode of which women now cover their heads, or rather in the way in which they neglect to cover their heads. It is not only one of the most common maladies of woman, but one of the most painful and difficult of treatment. It is also a cause of much mental depression, and is regarded by physicians as leading more often to habits of intemperance among women than any other disease.

Not long since a dark mahogany-colored female obtained a position in a San Antonio family as a cook, says the Thompson Street Swell, and a few days after she met an acquaintance who asked how she liked her new place.

"Ise gwine to leab 'em," was the answer.

"Dey 'bases you, does dey?"

"Dreffle! Wuss den foah de 'bellion. Dey locks up all de perwisions and asks foah de change from de market money."

"Why, dat's no better dan stealin'!" was the indignant reply.

The boys of Detroit seem to be going down hill in their morals of late. Sunday, one of the legion, who had always been noted for his respectful demeanor toward the great public, observed an old citizen yawning and gaping on a street corner and said to him: "Better not open your mouth too wide." "Why?" was the surprised query. "There's a law agin opening a saloon on Sunday," continued the sinful child as he slid for the middle of the street.

Two pretty actresses, born within three months of each other, got to discussing their ages, each, as a matter of course, claiming to be younger than the other. Compliments are exchanged and fist-cuffs are imminent, when one says to the other, with a profound courtesy: "My love, I withdraw all that I have said. Alas! I have never known who my mother was. Perhaps it was you."

A lady, in describing to an irreverent boy an occurrence in which his father figured, closed by remarking: "I am sorry to say that the thing ended by your father losing his temper." "Did father lose his temper?" exclaimed the young scapegrace; "then I hope he'll never find it again, for it was the worst temper I ever heard of."

"Does our constant chatter disturb you?" asked one of the three talkative young ladies of a sober-looking fellow passenger. "No, ma'am; I've been married nigh on to thirty years," was the reply.

A GRAND
MASS MEETING!
WILL BE HELD
BY THE FRIENDS OF
Reform, Economy & Better Times,
WITHOUT REGARD TO PREVIOUS PARTY TIES, ON Tuesday Evening, Oct. 31st,
AT 8 O'CLOCK,
—AT—
LAING'S HALL.
Gov. Jos. D. Bedle,
WILL BE PRESENT AND ADDRESS THE MEETING.

All who love their country and desire its prosperity, and the restoration of the Constitutional Government of the days of Washington, Jefferson and Jackson, are cordially invited to be present.

GRANT-HAYESISM.

The Cincinnati Convention, which nominated Governor Hayes for President, adopted the following resolution:

"The National Administration merits commendation for its honorable work in the management of domestic and foreign affairs, and President Grant deserves the continued and hearty gratitude of the American people for his patriotism and his immense services in war and in peace."

Mr. Hayes, in accepting the nomination, declared that the resolutions of the Convention were in full accord with his views.

The Convention endorsed Grantism.

Mr. Hayes endorsed all the Convention did.

Therefore, Grant-Hayesim is a neutral compound.

The Indianapolis News, a Republican paper, in accounting for the defeat of its party in Indiana, charges disaster upon Grantism.

The News says:

"The party was too heavily handicapped by the Administration."

"It had an old man of the sea to carry, and the load was too much."

"If it had not been for Grantism the crisis of Reform never would have been seductive."

"Questions about Belknap's corruptions are not answered by a claim of past loyalty."

"Charges of Credit Mobilier stealing or Freedman's Bank swindling are not silenced by denunciations of traitors."

"The past crimes of Democrats do not blot out the record of the whiskey ring, tracked to the very door of the White House."

"Nor do recollections of past glories and noble services, destroy the remembrances of misused authority, vulgar self-seeking and demoralization in every branch of public service."

That is the testimony of a Republican journal, and in holding up to merited odium the fulminations of Blaine, Kilpatrick, Bob Ingersoll, and kindred partisan orators, it reveals the obnoxious features of Grantism.

Grantism and Hayesism are one and the same thing.

The latter means the former, with all its terrible corruptions.

Reform is the only remedy.

To secure Reform there must be a thorough change of Administration.

VOTE FOR
TILDEN AND HENDRICKS.

ATTENTION, REFORMERS!

Labor from now to the day of election, and you will have the proud satisfaction of seeing the old Democratic flag floating from the dome of the National capitol, an emblem of peace and fraternity, of good-will, of recovered business prosperity, of a united and contented people, and affording protection to every man, of whatever condition in life.

Labor for the good cause, Democrats and Liberals!

Cast aside all personal contention!
Down with Corruption and Waste!
Up with Honesty and Economy!
Vote for
TILDEN AND HENDRICKS!

The poison of corruption permeates the Administration, from the White House and the Cabinet all the way down to the lowest tide-waiter in the Custom House. The very life of the Republic demands a thorough change—a sweeping reform in public affairs. VOTE FOR TILDEN!

We cannot give the South to us with bayonets. The policy of love prospers, the policy of hate ruins.

HEAR THE EVIDENCE.

"I am deeply interested in the success of the Democratic nominee for President, as it is my conviction that it is in his power to introduce reforms in the Government, which are of the utmost importance to its sacred interests."

"His history through many years bears abundant testimony to his high qualification for the performance of this duty. If I knew of any one better qualified to perform it than Governor Tilden I should vote for him regardless of politics, but I do not."

"Harmony and good feeling between all sections of the country should be established at once, and preserved, and let us make use of the men best qualified to accomplish the work."

"I do not forget that we were involved in a violent war a few years ago, nor can I be insensible to the courage and valor displayed on every field by our countrymen, but I am not unmindful of the readiness with which the vanquished accepted the result, and the noble bearing of our brave adversaries under the trials and sufferings imposed upon them since that time."

"I hope we will soon have a Chief Magistrate who will see equity, harmony and fraternity extended impartially to the inhabitants of our whole land."

The distinguished American who recently expressed the foregoing sentiments, was a brave leader of the Union army. No man dare insinuate disloyalty against him.

He was in the thickest of the fight.

He is a patriotic lover of his country.

His name is GEN. JOSEPH HOOKER—"Fighting Joe Hooker," as the soldiers called him.

General Hooker's vote will be for Tilden and Hendricks.

Every patriot should follow his example.

AN OUTRAGE.

The proclamation of President Grant, and the accompanying decree of War Secretary Cameron, ordering into South Carolina the armed forces of the United States, inflict violence upon the reserved rights of all the people of the American Union.

To-day South Carolina may be trodden down by the hoof of military tyranny, pushed forward by partisan intrigue, and to-morrow it may be New Jersey or New York.

No citizen of any State is safe, unless unjustifiable interference on the part of the National Government is sternly and speedily rebuked.

There does not exist and has not existed in South Carolina, sufficient cause for the President to interpose the strong arm of military authority.

That the conspirators at Washington know, and for want of real cause, the proclamation blunderingly draws upon the imaginative to give it even the color of plausible right. We are not surprised that Secretary of State Fish withheld his attesting signature from such a document.

The design is to interfere with the political affairs of the people, and, if possible, prevent the free-will choice of that high-toned, able and honest man, Wade Hampton, as Governor of the pilfered State of South Carolina.

That is the scheme of Grant, Cameron, and the Carpet Baggers.

It is a dangerous assault upon popular rights not only at the South, but North, West and East.

Rebuke them at the November polls!

OHIO.

The following address of the Democratic State Committee of Ohio is worth perusing. Its remarks are pointed and true:

To the Democracy and Friends of Reform in Ohio: The elections held this month in Ohio, Indiana and West Virginia, demonstrate not only the possibility, but the almost certainty of the election of Tilden and Hendricks. In 1868 and 1872 the vote of West Virginia was cast for Grant. The Democratic majority of over 10,000 just given in that State makes it absolutely certain that she will vote for Tilden and Hendricks. In 1868 and 1872 Indiana gave Grant a majority of 9,000 and 22,000. She has now elected a Democratic Governor by over 5,000 majority, and no reasonable doubt can be entertained that her vote will be given for Tilden and Hendricks. In 1868 Ohio gave Grant over 41,000 majority; and in 1872 over 37,000. The Republicans now carry the State by but little over 6,000 plurality on the State ticket and less than 4,000 on Congressmen in a vote of over 600,000. In view of these facts the rational probabilities are that Tilden and Hendricks will be elected, even should Ohio go for Hayes and Wheeler. But will she go for Hayes and Wheeler? Not if the Democracy and the friends of reform do their duty. A gain of 1 per cent. on the vote of the late election, or in other words, a change of two votes in every election precinct, would give us the State, and it is quite possible for us to make the gain. We, therefore, appeal to you to put forth your best efforts for the cause. Let no one for a moment doubt the possibility of a success. Go into the battle believing that victory is within your reach, and fight boldly and [illegible] with the determination to achieve it. You have every incentive that can actuate freemen to earnest exertion. Your business is depressed as it never before was depressed. You will get no relief without a change of rulers. You are burdened with taxation as no other people are burdened. You must displace the men who thus oppress you. The name of republic has become a synonym for extravagance. You must drive out the squanderers of your treasure and replace them by the friends of economy. Corruption has permeated every department and brought free institutions into disgrace throughout the civilized world. You must drive the corruptionists from power and replace them by honest men. It is vain to hope for reform from the Republican party. It has held power for nearly sixteen years, and each succeeding year of its rule has developed an increase of official iniquity. If with all its manifest sins upon its head, it can obtain another lease of power, corruption will become an established principle in the Government and honest rule will be in danger of perpetual extinction; and if political power can be held by exciting race and sectional prejudices and by perpetuating the animosities that grew out of the war, and elections in the South can be carried by Federal bayonets, sweeping arrests and a general intimidation of the electors, white and black, who oppose the Republican party, and, if an Administration that not only sanctions these enormities but aids in their perpetration can escape the condemnation of the people, it will soon be idle to talk of free elections, or to hope for a nation united by common interests, equal rights and fraternal feeling, as well as by the Constitution and the laws. Fellow-citizens, you have a ticket worthy of your support. Tilden and Hendricks are men of deeds and not men of promises. Their election would rescue the country from the abyss into which it is plunged, and a bright day of peace, prosperity and happiness would dawn upon the land.

Onward! Democrats of New Jersey! Let every man do his whole duty, and November will witness the glorious dawn of Peace, Prosperity and Happiness.

The Army and Navy last year cost the people of the United States about $70,000,000,

Seventy Million Dollars—almost enough to run the whole Government, if honestly and economically administered. In the face of such wanton prodigality no wonder times are hard. Reform! Reform! REFORM! There is no other possible remedy.

The people are tired of hard times and official profligacy.

THIRD ASSEMBLY DISTRICT.

The Third Assembly District Convention, to nominate a candidate to be supported at the coming election, was held in Congress Hall, Summit, Thursday afternoon last. Every township and ward in the District was fully represented, and beside the delegates, a large number of Democrats from all parts of the County were present and much enthusiasm was manifested. A band of music enlivened the proceedings.

The Convention being called to order, W. M. Chapman, Esq., of Summit, was chosen to preside, and on being conducted to the Chair made a ringing speech, which was frequently applauded. Mr. W. H. Peterson, of Rahway, was elected Secretary. After the examination of Credentials, appointment of Committees, etc., Cornelius A. Runkle, Esq., of New Providence, was unanimously nominated amid the greatest enthusiasm.

Mr. Runkle represents New Providence in the Board of Freeholders and is a lawyer of marked ability, and would make just such a representative as the Third District needs, and with proper effort he can be elected by a good majority.

The Committee on Resolutions reported a series of pointed resolutions that were unanimously adopted with three hearty cheers.

After the nomination able speeches were made by several gentlemen present. In the evening a rousing mass meeting was held in Congress Hall, which proved inadequate to accommodate the vast numbers in attendance.—At the meeting speeches were made by Mr. Runkle, J. Daggett Hunt, Esq., Hon. Orestes Cleveland, Hon. Andrew Dutcher, Wm. L. Flagg, and others.—A band discoursed sweet music and a glee club lent additional attractions to the meeting by singing some campaign songs acceptably. This was decidedly the largest and most enthusiastic meeting ever held in that section of the County and clearly proves that the upper Townships will roll up large majorities for the Democratic nominees on the seventh of November.

THE REBEL DEBT.

The persistency with which the Republican speakers and the Republican press have alleged that the payment of the Confederate War Claims, or as it is better known, the Rebel Debt, would be one of the consequences of the election of Gov. Tilden, has elicited from the Governor a letter, which we give below, defining his position on that question. It is, as have been all utterances from that source, a clear, able and convincing communication.

Whether it will have the effect of arresting the circulation of the slander is, however, in view of the course heretofore pursued by the parties above mentioned, very questionable, as in their creed a lie, well stuck to, is at any time as good as the truth. The following is the letter:

NEW YORK, Oct. 24, 1876.

To the Hon. ABRAM S. HEWITT:

Sir:—I have received your letter informing me that Republicans high in authority are publicly representing that "the South desire not without hope" to obtain payment for losses by the late war and to have "provision" made for the rebel debt and for the losses of slaves."

As the payment of such losses and claims was not deemed important enough to deserve the notice of either Convention at the time it was held, you also ask me to state my views in regard to their recognition by the Government.

Though disposed myself to abide by the issue as made up already, I have no hesitation to comply with your request.

The Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution expressly provides as follows:

"The validity of the public debt of the United States authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion, shall not be questioned. But neither the United States, nor any State, shall assume or pay ANY debt or obligation, incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave, but ALL such debts, obligations and claims, shall be held illegal and void."

This amendment has been repeatedly approved and agreed to by Democratic State Conventions of the South. It was unanimously adopted as a part of the platform of the Democratic National Convention at St. Louis, on the 28th of June, and was declared by that platform to be "universally accepted as a final settlement of the controversies that engendered civil war."

My own position on this subject had been previously declared on many occasions, and particularly in my first annual message of Jan. 5th, 1875.

In that document, I stated that the Southern people were "bound by the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Constitutional Amendments; that they had joined at National Conventions in the nomination of candidates and in the declaration of principles and purposes, which form an authentic acceptance of the results of the war, embodied in the last three amendments to the organic law of the Federal Union, and that they had, by the suffrages of all their voters, at the last national election, completed the proof that now they only seek to share with us, and to maintain the common rights of American local self-government, in a fraternal union, under the old flag with one Constitution and one destiny."

I declared at the same time:

"The questions settled by the war are never to be re-opened. The adoption of the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Federal Constitution closed one great era in our politics. It marked the end forever of the system of human slavery, and of the struggles that grew out of that system. These amendments have been conclusively adopted, and they have been accepted in good faith by all political organizations and the people of all sections. They close the chapter; they are and must be final; all parties hereafter must accept and stand upon them, and henceforth our politicians are to turn upon questions of the present and the future, and not upon those of the settled and final Past."

Should I be elected President, the provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment will, so far as depends on me, be maintained, executed and enforced in perfect and absolute good faith. No rebel debt will be assumed or paid. No claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave will be allowed. No claim for any loss or damage incurred by disloyal persons arising from the late war, whether covered by the Fourteenth Amendment or not, will be recognized or paid. The cotton tax will not be refunded. I shall deem it my duty to veto every bill providing for the assumption or payment of any such debts, losses, damages, claims, or for the refunding of any such tax.

The danger to the National Treasury is not from claims of persons who aided the rebellion, but from claims of persons residing in the Southern States or having property in those States, who were, or pretended to be, or who for the sake of being allowed now pretend to have been, loyal to the Government of the Union. Such claims even of loyal persons, where they are [illegible] caused by the operations of war, have been disposed of by the public law of civilized nations, condemned by the adjudications of the Supreme Court of the United States, and only find any status by [illegible] of Congress. These claims have become stale and are often tainted with fraud. They are mostly already owned in whole or in part by claim agents, by speculators or lobbyists, who have no equity against the tax-payers or the public. They should, in all cases, be scrutinized with jealous care.

The calamities to individuals which were inflicted by the late war are, for the most part, irreparable. The Government cannot recall to life the million of our youth who went to untimely graves, nor compensate the sufferings or sorrow of their relatives or friends. It cannot re-adjust, between individuals, the burdens of taxation hitherto borne, or of debts incurred to sustain the Government, which are yet to be paid. It cannot apportion anew, among our citizens, the damages or losses [illegible] [illegible]

Very respectfully yours,
SAMUEL J. TILDEN.

Mr. Hewitt, in a speech delivered at Cooper Union last week, admirably dissected the champion of Grant-Hayesism—Mr. Blaine—by reviewing the serious charges of misconduct against him as a Member of Congress, and the arts employed to arrest the work of an Investigating Committee in his case. Mr. Blaine was taken suddenly ill, but as suddenly recovered after Congress adjourned, and is now recklessly asserting falsehoods from the stump. Congress meets again in December, and the House Committee will make the Maine politician squirm worse than he ever did before. Many ugly circumstances remain to be cleared up.

Smith Ely, Jr., is the Democratic candidate for Mayor of New York. There is not a taint upon his life-long record as a citizen, merchant and public officer, yet, that libel monger, the New York Times, will no doubt endeavor to brand him a thief and perjurer. The villainous partisan defamation of such a journal makes thousands of Democratic votes.

The Democratic majority in Indiana on the aggregate vote for Congressman, is 6,186. In Ohio, the Republican majority on a similar vote, is next to nothing. There is no certainty that Hayes will carry his own State. In fact, since Grant issued his infamous order against South Carolina, it is more than doubtful.

The Ohio, Indiana and West Virginia elections played havoc with Chandler's corruption fund. He is now hard at work squeezing money out of somewhere in order to perpetuate the Grant dynasty. Do your duty, Democrats and Liberals, and the end of official dishonesty will be the happy result.

A large slice of Chandler's $2,500,000 corruption fund was spent the other day in a Brooklyn barbecue and torch-light procession. The people fully understand the exertions a corrupt cabal are making to keep themselves in power. Put the County of Kings down for 15,000 majority for Tilden and Hendricks.

Dr. Dayton E. Decker, of Elizabeth and E. B. Stryker, of Westfield, were nominated for Coroners at the Union County Democratic Convention, held at Elizabeth, Oct. 17th.

Grant's Administration cannot send an army to conquer Sitting Bull, but it can transport to South Carolina an immense military force to prevent the election of Wade Hampton as Governor.

Grant once pompously exclaimed, "Let no guilty man escape," but when Babcock was suspected and Belknap scotched, he ordered a halt. Let us have a change!

Grant once said "Let us have peace," and now he sends his soldiers South to provoke, if possible, discord. Let us have a change!

The people are in earnest for a reformation of all abuses in the management of public affairs.

Hayesism is shaky—even in New Hampshire. Put another State in the doubtful column.

The great need of the present day is an honestly administered Government.

Hayes means a third-term for the evils of Grant. Let us have a change!

Murder Will Out.

A few years ago "August Flower" was discovered to be a certain cure for Dyspepsia and Liver complaint, a few thin Dyspeptics made known to their friends how easily and quickly they had been cured by it. The great merits of GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER became heralded through the country by one sufferer to another, until without advertising, its sale has become immense. Druggists in EVERY TOWN in the United States are selling it.—No person suffering with Sour Stomach, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, indigestion, low spirits, etc., can take three doses without relief. Go to your Druggist, Wm. H. Voorhees, and get a bottle for 75 cents and try it. Sample bottles 10 cents.

A Pleasant Gathering.

Wednesday evening last being the tenth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. W. L. Force, a number of his friends determined to give him a surprise, and accordingly early in the evening, a goodly company assembled in the parlors of the City Hotel, which is at present the home of Mr. F., and word was sent to that gentleman and wife that they were "wanted" in the parlors. The "surprise" was a complete one, neither of the parties having any idea or inkling of the affair. After mutual congratulations all around, the guests, some fifty in number, were invited into the dining room—not to eat—but to dance, the spacious room having been cleared for that purpose, where soon busy feet were keeping time to Franze's soul-inspiring music. As Mr. and Mrs. Force entered the room their vision was greeted with the sight of innumerable presents, consisting of tinware of every imaginable shape and size, also other gifts of a more substantial and costly nature. Prominent among the offerings of their many friends was a mammoth tin cradle, in which reposed a handsome, smiling infant, their first born, so their friends said, which was the great centre of attraction during the evening, the solicitude with which the guests looked after the welfare of that baby evidencing that its friends, god-fathers and mothers were anxious for its future welfare. About half past 11 o'clock refreshments were served after which dancing was resumed and kept up until the small hours of morning. A very apropos feature of the occasion was the joining in the festivities of the evening, of a newly-wedded pair, Mr. Isaiah Force, of Flemington, N. J., and his bonnie bride, a daughter of ex-sheriff Wm. Rose, of Somerville, N. J., the happy couple having been joined in the bonds of wedlock in the parlors of the hotel at a quarter to 7 o'clock that evening by Rev. Dr. Smith, of this city, the newly-wedded pair resolving to remain and participate in the evening's enjoyment. Mr. Chris. Van Arsdale, the popular proprietor of the City Hotel, and his estimable lady did every thing in their power to make the occasion an enjoyable one and succeeded admirably. May they be the recipients of a like entertainment and good time upon the occurrence of a wedding anniversary, and may the same friends, and others, too, be there to welcome them.

GO to Laing's Hall next Tuesday evening and hear Gov. Bedle.

The Synod of New Jersey.

After three years' trial before the Elizabeth Presbytery, the New Jersey Synod, and the Presbyterian General Assembly, the famous Westfield church scandal was last night disposed of in the Presbyterian Synod in Elizabeth. Early in 1874 the Westfield church was without a pastor, and the Rev. Alexander McKelvey was invited to preach, the intention being to retain him should he make a favorable impression. This, it seems, he did, as a majority of the congregation at a parish meeting voted to extend the pastoral call to him. For some reason, however, a minority, consisting of one hundred and seventeen members, voted against his retention, and remonstrated. Notwithstanding this, the Elizabeth Presbytery placed the call in Mr. McKelvey's hands by a vote of sixteen to ten, and he accepted it, and was duly installed.

Stories not the most flattering against his reputation soon found willing ears, and the breach became so widened that many withdrew from the church.

At length the Rev. D. T. T. Sheddon and others complained to the Synod, saying that the rights and privileges of the minority had been disregarded by the Presbytery in prosecuting the case of Mr. McKelvey. The Synod sustained the complaint, on the grounds of undue haste and irregularity by the Presbytery. It also directed the Elizabeth Presbytery to review the whole subject of the calling and installation of the Rev. Mr. McKelvey, and to secure for the petitioners a full and fair hearing before determining whether or not pastoral relation of Mr. McKelvey should be continued or dissolved. This the Elizabeth Presbytery having represented that they had done, the minority again appealed to the Synod in 1875, asking a dissolution, and the Synod recommended, by a unanimous vote, that Mr. McKelvey resign.

The vote of the Synod having been erroneously announced and recorded and the minute having been prepared and adopted on the presumption that the Presbytery was sustained, the minority appealed to the General Assembly, which met in Brooklyn in May, 1875, and were sustained, and the Synod of New Jersey and the Presbytery of Elizabeth were directed and enjoined by that body to effect a dissolution of the pastoral relations.

Mr. McKelvey remained as pastor of the Westfield church until the 27th of June of this year, and then he tendered his resignation, which was accepted by the Elizabeth Presbytery.

It was then thought that the war had ceased, but the majority shortly afterward recalled Mr. McKelvey, and he has been occupying the pulpit as heretofore.

On Wednesday the case was called again before the Presbyterian Synod, and voluminous documents were presented by the minority and the majority.

A special committee was appointed, and it reported as follows, the report being adopted:

Whereas, The General Assembly at its last session directed the Synod of New Jersey to enjoin the Presbytery of Elizabeth to dissolve the pastoral relation of the Rev. Alexander McKelvey to the congregation of Westfield, inasmuch as that relation is already dissolved by the Presbytery acting by the request of the pastor in the matter and with the acquiescence of the congregation, no further action in this particular is required on the part of the Synod. But in view of the action of the Synod in 1874 and 1875, and in view of the action of the Assembly; and in view of the fact that Mr. McKelvey still exercises ministerial offices over that church as supply, the Synod is of opinion that Mr. McKelvey should discontinue ministerial labors in that congregation.—Elizabeth Herald, Oct. 20.

EVERY Democrat, Republican or Conservative who loves his country, should go and hear Gov. Bedle at Laing's Hall next Tuesday evening.

A STRIKE.

Tuesday last was an eventful day in the history of the Central Railroad, the occasion being a general strike of the locomotive engineers and a stoppage of all travel over the road.

From all the facts we have been able to gather, it appears that some time last August there was a reduction in the wages of the employees of the road and a committee from the engineers waited upon the officers, setting forth that they received less pay than the engineers of other roads in this section of the country, and received assurance that no such reduction should affect them.

It appears that on the Phillipsburg branch there are trains run by engineers at one dollar and fifty cents per trip, and these trains are called "doubles," the engineer being able to make enough trips during the day to aggregate nearly seven dollars. A few days since the prices of these trips were cut down to one dollar and twenty-five cents, and in view of the assurance of the officials of the road that there would be no reduction, this was considered a breach of faith, and the matter was referred to P. M. Arthur, Grand Master of the United Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, at Cleveland. This gentleman at once sought an interview with the officers of the road, but was told that they would not treat with him as an official of the order; a committee was appointed, who could get no satisfaction from the company. They then made certain demands upon the company, which were not entertained.

The livery and hackmen were kept busy during the day in transporting passengers to New Market, Metuchen, Elizabeth and Rahway, to take trains for New York on the Pacific and Pennsylvania roads. The strike was finally ended and a compromise effected on Wednesday, as will be seen by the following:

INTERNATIONAL BROTHERHOOD OF LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEERS,
PHILLIPSBURG, N. J., October 25, 1876.
To R. E. Ricker:

We, the undersigned committee representing the locomotive engineers in your employ, most respectfully submit the following proposition for your approval:

First—On and after October 1, 1876, the rate of wages for all engineers who have been in the service of the company for a term of two years shall be $100 per month for 2,600 miles or less. All miles run in excess of 2,600 shall be paid for pro rata, except coal and freight on the Lehigh and Susquehanna division, which shall be 2,400 miles per month, or eighty miles per day, at the same rate per month.

Second—All firemen promoted by the company to the position of engineers for the first year shall receive $75 per month for the same service, and pro rata for extra mileage.

Third—For the second year they shall receive $85 per month and pro rata for extra mileage.

Fourth—The oldest engineers in the service of the company to have the preference of engines and trains, when competent and worthy, and, in case of a surplus, the oldest in the service to have the preference of work.

This document was signed by the standing committee of the brotherhood, and below the signature was indorsed: "This document was presented by the committee of engineers to the officer representing the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and was accepted by President Knight, who indorsed it as follows:"

The above proposition is accepted.
E. C. KNIGHT,
President of the Central Railroad of N. J.
October 26, 1876.

The committee said to the President that if the company were really unable to pay expenses, they were willing to accede to the reduction of 10 per cent., but it must be on the condition that the salaries be equalized. They did not think it was fair that different men running the same train on alternate days should receive a compensation so widely different as $80 and $100 per month. The proposition offered by the men accepted the reduction of 10 per cent. and equalized the salaries. As soon as it was accepted telegrams were sent along the line by Mr. Mr. Phillips notifying the men that the difficulty had been settled and they were to resume work, which was accordingly done with but little delay.

The Westfield Monstrosity.

Late in the month of July the usually quiet town of Westfield was the scene of intense excitement, caused by the discovery of a crime not only atrocious but unexampled in its peculiar features. A woman named Moffat, living near the town, was compelled by reason of the severe drouth to look about for other means whereby to furnish water for her stock, etc. She bethought herself of an old unused well in the vicinity of her farm. She hastened thitherward and found water, and also the body of a colored infant, about three months old, whose anatomical developments were monstrous in the extreme. Nature in her prodigality had bestowed upon the dead infant four arms and three legs, and yet, with these advantages to recommend it to a wondering world, there it lay on the bottom of this unused well, telling but too plainly a story of shame, and thrusting itself forward as indisputable evidence of a fearful crime. Horrified and astonished at her wonderful and fearful discovery, she for a moment was dumbfounded. Recovering herself, she hastened away, gave the alarm, and soon succeeded in gathering a number of the town's people from all quarters, to discuss the peculiar features of the horror, and to suggest means by which the awful mystery might be unravelled. Link after link was forged in the chain of evidence, and ere long was sufficiently formed to point to the murderess. The facts learned, were as follows: In July, 1875, Ellen Shelton, a colored woman, gave birth to a child of unnatural form, and soon after went to work out for a farmer, taking the child with her. All went well until in October of the same year, when Ellen left the house, saying that she purposed taking the child to Elizabeth to have it operated upon, and if possible have its superfluous limbs amputated. She returned at night saying that she left the child with a friend in Elizabeth for medical treatment, and when ever after asked as to how the child was, would reply, "It's well, thank you." Ellen continued to reside in Westfield until her arrest, on July 29th. Ellen was brought to Elizabeth and confined in the County Jail, where she has since remained.

At 11 o'clock Monday morning last the case was called, and the prisoner, Ellen Shelton, was brought to the bar. The defendant's counsels are Messrs. P. Hamilton Gilhooley and Frank Bergen. The prisoner is about thirty years of age, of medium stature. She was dressed in a striped dress, white apron, cuffs and collars, and on her head she wore a checked turban. She did not appear to be laboring under any unusual state of mental excitement, but took her seat with the utmost composure.

Mr. Bergen wished to have the indictment set aside for the reason that the person alleged to have been murdered was unnamed in the indictment. The motion was refused. Mr. Bergen then read an affidavit of the prisoner, setting forth that she is not guilty of the crime, and that the time and place of the committing of the alleged crime is not contained in the indictment, and on these grounds wished to have the indictment set aside. The Judge refused to grant the request.

The jury was then empanelled. The defendant's counsel challenged fourteen and the State three. The jurors sworn were: James Young, foreman, Owen Farrelly, James M. Hyde, Gershom Dunn, Clark Abel, Samuel D. Ball, Alfred S. Winans, Elias B. Crane, John N. Crane, Jabez Newcomb.

The Prosecutor, General J. August Fay, opened the case on the part of the State, detailing the particulars of the crime, its locality, all of which we give above.

Mr. Bergen, on the part of the defense, asked the court that all the witnesses be requested to leave the court room while the case was on until they were wanted.

Mr. John M. C. Marsh was the first witness called, and being sworn, testified to the locality in which the crime was committed and described the map to the jurors. On Wednesday the jury rendered a verdict of "Not Guilty."

Terrible Accident.

In consequence of the strike among the railroad engineers, the Master Mechanic of the Central Railroad, Mr. G. F. Williams, engaged to run a passenger train over the road from New York on Tuesday evening last. The train, consisting of eight cars, arrived at the depot in this city at about 6:45 p. m., and after discharging a large number of passengers here, proceeded carefully toward Evona. About a half mile this side of that station, is a switch used for turning off trains on to a side track. Forty minutes previous a heavily laden passenger train, consisting of thirteen cars, passed over the road toward Philadelphia at lightning speed. Some miscreant after the passage of this train, turned the switch, took the lantern out of its place and set it on top of the switch, with the "all right" signal facing the coming train, and fastened the switch open by "chocking" it with a piece of wood. The road at this point is down grade, and Mr. Williams, although carefully feeling his way over the road, was sending his engine along at a rate of probably thirty miles an hour, when she struck this point. The result was a disastrous wreck and loss of life.

Upon leaving Communipaw, it was observed that the lamp in the head-light of the engine did not burn right, the oil overflowing and igniting. Consequently the fireman took water and poured on the flames, extinguishing them. This accounts for the fact that the head-light was not lighted at the time of the accident. When the engineer felt the engine leave the rails and bump over the cross-ties, he immediately reversed his lever and put on the steam brakes. The train kept a direct course over the ties for about 300 feet and then the locomotive plunged into the space between the two tracks, burying itself in the soft earth, and turning over on its side. The first car, which was a baggage and smoking car combined, was forced over the tender, and the second car, a smoking car, telescoped into the first car, both being reduced to atoms, except the roof of the second car, which was forced on top of the debris, directly across the track. The third car, (a passenger) was thrown off the track, and lay at an angle of about forty-five degrees alongside the tracks, and was completely wrecked. The fourth car remained stationary, but was badly twisted and broken; the fifth, sixth and seventh cars kept their course on the ties, while the eighth car remained on the tracks.

Mr. Henry Ohl, of Evona, was standing within six hundred yards of the spot when the crash came, and running across fields to the spot, with the assistance of those who escaped unhurt, immediately commenced the work of relieving those imprisoned in the forward cars by smashing in the windows so that the inmates could escape by that direction, also in removing the dead bodies of the two unfortunates killed. John Reilley's body was found among the debris of the tender and baggage car, and was terribly mutilated, Nathaniel Dennick's body was found under the ruins of the smoking car. The dead were laid on boards along side the track for the time being, and the wounded conveyed to near residences. Six were quartered in Mr. Halsey Compton's dwelling house, along the track, while Mr. Klein was taken to the residence of Mr. L. M. Rocap, a short distance away, where every possible attention was paid them by the inmates. Word was immediately despatched to Plainfield, and a corps of our physicians were soon at the spot and did all in their power to alleviate the sufferings of the poor unfortunates.

Of course the wildest excitement existed for a time, and no definite idea could be determined on as to who was killed or injured.

Hundreds of people from this city and surrounding country flocked to the scene, and viewed it with morbid curiosity.

Many of the passengers, upon escaping from the ruins, in their fright, put additional ground between themselves and the scene of accident, repairing either to friends or hospitable doors in Plainfield, so that it is hardly possible to tell who or how many were injured.

As near as can be conjectured, the results of the casualty thus far is two persons killed, eight seriously wounded, and fourteen slightly wounded. Of these, as far as we have been able to gather, are KILLED.

John Reilley, of Phillipsburgh,
Nathaniel Dennick, of Dunellen.

WOUNDED SEVERELY.

Jacob Klein, of Whitehouse, N. J.
Wm. Flynn, of Phillipsburgh.
Col. A. S. Ten Eyck, of Somerville, N. J.
Hon. John G. Schenck, of Neshanic.

Messrs. Thos. Brown, Samuel Merrill, S. W. Affleck, James Phillips, Thomas Jones, baggage master, Mr. Brice and others of Dunellen, all received severe bruises and wounds. Mrs. Mary Compton and Mrs. Mary McPherson, of Clinton were also injured slightly.

Mr. W. Fuller and Jacob Kirkner, Esq., of Evona, received bruises and cuts.

Mrs. Wm. Ohl and two children, of Evona, were in the third car, and Mrs. O received severe bruises, while the children escaped unhurt. They were rescued from the windows of the car.

The only occupants in the second or smoking car at the time of the accident, were Messrs. Col. Ten Eyck, Mr. Klein, Mr. J. G. Schenck, and the two men who were killed. Mr. Kirkner left the smoking car at Plainfield and went into the next car following.

Dr. Gillette, County Physician, was early on the spot, with the corps of physicians from Plainfield, and gave permission for burial, not deeming an inquest necessary.

A wrecking train was sent to the scene from Communipaw as soon as possible, and workmen were engaged all night in laying a side track around the wreck so as to allow of uninterrupted travel, which was resumed on the road on Wednesday, at which time the debris was removed, and the main track clear.

The total loss to the Company will foot up about $15,000 for damaged locomotive and cars.

Luckily the train had but few passengers on board. Had the three forward cars been filled as they were when the train arrived at Plainfield, the loss of life would have been frightful.

Beside Master Mechanic Williams, there was in the cab of the engine, Mr. E. J. Swackhammer, who superintends the construction of bridges on the road, and his son George, who was acting as fireman. None of these were injured seriously, Mr. Swackhammer escaping without a bruise. The cab was not badly wrecked, and the inmates escaped through one of the side windows of the overturned cab.

The crash and noise occasioned by the escape of steam from the overturned locomotive is described as frightful by those near the scene at the time of the accident. The escape of steam was plainly heard at the depot in this city.

On Wednesday, thousands of spectators, many of them ladies, visited the scene and viewed the work of clearing away the wreck.

Many miraculous escapes and incidents are related by those who were on the ill-fated train.

The poor unfortunate, Mr. Flynn, who had his leg broken, was removed to Laing's Hotel, this city, after his wounds and broken limb had been attended to by Dr. Hart, and after receiving proper care there, was removed to St. Michael's Hospital, Newark, on Wednesday. He had come to Plainfield from his home in Phillipsburg the day before to procure a situation [illegible] and was making his first trip.

The thanks of the public and those who received care and attention, are due to Messrs. Compton, Rocap and others, in the vicinity of the accident for their kind and opportune services and hospitality.

We do not think the blame of the accident should be attributed to the members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. We believe some wretch outside of that organization did the deed. We trust that a sufficient amount as a reward will be offered for the apprehension of the scoundrel by the Railroad Company to insure his detection and conviction.

COMMUNICATED.

TRUTH.

For "The Constitutionalist."

MESSRS. EDITORS:

In the last issue of the Times there appears an article signed by "Taxpayer," in which statements and inferences were made entirely erroneous, in fact it would appear that the intention of the article was to mislead the public in order to make political capital for the Republican party. The Board of Commissioners for Appraising Linfield Avenue was composed of three Democrats and three Republicans. "Taxpayer" endeavors to give the impression to the public that the Commission was a Democratic body, and that this Democratic body was extorting the sum of $2,239.50 from the taxpayers for the emolument of these Commissioners, and suggests that in future it would be better to appoint Republicans for Commissioners. The Commissioners made a charge for their services of about $2 per day for each day of service rendered. The largest bill referred to was incurred for surveys, mapping, engineering, legal expenses and appraisers' fees. The following is an itemized bill making up the sum of $2,239.50:

3 Republican Com'rs, fees, Messrs. J. R. Van Deventer, S. J. Barr, Isaac Brokaw, $135	$405 00
3 Democratic Com'rs, fees, Messrs. William Swain, D. J. Marshall, L. B. Boice, $135	405 00
Commissioner E. W. Runyon	50 00
" " Wm. B. Maxson, (no charge)	00 00
Surveys, Engineering and mapping, payable to A. Onderdonk	1,359 50
Appraisers fees, Levi Hetfield	10 00
" " Wm. C. Ayers	10 00
Total	$2,239 50

"Taxpayer" instead of desiring to protect the interests of the taxpayers seems more inclined to try to build up the Republican party by slandering the Democrats.

WM. SWAIN,
D. J. MARSHALL,
L. B. BOICE,
Commissioners.

Fine Dogs.

Mr. Percy C. Ohl, of this city, is at present the possessor of some of the finest dogs in this country. His latest addition is two pups, age 4 months, who undoubtedly hold good places in the front rank. They were bred by Dr. D. H. Gautier, of New York, who for years has owned the finest strains of dogs in the States. We give the pedigree of these two, but state they were bred in and in, sire and dam, Fred. and Kate being brother and sister, but by different litters the continuation of pedigree is Kate and Fred:

OUT OF	BY
RUBY by MYSTERY, out of CORA. Born May 12, 1871. Bred by Mr. Edward Laverack, near Manchester, Eng. Imported by Dr. J. H. Gautier. Cora, dam of Ruby, is own sister to Mr. Garth's (Q. C.) Daisy, winner two years in succession of the Shrewsbury Field Trial Stakes, and own sister to Mr. Purcell Llewellyn's Countess and Nellie, Ruby getting 100 points for PERFECTION at [illegible] 1872 [illegible] getting 90 points the previous year. Cora, Nellie and Countess are out of Laverack's Moll 2d, by Laverack's Champion Dog Dash. Dam of Moll 2d, Belle 2d; Sire by Prince 1st by Rock 1st; Moll 2d by Dash 1st. Belle 1st by Ponto—Old Moll. Sire of Dash [illegible]—Cora 2d by Rock—Cora (Blair's) by Regent. Jet 1st by Pilot—Moll by Dash—Belle 1st by Ponto—Old Moll. Mystery Sire of Ruby, bred by Mr. Laverack out of Duchess, own sister to Champion Dog Dash, by Laverack's celebrated dog Jet. Brother to Fred. 2d. Jet by Pilot—Moll by Dash—Belle 1st by Ponto—Old Moll. All the above, except Old Moll and Ponto, were bred by Mr. Laverack from pure blood (supposed at that period to have been pure for thirty-five years) of the late Rev. A. Harrison's, near Carlisle, who bred Old Moll and Ponto, consequently Mr. Laverack having had this strain more than 50 years, makes a continuous strain of pure blood for over 84 years.	DAN by Dandy, out of Die. Dandy by Mr. Jobling's celebrated dog Dan by [illegible] Lord [illegible]'s [illegible] that took the 20 guinea prize at Newcastle out of Mr. Laverack's Moll. Moll by Mr. Hedman's Fetter, out of Jobling's Nell. Nell out of Mr. Dandy's dam out of Jobling's Lioness, by Sir William Heeley's Grouse. Die, dam of Dan, bred by Capt. Hynes, near Clonmel, Ireland, out of Jessie Flirt, [illegible] by [illegible] of Sir [illegible] Marengo, out of a Gordon Castle bitch, bred by Sir Arthur Chichester by a son of the late Duke of Gordon's celebrated dog Dandy. Dandy and Die were purchased by Dr. J. H. Gautier of Mr. J. D. Redwood, Esty Court, Hertford, England. The beneficial results produced by the combination of this blood with the Laverack, is clearly shown by their excellence in the field as is shown by Rake, Phebe, Dick, Reuben, Rob Roy, &c.

Mr. Ohl thinks one of these pups, a Black Tan, will be capable of taking all or any prizes offered for beauty in another year, and his good qualities will be noticed at that time, and as for a tutor for thoroughly breaking hunting dogs, Mr. Ohl has no superior, we will only look forward for a wonder in the field. While visiting the above Darlings, so styled by their owner, we saw two white pups with lemon ears, and black eyes and nose, and also a red pup of the same litter; these are also thoroughbred pedigreed stock, bred by Mr. John Hally, of this city. Last, but not least of pup line, is a litter of 7, 3 black and tan, and 4 red, two weeks old. Their dam, Nettie, is very proud of them, and seems delighted at the admiration her offspring is attracting. They are out of Nettie, by imported Gordon dog, Prince.

NETTIE OUT OF FANNIE.	BY DAN (Leavitt's).
Fannie was own sister to Moll Champion of England, in Field Trials at Staffordshire and Birmingham, was purchased in London by F. Barton, of Philadelphia, from Wm. Russell, in 1867.	Dan, known as Leavitt's Dan, was purchased from that gentleman (W. H. Leavitt, of Flushing, L. I.) by P. C. Ohl. He is black and tan of imported stock, and is considered to-day, one of the best broken dogs in the States.

Many of our readers have but a slight idea of the value of these setters, when finely bred and broken, but we noticed the sale of one this season in England for the sum of $50,000, and Mr. Ohl informs us that the Ruby, the grand dam of the pups, cost Mr. Gautier over ($2,500) twenty-five hundred dollars, and the sire at a larger sum.

JOHN FLYNN, of Elizabethport, brakeman on the local freight train, had his hand smashed while coupling cars at the depot on Thursday. Dr. Stillman dressed his wound.

AN exchange says, "there is something sweet about little girls;" yes, and it grows on them as they advance in years.

POLITICAL.

The official vote in the Second District of Ohio re-elects Banning, Democrat, to Congress over Stanley Matthews, semi-Republican by 75 majority.

In the year 1871, the War Department sold, without warrant of Congress, $8,280,000 worth of arms to the French Government, to enable it to war against the German Empire.

Bob Ingersoll says: "There is no God;" and alternately reviles the Deity and the Democratic party. "After election he will wish there was no God and no Democratic party.

The Administration officials at Washington have already been assessed ten per cent. for Republican campaign purposes, but another call is made upon them for two and a half per cent. more.

Ex-Treasurer New, of Indiana, wrote to a Republican official at Washington on the eve of the late election in that State, "If Indiana goes Democratic, you may as well begin to pack your baggage and prepare to go home."

Widow Butler in his speech at Andover, Mass., on the 13th inst., said:—"The elections of the past week show that there is to be a contest of the most determined character, a contest which is doubtful. I say it frankly, Mr. Tilden's election is not impossible; nay not improbable."

Noticing a man who has hitherto been a strong Republican worker, in a Tilden and Hendricks club room the other evening, we asked him if he had been converted at last? "Yes," he replied, "I'm going to vote for Uncle Sammy this time, and there are a whole lot more of us in the same boat." Honest voters of this kind will count two every time this Fall.—Paterson Guardian

The Republican journals are just now concentrating all their fire on Mr. Williams, who has just been elected to the Governorship of Indiana. They are terribly mad at him for beating the "grandson of General Harrison," and they have no terms of detraction severe enough to express their contempt for him. What a miserable creature the Republican candidate must be in the estimation of the people of Indiana, if the man for whom they preferred to vote is as the Republican papers, in their angry spite, describe him.

THE GENERAL AND THE MULES.

The World ridicules the pretence that the leading Union generals are in the Republican party. The editor says:

"The last ridiculous pretence set up by the Republican press to shield their party against the wrath to come, is the assertion that 'the leading generals of the Union, are all on the side of Grantism. And this while Custer still lies unavenged in the premature grave to which Grantism sent him! The truth is that the great majority of the fighting Generals were and are Democrats, while the great majority of the Republican generals belong to the same category with a certain major-general who was captured early in the war, together with thirty mules. When the news was brought to Mr. Lincoln he looked much depressed for a moment, and then said: 'This is sad, very sad; to lose thirty mules just now is a very serious matter. As for the major-general, I can make as many more of the same sort as I like without any trouble. But I am distressed about the mules.'"

The Baldwinsville, New York, postmaster, Perkins, keeps back Democratic papers that go to his office, and to some of the subscribers he delivers them within a week after their arrival and to others he doesn't deliver them at all. When a package of "loyal" papers reaches Perkins' office, the alacrity with which he flies around and distributes them—especially if addressed to "doubtful" voters—is something beautiful to behold.

The last Republican House of Representatives appropriated $15,500,000 in excess of the estimates of the amounts needed by the respective Departments to carry on the Government. As a contrast to this, the first Democratic House of Representatives has appropriated $40,000,000 less than the estimates. The difference in favor of Democratic economy and retrenchment is therefore $55,500,000.

All the monopolies with which our distressed people are burthened are the outgrowth of Republican rule. The Republican party has never abated a monopoly. The Democratic party has never created one. The Republican party always multiplies legislation.—The Democratic party persistently removes bad laws from the Statute book.

It is truthfully asserted by prominent Republicans that Blaine, in spreading it on so thick, is doing more for the Democracy than any two speakers that they (the Democrats) have.

When troops are sent to control the ballot box it is time for REFORM.

NEW JERSEY
Enamel Paint Company,
RARITAN, NEW JERSEY.
Manufacturers of
Bradley's Enamel Paint.
Mixed Ready for Use, in any shade, Tint or Color desired.

THESE Paints are composed of the purest and best materials known to painters, the principal ingredients being Pure White LEAD, ZINC, and LINSEED OIL, which are made to unite in a homogeneous mass by the addition of other materials which add greatly to the durability, elasticity, beauty and strength of the Paint. The whole are chemically combined so that the pigments are held in permanent solution, thus forming a new compound which dries on the surface and adheres firmly to it, thus forming a Smooth, Glossy, Firm, Elastic, Beautiful and Durable Paint.

The Oil, which is the real life of the Paint, cannot leave it and be absorbed by the substance to which it is applied, as it is done in paints mixed in the ordinary way, as thus leave the pigment dry and chalky, to wash & rub off in few months. This paint is unaffected by changes of temperature, is perfectly impervious to the action of water, is well adapted to all classes of work, & is in every way a better paint for either inside or outside work or boat painting than any other Paint known to the trade, and will last at least three times as long as the best Lead and Oil mixed in the ordinary way.

These Paints are Ready for use.
Are easily applied by any one, require no mixing, stirring or addition of dryers.
Liberal Inducements to Dealers.
And full satisfaction guaranteed to their Customers.

Sold by the Gallon, Keg or Barrel. Orders attended to promptly. For Price List and Sample Color Card. Address,

CAUTION!

The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Theo. A. Dorman some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filled over one thousand pages and counsel were over two years in examining before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an air-tight iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing stratum. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is of steel, made sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Dorman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defence contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement had been clearly proved.

POETRY.

UNDER THE WAGON.

"Come, wife," says good old Farmer Gray,
"Put on your things; 'tis market day;
Let's be off to the nearest town—
There and back ere the sun goes down.
Spot! No, we'll leave old Spot behind."
But Spot he barked and Spot he whined,
And soon made up his doggish mind
To steal away under the wagon.

Away they went at a good round pace,
And joy came into the farmer's face,
"Poor Spot," said he, "did want to come,
But I'm very glad he's left at home.
He'll guard the barn and guard the cot,
And keep the cattle out of the lot."
"I'm not so sure of that," growled Spot,
The little dog under the wagon.

The farmer all his produce sold
And got his pay in yellow gold,
Then started home, just after dark—
Home, through the lonely forest. Hark!
A robber springs from behind a tree;
"Your money or else your life!" said he.
The moon was out, yet he didn't see
The little dog under the wagon.

Old Spot he barked, old Spot he whined,
And Spot he grabbed the thief behind
And dragged him down in mud and dirt.
He tore his coat and tore his shirt;
He held him fast and bound,
And he couldn't rise from the miry ground;
While his legs and arms the farmer bound
And tumbled him into the wagon.

Old Spot he saved the farmer's life,
The farmer's money, the farmer's wife;
And now a hero, grand and gay,
A silver collar he wears to-day;
And everywhere his master goes,
Among his friends, among his foes,
He follows upon his horny toes,
The little dog under the wagon!

FOR LIFE OR DEATH.

AN ADVENTURE IN NORTHERN TEXAS.

"You'll not do it and get in, young chap, with hair on your head, I tell you that; and mark ye, Britisher, 'tis no town-bred greenhorn who says it, but old Joe Burton, that has fought Injuns and hunted buffler on the plains afore you left your mother's side, I calculate. 'Taint to be done."

"But, colonel—," I put in, smiling, yet not quite so much at my ease as I desired to appear; for this tough old frontiersman, who remembered the foundation of the settlement, was no light authority as to the practicability of such an enterprise as that which I had, perhaps, rashly undertaken.

"A clear throwing away of life, that's all," gruffly rejoined the veteran, as he stooped to pat the hound that jumped up, whimpering, to receive his master's caress. "He that rides the line to the headwaters of the Gila now has only to thank his own folly if his scalp dries in some pesky wigwam on the prairie. But there; I'm wasting words. A wilful lad, like a half-broke mustang, ain't easy to hold back. Anyway, Master Harry Lyndham, I wish you well out of the ugly scrape you have got into."

Colonel Burton was by no means the only friend who strove to dissuade me from my project, but my word was pledged, my mind made up, and it only remained to complete the preparations for my hurried and perilous journey. This was how matters stood with me: I, Harry Lyndham, one of the many Englishmen whom the hopes of growing rich had drawn to the far West of America, was then a resident of Tucson City, and a clerk in the employment of Curtis Brothers. The firm consisted of two old and somewhat eccentric men—old bachelor brothers—self-educated, as well as, in the commercial sense of the word, self-made, and whose names were known and respected through all that wild region that comprises Arizona, Montana and the northern countries of Texas.

Oddly enough, it was because I was an Oxford man that my then employers had given me the preference over a score of candidates, for, in truth, there was nothing that old John and James Curtis so much prized as the learning which they had never had leisure or opportunity to acquire; nor had they had occasion to repent of their choice, since I had served them zealously enough, during the past year, to have gained a high place in their esteem; while I liked them well, since their hearts were as warm as their manners were quaint. Mine were no sedentary duties, and I was more often in the saddle than at the desk; for Messrs. Curtis were speculators and general jobbers, dealing in maize and wine and hides, in tobacco, quicksilver, gunpowder, and "notions;" and, above all, cattle, the great staple of the far southwest.

It was not for hire alone that I toiled as I did, earning in Tucson—where the emigrants from the Old Country are seldom held of much account when compared with the bustling, pushing Yankee—the reputation of a model clerk, as clerks are understood in that out-of-the-way nook of earth. My great stimulus was that I was in love with pretty charming Rosamond Gray, the daughter of old Mr. Gray, the banker at Cristobel, a town lying to the eastward of the Mimbres, and famous as a market for the agricultural produce of the vast district bordering on Mexico. In one sense I was happy, for my love was returned; but in another I had met with what was almost a repulse, since Mr. and Mrs. Gray, although entertaining no personal objection to me as a son-in-law, were unwilling to bestow their daughter on any but a wealthy suitor.

"Get rich, Mr. Lyndham," the banker had said, good-naturedly, "and I see no reason why Rosamond and you should not be happy according to your own fancy. But neither her mother nor I can sanction any unconditional engagement."

I was in hopes that I might take Mr. Gray's advice, and by growing rich, or at least by acquiring a competence, win Rosamond's hand, the prize that I valued above all earthly considerations; and such is the rapidity with which, in those argentiferous regions, fortunes are sometimes amassed, that I was not without warrant for aspirations which in Europe would perhaps have seemed futile.

And now to explain the present position of the firm, and the reasons for my undertaking a journey fraught, according to the rugged old militia colonel's dictum, with almost certain disaster. Curtis Brothers, who by a long course of judicious operations, had raised themselves from poverty to affluence, had at that time on hand a speculation of unusual importance. They had made, chiefly in Texas, very large purchases of horned cattle, sheep and swine, destined to feed the swarming population of the sterile mining districts, where provisions, and meat in special, commanded high prices. The investment seemed the more likely to be profitable since the twin plagues of New Mexico, drought and locusts, had occasioned a notable mortality among the cattle of Arizona and the adjoining Territories, and great pecuniary returns were anticipated.

All these calculations seemed likely to be upset by the sudden outbreak of the smouldering Indian war which never quite comes to an end in that dangerous region. The Apaches, the irreclaimable foes of all white men, were on the war-path, leagued, as was reported, with sundry other tribes, the Kiowas, the Navajoes, and the dreaded Comanches; and already hideous tales of Indian cruelty, and massacre reached us from many a lonely homestead within reach of the spoiler. The troops had been hastily withdrawn; the caravans about to traverse the prairie had halted for lack of an escort, and it was thought rash to venture more than a few miles beyond the cultivated country. Yet the day was at hand when the great herds of oxen and droves of swine already purchased, would be waiting at Cristobal for the completion of the bargain, and my employers were well aware that unless the cattle could be paid for in hard dollars a fatal blow would be dealt to the credit of the firm. Messrs. Curtis had strained every nerve to collect the ready money necessary, and the funds were forthcoming, but the entire scheme bade fair to be frustrated by the abrupt closing of the route, consequent on the war. No man, or party of armed men, could have been bribed to attempt the conveyance of the cash across the plains, now haunted by the savage enemy, when I astonished my employers by volunteering to be the messenger.

"You shall not have to repeat it, Harry, my boy!" said the elder of the two brothers as he wrung my hand in his own horny one. "You've stood manfully by us at this pinch, and we'd be mean enough for niggers to trample on if we didn't show gratitude a little more substantially than by a few fair words. We never yet did raise a clerk to be a partner, but— There, there, Lyndham; I did not intend to egg you on by an offer, as if you needed that," hastily added the honest old fellow, fearing as he saw the color rise to my face, that I had taken umbrage at his rough speech. "Come safe back to us, lad, and all will be right."

Mr. James Curtis spoke words to much the same effect, at the same time bidding me be careful, and indeed it was curious to watch the struggle in my employers' minds between their natural eagerness to escape a financial wreck that almost amounted to ruin and the kindly apprehension lest I should lose my life in their service.

As for myself, I knew well enough how great was the risk I ran, and for how momentous a stake I was about to play, and had not the goal before my mental vision been the bright prospect of calling Rosamond my wife even the prospective partnership would hardly have tempted me to set off on an errand so perilous. As it was I was resolved, and as I got ready for the start I tried quietly to weigh the chances for and against my safely reaching Cristobal.—I had a fair knowledge of the country, which I had traversed on four of five occasions, and was no novice in camping out, or in the familiar incidents of prairie travel. I could ride well, too, and was better mounted than most of the residents in that district, where horse-flesh is cheap and plentiful, having in my possession a splendid chestnut thoroughbred, originally brought from Kentucky by some United States officer, and which was celebrated for strength and speed. I was fond of Sunbeam, and he of me, for he was docile and intelligent as well as swift, and would follow me for miles as a dog follows his owner, or stand, when I bade him, with the reins loose upon his glossy neck.

There was scanty time for leave-taking.—It was deep in the afternoon when I started, a dozen or more of the younger citizens of Tucson riding with me for the first half hour, and giving me a hearty cheer as we parted. More than one strong hand trembled a little as it grasped mine in token of adieu, and there was an unwonted moisture glistening in the honest eyes of some of the kind-hearted young fellows as they wished me "God speed and a safe return." Well do I remember wheeling my steed on a little elevation in the rolling flower enameled prairie and waving my hat in answer to the waving of hats and handkerchiefs from the little knot of horsemen, not one of whom, I am sure, ever expected to see me again on this side of the grave. Then I rode on, and lost sight of the friendly band of well-wishers.

The heavy, sultry heat seemed to enwrap the land like a mantle. There was not a breath to stir the drooping leaves of the few cottonwood trees that I passed in the lower levels, and on the uplands the long rank grass was parched brown by the fierce sun, for it was long since rain had fallen. The shrill, sharp chirp of the prairie cricket and the far-off barking of that curious animal, the prairie-dog, alone broke the stillness that was absolutely oppressive. Some three hours after leaving Tucson I reined up beside the blue, bright waters of a creek, and slacking my horse's girths, I allowed him to drink freely, myself replenishing the metal canteen that was slung at my saddlebow, for in that desert land another opportunity of appeasing thirst might not readily occur.—And presently leaving the grassy prairie we struck into a country still more lonely and desolate, where the only sound was the thud of my horse's hoofs on the scorched and barren earth.

Far away to the left there glimmered against the sky something like a shining wall, imperfectly visible, but which I knew to be the serrated crests and mountain peaks of the Mimbres, the natural fastnesses where dwelt the barbarian tribes whose torch and tomahawk had laid waste many a happy home. Nor were mementoes of their hostility lacking as I traversed the track—deeply seamed by wagon wheels and strewed with the bleached bones of mules or oxen—that did duty for a road. Eight or nine times there loomed before me a rude wooden cross, on which was coarsely painted in letters of black or red sometimes a name, more often mere initials, followed by the simple inscription, "Killed by the Apaches."

The sun went down, the dew glistened on the rank herbage and tufts of the wild sage, and a welcome breeze cooled the heated air, while the broad, bright moon, like a silver shield, rose to shed her chastened light over the vast expanse of prairie. Onward I rode, until at length in a sort of oasis, where water and grass and trees were to be found, I selected my camping place for the night. With dawn I was again in the saddle, nor did any incident during that day's journey or the next vary the monotony of prairie travel.—Water was met with, sparingly indeed, and of poor quality, but the brackish and turbid draught at any rate sufficed to allay that tormenting thirst which is the great terror of the solitary wayfarer on those burning plains. Wherever there was water, too, there was pasture for my horse; while for my own sustenance I was provided with a tiny store of wild bull beef, cut in strips and dried in the sun, in Mexican fashion, and with a bag of parched maize-cobs. These, with a flask of French brandy, a Spanish poncho, and ammunition for my carbine and revolver, made up all my equipment, save only my canteen with its tin cup and the leathern saddle-bags wherein were stowed away the gold and greenbacks destined to redeem the credit of Curtis Brothers with their creditors at Cristobal. On the evening of the third day I halted in a well-watered dell near the head of a creek, and at a distance, as I computed, of one hundred and twenty miles from Tucson. Eighty miles more, at most, would carry me to Fort Webster; and once across the Gila I should be safe, and could make certain of completing my journey to Cristobal. Hitherto I had met with no living soul, friendly or hostile. More than once I fancied that on the verge of the dim horizon I had caught a glimpse of tall spears and feathered heads; and on one occasion I had beheld a distant cloud of dust arise from the brown surface of the desert; but this might as easily have been occasioned by the passage of a herd of bison or of wild horses as the Apaches or their allies. My spirits rose as I proceeded on my way, and I began to feel confident of success.

On that night, lying wrapped in my poncho, with a saddle for my pillow, and my weapons within reach, I dreamed I was at home again, in old England, and a boy once more, for I saw my sisters' faces round me, and those of my former friends and playmates long dispersed, when suddenly I was aroused by the shrill, eager neighing of my horse, tethered hard by, and, waking with a start, opened my eyes to encounter the fierce eyes glaring upon me from a hideous painted face, bending over mine, and so close as well nigh to touch it. I felt an Indian's hot breath upon my cheek as he stooped over me, while of his purpose there could be little doubt, for, as I could see by the dim light of the dying watch fire, he was freshly besmeared with war-paint, and one hand held a glittering knife. As I started up and grasped the butt of the revolver lying beneath my head the Indian's other hand clutched me by the wrist, while again my steed neighed shrilly, and as I propped myself on one knee I could see that Sunbeam was plunging and rearing violently, while two dark forms were gliding about the spot where the horse was fastened, apparently intent on unfastening the long lariat by which he was haltered to the ground.

There are confused recollections of which memory is never able afterwards wholly to unravel the tangled thread. I remember a brief, sharp struggle, during which I twice received a slight graze from the knife that the Apache carried, and then my right wrist was freed from the hand that grasped it, and the sharp crack of the pistol, as three shots were successively fired, broke the stillness. Then almost immediately I heard the thud of galloping hoofs upon the crisp turf of the prairie, and saw two mounted men, whose fluttering blankets and plumed heads proclaimed their nationality, ride off into the darkness. At my feet lay my first assailant. His hand, when I lifted it, fell back to earth, and its grim features, bedaubed with streaks of yellow, white and black, were stiffening fast in death. The two eagle feathers fastened by a silver brooch to his long black hair denoted that he had been a chief or principal warrior, while the paint and tattooing proved him to belong to the great tribe of the Apaches.

My great source of anxiety now was lest the two braves who had escaped should have comrades within reach, and I at once decided that to press on was my wisest policy. It was now the dark chill hour that precedes the dawn, but saddling Sunbeam, whom I found fretful and agitated, after his recent interview with the red robbers, I resumed my journey. Up to this time I had spared my horse, but now, heavy as was the sickly heat, and long as were the hours to be spent in traversing the brown, desolate plain, without grass or water, I urged Sunbeam on, the shining peaks of the Mimbres becoming more and more distinctly visible as we sped upon our way. Poor Sunbeam showed for the first time signs of distress when we halted beside a stream, the brackish waters of which seemed to burn the thirsty lips that craved for them; but we were now, as I computed, within three hours of the river Gila, beyond which was safety.

The sterile, stony desert which spread itself before me when, on the next morning, my jaded steed and I again set forth upon the track was almost bare of verdure. The long drought and the heat of the burning sun had withered every green blade, while pools and creeks which ought to have been full of sweet, pure water were now mere belts of shingle, or hollows paved with dried clay. I shared the last drops of the precious fluid I carried in my canteen, and the last of the bleached corn, with Sunbeam, and the good horse seemed as though he were grateful for and understood the kindness, for he rubbed his velvet muzzle caressingly against my hand as I stroked his neck, no longer sleek and smooth as satin, for fatigue and privation had roughened his coat and dimmed the fire of his eye. Suddenly, as I stood beside him, I looked back and saw what made, for the moment, my very heart cease to beat, as if an icy touch had frozen the blood in my veins.

Spears and plumed heads and wild forms, whose shields and scarlet blankets or buffalo robes were distinctly to be seen, were crowded together at the top of a rising ground, coming on over the prairie at the easy, swinging gallop which a mustang can keep up for half a day. As I set my foot in the stirrup and leaped into my saddle the Indians, silent till then, set up their fearful war-whoop, and with yells and frantic gestures lashed on their steeds and took up the pursuit with a fury that sufficiently indicated what would be my fate should I be overtaken. Then began a desperate contest—a race for life or death.—Sunbeam answered gallantly to my call, and for the first four or five miles I saw little of the enemy, but on they came pitilessly, and soon seemed to gain ground—Had it been on the first day of the journey I could have laughed at my pursuers, but now the superiority of my noble horse in stride and strength was neutralized by the comparative freshness of the shaggy steeds on which the Apaches were mounted. I groaned as I felt Sunbeam flag beneath me, though I urged him on with voice and hand.

Miles upon miles of rolling prairie were traversed, my horse keeping the lead, and speeding on with courage unabated, but staggering as he went, and bearing heavily on the bit, as we descended the frequent slopes. The Indians saw their advantage, and pressed on, making every effort to come up with me. One arrow slightly wounded my horse in the neck; a second brushed my cheek, making me feel as though a hot iron had been drawn across it. I bear the thin blue scar to this day. But maddened with excitement I spurred Sunbeam on, shook off the pursuers for a while, and presently saw, gleaming before me, the waters of a swiftly flowing river, which could be no other than the Gila, while beyond it rose the stockaded walls of a lonely building—Fort Webster, doubtless.

"On, Sunbeam, on! One more effort, brave horse—one more, and we are safe!"

I patted my steed's reeking neck as I vociferated the words, and with a faint, friendly neigh the gallant horse responded to my appeal, and still reeled on. The river, bordered by tall trees and cane-brakes, was very near; I could hear it rush and ripple, when Sunbeam, dead beat, stumbled, fell on his knees, and sank slowly down. There was an arrow, unknown to me, sticking in his flank, and the noble brute had actually been bleeding to death as he carried his master, with unfaltering spirit, over leagues of the weary prairie. For the moment I almost forgot my imminent peril in grief for the loss of my brave companion; but little time was left for regrets, for already the ground shook beneath the thunder of hurrying horse hoofs, as, with yells of barbarous triumph, the Indians came racing up behind.

Thirty yards before me lay the river, but it was too deep and rapid for a man readily to swim or wade, and though I was weary and worn, yet I could not bear to abandon life while a chance remained. My pistol was in my belt, but my carbine was strapped to the saddle of the dead horse, and so were the bags which held the money of Curtis Brothers, and these I snatched up, though I had scanty prospect of saving their property or life, so near were the ruthless foes. They were but six lances' lengths away from me as I plunged into the brushwood, intending to take shelter among the tall reeds of the bank, in the faint hope that the clamor of the Apaches might bring out the troops from the fort. To my great joy, however, on reaching the river bank I beheld, moored to the stem of a mimosa tree, a canoe, containing fishing tackle, and probably belonging to the garrison; and, leaping into it, I seized the paddles and pushed off into the middle of the stream just as four or five Indians who had dismounted, came bounding through the bushes, knife and tomahawk in hand.

The river ran swift and I was inexpert in the management of the canoe; but the Indians fortunately hesitated to take the river, no doubt on account of the vicinity of the fort, and although they pursued me with fierce shouts and volleys of arrows, only one of the latter harmed, inflicting a slight wound on the left wrist; while the welcome sound of a cheer and the discharge of a rifle from the further bank told that the Indian war-whoop had attracted the notice of the soldiers, of whose weapons the Apaches stood in wholesome awe. I was soon among friendly faces, although so exhausted was I with fatigue and emotion that I fainted before reaching Fort Webster.

My story, thus hastily narrated, is nearly at an end. The kindness of the commanding officer at the fort enabled me to push on, so soon as rest and refreshment had somewhat restored my vigor; and I reached Cristobal without further hindrance or peril, and was in time to save the credit of the firm whose representative I was, and to allay the surely suspicions of the half-wild Mexican and Texan cattle farmers, who were already beginning to chafe and murmur at the delay. The oxen and other live stock, some weeks later, were sent along with a wagon train that traveled under a strong escort of United States cavalry to Tucson; and I should have availed myself of the opportunity to return had not an attack of fever, brought on by anxiety and over-exertion, prostrated me for a time, although youth and a robust constitution enabled me to shake it off.

I was still very pale and weak, and was sitting listlessly among the magnolia bushes and coffee-shrubs in the garden of the little inn, when I saw Rosamond and Mrs. Gray, whose kindness to me during my illness had been unremitting, approaching me with joyful looks.

"Can you bear good news, Harry?" asked the latter, smiling; and indeed the tidings were very good ones. My quaint, worthy old employers had been better than their word, having not merely taken me into partnership, in recompense for what I had done on their behalf, but also appointed me their resident agent at Cristobal, a far healthier and more pleasant place than Tucson, with a share in the profits of the firm that was only too liberal. I have every prospect of present competence of, ultimate wealth, while my engagement to Rosamond Gray is very shortly to be brought to a happy conclusion; but in the midst of my new found prosperity a saddening recollection will sometimes obtrude itself, as I remember the faithful dumb friend whose bones are whitening on the banks of the Gila.

UTILIZING A HUSBAND.

"Your husband is sick a good sight of late, hain't he?" remarked a Southern Illinois woman to another.

"Yes," answered the wife, "he's got tuk down mighty hard with them 'ere ager shakes agin."

"I shud think it 'ed be sorter distressin' like ter have him 'round the house," remarked the other, sympathizingly, "spec'ly when yer at housecleanin'."

"Wal, so it wud be," replied the wife, in self-consoling tones, "but when he's got inter one of his chills, and I want the rag carpet shuk, yer see he's a powerful smart man ter hitch onto it."

Then the woman wended her way home, envying her neighbor the knack she had of utilizing her husband.

Last Meeting!

The Voters of Plainfield are invited to attend a Grand Mass Meeting at LAING'S HALL, MONDAY EVENING, NOV. 6th, at which time

MAJOR HAGGERTY

OF JERSEY CITY,
will Address them in favor of Tilden, Hendricks and Reform.

GEN. SIEGEL

And other eminent speakers have been invited to be present.

TO VOTERS.

Before the next issue of the CONSTITUTIONALIST the great battle, the din of preparation for which has been sounding in our ears for months, will be fought and decided. In it is to be determined whether our country's future is to be one of harmony, prosperity and happiness, always consequent on good government, or of discord, depression and eventual ruin, the sure result of bad. Under the rule of Grant, supported and defended by the Republican party, a state of things has been brought about, than which, it must be admitted, nothing can be worse, except only complete ruin. The uncertainty and disorder of the times, the corrupt character of the men by whom he is surrounded, the wilful and defiant violations of the Constitution and the laws, these and other proceedings of a similar character testify, in no uncertain way, to what we must expect should the rule of the Republican party be longer perpetuated. No sane man, we are persuaded, who takes a calm survey of the situation can fail to perceive the danger that threatens us.

During his first term in office General Grant did many things which were objectionable enough to have ensured to any other incumbent a defeat, certain and disastrous, had he presented himself a second time for the suffrages of the people; but believing in his honesty of purpose and ascribing his failings to his ignorance of statesmanship, grateful to him for the brilliant and important services he had rendered during the war, they condoned his errors and again elected him to the highest office in their gift. Then commenced his intrigues for a third term, followed by all the outrages and villainies, committed or attempted to be committed, that have marked the history of the last four years, now crowned by the last and worst of all—the invasion of South Carolina—simply to ensure in that State the success of the Republican ticket.—These matters challenge the serious attention of a free people who would preserve their liberties. There can be nothing surer, than that, in the event of Republican success this year, the leaders, emboldened thereby, will stop at no obstacle, legal or otherwise, to perpetuate and cement their hold on power.

The South, as recommended by Boutwell in his Mississippi report, will be overrun, their governments subverted and a reign of anarchy inaugurated which will be without a parallel in the history of modern times. The condition of things in South Carolina now furnishes but a faint indication of what will be the state of affairs then, throughout the whole South. The whites disarmed and the negro population, many of them ignorant and vicious, supplied with the means of outrage and murder, into which it will require but a breath or a look to precipitate them. It is needless to mention the other issues involved in this contest. They are known to all as equally important.

These facts appeal to every citizen in this great emergency in our country's history. It behooves every Democrat, every Conservative, all who recognize the perils that surround us to rally to the nation's rescue. Corruption must be struck down, honesty must be restored, the rights of all the people, political and otherwise, must be protected and preserved and the entire Administration of our Government purged and purified.

This is the work of the people and for its performance they are responsible. Trusting in their intelligence, their hatred of injustice and their love for the right, we look with confidence for such a verdict from them on Tuesday next as will strike terror into the corruptionists and give us a victory, immense and glorious, for Tilden and Reform.

FOR PRESIDENT,
SAMUEL J. TILDEN.

Never in the annals of political warfare was there a candidate more shamefully and wickedly slandered than Samuel J. Tilden, the Democratic nominee for President.

Falsehoods, base and malignant, and such only as unscrupulous partisanship could invent, have been circulated through the press and echoed from the rostrum, for the purpose of deceiving the people, and thereby prolonging the career of the most corrupt officials that ever ruled and disgraced a country.

If Samuel J. Tilden had not stood so high in popular esteem, a candidate of such extraordinary fitness for the Presidency, he would have escaped much personal defamation.

The designing men who nominated the pliant Mr. Hayes and seek, by his election, to cover up official corruption, have known from the start that a square issue before the people meant overwhelming defeat for him. Hence the disgusting campaign of misrepresentation and villification they organized and intend to carry on to the very day of election.

It will do them more harm than good.

Truth is the mighty weapon of Democracy.

That is the conquering sign.

Truth has triumphantly vindicated Mr. Tilden from each and every foul aspersion hurled against his honorable name, and it has proven him to be the man of all men best qualified, at the present time to remove festering administration abuses, and to restore to a suffering people the blessings of peace and permanent prosperity.

The election of Mr. Tilden as President will be one of the most fortunate events that ever happened to the people of the United States.

Because—

He possesses great executive ability, and thorough familiarity not only with the varied duties of statesmanship, but with the practical details of business affairs.

He has within himself the means of knowing what the national honor and the welfare of all classes of people demand.

He is fearlessly honest, and will not for a moment falter until every evil is reformed, every official thief subdued, every corrupt ring broken, and every dollar of the public money faithfully accounted for.

He will call into his Cabinet the most eminent talent and integrity the country can produce, and strive to bring back the better days of the Republic.

He will be President in fact as well as in name.

VOTE FOR TILDEN!

ATTENTION! TAXPAYERS!

The profligate expenditure of public money by the present National Administration is alarming, and to avert ultimate ruin it must be stopped.

Honesty and economy at Washington are absolutely essential for business prosperity throughout the entire land.

Ponder the following figures!

Amount of appropriations the present year asked for by the Grant Cabinet:

Fortifications,	$ 2,406,000
Army,	33,348,748
Navy,	20,871,860
Civil Expenses,	32,560,475
Total,	$90,186,083

Ninety million dollars for only a part of Government expenses.

The Democratic House of Congress, after a careful examination of the public service, cut down appropriations for the four branches above named to $50,785,000!

The Republican Senate, anxious to gratify its extravagant party officials, raised them up to $62,845,228.

The House refused assent, and finally passed them at $55,400,427.

From which you will see Democratic economy saved you in one year

$34,786,456!

Nearly thirty-five million dollars.

A Democratic Administration can and will, without detriment to any public interest, rescue from wanton waste at least $50,000,000, fifty million dollars per annum.

Vote for
TILDEN AND HENDRICKS!

REFORM AND SAVE.

Hon. Freeman Clark, formerly Comptroller of the Treasury at Washington, and a decided Republican in politics, asserted, as his opinion, that ninety million dollars a year of the revenue exacted from the people of the United States were stolen before reaching the National Treasury.

What think you of that, Honest Taxpayers?

A Republican official made the charge.

Is there not need of Reform?

Ninety million dollars a year stolen! Suppose we throw off one-third from the Comptroller's estimate, and that would leave, for the eight years of Grant's administration an aggregate, without calculating interest, of $480,000,000!

Four hundred and eighty million dollars!

To which add, at least, fifty million dollars a year uselessly expended or corruptly and extravagantly squandered, and you have the frightful sum of $880,000,000.

Eight hundred and eighty million dollars, or forty per cent. of the present National Debt, pilfered and wasted, and which enormous amount of money would have been wholly saved to the people under the rigid system of accountability and frugality Samuel J. Tilden will, as President, certainly inaugurate and keep alive.

Is it not time for a change?

Vote for
TILDEN AND HENDRICKS!
HONESTY, ECONOMY,
PEACE AND PROSPERITY!

Specie payments can and should be resumed without unnecessary or artificial contraction, and without disturbing the industry, trade and commerce of the country.

A free people should give no countenance to corruption and usurpation.

AWFUL!

The number of office-holders has been nearly doubled under the Grant Administration and now figures 94,119!

Awful!

An army of nearly one hundred thousand men living on the people's money, and probably one-half that number rendering no real service, idle drones, electioneering for Mr. Hayes in order that they may continue feeding at the public crib.

It is not surprising that times are hard, and worthy men are in want.

Mr. Hayes is pledged to keep that 94,119 horde in office.

He dare not do otherwise.

His hands will be tied fast.

Mr. Tilden will scatter the worthless crowd, and only employ honest men to do needed work.

VOTE FOR TILDEN!

GRANT-HAYESISM.

Grantism has ruled the country for nearly eight years, and what is the result?—

Financial derangement.
Business embarrassment.
Real estate depressed.
Trade paralyzed.
Commerce destroyed.
Manufactories closed.
Labor unemployed.
Men begging for bread.
Official corruption rampant.
Public robbers unpunished.
That is the direful result of Grantism.

Hayesism will prolong it another four years.

Ruin darkens such a prospect.

A change of Administration is the only sure remedy.

Vote for
TILDEN AND HENDRICKS.

MORE PUBLIC WASTE.

Since the Republican party has been in power at Washington 175,345,405 acres of public lands have been given away to Railroad Corporations.

Included in the above enormous free disposal of the peoples' domain were forty-seven million acres to that gigantic fraud the Northern Pacific Railroad.

Mr. Hayes signalized his Congressional career by voting for those land grants and all the other extravagant out goes of his party.

It is time to stop every leak.

Mr. Hayes cannot do it, if he would.

Mr. Tilden is the man to accomplish that important task.

VOTE FOR TILDEN!

FOR ASSEMBLY, Cornelius A. Runkle.

There is no better qualified citizen in this District for Member of Assembly than Cornelius A. Runkle, of New Providence. Honest, intelligent, practical, and of private worth, he should be commissioned to guard, as he will faithfully, the rights of the people at Trenton.

VOTE FOR RUNKLE!

FOR CONGRESS, MILES ROSS.

Mr. Ross has proven himself to be a practical, and therefore most valuable Member of Congress, always at the post of duty, and ever ready and willing to protect and advance the interests of his constituents. He richly deserves a re-election.

VOTE FOR ROSS!

FOR VICE PRESIDENT, Thomas A. Hendricks.

A citizen of spotless private character, a statesman of ripe experience, earned through a long and brilliant Senatorial career, and a Governor of high repute, his superior for the position of Vice President cannot possibly be found.

VOTE FOR HENDRICKS!

ALVAH A. CLARK.

The friends of the above gentleman, candidate for Congressional honors in the Fourth District, should be on the alert on election day, and see to it that he is triumphantly elected. His enemies, the sore-head Democrats, in combination with the Republicans of the District, have in their dire extremity, issued an extra, calumniating Mr. Clark, whose record, however, stands out in bold relief to all who know him, as an honest man, one who, when elected, as we honestly believe he will be, will administer the affairs of his constituents in a faithful manner. In spite of all the calumny heaped upon him we firmly believe he constitutes that which we advocate, honesty, capability. Voters of North Plainfield, do your whole duty and elect to the high office of Congressman one who you can rely on, not a party hack. Such a man entitled to your suffrages is Alvah A. Clark.

"In Governor Tilden I am confident that we have a candidate possessing all the requisites that the exigencies of the times demand. In a long career he has given the surest proofs of ability and integrity. It is a very easy thing to preach reform to an opponent, but a very different affair to carry it out in one's own party. This Governor Tilden has had the rare courage and ability to do.—Against great obstacles he commenced and carried through the Herculean task of fighting corruption and pursuing the plunderers in his own party, and it is almost superfluous to say that the courage, energy, untiring perseverance and acumen he displayed in those memorable contests, prove that he possesses in a most eminent degree the qualities so much needed as Chief Magistrate in the present crisis of our affairs."—George B. McClellan.

Men bent on retaining evil power will do anything that promises the least shadow of assistance, no matter how dishonest or base. That fact is exemplified in Zach Chandler, as manager of the Hayes campaign, employing emissaries from Ohio to assume the character of ex-rebel officers, and loudly boast in railroad cars and public places that rebel war claims would be surely paid in the event of Mr. Tilden's election to the Presidency. The fraud has been detected and exposed. A party compelled to resort to such means for success must be in the very last stage of desperation.

"The friends of Reform have chosen for their leader, Governor Tilden, a man of rare ability and moral courage, who has proved his fitness for the service, whose vigorous blows have broken in pieces the plundering combinations in New York City and upon the State canals, reducing very largely expenses and taxation, and enforcing honest administration; and whose hopes for an honorable place in the history of his country are all staked upon his carrying out, with fidelity and energy, the same reforms in the General Government which have been of such vast benefit to our own State. All who know him, or know the work which he has done, will need no assurance that he will not falter in the discharge of his great duty."—Lucius Robinson.

Suit has been commenced against an ex-Republican member of Congress in New England for the recovery of several thousand dollars borrowed from that partisan swindle, once known as the Freedmen's Savings Bank, and which the loyal patriot failed to return. If walking in a Democratic procession transforms respectable colored citizens, as a Hayes organ has affirmed, into "mean niggers," what fitting epithet should be given the white Republican Congressman who waxes rich and saucy upon money stolen from the poor colored people of the South.

"If holding all the Federal offices during the war, depleting the Treasury and pocketing the profits of contracts was saving the Union, the Republican leaders may well claim the title of 'Union Savers.' But if carrying the musket in the ranks, if enduring trial and privation in the camp and on the field, if storming the imminent and deadly breach had anything to do with saving the Union, then Democratic soldiers did their full share."—Ex-Gov. Joel Parker.

Secretary of War Cameron, Secretary of the Navy Robeson, Secretary of the Interior Chandler, Post Master General Tyner and Attorney General Taft, were all in New York last week electioneering for Hayes so as to keep themselves in office. The only members of the Cabinet left doing duty at Washington and rendering a show of service for large salaries pocketed, being the Secretaries of State and the Treasury.—Justly do a plundered people demand Reform.

Mr. Blaine stated in his New York speech that United States flags did not float anywhere in Georgia except over Custom Houses and Post Offices. At the very moment Mr. Blaine was uttering that falsehood, there were no less than four United States flags floating from the Opera House in Griffin, Ga., where Senator Norwood was delivering a Democratic address. Score another for Mr. Blaine.

"There is not one good man in our whole country whose heart is not made gladder by the assurance that once more the Methodist Episcopal Church is to become one and undivided. So the same spirit will strengthen our Union of States, and will raise our country into higher regions of patriotism and upon brighter fields of glory."—Governor Hendricks.

The moment a poor clerk in Government employ refuses to be assessed on behalf of Zach. Chandler's corruption fund, out of employment he goes, and yet Blaine, Bob Ingersoll, and Kilpatrick chatter about American freedom. Down with hypocrisy.

Honesty, capacity and fidelity should be made the indispensable tests and qualifications for all public officers.

No party can govern a nation with justice and wisdom that is not national in its origin and character.

"I have not the confidence in Mr. Hayes that I repose in Mr. Tilden."—Charles Francis Adams.

Scarcity of Money.

There is no doubt but the present situation of all kinds of business and industry is fearfully depressed, and it behooves every family to look carefully to their expenses. Winter is coming on when children are liable to Croup, Whooping Cough, etc. Coughs and Colds will prevail everywhere, and Consumption with other Throat and Lung disease will carry off many.—These diseases should not be neglected, Doctor Bills are expensive, and we would advise our people to use BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP. It never has failed. One bottle at 75 cents will keep your whole family well during the winter. Two doses will relieve any case. Sold in all towns in the United States, and by your Druggist, William H. Voorhees.

Natural Mineral Water.
The attention of the public is invited to the above celebrated Water, the qualities of which will be briefly described, and in presenting it to the public the proprietor feels it his duty to give, at the same time, its chemical analysis, which has been most faithfully accomplished by the celebrated Dr. Kirchhoff, and found, in 16 oz. at a temperature of 70 deg., to give the following results:

Acid, Carbonic,	[illegible]
Soda, Muriate,	[illegible]

LOOK!
The wildest excitement exists in many localities on account of the immense number of tramps who are perambulating over the country,
Out
of work, and many of them would not work if it were tendered them. The most of them are a ragged, thieving, dirty and worthless crew. The exception can be granted to an occasional few.
For
a whole flock of black sheep is truly a rarity. The general depression of business, and lack of employment everywhere has forced many to roam in search of work, and others travel, beg, and steal, because they don't want to work. In this connection we wish to call

Vote for Tilden and Reform.

NEXT Tuesday is a legal holiday.

Keep the ballot-boxes unpolluted with fraud.

FOURTH STREET has received a top-dressing of gravel, much to the improvement thereof.

GO TO Laing's Hall next Monday evening and hear the gifted speakers who will be present.

Vote the whole Democratic ticket.

MAJOR HAGGERTY will speak at Laing's Hall next Monday evening, at the Tilden and Hendricks Mass Meeting.

PRESIDENT Grant, in a proclamation, recommends Thursday, Nov. 30th, 1876, as a day of General Thanksgiving.

GEN. SCHOEL has been invited to deliver an address in the interests of Reform at Laing's Hall, next Monday evening.

WE are informed by Prof. Gross that as Election Day is a legal holiday, there will be no session of the Public School.

Vote for Cornelius A. Runkle.

Beware of bogus tickets; the enemies of Reform will resort to every imaginable trick, because, they know a fair contest is their sure defeat.

ADAMS, the Clothier, next to the postoffice, has some elegant new styles for fall and winter suits, which he is making up in the highest style of the art. You are always sure of a good fit at Adams'.

HANDSOME maples trees have been set out on either side of Union Avenue, from Clinton Avenue to New Market. In future years this avenue will be a beautiful driveway, with its handsome shade trees.

Vote for Tilden and Hendricks.

ATTENTION is directed to the large sale of personal property in Hunterdon County by M. L. Riley, auctioneer, which will be found in another column. Parties interested in the procurement of fine property should give this sale their attention.

THE names of our next Congressman, Miles Ross and Assemblyman, Cornelius A. Runkle, have been added to the bottom of the Tilden & Hendrick's banner on North Avenue, our staunch old Democratic friend, John Dunning, doing the work.

LAST Friday evening, as Thomas Burke was walking on the railroad track near this city, he was struck by the 10.65, P. M. train, and injured severely, miraculously escaping death. He was removed to the Station House, and is reported as recovering.

Vote for Tilden and Prosperity.

WE do not issue any supplement with this week's CONSTITUTIONALIST like our neighbor of the Times. Such a course is not necessary to influence votes for our candidates. The mass of the people have made up their minds how to vote next Tuesday, and it will be for "Uncle Sammy" and Miles Ross.

ON Wednesday morning of this week a large number of visitors assembled at the High School to witness the first exercises of the year in declamation. They were short but good, consisting of a repetition of a declamation and recitation by two of the prize speakers of last summer, Miss Hattie H. Winslow and Master Everett D. Barr.

LAST Thursday, a brakeman named John Smith, had one of his hands badly mashed at the depot by the member being caught between the bumpers of two cars which he was coupling. The injured hand was dressed by Drs. Stillman and Hart, who successfully disjointed and removed one finger, thus saving the hand.

Vote for Tilden and Hendricks.

LAST Winter an effort was made to form a "Game Protective Society" to be composed of members from Union, Somerset and Middlesex Counties, but failed on account of the difficulty of getting a sufficient number together at a meeting. We trust the effort will be renewed this Winter and the Society become a reality.

MR. WM. H. EGBERT opened his new Grocery Store in Coward's building, Cherry Street, last Saturday morning, and from the large number of customers waited upon during the day the fact was evident that the new store will be a success. Mr. Egbert has facilities for purchasing his goods at low figures and is consequently enabled to sell low.

THE Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers have offered a reward of $5,000 for the arrest and conviction of the miscreant who turned the switch near Evona station last Tuesday night, whereby a passenger train was wrecked and two lives lost. The Central Railroad officials also offer a reward of $2,000 for the apprehension and conviction of the scoundrel who did the deed.

Vote for Tilden and Reform.

MR. JACOB KLINE, the merchant of White House, N. J., who was injured at the railroad accident near Evona last week, and who was reported as having died since, was removed to his home on Friday last, from Mr. L. M. Estap's residence near the scene of disaster whither he was removed to at the time. Mr. K. is about recovered from his injuries.

AND now the Republican Managers of the Third Congressional District have issued a supplement setting forth the claims of Prof. Atherton as a candidate for Congressional honors, in remarks made by the Republican press throughout the District. Miles Ross, however, will leave the Prof. at home to instruct the young idea how to shoot. Mr. Ross is needed by the people at Washington.

Look out for fraudulent voters

FOR a specimen of foul slander and vituperation against an honest man and his views, we commend our readers to the article on ex-Governor Parker's speech at Laing's Hall last week hashed up in the Central Times of this week. The writer for once found himself in good company and gets spiteful over it. He will be glad to affiliate with the "unwashed" after next Tuesday.

LOVERS of that favorite beverage, Lager Beer, should patronize Fred Casper, who has the finest saloon in this city and the "boss" beer. He has fitted up the rooms formerly used by him as a Furnishing Goods Store on Second Street, just above Cherry, in fine style, and in addition to the comfort of the same has put in a fine organ, which plays 24 airs, National and German, which will while away the moments while you enjoy your lager.

Vote for Tilden and Hendricks.

A GERMAN barber at Somerville, named Paul Haase, committed suicide on Saturday afternoon last under rather peculiar and embarrassing circumstances. He was shaving a customer, when all at once he walked over to a looking glass, burst out crying, and taking some letters out of his pocket, threw them on the floor, remarking they would show who he was, then took a razor from a rack near by, and deliberately drew the instrument across his throat from ear to ear, severing the jugular vein and windpipe.—He then walked the entire circuit of the room, the blood spurting over his customers and the walls, and fell dead in his tracks at the spot where he committed the deed.—County Physician Swinton was summoned, who, after viewing the remains gave a permit of burial, not deeming an inquest necessary. The suicide had acted strangely for some time past, evidencing to many that his mind was diseased.

Look out for Repeaters from New York and elsewhere.

Vote for Cornelius A. Runkle.

THE ladies' attention is directed to Mrs. J. T. Case's advertisement in another column.

DO NOT FAIL to attend the stereoscopic lecture of Mr. Kellogg this (Thursday) evening at the Second Baptist church.

LET every man vote who has the legal right, without fear or favor, and according to his own judgment. Other than that is not Freedom.

COUNCILMAN HARRIS is substituting blue stone curbing for the wooden apology for the same in front of his premises on Second street.

Look out for a torrent of Times Supplement falsehoods on the eve of election.

READ the advertisement of Auction Sale of Stoves, Tin and other ware, of Geo. Demez, on Somerset Street, which appears in another column. A chance for great bargains is offered.

MR. JOHN RAFFERTY has purchased of Mr. Jacob G. Laing, his property on Cherry Street, adjoining Egbertson's Livery, and intends converting the lower floor of the same into a Lager Beer Saloon.

COMPANY E, Capt. Wm. Smith, is having a target match on Mr. Hyde's range under the mountain to-day, accompanied by Drake's 3d Reg. band of Elizabeth. We shall give a list of the prizes next week.

AT a meeting of the Town Committee of Plainfield, held Oct. 25th ult., the following named persons were appointed Judge and Inspectors of the new (3rd) polling district of Plainfield—David J. Boice, Judge; Jas. Clark and J. O. Nodyne, Inspectors.

Vote for Tilden and Better Times.

JOHN MILLER, of Bound Brook, while hunting last Monday was accidentally shot. He had lain down his gun to dislodge a rabbit from its burrow, when his dog struck against the hammer, discharging the gun, the load entering the calf of Mr. Miller's leg.

COLLIER, the Jeweler, handed us a change of advertisement too late for this issue. We would state, however, that he has a fine stock of jewelry, watches, clocks, &c., on hand, which are marked down to low figures. Collier claims to be the "boss" repairer in the city.

PROF. DARE, a daring gymnast, performed astonishing feats on a rope stretched across Front Street from Pruden's to Giles' buildings, on Tuesday afternoon last, the Prof. first taking up a subscription from the assembled multitude to pay expenses. The street was blocked up with spectators and vehicles to witness the sight.

ATTENTION is directed to an advertisement in another column, headed "Morgan's Sparkling Apollinaris." This mineral water has become celebrated for its restorative and curative properties. Mr. Thorn, knowing of its worth by personal observation and information, has determined to offer it to the public of Plainfield for their suffrage. A trial of its merits is advised.

Vote for Tilden and Honest Government.

M. VERMEULE, Plainfield's Old Established Hatter, on Front Street, opposite Somerset, is now ready with his Winter Stock of Fashionable Hats and Caps, to furnish the public with just what they want in that line. He has also laid in a fine stock of Furs which should interest the ladies, who should not forget that they can procure as fine an article at as low a figure at Mr. Vermeule's as they can in New York City. Go and examine his goods.

AFTER this issue, which is the last previous to the great political contest now agitating the country, we hope to furnish our lady readers with more acceptable reading matter, and to attend more strictly to our local department which has been somewhat neglected in consequence of the scarcity of room consequent upon the necessity of using so much of our space for political matters.

Grant's immense army of office-holders are desperate, and will do anything to prolong their pickings under Hayes. Watch them closely.

WHILE a gentleman named Cooper, from near Metuchin, accompanied by two elderly ladies, was driving through Cherry street, on Monday last, his horse became restive and commenced kicking, knocking the dash-board of the vehicle into flinders. He was detached from the carriage, which was sent to Homan's on Somerset street for repairs and another vehicle procured at Mr. Heidloff's stables.

THE law against shooting quail, rabbit and partridge, or grouse, expired on the 1st day of November, and the sound of the hunters' gun is now heard from early morn until evening, among the hills and valleys. Game is quite plentiful this year, the mountains abounding with grouse. It is a shame, however, that so little notice is taken of the game laws by certain parties, who for the past three weeks have been killing rabbit and quail almost at the doors of residences on the outskirts of this city.

Don't let a fraudulent voter escape.

POSTMASTER VAIL evidenced a spirit of enterprise, and a desire to accommodate the public, by carrying the New York mails to Rahway on Tuesday of last week, so that they could be transported by rail to their destination, the strike on the Central Rail road having stopped all communication over the latter road for that day. Mr. Vail has conducted the affairs of our Post Office in a highly satisfactory manner since his appointment, which fact is duly appreciated by the Plainfield public.

VOTERS will remember that there will be three polling places in Plainfield the coming election. The first district, comprising that portion of the city lying between Cherry Street, Fifth Street and the county and city lines. The second district all that portion Northeast of Cherry Street to city line, and the third, or new district, all that part lying west side of Cherry Street or Park Avenue to the city line south, running along Fifth St. to William St., thence to Fourth St. and along Fourth St. to city line, Evona, (Clinton Avenue.) The polling places are as follows: 1st District—Laing's Hall; 2d District—Vail's Real Estate Office, opposite the depot; 3d District—the small building in the rear of Jacob Boice's residence, corner of Cherry and Fourth Streets.

Look out for Summer boarders who come up on the cars for the purpose of voting. Overhaul their legal right at the polls.

Tilden, Hendricks and Reform.

The most enthusiastic meeting of the campaign, in the interest of Tilden, Hendricks and Reform, was held at Laing's Hall last Thursday evening, on which occasion ex Gov. Joel Parker addressed the assembled multitude which packed the spacious Hall to such an extent that fears were entertained that the flooring might give way, and consequently additional supports were necessary to be put under the same. The meeting was called to order by John H. Jackson, Esq., President of the Young Men's Tilden and Hendricks Reform Club, who nominated Hon. Wm. B. Maxon as chairman of the evening. Upon taking the chair, the latter gentleman introduced to the audience New Jersey's great War Governor, Joel Parker, who was received with deafening cheers. His speech was a plain, common sense, logical and convincing argument, which carried conviction with it to his hearers and sank deep into their hearts and minds. Unquestionably many votes were made for Tilden and Hendricks, the People's candidates, by the great statesman's remarks. He was followed by John N. Voorhees, Esq., of Hunterdon County, and Cornelius A. Runkle, candidate for Assembly in the Third District. Mr. Runkle made a short speech which was well received. The meeting then adjourned with cheers for Tilden and Hendricks, the speakers of the evening, and New Jersey's favorite son, Joel Parker.

Watch the man who offers money or any other consideration for votes, and see that he gets the full penalty of the law.

Vote for Miles Ross.

Gough.

The first lecture of the season given under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., at the Congregational Church, last Monday evening, was a perfect success, the church being filled with an attentive and interested audience. The speaker, in his usual eloquent manner, held his hearers spell-bound until the close of his address, which was on "Habit." Mr. Gough has lost none of his vim and eloquence since we last heard him. His subject was a good one and interested his large audience as of yore. The Lecture Course promises to be a most successful one to the Association. The next of the series will be given in the same church, Thanksgiving Night, Nov. 30th, by W. Irving Bishop, subject, "Spiritualism Exposed."

Letter of Acceptance.

NEW PROVIDENCE, Oct 26, 1876.

James Parker, Esq., L. H. K. Smalley, Esq., Committee.

GENTLEMEN:—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 19th inst., informing me that, at the Convention of the Third Assembly District of Union County held at Summit Saturday, I was unanimously nominated as their candidate to represent the District in the next Legislature. In accepting the nomination I beg to return my thanks to the members of the Convention for this expression of their confidence and consideration, and to state that, in case of my election, I shall perform the duties of the office to the best of my ability, and, I hope, to the entire satisfaction of the public.

Respectfully yours,
CORNELIUS A. RUNKLE.

Another Grand Meeting.

Last Tuesday evening Laing's Hall was the scene of another grand meeting for Tilden and Reform, Gov. Joseph D. Bedle being the speaker of the evening. The meeting was called to order by John H. Jackson, President of the Young Men's Reform Club, who invited His Honor, Mayor Sutphen to act as Chairman of the evening. The Mayor upon accepting, made a few very excellent remarks upon the importance of the present election, and then introduced the first speaker of the evening, His Excellency Gov. Joseph D. Bedle, who in one of the finest addresses ever delivered in this city, entered into a thorough and statesmanlike discussion of the real issues of the campaign. Space prevents our giving at length his able discourse. He was followed, in a gentlemanly and argumentative speech, by our worthy candidate for Assembly in this District, Cornelius A. Runkle, Esq., who is becoming very popular among all classes.—It was one of the largest and most earnest meetings ever held in this city. Many Republicans were present and we hear it expressed by some of them that the Gov's. speech was the best they had listened to during the campaign.

Education of a Vagabond.

The readers of this paper will learn from our advertising columns that a lecture, with the above title, will be delivered on Thursday evening, Nov. 9th, by Rev. Dr. Henry C. Potter, rector of Grace church, New York, in the Second Baptist church. Dr. Potter has recently returned from his travels in Europe and the East, and what we may expect from this lecturer may be inferred from the admirable letters he wrote to the Evening Post while abroad. Every person of intelligence desires to travel in foreign lands, and when he does so, he secures a thoroughly informed and intelligent guide, otherwise he would miss many objects of interest and lose much of the pleasure of travel. For example, go to Rome, where you will find as a guide Shakespeare Wood, a gentleman who has thoroughly studied the antiquities of that wonderful city, and he will take you to any given locality, and in a few hours give you more information that you would acquire in a week's study with the best guide-book. This lecture will be given under the auspices of the ladies of Grace church, and the occasion appeals to the gallantry of our lecture going community. Grace church of New York comes to the aid of Grace church in Plainfield, thus giving our readers an opportunity to "add grace to grace." On the evening of the 9th there will be a few of our readers (Republicans) who will need something to cheer them up and we advise them by all means to give ear to the "Education of a Vagabond." And as for those on the winning side, they will of course feel like having a good time that evening and can not do better than spend it with the accomplished and scholarly Rector of Grace church and hear him relate his memories of travel.

IMPORTANT TO VOTERS.

Naturalization papers may be obtained by all entitled to them up to the day of election, by applying at the office of the County Clerk.

Personalia.

Rev. J. S. Stockbridge and family have taken up their residence for the Winter in Plainfield, in Mr. Jones' house corner of Cherry and Seventh Streets.

Gov. Bedle was the guest of Hon. Joseph W. Yates during his visit in Plainfield to address the people last Tuesday evening.

Mr. Francis A. Blatz, the aged father of Joseph A. Blatz, of this city, died suddenly on Sunday, Oct. 22d, from pneumonia.

Mr. J. E. Parsons, Stationer, on Front Street, died on Tuesday last, from malaria fever, contracted while visiting the Centennial Grounds. Mr. Parsons was esteemed by his large circle of acquaintances for his many good qualities.

Messrs. A. Vanderbeek, Alpheus F. Munday, Geo. T. Young, T. W. Young, James Brand, M. M. Thorn and Mr. Leder of the New York Tribune, started on Monday last for Barnegat to engage in a conflict with the duck and geese. We wish them a pleasant time, plenty of luck and a kindly remembrance of the printer when they return.

"Burt," the well-known foreman of the CONSTITUTIONALIST office was made happy this morning by the addition to his family of another little girl. All doing well.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

Last Thursday the Freeholders of Somerset county met at Demler's Hotel, and accepted the new arched stone bridge across Stony Brook at the intersection of Somerset street and new Grove street. Messrs. Potter & Austin, contractors, who were complimented upon the fine appearance of the bridge, [illegible] credit. [illegible] served by mine host, Geo. Demler, after the transaction of the regular business of the meeting.

Messrs. Kinney and Polhemus, Carpenters and Builders, have formed a co-partnership, and besides being practical workmen Mr. Polhemus is an architect of no mean pretensions. He was the architect of Mr. L. B. Boice's new building and also that of Mr. Chas. Zimmer's, Front Street.

Mr. L. B. Boice's new brick building on Somerset street is now about completed, and for convenience and general appearance is the finest in these parts. He has introduced a novelty, and yet a good thing, by putting in rolling blinds in the entire front of his buildings, which when rolled up presents the whole of the first floor to view, besides enabling him to drive directly into and through the same with a load. He has also put in an elevator running from basement to top floor, and placed a pair of Howe's celebrated platform scales in front of the building on which you can weigh anything from a man's pocketbook to a ton of hay.

If any man attempts to vote who is not legally a citizen of New Jersey, arrest him on the spot.

All Hallow Eve.

Tuesday evening was the anniversary festival of All Hallow Eve—that is to say, the eve of All Saints' Day, which occurs on the 1st of November. In the north of England the Eve of All Hallow is known as Nutcrack Night, from the fashion of cracking nuts and eating apples on that occasion. It is the custom in England when the young would know if their lovers were faithful, to put their nuts on the bars of a grate, naming the nuts after the lovers. If the nut cracks or jumps, the lover who is represented by it will prove unfaithful; if it begins to blaze or burn he has a sincere regard for the person making the trial. If the nuts named after the girl and lover burn together they will be married within a year. The game of "snap-apple" is provocative of great merriment on Hallowe'en. A stick is hung up horizontally by a string from the ceiling, and a candle is placed at one end of the stick and an apple at the other end. The stick is then made to twirl rapidly, the merrymakers in succession leap up and snap at the apple with their teeth, no use of the hands being allowed, and it frequently happens that the burning end of the candle scorches an eyebrow or smears the face with grease. Another sport on Hallow Eve is to set apples afloat in a tub of water and then allow the boys and girls to duck for them, with the intention to catch them with their teeth. Great fun is manifested in watching the youngsters chase bobbing apples with open mouths and sharpened teeth. All Hallow Eve was celebrated in this vicinity at the residence of one of the leading citizens of North Plainfield, on which occasion valuable gold prizes were awarded the successful competitors, the principal feature of the evening's entertainment being the "ducking for apples."

Murray, the Burglar.

It will be remembered by many of our readers that in the month of August last, a man was detected robbing the un-occupied residence of Mr. Samuel R. Jackson, on 7th Street, this city, and upon being detected in the act by a colored man named Pettis, he ran away over fields and through swamps, until he was at last captured near New Brooklyn by the crowd pursuing him, not, however, until he drew a pistol and attempted to fire it at one of his pursuers. Upon being taken before Judge Good, he was remanded to the county jail at Elizabeth to await trial. A few days after, he attempted to hang himself in his cell, leaving a note stating he was tired of life and wanted to die. He was discovered in time and cut down, after which he became more reconciled and shortly afterward forwarded a postal card to a Mrs. Catherine Williams, of No. 79 East Broadway, New York. Capt. Breen being informed of the circumstance, went to New York, and with the assistance of detectives procured the arrest of the woman, in whose rooms were found all manner of stolen goods, many of them being recognized as the property of citizens residing in Plainfield whose residences had been robbed previously. Among the goods were valuable articles belonging to Mrs. Gen. Geo. B. McClellan, whose residence at Orange, N. J. had been robbed some time before. The woman Williams and [illegible] Murray's wife. Evidence sufficient was adduced to show that Murray was a desperate burglar and horse thief. Since his imprisonment he has feigned the insanity dodge, beating his head against the walls of his cell, tearing up his bed clothing, cursing and swearing at all who approached him, and on Monday last when brought into the Court Room for trial, presented a shocking sight. While the trial was in progress, he sat and tore in bits pieces of paper, and mumbled incoherently to himself, suddenly falling from his seat to the floor, in a pretended fit, frothing at the mouth, etc. Drs. Grier and Green, of Elizabeth, who have been watching Murray's movements for some time past, immediately stepped forward, and feeling of the man's pulse, pronounced the fit a sham, after which Murray recovered! The case which was on the first count of the six indictments against him for robbing Mr. Jackson's house, was given to the jury, who, in a very short time returned a verdict of guilty. The other five indictments were then tried and a verdict of guilty rendered in each case. Murray was removed to his cell to await sentence, which was awarded him the next day by Judge Runyon, the same being eighteen years in State Prison.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The Democrats of Westfield Township will hold a Grand Ratification Meeting at Æolian Hall, Westfield, to-morrow (Friday) evening. Hon. B. F. Sawyer, of N. Y., Col. J. Augustus Fay, of Elizabeth, and others, will address the meeting. Westfield will give a clean record next Tuesday for Reform.

Mr. Christopher Snieder, a brother-in-law of Postmaster Decker, was on Saturday last sworn in as deputy postmaster, in consequence of the accident to Deputy Postmaster Wittke.

At a meeting of the Town Committee of Westfield Township, held on Wednesday, Nov. 1st, the following gentlemen were appointed Judges and Inspectors of Election for Districts No. 1 and No. 2, as follows: District No. 1, Westfield, Joseph B. Clark, Judge; E. D. Chamberlain and C. E. Leveridge, Inspectors. District No. 2, Scotch Plains, Wm. C. Stanbery, Judge; B. H. Nodyne and Henry Kyte, Inspectors.

A serious accident happened at Westfield last (Wednesday) evening during the Republican demonstration there. While the parade was in progress, the Westfield Artillery Company were firing salutes from a small brass piece, and when opposite Clark's Pond an attempt was made to fire it, by turning the muzzle in the direction of the pond on the side of the road. In turning the carriage the wheels of the same caught in a rut and the jar threw the thumb of the "thumber," Mr. Henry Manning, off the touch-hole, which caused a premature explosion. Mr. C. F. Wittke, Assistant Postmaster of Westfield, who was in the act of ramming the piece, had his left hand blown off just above the wrist, the rammer going into the pond. The injured member was amputated about four inches below the elbow by Drs. Kinch, Cooper and Gale of the village, and the sufferer is getting along as well as can be expected under the circumstances. The accident caused considerable excitement and cast a gloom over the entire [illegible] esteemed by all who knew him.

Keep an eye on the [illegible] of Zach Chandler's corruption fund.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

We understand that after the election of Tilden and Hendricks, and business matters become revived from their present stagnation to a live basis, our old Democratic friend, W. H. Dean, Esq., of this village, proposes embarking in mercantile pursuits.

During the past week very many of the good citizens of this place have visited the Centennial Exposition.

On Sunday morning last, at about [illegible] an alarm of fire was given in this village, which promptly brought Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company to the scene of danger, which was the building known as the "Joseph S. Terry Store-house," and now belonging to Mr. John Cook. It appears that on the evening previous the Hayes and Wheeler Club [illegible] meeting in this building, at which time stumps of cigars, the contents of lighted pipes and also lighted matches had been carelessly thrown into boxes of dry sawdust that had been provided for use as spittoons in the room, one of which took fire, and [illegible] burned slowly until near morning before the fire got through the floor, then it ran between the floor and the ceiling below, to the weather-boards, then very rapidly up the same to the roof. Fortunately the fire was discovered just in time to avert a very disastrous conflagration, for had it broken out a few hours sooner the whole row of some six or eight buildings must have gone together. The Company under the command of Jas. A. Baker, assistant foreman, rendered timely and valuable services. We would emphasize the word "carelessly," used above, as one of the boxes of saw dust became ignited during the progress of one of their meetings a few nights ago, and yet they were kept in use.

Capt. De Forrest H. Thomas, late of Scotch Plains, died at that place on Thursday evening last. Mr. Thomas did his country valiant service during the late war, at which time he received a gunshot wound in his leg that has eventually resulted in his death. He was a brave soldier, a good citizen and neighbor, a kind hearted man, and was beloved by all who knew him. He leaves a wife, but no children, to mourn his untimely end. Throughout the war and since its termination Mr. T. was an uncompromising National Democrat. His funeral, which was attended by a very large concourse of friends, was held in the Baptist church on Sunday afternoon last at two o'clock, the Rev. Charles Sykes, of the Episcopal church officiating. The following-named gentlemen acted as pall bearers: A. B. Darby, Henry Kyte, Geo. Kyte, L. P. Miller, E. Miller and John Thye. Interment in Baptist cemetery.

The Tilden and Hendrick's club of this village will participate in the grand demonstration to be held in Æolian Hall, Westfield, this evening.

The Scotch Plains Tilden and Hendricks club are to hold meetings in their rooms every evening except Sunday until after the election. Let all the members attend these meetings.

Vote for Miles Ross.

"With the election of Mr. Tilden we may look forward to a bright future.—We shall all breathe freer and with fuller inspiration, for we shall feel that at last we are indeed citizens of a united country, and that no arts of the demagogue, no appeals to the passions of section or of sect, and no continuation of corrupt and unprincipled men in our halls of legislation can again in our day interrupt the quiet and even course of the nation's political life."—Wm. Wirt Warren, of Mass.

There can be no allowance of "Southern war claims," no "pensioning of Confederate soldiers," no "paying for the value of slaves," whichever party is in power, because Sec. 4 of Art. 14 of the Constitution of the United States expressly forbids it; and when Mr. Blaine, or any other Republican speaker says aught to the contrary, he and they know it is coining and circulating a falsehood.

There will be no diminution of the wholesale corruption and debauchery now existing in almost every department of the Government if Mr. Hayes is elected the successor of President Grant. There is no indication of reform within his party. Rogues are either screened, whitewashed, or defended, and the greed of those still around the public crib is wholly unrebuked.

Owing to the spirit of economy and reform infused by Governor Tilden into every department of the New York State Government, the large sum of $845,306, almost one million dollars, has been saved in Canal expenditures the present year, and taxation reduced accordingly. Similar beneficial results, but on a far larger scale, will signalize the administration of President Tilden.

In the grand Democratic torch-light procession in New York last week a considerable number of colored men participated, and for exercising that rightful privilege of American citizenship, the Commercial Advertiser, a vulgar Hayes organ, styled them "mean niggers," which evinces the contempt Republicans have for colored voters who rise to the dignity of freemen and refuse to be servile drawers of political water.

The corrupt powers that have surrounded Grant and controlled his Administration are strong enough to control a President of far greater nerve and force than Mr. Hayes. He would be moulded like clay by such unprincipled politicians as Chandler, Blaine, Cameron, Morton and Logan. The country cannot afford the risk.

"There is no royal road for a government more than for an individual or a corporation. What you want to do now is to cut down your expenses and live within your income. I would give all the legerdemain of finance and financiering—I would give the whole of it for the old, homely maxim—'Live within your income.'"—Samuel J. Tilden.

"If I have not known Mr. Tilden as long and as intimately as I did Mr. Lincoln, I think I certainly know his sentiments on the subject of the late war, and there would be as much propriety in saying that Mr. Lincoln was an anti-War Republican as that Samuel J. Tilden was an anti-War Democrat."—Judge Catron, U. S. Supreme Court.

"Is it anywhere recorded in the political history of this country that any party, corrupted by the long possession of power, ever reformed itself and corrected its own abuses? It has never been done, and will not be without a change of administration."—Lucius Robinson.

I hope I shall always possess firmness and virtue enough to maintain what I consider the most enviable of all titles, the character of an "Honest Man."—Washington.

We hope we shall always possess the sinews to maintain the ascendancy of ourselves in office.—Chandler, Cameros, Robeson.

Whilst I am in office I shall never suffer private convenience to interfere with what I conceive to be my official duty.—Washington.

Whilst I am in office I intend to have a good time at Long Branch and various other places, except the National Capitol.—Grant.

The stability of free institutions, and the prosperity of all classes of people depend upon a change of Administration, which long continued power has made corrupt.

In 1875 twenty million dollars of Internal Revenue came from three Democratic States:

Virginia,	-	$7,548,249
Kentucky,	-	8,831,000
Missouri,	-	3,730,344

While the whole five Republican New England States only contributed $2,771,014.

In 1867 it cost only three per cent. of the Internal Revenue tax to collect it. In 1874 it cost five and one-half per cent., or nearly double. That is a sample of the way public affairs have been conducted. Going from bad to worse. Let us have a change!

The Constitution of the United States establishes the supremacy of the civil over the military power, and the uncalled for interference in elections by the National Government is a flagrant perversion of law and assumption of authority which deserves the indignant denunciation of all patriotic citizens.

A long lease of power, made irresponsible by popular majorities, so large as to promise perpetuity, has intoxicated the leaders of the Republican party, who have made the Administration of Government alike the source and end of a venal and corrupt personal aggrandizement.

Wealth comes only from productive labor. The Farmer, the Mechanic, the Artisan, and the Workingman are the creators of reliable riches.

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders.

ELIZABETH, Oct. 18, 1876.

The Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union convened at their room in the Court House, at eleven o'clock, A. M., all the members being present except Messrs. Ayres, (Samuel), Devlan, Issermann and Runkle.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Freeholder Randolph, chairman of committee appointed to confer with a committee from Somerset County, with power to build a bridge on Elm avenue, over Green Brook, in the city of Plainfield, respectfully report, that although the bridge is much needed, yet owing to the condition of our finances the committee have deferred building said bridge this year.

The report was received and placed on file.

Freeholder Briant, chairman of committee on Summit bridge, respectfully report that on account of the condition of the finances of the County, the committee have decided not to build the wing walls to said bridge, which was received.

By Freeholder Hubbard:

Resolved, That from and after this date for the balance of the fiscal year no new work of any nature whatever shall be ordered by any member of this Board. Adopted.

By Freeholder Randolph:

Resolved, That the Clerk be instructed to notify the absent members of said resolution. Adopted.

By Freeholder Hubbard:

Resolved, That the opinion of the County Attorney be procured upon the responsibility of members of a Board, and the requirements of the act approved March 27, 1876, entitled "An act for the punishment of crimes," marked Chapter III. of general public acts. Adopted.

On motion, by Freeholder Baldwin, the County Attorney was then heard in relation to the judgment against Nathaniel Bonnel, etc.

By Freeholder Crane:

Resolved, That the Attorney of the Board is requested to give his opinion at the next meeting as to what power the Board has to require that no bills against the County shall be paid until first approved by a majority of the Board in open meeting. Adopted by the following vote:

Messrs. Wm. C. Ayers, Baldwin, Briant, Crane, Doty, Hubbard, Ryder, Smith and Winans in the affirmative, and Messrs. Martine, Pierson and Russell in the negative.

By Freeholder Randolph:

Resolved, That when this Board adjourns, it be to meet four weeks from this day, at 11, A. M. Adopted.

By Freeholder Randolph:

Resolved, That the County Attorney institute such proceedings in relation to the Maxwell mortgage, as he shall deem proper for the interest of the County, and for the collection of the claim to secure which the mortgage was given. Adopted unanimously.

On motion by Freeholder Russell, the Board then adjourned.

JOHN M. WELDON, Clerk.

DON'T DO IT.

Don't imagine that "every sound is a delight." A sound whipping never delights the recipient.

Don't advocate cremation. One burning ought to satisfy any reasonable man.

Don't ruin your neighbor's reputation to build up your own. A structure built on ruins will not stand.

Don't make your boy "smoke" for a light offence. It is wrong to teach children bad habits.

Don't buy pools at a race track.—Betting is immoral, especially when you bet on the wrong horse.

Don't suffer yourself to be moved to tears on account of the premature overflow of the lacteal fluid. It's worse than crying over spilt milk.

Don't learn to "keep books." The man who forgets to return a borrowed book is worse than an infidel.

Don't respect a man for his title only. General loafers are sometimes excellent judges of whisky.

Don't imagine that phlebotomy has had its day. Doesn't our currency bear evidence of depletion!

Don't dream that you can work incessantly. The most vigorous workman sometimes needs a rest.

Don't advocate the doctrine of Christian persecution. Give a man a chance to criticise his wife's millinery bill.

Don't live beyond your means if you wish to keep out of debt.

Don't fall in debt, for there is not many that will help you out.

Don't defer 'till to-morrow what you can as well do to-day.

Don't read your paper until you have paid for it, then you will appreciate it.

Mark Twain says the Sandwich Islanders are as unlettered as the back side of a tombstone.

Dubbs says that campaign, is that peculiar kind of pain, that causes a defeated man to feel very weak after election.

Talk about stump speaking, Dubbs says their old cow pasture was full of stumps, and they never done any speaking to the best of his knowledge.

When nature clothes the earth in robes of chilly whiteness, it is pleasant to sit by a comfortable fire and gaze upon the scene through the window.

Dubbs says that the 1st ward boys are all natural born honest Democrats, and that every Republican lad that comes into the ward must shake the filthy thoughts of Hayesism from his mind or they will talk him to death for harboring such foolish ideas.

It is an old adage that "charity begins at home;" and we would suggest during these hard times that every community look to the comfort and welfare of its own poor; that we may not be brought to sorrow with the sad news that a poor family has died from cold and hunger.

NEW JERSEY
Enamel Paint Company,
RARITAN, NEW JERSEY.
Manufacturers of
Bradley's Enamel Paint.
Mixed Ready for Use, in any shade, Tint or Color desired.

THESE Paints are composed of the purest and best materials known to painters; the principal ingredients being Pure White LEAD, ZINC, and LINSEED OIL, which are made to unite in a homogeneous mass by the addition of other materials which add greatly to the durability, elasticity, beauty and strength of the Paint. The whole are chemically combined so that the pigments are held in permanent solution, thus forming a new compound which dries on the surface and adheres firmly to it, thus forming a Smooth, Glossy, Firm, Elastic, Beautiful and Durable Paint.

The Oil, which is the real life of the Paint, cannot leave it and be absorbed by the substance to which it is applied, as it does in paints mixed in the ordinary way, & thus leave the pigment dry and chalky, to wash & rub off in few months. This paint is unaffected by changes of temperature, is perfectly impervious to the action of water, is well adapted to all classes of work, & is in every way a better paint for either inside or outside work or boat painting than any other Paint known to the trade, and will last at least three times as long as the best Lead and Oil mixed in the ordinary way.

These Paints are Ready for use.
Are easily applied by any one, require no mixing, stirring or addition of dryers.

Liberal Inducements to Dealers.

And full satisfaction guaranteed to their Customers.

Sold by the Gallon, Keg or Barrel. Orders attended to promptly. For Price List and Sample Color Card, Address,

CAUTION!

The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Theo A. Carman some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filed over one thousand pages and counsel were over two weeks in summing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an air-tight iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing stratum. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is of steel, wedge sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Carman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defence contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement has been clearly proved.

TAX NOTICE.

The State, County, Township and Fire Taxes in Plainfield Township for the year 1876 are now due and payable to me before the first day of December next. Taxes remaining unpaid on the first of December, 1876, will be returned to a Justice of the Peace for collection, and 12 per cent. per annum added. I will receive taxes from 9 o'clock a. m. to 4 o'clock p. m., on every day from October second to December first, Mondays excepted, at my office in Upward's Building, Cherry St., near Front.

The Court of Appeals in cases of taxation will sit at Laing's Hall, in Plainfield, on the fourth Tuesday in November next, at two o'clock, p. m.

Commissioners' Report.
WIDENING OF PLAINFIELD AVENUE.

Notice is hereby given, that the Report of the Commissioners appointed to make an assessment of the damages and benefits incurred by the widening and altering of Plainfield Avenue, from Front Street to the city line, together with the assessment map, has been filed in the office of the City Clerk, and will there remain open to the inspection of the public until its presentation to the Common Council on Monday evening, November 6th, next.

Dated October 16th, 1876.

WM. SWALM,
DANIEL J. MARSHALL, } Commissioners.
S. J. BURR,

ASSIGNEES' NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given to the creditors of Bernhard Vetterlein and John Vetterlein, partners trading in firm name and style of B. & J. Vetterlein, of the city of Plainfield, Union county, New Jersey, that all claims against the estate of said firm must be exhibited to the subscriber, the assignee of said firm, under oath or affirmation, before the twelfth day of December next, being three months from the date of the assignment, or be forever barred from coming in for a dividend of the estate; and the said creditors are further notified that a list of the claims against the said Bernhard Vetterlein and John Vetterlein, partners as aforesaid, will be filed with the surrogate of the county of Union before the ensuing January term of the Orphan's Court, when exceptions thereto may be filed by any person interested.

Dated Oct 24, A. D., 1876.

ALPHEUS L. MUNDY, Assignee.

Surrogate's Order to Limit Creditors.

Union County Surrogate's Office, Sept. 6th, 1876.

Eleanor E. Jackman, Administratrix of Michael Coen, deceased.

On application of the above named Administratrix, It is ordered that said Administratrix give Public Notice to the Creditors of the estate of said decedent to bring in their debts, demands or claims against the same, under oath, within nine months from this date, by setting up a copy of this Order, within twenty days hereafter in five of the most public places in the County of Union, for two months, and also within the said twenty days, by advertising the same in The Constitutionalist for the same space of time; and if any Creditor shall neglect to exhibit his or her debt, demand or claim, within the said period of nine months, public notice being given as aforesaid, such Creditor shall be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the said Administratrix.

By ADDISON S. CLARK, Surrogate.

Surrogate's Order to Limit Creditors

Union County Surrogate's Office, Sept. 6th, 1876.

John Schindler, Executor of Albert Lang, deceased.

On application of the above named Executor, it is ordered that said Executor give Public Notice to the Creditors of the estate of said decedent to bring in their debts, demands or claims against the same, under oath, within nine months from this date, by setting up a copy of this Order, within twenty days hereafter in five of the most public places in the County of Union, for two months, and also within the said twenty days, by advertising the same in The Constitutionalist for the same space of time; and if any Creditor shall neglect to exhibit his or her debt, demand or claim, within the said period of nine months, public notice being given as aforesaid, such Creditor shall be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the said Executor.

By ADDISON S. CLARK, Surrogate.

NOTICE is hereby given that Everett W. Swalm has withdrawn from the firm of Swalm Bros. The business will be continued by Alburtus Swalm, who will collect and pay the debts of the same.

SHERIFF'S SALE.—In Chancery of New Jersey—Between The Dime Savings Institution of Plainfield, complainant, and Sylvester Whitehead, and ux, and al., defendants. Fieri facias.

By virtue of the above-stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale at public vendue, at the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on Wednesday, the 22d day of November, A. D. 1876, at two o'clock p. m. of said day, in the first place, all that tract or parcel of land and premises, hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being in the city of Plainfield, in the county of Union and State of New Jersey:

Beginning at a stone in the middle of Third street, and in line of the rear of William street lots; thence running along the rear of William street lots a northwest course, one hundred and eleven and twenty-six one hundredths feet to line of Lucy's land; thence in a northeasterly course and parallel with Third street, and along Lucy's line, thirty feet to line of Kane's lot; thence southeasterly along Kane's lot one hundred and eleven and twenty-six one hundredths feet, more or less, to a stake for a corner in the middle of Third street; and thence along the middle of Third street a southwesterly course, thirty feet, to the place of beginning; subject to the right of passage-way which was conveyed to Daniel Lucy by the deed of Sylvester Whitehead and wife, bearing date May 4, 1872, recorded in the Clerk's office of Union county, in book 76 of deeds, page 236, &c.

And if it be necessary that the following tract of land and premises, with the appurtenances, be also sold; that is to say: all that tract, situate, lying and being in the city of Plainfield, in the county of Union aforesaid, in the State of New Jersey.

Beginning at a stake and corner in the rear of William street lots and also in the rear line of Second street lots; thence running in a northeast course along the rear line of Second street lots thirty feet to a stake and corner of John Kane's lot; thence running along his line a southeasterly course sixty-one feet to a stake; thence running in a southwesterly course parallel with the first line, thirty feet to a stake in the rear line of William street lots; thence running along that line, in a northwesterly course, sixty-one feet to the place of beginning; granting also the use of a passage-way over the lot first above described to Third street for passage on foot, with wagons, horses and other cattle, to the owner of the last above described lot, his heirs and assigns.

POETRY.

MY DARLING MUST DIE.

BY M. B. WHEELER.

I could not believe she must leave us,
Though many long weeks ago,
She called me gently to her,
And whispered so softly and low,
That the angel was surely beckoning
To the Father's home in the sky,
But I closed my eyes and would not believe,
My darling, my darling must die.

I hoped, O, so madly hoped,
When summer winds fanned her brow,
They would waft the bloom of health—
But hope has deserted me now.
Each day she is growing weaker,
And I know by her sunken eye,
And the faint breath, growing fainter,
My darling, my darling must die.

Can it be she must go to Heaven,
And alone I must wander here?
Oh! merciful Father, pity me,
For earth looks sadly drear—
Take me with her across the river—
Side by side let us peacefully lie,
And I shall be spared the untold grief
Of watching my darling die.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE MIDNIGHT ESCAPE.

AN INCIDENT OF THE REVOLUTION.

The strip of ground from Broadway to Centre street, along Chambers, New York, seventy years ago, was a burial-place. The part nearest Broadway was devoted to the colored people for the last resting spot of their dead, and the moiety extending to Centre street was a kind of Potter's field, and during the Revolution the spot where most of the private soldiers of the British army, who died in the city, were interred. At Gallows hill, the spot where the Manhattan reservoir is now placed, was decorated with a gallows, where all deserters and prisoners suffered death who come under the control of the infamous provost-marshal, Cunningham.

It was customary to execute most of the deserters who were native born, at night. There was a policy in this. Public execution of the Americans by the royalists would have been noised abroad, and the injury created thereby, through the manner in which the Continentals themselves would have made use of it, must have resulted to the injury of the king's cause. These executions generally took place after midnight. The prisoners condemned to death were always confined in the old jail, within a musket shot of the place of execution, and a sergeant's guard of eight men, accompanied by the provost marshal and his deputy, generally conducted the prisoners to the gallows.

It was near twelve o'clock of a night in October, in the year 1780, that a young man was reclining among the recent graves that raised their mounds in the vicinity of the gibbet on Gallows hill. The hour and the place were singular for a lone individual, like the man in question, to be reposing. I say alone, yet he was not exactly so, if human bodies, divested of their mortality, can be considered companions; for nearly above his head, swaying to and fro in the night breeze, hung the remains of two soldiers of the Fifth regiment, who had been executed that morning for desertion.

The sky was obscured with dark, murky clouds, and the moaning of the wind, as it swept around the gallows and through the trees that reared their branches amid the darkness of the night, gave a desolate and disagreeable sound well befitting the place itself. The man scarcely moved, with the exception, now and then, of raising his head and peering cautiously above the mound of earth, behind which he lay, toward the jail, dimly visible, with its high, massy walls, in the field beyond.

At length a light glimmered, the tread of men was faintly heard, and the young man, raising himself from the spot where he lay, glided along the rude fence, which skirted the burial ground, until he stood within a few feet of the execution place. Here he paused and looked in the direction of the approaching light. Faintly through the bars appeared two or three files of soldiers, preceded by a colored man who carried a lantern—the only light which seemed to be in the party. Then walked a prisoner, with his arms tightly bound behind him, and directly after, Cunningham, the provost marshal and five or six soldiers with muskets on their shoulders.

"One, two, three," repeated the young man to himself, as if counting the number of the men approaching; "twelve in all— 'Tis a desperate undertaking, but my comrade shall not die if I can save him. Now for skill and courage. Be cool, Dick Martin! You have been on still more perilous occasions, if your commanding officers speak the truth."

He glided back again to his old resting place, when he stumbled in a grave that he had noticed before, just in rear of the gallows. His first impulse was to leap out, for the depth of the grave did not exceed three feet; but a second thought altered his determination, and he murmured:

"This is the best place for me; they certainly will not think of looking for a living man in the grave?" And he stretched himself at full length in the "narrow house" that he knew one day or other he should fill. They entered the burial ground and proceeded directly to the gallows, under which they halted. Forming a circle; the colored man with the lantern, Cunningham, and the prisoner in the centre, preparations were made to go through with the awful ceremony—that of depriving a fellow being of life.

The colored man looked up at the gallows from which the bodies were hanging, and then proceeded very deliberately to cut them down, observing:

"These chaps have hung long enough, I guess."

The prisoner looked on with a glance of no common interest, for he felt that his soul was fluttering on the confines of eternity.

The colored man had passed a rope thro' the beam where, but a few moments before, hung the inanimate clods that now encumbered, as it were, the ground beneath the gallows. This done, he said:

"There, Mr. Cunningham, is a rope that will hold the prisoner long enough, I reckon."

As he finished this speech, he very deliberately kicked the body of one of the dead soldiers aside, and rolled the other very coolly into the grave where lay the man; and the dead rested upon the living! A shudder ran through the frame of the youth, as he felt pressing above him the solid form of one who, but a day before had been as full of life as he now was; but not a sound escaped him, for he knew that silence was his only preservation.

"Well, rascal, you see what you are coming to for deserting from his majesty's service. A halter, I suppose, is more agreeable than good treatment and a soldier's pay."

Thus spoke Cunningham to the prisoner.

"I entered into the refugee corps for my own reasons. They have proved satisfactory," the prisoner said, looking at Cunningham with a bold countenance.

"Yes, internally satisfactory, you rebel. A spy, I s'pose! DeLancey's refugees would be a pretty set if they were all like you, rogue! No, no, I had my eye on you when you 'listed, a month ago, and I told Colonel DeLancey what I believed you was. Not a royal refugee, but a rebel scoundrel. I was right, rogue, eh?"

"Yes, you were right as to my enlisting. As to being a rebel scoundrel, why, there is an offset—you are a royal knave and a blood-thirsty villain. All the information I wanted to send to the great Washington he has got before this—so bang away!—But I should like five minutes' communion with my God first, if you have the manliness to grant it."

Astonished as Cunningham was by the boldness of the man's speech, he knew full well that he himself was detested by the English soldiery for his tyranny, and that a refusal of such request, to a man on the point of execution, would only make him still more odious among them. With an ill-grace, he said:

"Pray, rascal, pray! I don't wonder that a knave like you fears death. A man who betrays his God, and it is full time that you try to make your peace with Him. Three minutes—three minutes! That's all the time you have from me. Go on your knees at once, man. Sambo, have the halter ready. Three minutes only."

The negro had placed the lantern on the ground, directly under the gallows. Its faint light gleamed upward, showing a dim outline of the gallows frame, and partially lighting the faces and forms of the soldiers grouped, with their muskets at an order, in a semicircle around the scene of execution.

The prisoner bent down, resting his knee upon the earth thrown up around the new dug grave. He had no hope of escape; and as he looked upward toward the heavens, although all was black with night, yet his eye pierced through the gloom, and he saw in the future redemption for the past! The quivering of his lips showed his sincerity: he was prepared to die. Of a sudden he bent his head. Ah! his prayer was heard—rescue was at hand. His life—oh! glorious thought—was not to set in blood through the hands of men!

"Harry!" said a voice, in a whisper, proceeding from the grave where the prisoner had seen a dead body tossed but a few moments before, "make no alarm." 'Tis I your comrade, Dick Martin, of Washington's life guard, come to save you. Make some excuse to turn your back toward the hole where I have hidden myself, and I will cut the rope by which your hands are tied.—When this is done and you hear me groan, kick over the lantern, and make for the east-corner of the graveyard! I will follow. Things are ready for our escape. Remember, make no alarm?"

The prisoner felt as if he had won empires upon empires. His life was then safe!

"Come, rogue, your three minutes are up. Sambo, the rope there."

The prisoner, without rising from his knees turned round so that he faced the lantern, his back toward the grave. The negro advanced with the halter to place it around his neck. In the foreground stood the soldiers, gazing with no very pleasant emotions, by the dim light, upon the poor prisoner. Cunningham was in the centre, his brutal and harsh features lighting up with a devilish expression. Just as Sambo got within arm's length of the prisoner, the latter felt the latter felt the thongs cut which bound his arms. He was free!

But why starts the colored man, his eyes protruding from their sockets, as if death was before him? The halter drops from his hands; he is paralyzed with fear.—Slowly from the grave rises the dead body of the soldier he had himself rolled into it! Cunningham beheld the sight, and so did the soldiers. The vision was awful—so apparently contrary to human reason—that with one accord all fled, excepting Sambo and the prisoner. The former rolled on the ground in terror.

In the meantime, the prisoner and his comrade, who, had so opportunely rescued him from an ignominious death, hurried from the graveyard and made for Lispenard's woods, which then skirted the North river near about where Canal street ends.

There they found a boat, in which Dick Martin had crossed alone from the Jersey shore, six hours before, to save his comrade. Reaching the Jersey side, just below Bull's Ferry, in an hour, they struck into the woods, and reached the camp of Washington, near West Point, about night the next day. The morning after, in general orders, two new lieutenants were commissioned in Washington's life guard, and the reader can imagine who they were.

A brief explanation, perhaps, is necessary. It always surprised the English commanders how Washington knew so well the movements made in their lines. Washington, in many cases, made desertion a duty. He knew who among his private soldiers to ask this from, and never, in a single instance, was his confidence betrayed. Death upon the gallows followed the poor private often, but he never compromised his commander.

A VALUABLE INVENTION.

MAX ADELER in The Illustrated Weekly.

He came into the editorial room of The Morning Argus during one of those very hot days in June. Colonel Bangs was perspiring in an effort to hammer out an article on "The Necessity for Speedy Resumption." The visitor seized a chair and nudged up close to the Colonel. Then he said:

"My name is Partridge. I called to show you a little invention of mine."

Colonel. "Haven't got time to look at it. I'm busy."

Partridge. "I see you are. Won't keep you more'n a minute. (Removing his hat.) Look at that hat, and tell me how it strikes you."

Col. "Oh, don't bother me! I'm not interested in hats just now."

Part. "I know you ain't, and that's not a hat. That's Partridge's Patent Atmospheric Refresher. Looks exactly like a high hat, don't it? Now that's the thing you want most this kind of weather."

Col. "The thing I want most is to have you skip out of here."

Part. "What everybody wants is to keep cool, of course. Now, how are you going to do it?"

Col. "Your impudence is cool enough to freeze anything with the mercury at 108."

Part. "Why, if you know when you are well off you will do it with this hat. But how?"

Col. "Oh, dry up and get out!"

Part. "I will explain. If you compress air until it attains a considerable pressure, and then suddenly release it, the rapid expansion causes the air to absorb heat, and to produce quite a marked degree of cold. You know this, of course?"

Col. "I wish you'd compress your air, and then expand it in the ears of somebody besides me."

Part. "Now, in my invention I have utilized this beautiful law of nature in a manner that is certain to confer an inestimable blessing upon the human race. This hat is really made of light boiler iron, covered with silk. The compressed air is contained in it. At the present moment it is subjected to a pressure of eighty-seven pounds to the square inch. If that hat should explode while I am sitting here, it would blow the roof off of this building."

Col. "So it killed you I wouldn't care."

Part. "Well, sir, the way I work this wonderful appliance is this: The air pump is concealed in the small of my back, under my coat. A pipe connects it with the receiver in my hat, and there is a kind of crank running down my right trouser leg, and fastened to my boot, so that the mere act of walking pumps the air into the receiver."

Col. "Well, I don't care a cent if it does."

Part. "But how do I effect the cooling process? Listen. Another pipe comes from the receiver and empties into a kind of a sheet iron undershirt, perforated with holes, which I wear beneath my outside shirt—"

Col. "If you'd wear something over that shirt, so as to hide the dirt, you'd be more agreeable."

Part. "Now, s'posin it's a warm day. I'm going along the street with the air crank in operation. The receiver is full. I want to cool off. I pull the string which runs down my left sleeve; the air rushes from the receiver, suddenly expands about my body, and makes me feel so cold that I wish I had brought my overcoat with me."

Col. "I wish to gracious you'd go home and get it now."

Part. "You see, then, that this invention is of the utmost value and importance, and my idea in calling upon you was to give you a chance to mention and describe it in your paper, so that the public might know about it. You are the only editor I have revealed the secret to. I thought I'd give you the first chance to become a benefactor of your race."

Col. "I'm the kind of benefactor that charges one dollar a line for such philanthrophy."

Part. "To assure yourself that the machine is perfect you must try it yourself. Just stand up and take your coat off. Then I'll put the hat on your head, screw the pump into the small of your back, and ram the other machinery down your legs."

Col. "I'll see you hanged first."

Part. "Well, then, I'll put it on myself, and illustrate the theory for you. You see the rod here in my trousers. This is the air pump here, just above my suspender buttons. The hat now contains about six atmospheres. Now I am ready to move. See? You observe how it works! The only noise you hear is a slight click of the valve in the pump. A couple of more turns, and you put your hand on my shirt collar and feel how near zero it is. I will get the pressure up to one hundred pounds before I—"

BANG!!!!!

As soon as the colonel began to realize the situation, he crawled out from beneath his overturned desk, wiped the contents of the inkstand from his face and hair with the copy of that unfinished article upon "The Necessity for Speedy Resumption," and looked about him. Mr. Partridge was lying in the corner with a splintered table over his legs, his head in a spittoon, and fragments of ruined machinery bursting out through enormous rents in his trousers and his coat. His cast-iron undershirt protruded in jagged points from a dozen orifices in his waistcoat. As the colonel took him by the leg to haul him out of the débris, Partridge opened his eyes wearily, and said:

"Awful clap, wasn't it? You ought to've had lightning rods on this building. Struck by lightning wasn't I?"

"You intolerable ass," exclaimed the colonel, as the clerks and reporters came rushing in, and began to place Partridge on his legs; "it wasn't lightning. It was that infernal machine that you wanted me to put on my head. If it had driven you under ground about forty feet I'd have been glad."

"What the receiver exploded, did it? Too bad, ain't it? Blamed if I didn't think she was strong enough to bear twice that pressure. I must have made a mistake in my calculations, however," said Partridge, pinning up his clothes, and holding his handkerchief to his bloody nose; "I'll have another one made, and come around to show the invention to better advantage."

"If you do I'll brain you with a hatchet," said the colonel.

Then Partridge limped out, and the colonel abandoning the subject of resumption, began a fresh editorial upon "The Extraordinary Prevalence of Idiots at the Present Time."

BUTTERWICK'S WEAKNESS.

Deacon Grimes called the other day upon Mrs. Butterwick to ask for a subscription to the Missionary Society. The following conversation took place:

"Your husband is a Presbyterian, I believe, Mrs. Butterwick?" said the deacon.

"No," said Mrs. B., "he belongs to pretty near everything else on earth but the church. That's what I say to him, that while he is joining so much he'd better join something decent, that will do him some good. But he says he has no time. He belongs to about forty-six secret societies of various kinds. He's the awfullest man for such things you ever saw, and all the time running after them. Monday night he goes around to the Free Masons, Tuesday night he associates with the Odd Fellows, Wednesday night is the Red Men's night, Thursday is his Temperance Lodge, Friday he goes fooling along with the Knights of Pythias, and all day Sunday he is visiting the sick and the widows and orphans of dead members. If there were sixty days in a week I believe Butterwick would have some lodge to attend to every night.

Mr. Grimes, that man actually knows ninety-three grips and two hundred passwords. And he's awful mysterious about them. The other day I saw him swing his arms about kinder queer at breakfast, and presently he says: "Thunder, I forgot where I was! Mary Jane, you saw that? It was a grand hailing sign. Swear you'll never reveal it." And you know he'll wake up nights and ask me if I heard him talking in his sleep, and if I say yes he'll look scared to death, and get out his pistol and say he'll blow my brains out if ever I repeat one of those passwords. And he's all the time practising grips on me; but he won't even tell me what any them are, although he knows I'm just dying with curiosity. He says he knows more secrets than any man in the whole State, and he says if he was to tell one of them, those Knights and Patriotic Sons, and the rest of them, would put him in a vault and seal him up alive, or tear him to pieces with red-hot pinchers.

He's so careless too. I see him giving the grand hailing sign to the slopman yesterday, and the slopman asked Bridget if Mr. Butterwick had the St. Vitus dance bad; and I know when he tried one of those grips on the man that came to tune the piano, the man said if he squeezed his hand that hard again he'd give Mr. Butterwick a bloody nose.

And as for processions. Well, it seems to me that when Mr. Butterwick ain't at a lodge he's marching in a procession. Always some funeral, or celebration or something, and he turns out and goes skipping around through the streets, dressed in a cocked hat and sword, and looking fierce enough to frighten anybody out of their wits. And he told me that sometimes he gets all these grips mixed, and he'll give a Mason an Odd Fellow's grip, and tell me not to be surprised if he is kidnapped and made away with before morning. And he'll kiss the children good-bye and make [his last little arrangements so's everything'll be straight when he he's gone; and then the children and me'll cry, and he'll look solemn, and go to bed to rest before he meets his doom. But nothing ever come of it. They never touched him.

You ought just to see the letters that come here directed to him. "E. Butterwick," and then a whole alphabet of letters strung after his name. He's a Right Worshipful Grand Master and a Sir Knight, and an Eminent Past Grand Sachem, and a Noble Grand, and a Chancellor, and a Chief Magnificent Reverend Druid Priest, and a lot more such things as that, enough to take your breath away; and with it all he's no more stuck up than you are. Just as humble as a lamb. And he says that he can reel off more stuff that they say at ceremonies than'd fill a small library; and he has about sixty sheepskin aprons, and all kinds of pictures of them that he wears when he is on duty.

So he has no time to tend to church, and no money for the heathen. He spent his last dollar Saturday paying his past dues to the Knights of Pythias, and he says if he can't settle up with the Druids by Thursday they'll cut him off and chuck him out. I don't know what happens to a man when the Druids shut down on him. Butterwick hints that it is not much better than sudden death. Perhaps you are a Druid? No! Well, you call and see Butterwick and he'll explain it to you, and meantime those heathen'll have to shuffle along the best way they can. Maybe if you was to write to them how Butterwick is fixed they might consider that sufficient. Good morning. Remember me to Mrs. Grimes."

Then the deacon withdrew and went around to visit a less mysterious family.

NOT QUITE SO GREEN.

Jed Whiffle, on his way from Vermont to the wilds of Colorado, stopped at Chicago for a day and a night, and somehow he let it out in the office of the hotel that he was going to take up land. Of course, if he was going in business of that kind, so far away from home, he must have money with him: at least so seemed to think two worthy gentlemen who interviewed him on his way to his room.

They were two very gentlemanly looking men, albeit a little overmuch bejewelled.—They met Jed in the hall, and took him gently aside.

"My dear sir," said one of them, in the politest manner possible, "Your name is Whiffle?"

"Jonathan Whiffle, sir, from Vermont."

"Ah—well—you will excuse us for what may appear to be an unwarrantable liberty. We are United States Detectives, sir, in the Treasury Department. Of late much counterfeit money has been circulating hereabouts, and our orders from headquarters are to search every stranger coming into this city. You will only be one of more than a hundred that we have been obliged to examine within three days. Let us step into a private room, where the thing can be done quietly. It will take but a few moments."

Jed thought it might be all right; at all events he did not care to get himself into a scrape by resisting two of Uncle Sam's officers, so he followed the two gentlemen into a quiet little parlor.

"Now, Mr. Whiffle, you will allow us to look at your money."

Jed pulled out his old pocketbook in which were six thousand dollars in bank notes.—The gentleman took the money and carefully examined it. Over a few of the notes they hesitated. Finally one said:

"The clerk of the hotel has Bristow's description of the counterfeits. I think I will go and compare these. They are evidently all right, but it is best to be on the safe side."

And thus speaking the man with the bank notes in hand went out to find the clerk.

After a time said the gentleman who had been left behind:

"I think the major is gone longer than necessary. Wait a moment, Mr. Whiffle, and I will bring him back."

Jed had evidently not been quite satisfied from the first; that he was entirely dissatisfied now was most clearly apparent from his next movement. Quietly placing himself against the door, he drew a revolver and cocked it.

"Now—look here, Mister—you may be an officer. If you be, you mustn't lose sight of me till my money is all right. Anyhow, I will not lose sight of you."

The gentleman attempted to expostulate.

"Shut up!" cried Jed. "I'm cocked and primed for them thieves out West, and if I've happened to fall afoul a pair of 'em here in Chicago, I guess I'll try my hand. So, Mister, just make a move to leave me afore I've got my money back, and off goes the top of yer head, just as true as fate."

A look at the Vermonter's face and at the unflinching hand that held the pistol, told he was in dead earnest, and the pretended officer caved in. He went with Jed to a neighboring drinking house, and there found the money all safe and right.

Jed allowed the rascals to go free on regaining his funds, simply because he could not possibly stop over to prosecute and give evidence; but he told his story to such purpose that the sharpers did not venture to try their little game again in any of the Chicago hotels.

"Are you going to the Centennial?" asked a friend of a Chicago miss on the street recently.

"I go to the Centennial?" exclaimed she; "Not I!"

"Not you—why not?" inquired the friend.

"Because," answered the miss, with proudly-set lips. "I don't care to visit any such a common place where everybody goes!"

And turning upon her heels, which were a little run down, she pranced down the streets with a high head and haughty tread.

How doth the busy little pig
Improve each shining hour,
And gather sausage all the day
From every opening flower,
And when the shades of twilight fall
He slumbers in his sty,
Or sings his pretty evening song,
"Root, little pig, or die."

Will not Mr. Bergh prosecute Mr. Barnum for cruelty to animals? He is making a fresh collection of poor lions, tigers, bears and reptiles, and will make another bonfire of them at the first opportunity. He has destroyed three menageries in that way, and we think should be satisfied. Mr. Bergh do your duty.

There is a gentleman out West who feels considerably taken down. He remarked to his wife that it was lucky he didn't meet Miss ——— before he got married, and his wife unfeelingly put in her oar and said, "Yes, lucky for her. The custody of the children has been awarded to the wife.

Bret Harte admits that he learned the printer's trade. He says he could work six quarts of type per day on a hard press, and could correct a roller as good as anybody.

Somebody says, although there is no such thing as muzzling the press in this country, there is plenty of book muslin.

Match factories are the best places to look for amateur pugilists. The employees are constantly engaged in boxing matches.

The Constitutionalist.

Published every Friday by

W. L. FORCE and A. L. FORCE.

THE RESULT.

We withheld the publication of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST one day in order to ascertain the latest election returns. At this writing there is no doubt in our mind of the election of SAMUEL J. TILDEN to the Presidency. There is, however, danger that the desperate administration leaders will count us out in the States of South Carolina, Louisiana and Florida. The whole matter seems to hinge on the latter State which has surely gone Democratic by 1,500 majority. The last base move of the desperate Republican managers is to send United States troops to Florida, with the excuse that an outbreak is feared, when in reality the move is meant to intimidate the Democrats, remove all returns to Tallahassee and count to elect Hayes. Should this be done we tremble for the result. An outraged people will surely resent it. Let us hope that no such danger is imminent. Without a shadow of doubt Tilden is fairly elected by States. He has over a quarter million majority on the popular vote of the people.

ELECTION RETURNS.

The election in Plainfield passed off very quietly. An unusual large vote was polled, 1,489, being an increase of 348 votes over last highest vote. This increase was claimed by the Republicans as theirs by a large majority, the Democrats giving it to them. But, lo! and behold, Plainfield gives but 227 Rep majority, with all the increased vote. Hallelujah! Selah! The friends of Reform worked unceasingly from morn until night, and have achieved a splendid victory.

But little excitement prevailed during the day, each and every man working hard and faithfully for his candidate. We congratulate the Democracy and friends of true Reform of Plainfield upon the immense reduction in the Republican vote of this Township. It evidences that their organization was perfect.

MIDDLESEX COUNTY.

Campbell's majority is 150.

Ladlow's majority for Senator in Middlesex county is 800.

Miles Ross is elected to Congress by 3,000.

Middlesex county makes a clean Democratic sweep.

Piscataway Township gave the Republican electors 120 majority, Atherton 126 maj. Jarrard, 110 maj., Blish 273 maj.

Middlesex.—Official.—Tilden's majority, 570; Ross, Dem., for Congress, majority, 480; Ludlow Dem., for State Senate, majority, 725; Waldron Dem., for Assembly, majority, 285; Campbell, Dem., for Assembly, majority, 100; Martin, Dem., for Assembly, majority, 383.

NEW JERSEY.

All the returns received indicate with certainty that the State has given Tilden at least 11,800 majority.

Hudson County gives a majority of 6,603.

Passaic county elects Hobart (Rep.) to the State Senate. The Democrats gain one Assemblyman.

Middlesex elects Ladlow by about 200 majority to the State Senate, a gain, and makes a gain of one Assemblyman.

The Democratic gain in New Brunswick is 881 votes. Miles Ross is elected to Congress from 3d District.

The Legislature will have a Democratic majority.

Virginia	11	California	6
West Virginia	5	Wisconsin	10
South Carolina	8
Florida	4
Total,	203		166

Necessary to elect 185.

NEW YORK—Gives a Democratic majority of at least 30,000.

WISCONSIN—Nothing but the official can settle Wisconsin, as both sides now claim it by about 1,000 majority.

ILLINOIS—The State is surely Democratic.

FLORIDA—Democratic by a small majority.

SOUTH CAROLINA—Still in doubt, but as returns come in they are very favorable to Democracy.

LOUISIANA—The State votes Democratic, but counted Republican.

NEVADA—Democratic by a small majority.

ALABAMA—The majority of the Democratic State ticket elected, and at least 25,000 majority for Tilden.

ARKANSAS—Democratic by a small majority.

CALIFORNIA—Still in doubt.

DELAWARE—About 3,000 majority for Tilden, Hendricks and Reform.

INDIANA—Tilden's majority between 12,000 and 13,000.

IOWA—Has gone Republican by a small majority.

KANSAS—Gives Hayes about 30,000 majority.

MARYLAND — Heavy Democratic gains all over the State, and the handsome majority of 17,000.

MASSACHUSETTS—Elects a large share of its Republican State Ticket and gives Hayes a small majority.

MICHIGAN—Given to the Republicans although the Democrats have gained enormously over the vote of 1872.

MINNESOTA—Hayes majority about 10,000.

MISSOURI—State officers about equally divided between the two parties, but the State is conceded to Hayes.

NEBRASKA—The State Republican, but the majority gloriously reduced by the friends of Democracy.

NORTH CAROLINA—Carried by the Democracy by an overwhelming majority when compared with votes of previous years, which plainly shows that the honest and candid thinking men of the State are bound to rule.

OHIO—Republicans barely carry the State. As the meager returns came in the two parties stood NECK and NECK, the Republicans being a trifle ahead at the close of the contest.

PENNSYLVANIA—Still clings to her rotten Republican path, but finds many a sound democratic obstacle in its ways in many counties.

NEW JERSEY—"True blue," rolls up the handsome majority of about 11,811 for Tilden, Hendricks and Reform. And the result in the Congressional Districts gives the Democrats 4 of 7 Congressmen. C. H. Sinnickson, (Rep.) is re-elected in the first District by a reduced majority; Dr. J. Howard Hugh, (Rep.) carried the second District, his opponent, Mr. Smith, carrying Burlington Co., where he resides. Miles Ross, (Dem.) carries the third District by 3,000 majority, defeating Prof. Atherton, of Rutgers. Alvah A. Clark, (Dem.) was elected in the Fourth District by nearly 4,000 majority. Augustus W. Cutler, (Dem.) was returned from the Fifth District by about 1,000 majority. He was elected last time by 7,000, the reduction is owing to the popularity of his opponent.

ALABAMA—35,000 Democratic majority on general result, and large gains on the Democratic state ticket.

NEVADA—Goes Republican by a trifle over 1,000 majority.

OREGON—Republican by 800 to 1,000 majority.

MAINE—Goes Republican by a few thousand majority. Showing considerable falling off from vote of 1872.

NEW HAMPSHIRE—For Hayes and Wheeler (Reps.) by about 3,000 majority.

CONNECTICUT—Anxious for Reform, gives Tilden and Hendricks, (Dems.) about 3,000 majority.

KENTUCKY,—"Old Kentuck" beats them all, rolling up the enormous Democratic majority of 75,000.

VIRGINIA—Democratic throughout.

WEST VIRGINIA—Also Democratic.

TENNESSEE—Democratic.

TEXAS—Sound as ever for Democracy.

RHODE ISLAND—Republican.

COLORADO—Republican.

VERMONT—Republican.

GEORGIA—About 75,000 Dem. Maj.

Union county again takes her stand where she belongs—Democratic.

Next December another election will occur, at which the citizens of Plainfield will be called upon to select competent men to represent them in the City Council and other municipal officers. Good men are wanted. See that they are nominated.

How are you, Father Jarrard!

Prof. Atherton is a good man and a splendid teacher. Every man to his trade.

Miles Ross, the tried and true friend of Reform and Honest Government, has again received a handsome majority for Congress.

Special Dispatch.

POLITICAL PROFLIGACY.

Greatly would it redound to the credit of the American name were political contests conducted with more truthful and dignified argument and far less personal detraction.

The Presidential campaign just ended was, on the part of the Republican leaders, the most disgraceful exhibit of calumny that the country ever witnessed.

A gentleman of acknowledged integrity and ability, both public and private, and enjoying, as the result of a worthy life, the best social position, the moment he became the nominee of the Democratic party for President, was assailed with almost demon ferocity, his actions belied, his motives wickedly misrepresented, and his name even coupled with the commission of high crimes and misdemeanors.

It was a shameful display of partisan profligacy, dishonorable to the Republican party and a slur upon free institutions.

The unprincipled politicians who started and carried on that style of mercenary warfare knew they were outraging both truth and decency, but, for the sake of desired political success were willing to sacrifice honor and honesty in their mad attainment of an object regardless of the means employed.

From such men, perhaps no better things could be expected, but that reputable, christian professing citizens should sanction a political crusade of the kind, is strange indeed.

It is to be hoped the time approaches when Truth will command more general respect, and Falsehood receive the odium it justly deserves.

Then honest men, when candidates for public position will not be posted as thieves and caricatured as knaves, and neither will the evils of mal-administration be clouded from view by false issues, artfully concocted to deceive a confiding people.

Murder Will Out.

A few years ago "August Flower" was discovered to be a certain cure for Dyspepsia and Liver complaint, a few thin Dyspeptics made known to their friends how easily and quickly they had been cured by it. The great merits of GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER became heralded through the country by one sufferer to another, until without advertising, its sale has become immense. Druggists in EVERY TOWN in the United States are selling it.—No person suffering with Sour Stomach, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, indigestion, low spirits, etc., can take three doses without relief. Go to your Druggist, Wm. H. Voorhees, and get a bottle for 75 cents and try it. Sample bottles 10 cents.

LOOK!
The wildest excitement exists in many localities on account of the immense number of tramps who are perambulating over the country.
Out
of work, and many of them would not work if it was tendered them. The most of them are a ragged, thieving, dirty and worthless crew. The exception can be granted to an occasional few.
For
a whole flock of black sheep is truly a rarity. The general depression of business, and lack of employment everywhere has forced many to roam in search of work, and others travel, beg, and steal, because they don't want to work. In this connection we wish to call
Your attention to the fact that we propose to do our level best to keep up the high standard for respectability of this section of country as far as GENTEEL APPEARANCE IN DRESS can do so, and while the wearing of good clothes is no particular safeguard for your Lives and Property
there is no denying the fact that a neat appearing, well dressed man is not likely to get up a scare, equal to a rough and ragged individual. This brings us to
The
great question at issue which is to inform you that our new stock of Clothing is now in, and we are prepared to fit neatly every Man or Boy, who will come with the cash, in a suit to please in every respect. Our prices are so very low that the
Tramps
Themselves can readily see that it will be cheaper for them to buy than undertake to beg or steal a new suit. We propose to keep the lead in our line of business. If you
Are thinking of going to the Centennial, and want a suit that will pass you through in good style, a substantial, stylish and good fitting suit, you don't want to delay coming
and taking a look through our store, because we mean just what we say, we will sell you Clothing for yourselves or boys, that will give you satisfaction in style, fit, good wear, and what is of vital importance these hard times VERY LOW IN PRICE.

TO DAY (Friday) is the last day of the Centennial Exhibition.

THE Driving Park will be the scene of some fine trotting to day (Friday).

LATE this week, but trust our news is satisfactory and will make up for delay.

THE mechanics are making good time on Mr. McIntyre's building on North ave.

DON'T fail to attend the auction sale at Demarest's Somerset street, Tuesday, Nov. 14th, at 1 o'clock p. m.

SEVERAL instances are on record where invalids were brought to the polls to vote in this city, in carriages.

THE Central Times thinks party lines should be drawn at the approaching election and a ticket composed entirely of Republicans put in the field.

MR. WM. FLANDERS has purchased the Edward's estate on Front Street below Plainfield Ave., and is making decided improvements in and about the same.

THE Young Men's Mutual Association composed of members of the Congregational Church, held a sociable at the rooms of the Y. M. C. A., last night (Thursday) which was a highly enjoyable affair to those present.

THE Plainfield Liederiafel will hold their Seventh Annual Ball at Smith's Hall, Thanksgiving Eve. Tickets, $1.00, to be had of Theo. Kurzhals, Aug. Smith, L. Weigel, M. Koller and C. Maas, Committee of Arrangements.

GROUND has been broken at Netherwood for the erection of a large first class brick hotel, to cost with furniture about $150,000. It is being built by a stock company, and we hear that a gentleman now conducting one of the large hotels in New York will have charge of it.

To give our readers an idea how careless some people are in directing letters, we will state that twenty-one were misdirected to Plainfield, New York; three to Plainville, New Jersey, and one to Plainfield, Penn. These letters will shortly be received by those in this city for whom they were originally intended.

THE Annual meeting of the Y. M. C. A. will take place on Thursday evening the 16th inst, in the 1st Baptist Church. The Committee take pleasure in announcing that they have secured the services of Rev. Dr. Sims of Brooklyn for that occasion. A choice programme of music may also be expected. We hope our friends will both favor and encourage us with a full house.

MR. STEWART, of the Plainfield Athletic Club, has just returned from a business trip West. At Cincinnati he was the guest of Mr. Featherstone, a former treasurer of the club, now a non-resident member, and the junior of the firm of E. M. Featherstone & Son. While at Chicago he was handsomely entertained by the Chicago Foot Ball Club, some of whose members attended the Athletic games in this city a few weeks ago. They speak becomingly of the reception they received at the hands of our home club, counting it as the most pleasant of their experiences East.

To Young Men.

Rev. J. H. Vincent, D.D., will preach next Sunday evening in the Methodist Episcopal church, a sermon addressed to young men. Service to commence at half-past seven o'clock.

Y. M. C. A.

Sunday next will be observed throughout the world as a Day of Prayer for Young Men's Christian Associations. Sermons to young men will be preached in several of our churches. At 4-30 in the afternoon there will be a union prayer service. The annual meeting for election of officers and directors of the Young Men's Christian Association will be held Tuesday evening, 14th instant, at a quarter before 8 o'clock.

Company E Target Practice.

Last Thursday afternoon Company E, Third regiment, of this city, Capt. W. E. Smith commanding, accompanied by the Third regiment band, held their fourth annual target practice on Mr. Hyde's shooting grounds, North Plainfield. The weather was all that could be desired and the shooting was excellent considering the range (200 yards) and it being the first opportunity the boys had of using their new breech-loading rifles. After the shooting the company was formed in two platoons, and headed by the band, marched through the principal streets and then repaired with their invited guests to Fred. Cooper's and sat down to a bountiful collation, after which the company was again formed and marched to the armory for the distribution of the prizes. The following were the principal prizes awarded: First prize, Private J. Emmett, one cylinder stove; second prize, Private F. Stiles, one ton of coal; third prize, Corp. F. DeCamp, box of cigars; fourth prize, Sergt. P. Symons, barrel of apples; fifth prize, Lieut. D. F. Stewart, box cigars; sixth prize, Capt. W. E. Smith, one cord wood; seventh prize, Private E. Marsh, a hat; eighth prize, Sergt. J. Clark, a cannister of tea; ninth prize, Private B. Higgins, box of cigars; tenth prize, Private T. Codington, one satchel. One year's subscription to THE CONSTITUTIONALIST was added to each of the first five prizes. Everything passed off satisfactorily to all concerned.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

We last week mentioned the fact of the completion of L. B. Baies's new brick warehouse on Somerset street, and neglected to give the names of the carpenters, and now we give publicity to them. They are Messrs. Shepherd, Johnson and Giddens, and an inspection of the building will show at a glance that they performed their work in a workmanlike and satisfactory manner. To Mr. John Hartfelder the credit of making and hanging the rolling blinds is to be given, being the first ever put up in this section; they work satisfactorily. Wm. E. Smith did the mason work in a highly creditable manner.

Gottlieb Fischer, the victim of the fire in North Plainfield, Oct. 1st, died on Monday afternoon last. The Plainfield Liedertafel, (a German Singing Society) of which he was a member, took charge of his remains and defrayed all the expenses of burial.—They also turned out in a body and escorted the remains to the Presbyterian Cemetery in North Plainfield, singing an ode over the grave. Rev. Dr. Smith delivered an excellent sermon at the house.

Jack Cuff, an aged colored man, wanted to vote the Democratic ticket in North Plainfield on Tuesday, and was hooted at and reviled by the "trooly loil" around the polls. He however, cast his vote as he desired and quietly left the vicinity.

Last Friday evening, Mr. Geo. Demens attempted to extinguish a kerosene lamp, in his store on Somerset street, as was his usual practice, by placing his hat over the chimney top. This particular time, however, the thing didn't work, and the consequence was an explosion, which caused an alarm of fire. The department promptly turned out, but a few pails of water had extinguished the flames before their arrival. Happily Mr. D. was not burned and but little damage done.

Warren Hose Co., No. 3, will give an invitation Hop at Laing's Hall, Thanksgiving Eve, Nov. 29th. The boys always do things right on such occasions.

ANOTHER new polling district will have to be made at next election, according to the late vote.

WE borrow Demarest's rooster to announce the grand victory of the Democrats. Groceries, however, have not gone up at his establishment.

A WHEELER AND WILSON, FINGER, WILCOX AND GIBBS Sewing Machines, for $30. Machines rented. Office opposite P. O., Plainfield, N. J.

IF you need a Sewing Machine, call at the Sewing Machine office opp. P. O., Plainfield, N. J.

JOHN T. LEE, Esq., received a letter through the Plainfield postoffice last week, which was mailed to him by his sister in China in the year 1846. Where the missive has been during that time it is hard to conjecture. Probably the Republican managers at Washington in cleaning out their pigeon-holes, preparatory to their journey up Salt river, came across it and in a spasmodic fit of honesty, forwarded it to its destination.

Personalia.

Hon. Hugh McCulloch, ex Secretary of the Treasury, is visiting his brother-in-law, Lawrence Myers, Esq., Front street, this city.

Messrs. A. Vanderbeek, T. W. and Geo. Young, Alpheus Mundy, James Brand, M. M. Thorn and Mr. Leder, the hunting party announced in last week's issue as having gone to Barnegat Bay duck shooting, returned home last Saturday with a fine lot of game. Ye editor was remembered by Messrs. Thorn and Mundy.

Our staunch Democratic friend, Capt. Meld, cast his crutches aside on election day and voted the straight ticket, while his son John arose from a sick bed and was conveyed to the polls in a carriage for the same purpose.

Fatal Railroad Accident.

On Wednesday evening last about 7 o'clock as a heavily loaded Centennial train on the old North Penn Road was leaving Jenkintown station for Bethlehem, a runaway horse took to the track and became fast in one of the "frogs" on the road. The road at the above place has a heavy curve in it and the engineer was not able to see the horse until too late to avoid a collision, when strange to relate the engine and one car was thrown from the track and down an embankment about eight feet high, killing the engineer and fireman and one brakeman.

PROCEEDINGS COMMON COUNCIL.

MONDAY EV'G, Nov. 6, 1876.

Council met persuant to adjournment.

Members all present except Messrs. Voorhees, French, Ryder, Mulford and Young.

President Mr. Smith in the Chair.

Mr. Thorn moved that Council adjourn to Wednesday evening, Nov. 8th, 1876, at 7:30 o'clock.

Carried.

Council then adjourned.

Larry Holton, ex policeman, died in Newark, on Monday, from lockjaw, caused from a bite on the thumb received in a drunken quarrel with Patrick McManus, three weeks ago.

A Bayonne pauper, aged 75, has been sent back to Ireland, because she wanted to die in her native land.

Jersey City papers report the marriage of a couple who never saw each other before the preceding day.

A canning establishment at Astoria, Oregon, made 450 head of cattle into mincemeat in the month of September.

It is reported that the suit of Mrs. Carrick against Landis for $50,000 damages for the loss of her husband has been satisfactorily settled.

The New Jersey Building on the Centennial Grounds is to be removed immediately after the close of the exhibition. It is too beautiful a thing to go out of existence entirely, and it should find a permanent place somewhere in New Jersey.

At a meeting of the congregation of the Westfield Presbyterian church, on Tuesday evening, the 31st ultimo, the following preambles and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Reverend Alexander McKelvey, our late pastor, has declined to further minister to us, and

Whereas, As we believe this action on his part is based solely upon the recent opinion of the Synod; therefore

Resolved, That with extreme reluctance and sincere regret do we hear of our late pastor's decision in reference to our pulpit.

Resolved, That we now appreciate more than ever before his ministrations among us marked as they have been by rare ability and conscientious fidelity, notwithstanding the uninterrupted storm of persecution which has so pitilessly and without cause been raised upon him.

Resolved, That he is endeared to us by no ordinary ties, which will endure because of their sure cementation so long as we all shall live.

Resolved, that we admire, honor and love him, and our prayer to God is that Heaven's choicest blessings may be his for time and eternity.

THE Board of Fire Commissioners will meet Tuesday evening next, 14th inst.

Mr. E. M. Hughes, blacksmith and general jobber, has taken part of the building now occupied by J. W. Stewart, wheelwright, Somerset St., opp. French's Mills, and solicits the patronage of the public. The shoeing of tender-footed horses a specialty. See adv.

Once in a great while a man can stand on a street corner in Detroit and ask a question which can't be answered, but such instances are very rare. Yesterday noon, when an old citizen made an inquiry of a crowd at the post office, it wasn't a second before he was being answered. He started out with the remark that he was nearly sixty years old and ended by asking:

"Can anybody tell me why we have this warm spell called Indian Summer?"

"Yes, sir," was the prompt answer. "It is to give certain persons a chance to wash up and get on a clean shirt before winter sets in for good."

The old resident coughed several times, took another look at the sky, and moved on. After he had gone about a block he halted, suddenly grew red in the face, and exclaimed:

"Come to think of it, I believe that scoundrel meant to insult me, and I wish I had knocked him down!"

The State Senate stands 11 Democrats and 10 Republicans. The House of Assembly, so far as we can make out, has 29 Republicans and 32 Democrats. We append a list of members of both the Senate and House:

Republicans 29, Democrats 31, *re-elected.

Some doubt appears to exist as to one of the Mercer districts claimed as Republican, and should the Democrats secure this, the House will be a tie, and the Democrats will have one majority on joint ballot.

CALCUTTA, Nov. 9.—The district of Backergunge was ravaged by a cyclone on Tuesday last. A thousand native houses were destroyed. The town of Dowlutkhan was submerged by a wave, and five thousand persons are believed to have perished. The Government has sent relief to the desolated section.

Put ice on your head.

Unfortunately for the Sunday-school there are a number of middle aged gentlemen, who thinking themselves endowed by nature with oratical ability, visit Sunday-schools to display their speech-making qualities. These gentlemen are very properly termed Sunday-school bores, for they bore the children, bore the superintendent, bore the teachers, and bore every person with whom they are thrown in contact.—One of these gentry had a round of four or five schools which he visited regularly and as regularly bored, ending his orations invariably with Amen! Visiting one of the schools during his regular round he made his appearance at the superintendent's desk, who feeling greatly annoyed, yet out of courtesy, asked him if he desired to say a few words to the school. "Wa'al, yes, I'll say just a word or two!" and straightening himself up, with one hand on the corner of the desk, and the other feeling for pins at the bottom of his vest, he began: "Wa'al chil'un, the superintendent wants me to speak to yer!" And feeling vigorously for pins, "Neow, what shall I say—what shall I talk about?" A bright little fellow, about four years of age sitting in the front seat, who evidently had heard the orator before, jumped to his feet, and lisped out loud enough to be heard all over the school-room: "Thay 'Amen,' and thit down!" The speaker collapsed.—Christian Intelligencer.

WE commend to our readers, feeling like us a tender sympathy for the political death of the nominees of our political opponents, the following effusion, emanating from that sterling exponent of Democratic principles, the World:

Not a cheer was heard, not a jubilant note,
As home from the polls we hurried;
Not a journalist stopped to count the vote
'Neath which they our candidate buried.

They buried him totally long ere night,
Our friends with their arguments turning;
The campaign supplements all despite,
And Ingersoll's speeches burning.

Old Useless Grant meant well, no doubt,
When in Chandler's toils he wound him;
But he lay there, a nominee flattened out,
With his bloody shirt around him.

Nor few nor low were our "damns" and "derns;"
But we could not speak our sorrow,
As we silently gazed on the latest returns
And bitterly thought of the morrow.

We thought, "When they Tilden inaugurate
In March, and from office we go,
The foe and the stranger'll investigate
And we'll have to skip off to Vigo."

Lightly they'll talk of our candidate now
And say Conkling or Blaine had been better,
And it would have been better by far to avow
He had written that Know-Nothing letter.

But half of our heavy task was done
When we found it was no use counting;
And we saw the bonfire—heard the gun
Told of Tilden's majority mounting.

Slowly and sadly we laid him down
On the field of the lost election,
And each wished, as gloomier grew his frown,
We had made a better selection.

It may as well be understood, once for all, that in New Jersey, at least, a man cannot maul a fellow-creature to death without paying the penalty of his crime. The trial of the red-handed ruffians who caused the death of Koster has had a fitting result in the conviction of the surviving principal and the seconds of both the pugilists of manslaughter and their consignment to prison for ten years. The punishment is not a whit too severe. It will be a wholesome lesson for the rowdy youths of our city who have learned to regard a hard fist as the greatest good and a black eye as a crown of glory. We have no words of maudlin pity for the boy who while trying to beat his antagonist into helplessness or death, was himself beaten to a corpse—still less would we lighten the blow which justice has laid upon the shoulders of his murderers. New Jersey is to be congratulated upon having judges and juries which may be relied upon to carry out the dictates of law and duty in such cases. It will be many a day no doubt, before a ring is again formed in this vicinity for the prostitution of manly art of self-defense, and it is quite certain that when the pugilists to recover from this stunning blow between the eyes they will choose a dark and bloody ground other than the shores of Jersey.—Phila. Times.

Capt. H. L. Timken and Mr. Ch. Eicke, both well-known German-American citizens of this city, have laid a wager. If Tilden is elected Mr. Eicke is to purchase a ton of coal, send it to Capt. Timken's house and shovel it in the cellar himself. If Hayes is elected, the Captain is to bestow the same attention on Mr. Eicke. So there will be fun either way, as both gentlemen are men of honor and will keep their compact.—Hudson Co. Democrat.

To-day (Friday) the Centennial Exhibition closes. It has been a success as a show, and given the Philadelphians an unwonted experience of crowds and excitements. We congratulate them on their good fortune. But, after all, what will make this year memorable will not be the Centennial Exhibition, but the election of Samuel J. Tilden, which gives us a happy start on our second hundred years.

All over the country we are receiving the glad tidings that the election passed off very quietly. The country will soon be again restored to peace and prosperity. Tilden & Hendricks and other reform officials will take the reins of government, and under their careful management and financiering everything will be carried on for the best interests of the people of the whole country.

Carl Schurz went home on Tuesday night and played "The heart bowed down" on his trusty piano and shed tears till he floated the piano-stool. He then mechanically charged himself $300 for the performance, and went to bed.

Pennsylvania has gone Republican. What else could we expect as long as the Philadelphia ring is permitted to count out or in, as they may wish, the entire vote of the rest of the State.

Hon. Thomas K. Downing, a well-known Democrat, was thrown from his carriage at Port Chester Tuesday, and sustained a fracture of four ribs and other severe injuries.

A GREAT SECRET.

A few days ago about dusk a stranger called at the residence of a bank cashier in St. Louis, and introducing himself, said he desired some private conversation on business of importance.—The cashier thereupon led him to a private room, gave orders that they were not to be disturbed, seated himself, folded his arms, and desired his mysterious acquaintance to communicate the object of his visit. The man coughed once or twice then said:

"Being the cashier of this financial institution, of course you keep the key of the safe?"

The cashier said he did.

"And you've heard about the Davenport brothers, and the Spiritualists, and things?"

The cashier said he had.

"Now," said the stranger, "I've been studying up the whole business, and I have just found out how to overcome them."

"You don't say so?"

"Yes, sir. For five dollars I will impart to you a secret which may at some future time save your life and the funds entrusted to your care. I will show you how to untie any series of knots, however complicated; or to remove a gag from your mouth, and, in fact, to set yourself free. I can release myself in two minutes, and with a week's practice I'll bet that you can show better than three minutes. You see the advantage of my system? There is no need to resist and get shot; all you have to do is to let them tie you up, and as soon as they have taken the key and gone, you just let yourself loose and give the alarm."

The cashier said it was a remarkable invention.

"You bet it is," said the inventor, "and as I never take any money for it till my customers are satisfied of my honesty in dealing with them, I'll tell you what I'll do. Just let me gag and bind you, and then I'll give you ample directions what to do, and if you don't loose yourself in five minutes and express your entire satisfaction with the process, I'll give you ten dollars. If you find that I am a man of my word, you'll pay me five dollars."

The cashier said that nothing could be fairer.

"Another thing," continued the visitor. "I'm a poor man, and this secret is my only stock in trade, so I'll ask you not to teach any one else how to do it, for that would be the means of spoiling my business."

The cashier immediately consented to the arrangement.

"Take this ten dollar bill," said the other. "If I fail, you keep it; if you are satisfied, you will return it to me with another five dollars. And now this is how we do it."

So saying he took a roll of cord and gag from his pocket, and with great dexterity tied that cashier hand and foot, and gagged him so that he could not wink.

"Now you are tied pretty firmly, ain't you? You wouldn't think you could possiby get loose, would you indeed?"

The cashier looked the replies he could not speak.

"I don't think you could myself," said the inventor; "and now let me tell you my name is Jesse H. James, the notorious train robber, and if you don't fork over that key in three seconds I'll cut your throat from ear to ear. I beg your pardon; you can't but I'll take it myself. Its no trouble," and turning the cashier over on his back like a turtle, he took the key. "I won't take your pocket book," he said, "for the ten dollars is yours, as I don't think you will be able to get loose in five minutes or five hours either. So long, sonny," and with a courteous bow he quitted the apartment and proceeded to the bank, which he rifled as completely and leisurely as if he had been one of the directors.

The two most ancient manuscripts of the Bible known are the Codex Sinaticus, of the Imperial Library at St. Petersburg, and the Codex Vaticanus Library at Rome, both are believed to have been written about the middle of the fourth century, A. D. The Sinatius, so called before it was obtained (in 1859) from the convent of St. Catharine on Mount Sinai, is supposed by Tischendorf, its discoverer, to be one of the fifty copies of the Scriptures which the Emperor Constantine directed to be made for Byzantium in the year 331, under the care of Eusebius of Cæsarea. It consists of very fine vellum, made either from the skins of antelopes or of asses, each leaf being 14½ inches high by 13½ inches wide. The early history of the Vatican manuscript is not known, but it appears in the first catalogue of the Vatican Library in 1485. It is a quarto volume, containing 146 leaves of fine thin vellum, each 10½ inches high and 10 broad. Both manuscripts are written in Greek uncials, or capital letters are without spaces between the words, and have no marks of punctuation.

"Polls closed" was the glad tidings that came to a Republican in a Democratic town not far from this city. He said he never saw so many democrats in all his born days, and he hoped that every town wasn't as full as theirs. A friend of the Republican, who had just come from another district said that their whole district was troubled the same way. A democrat near by coolly remarked that that was the trouble all over the counry this year.

Anybody can run a newspaper. All there is to do is to get a lot of type, a press, a pair of scissors, a paste cup and brush, $20 in cash, a set of cast-iron nerves—when there will be no more trouble in running a paper, than there is shinning up a church steeple feet first.

It is reported of an old gentleman down east who had lost his spectacles, found them some five years afterwards in his bible. Now he has become a christian, and says there are a great many treasures to be found in the holy bible.

Dubbs says he wagered a week's work on election, and lost; now he feels down-east, for he says work never did agree with him, especially between meals.

NEW JERSEY
Enamel Paint Company,
RARITAN, NEW JERSEY.
Manufacturers of
Bradley's Enamel Paint.
Mixed Ready for Use, in any shade, Tint or color desired.

These Paints are composed of the purest and best materials known to painters; the principal ingredients being Pure White LEAD, ZINC, and LINSEED OIL, which are made to unite in a homogeneous mass by the addition of other materials which add greatly to the durability, elasticity, beauty, and strength of the Paint. The whole are chemically combined so that the pigments are held in permanent solution, thus forming a new compound which dries on the surface and adheres firmly to it, thus forming a Smooth, Glossy, Firm, Elastic, Beautiful and Durable Paint.

The Oil, which is the real life of the Paint, cannot leave it and be absorbed by the substance to which it is applied, as it does in paints mixed in the ordinary way, & then leave the pigment dry and chalky, to wash & rub off in few months. This paint is unaffected by changes of temperature, is perfectly impervious to the action of water, is well adapted to all classes of work, & is in every way a better paint for either in side or outside work or boat painting than any other Paint known to the trade, and will last at least three times as long as the best Lead and Oil mixed in the ordinary way.

These Paints are Ready for use.
Are easily applied by any one, require no mixing, stirring or addition of dryers.
Liberal Inducements to Dealers.
And full satisfaction guaranteed to their Customers.

Sold by the Gallon, Keg or Barrel. Orders attended to promptly. For Price List and Sample Color Card, Address,

CAUTION!

The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Theo. A. Carman some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filed over one thousand pages and counsel were over two weeks in summing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an straight iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing strata. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is of steel, made sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Carman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defence contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement had been fairly proved.

LEGAL NOTICES.

SHERIFF'S SALE.—In Chancery of New Jersey—Between The Dime Savings Institution of Plainfield, complainant, and Sylvester Whitehead, and ux, and al. defendants. Fieri facias.

By virtue of the above-stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale at public vendue, at the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on Wednesday, the [illegible] day of November, A. D. 1876, at two o'clock p. m., of said day, in the first place, all that tract or parcel of land and premises, hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being in the City of Plainfield, in the county of Union and State of New Jersey:

Beginning at a stone in the middle of Third street, and in line of the rear of William street lots; thence running along the rear of William street lots [illegible] and twenty-six one hundredths feet to line of Lucy's land; thence in a northeasterly course and parallel with Third street and along Lucy's line, thirty feet to line of Kane's lot; thence southeasterly along Kane's lot one hundred and eleven and twenty-six one hundredths feet, more or less, to a stake for a corner in the middle of Third street; and thence along the middle of Third street a southwesterly course, thirty feet to the place of beginning; subject to the right of passage-way which was conveyed to Daniel Lucy by the deed of Sylvester Whitehead and wife, bearing date May 4, 1875, recorded in the Clerk's office of Union county, in book 95 of deeds, pages 5-6, &c.

And if it be necessary that the following tract of land and premises, with the appurtenances, be also sold; that is to say: all that tract, situate, lying and being in the city of Plainfield, in the county of Union aforesaid, in the State of New Jersey.

Beginning at a stake and corner in the rear of William street lots and also in the rear line of Second street lots; thence running in a northeast course along the rear line of Second street lots thirty feet to a stake and corner of John Kane's lot; thence, running along his line a southeasterly course [illegible] feet to a stake; thence running in a southwesterly course parallel with the first line, thirty feet to a stake in the rear line of William street lots; thence running along that line, in a northwesterly course, [illegible] feet to the place of beginning; [illegible] the use of a passage-way over the lot first above described to Third street for persons on foot, with wagons, horses and other cattle, to the owner of the last above described lot, his heirs and assigns.

POETRY.

THE EVE OF ELECTION.

From gold to gray
Our mild sweet day
Of Indian Summer fades too soon;
But tenderly,
Above the sea
Hangs, white and calm, the hunter's moon.

In its pale fire
The village spire
Shows like the Zodiac's spectral lance;
The painted walls
Whereon it falls
Transfigured stand in marble trance.

O'er fallen leaves
The west wind grieves,
Yet comes a seed time round again;
And morn shall see
The state sows free
With baleful tares of healthful grain.

Along the street
The shadows meet
Of Destiny, whose hands conceal
The moulds of fate
That shape the state,
And make or mar the common weal.

Around I see
The powers that be;
I stand by Empire's primal springs,
And princes meet
In every street
And hear the tread of uncrowned kings!

Hark! through the crowd
The laugh rings loud,
Beneath the sad, reproaching moon.
God save the land
A careless hand
May shake or swerve ere morrow's noon.

No jest is this;
One cast amiss
May blast the hope of Freedom's year.
Oh! take me where
Are hearts of prayer,
And heads bowed low in reverent fear.

Not lightly fall
Beyond recall
The written scrolls a breath can float;
The crowning fact,
The kingliest act,
Of freedom is the freeman's vote.

For pearls that gem
A diadem,
The diver in the deep sea dies;
The legal right
We boast to-night
Is ours through costlier sacrifice.

Our hearts grow cold,
We lightly hold
A right which brave men died to gain;
The stake, the cord,
The axe, the sword
Grim nurses at its birth of pain.

The shadow rend,
And o'er us bend,
O martyrs, with your crowns and palms,
Breathe through these throngs
Your battle-songs,
Your scaffold-prayers and dungeon-psalms.

Look from the sky,
Like God's great eye,
Thou solemn moon, with searching beam,
Till in the sight
Of thy pure light
Our mean self-seekers meaner seem.

Shame from our hearts
Unworthy arts,
The frauds designed, the purpose dark;
And smite away
The hands we lay
Profanely on the sacred ark.

To party claims
And private aims
Reveal that august face of Truth,
Whereto are given
The age of Heaven,
The beauty of immortal youth.

So shall our voice
Of sovereign choice
Swell the deep bass of duty done,
And strike the key
Of time to be,
When God and man shall speak as one.

VIOLET'S HAPPINESS.

Standing in the open doorway of the farmhouse of the Ashton's where she had been a visitor since the first blossoms had begun to be showered like a rain of fragrant snow upon the velvety grass, Beatrice Brandon made a striking contrast, in her young, proud strength and pulsing vitality, to the tiny little thing sitting so demurely, so quietly, on the lowest step of the verandah—a slight, fragile girl, with pale, delicate skin, like the petals of a tea-rose, with big, sorrowful eyes.

Violet herself was so like a child that her eighteen years of delicate girlhood seemed almost like a dream to look back upon—to that time when she was left a motherless babe on the hands of the then younger farmer, when a gentle-voiced, sad-eyed woman, herself scarcely more than a girl, had laid down her own life, and given to the mercies of utter strangers this little waif, who from that hour, when the dying mother had whispered, "Call it Violet," to the midsummer day when she sat on the farmhouse steps, looking up into Beatrice Brandon's face had known no home but Croft Farm.

Violet was sitting very demurely and quietly on the lower step of the porch that lovely sunshiny day, when Beatrice came to the edge of the verandah, so beautiful, so strengthful, so soft-voiced and smiling, as she first looked down upon and then spoke to Violet:

"A silver penny for your thoughts, Vic; although I am sure I can guess about what they are. You are wondering what it means—what Mr. Ashton and his mother have gone to the city to-day to buy with that old pocket-book stuffed full of bills."

Her bright eyes did not betray the eagerness she felt, nor did she allow her low, even tones to manifest it.

Violet had flushed ever so slightly when Beatrice's voice had quite startled her from her dreamy little reverie, and the mention of Charlie Ashton's name had deepened it a little; for it was of handsome Charlie, who was always so good, so thoughtful, so tender, that her girlish heart was dreaming.

The practical matter of factness of Beatrice's question dissipated the slight confusion she imagined, and wrongly, that companion had not seen.

Her voice was very sweet—soft as Beatrice's own—and with a true melody in it.

"Yes, I know, for auntie told me"—she had been taught to call Mrs. Ashton auntie. "They are going to re-furnish the parlor, and buy a piano, and Charlie is to have a bedroom set of walnut, with marble tops."

Her frank blue eyes were looking innocently into the half-mocking dark ones, whose expression matched the smile on Beatrice's lips as she replied:

"Of course I know all that—Charlie consulted me about it. But I asked if you knew what it was all for?"

Violet looked surprised.

"All for? Why, for nothing but to have the house look nice and more fashionable. What else would it be for?"

Beatrice spread her rustling silk skirts over the steps as she sat down.

"Is it possible you don't know any more than that, Violet? Why, didn't you guess there was going to be a wedding?"

The blue eyes opened suddenly wider.

"A wedding? Why, no! Whose wedding, Beatrice?"

There was a slow dawning of white pain on her face, of which she was not conscious, but Beatrice saw it and was satisfied.

"You baby! Why Charlie's of course! Whose would it be?"

Her earnest, pain-stricken eyes were looking so wistfully into Beatrice's face, and the latter blushed and turned away in a pretty confusion of manner that startled Violet with the truth.

"How do you suppose I know, Vic, unless—unless—"

Violet stifled the pang that was tearing at her heart, and finished the coquettishly hesitating sentence:

"Unless you have a right to know. Tell me, please, her name?"

Her heart told her who it was—she did not need to have Beatrice's lips confirm the truth she felt in her own soul; and yet she felt that if there was the shadow of a possibility that she was mistaken, Beatrice's were the lips to tell her so. So, with an agonized prayer way down in her heart that she might be mistaken, she put the question.

And the haughty beauty laughed and evaded it gracefully.

"I was afraid you wouldn't like it, Violet, knowing so well as I do that you are in love with Charlie yourself, and"—

"Beatrice! Miss Brandon! stop, if you please!"

Violet fairly gasped the words, and her face grew white and stony; but Beatrice went on softly, mercilessly, gently.

"I speak in all kindness, dear, and you will thank me some day—when Charlie's wife comes, and you find what I have said is true, that you will no longer be welcome to the house where you will be almost a rival to her. You will thank me for telling you, so that you can get away quietly without anybody's feelings being hurt—for of course the future Mrs. Charles Ashton will not want you here, and the old people would hate to send you away, delicate and weak as you are."

A hot scarlet wave rushed over Violet's face. This from the "future Mrs. Charles Ashton" herself!

"No one shall send me!" she exclaimed, passionately. "I know as well as you that I have no business here, and you can tell the future Mrs. Charles Ashton that I will never trouble her!"

The sweet, pained voice quivered as she walked hurriedly away, as if the brilliantly beautiful face of Beatrice Brandon was a Medusa head, while Beatrice's red lips slowly curved into a smile of triumph, contempt and satisfaction, as she watched the slender, willow figure.

"She is dispensed with, at all events. As if I hadn't read both her secret and her pride! And with her out of the sight of Charles Ashton, it shall not be my fault if he does not propose to me, as that credulous little fool thinks he has already done! We will see whether or not the new furniture is for Charlie's wedding and—mine!"

The round harvest moon was slowly coming the dark blue sky, looking like a great golden ball, and Violet, with her eyes looking as if they had never known a tear, so bright and clear they were, for all she had been crying all the afternoon, for all her foolish little heart was throbbing and pulsing with pain—Violet was waiting beside the big shady fir tree for Charlie Ashton to come.

"I will hear it from his own lips that he is going to be married to Beatrice Brandon. And if he is I will go away to New York, where I shall be able to earn my own living in some of the stores or factories I've heard Beatrice speak about, where I shall not be in their way."

And she stifled the sobs she felt were coming as Charles Ashton came riding along, looking grand and manly enough to win any girl's heart. He stopped short as he saw her, and drew her hand through his arms.

"Waiting for me, Vic? That's good of you, puss? What a glorious night is this"

Violet plucked up all her courage.

"I was waiting for you, Charlie, to ask you—whether or not—whether it is true—whether—Mr. Charlie, is it really true you are going to be married?"

Her sweet face was pale with earnestness, and Charlie looked down on it half amused, half gravely, tenderly.

"What of it dear? Surely you will not be displeased. Tell me who told you, Vic."

Her face was averted for her rebellious lips were trembling—he had admitted it.

"Never mind, Charlie; I heard it, and I wanted to know if it was true, so I might tell you how truly happy I hope you will be."

Charlie caressed her fingers softly as a great tenderness stole out of his handsome eyes.

"Truly happy? I could not fail of being perfectly happy, Vic, with the darling I have dared to hope—oh, Beatrice, I beg pardon! We came very near running over you!"

And seeing how easily Miss Brandon accepted her own intrusions—no, of course it would not be an intrusion when Charlie was her lover—little Violet stole away with her last hope crushed—her one sprig of earthly happiness trampled down.

"I will go—I must go! I should die if I stayed here and saw them married."

And while Miss Beatrice sung sentimental ballads on the front verandah, and Charlie sat listening and thinking—I shan't tell what—Violet was quietly explaining to Auntie Ashton, in the kitchen, the necessity of her own future dependence on her own exertions, and succeeded in coaxing from that old lady the direction of a distant relative in the city, who might aid her in procuring a situation.

"Whatever Charlie will say, I daren't think," she began, plaintively.

But Violet smiled faintly.

"Charlie will not care, and he need not know until after I am gone. He and Beatrice are so taken up with each other they'll never miss me, and I shall really like it so."

Mrs. Ashton stared through her gold-rimmed glasses at the girl's truthful lovely face, and then a grand, motherly smile broadened her dear old face.

* * * * * * * * *

The afternoon sun shone hot and bright through the one uncurtained window of the forlorn little station where Violet was patiently sitting, watching for the train that should take her away from Charlie Ashton and the dear old home, and deposit her among the bustle of the metropolis.

It was dark when she reached New York; and, oh! what made Beatrice Brandon tell her Charlie wouldn't care for her after he was married? What had made everything so miserable and desolate?

Her tears were coming in great salt gushes, and she was wearily preparing to leave the train when a firm hand was laid on her shoulder, and her name, in a low, reproachful tone, was whispered in her ear:

"Violet!"

She turned and beheld Charles Ashton.

"You would persist in running away from home, and I was just as persistent in running after you, Vic. I just caught the train. So you are trying to get away from me, are you, Violet?"

Her eyes filled with tears.

"Oh, how could I stay after what she said? I would so much rather go than stay and be unwelcome. You have all been so good to me, Charlie."

Charlie's face was a perfect picture of bewilderment.

"Really, I cannot fathom one word of all this mystery, Vic. Who told you that you were likely to be unwelcome at my house, or my mother's home?"

He was looking at her very curiously.

"Your betrothed, Charlie, Miss Brandon said"—

Charlie's lips suddenly parted over his teeth.

"Oh! yes, I see! And so I am engaged to Miss Brandon, am I? Vic! Vic! you jealous, loving, little darling! I never thought of being engaged to her—bold, scheming creature! Nor is there but one girl in all the world I would be engaged to. Vic, Vic, look at me, and see in my eyes who she is! Tell me if she says yes, after my chasing her a hundred miles for the answer?"

And Miss Beatrice Brandon took her departure with the inward conviction that she and the Ashtons would remain apart for the future, which conviction was well sustained by the Ashtons, while to dear, loving, jealous Violet came such undreamed of happiness that it more than a thousand-fold atoned.—Illustrated Weekly.

ABOUT KRONKIKOLOGY.

You have doubtless heard about "Besom of destruction." Well, Mr. Besom of Third avenue, is not that kind of a man. He wouldn't destroy a grass-hopper if he could walk around or climb over the insect. His object is to slide through life without hurting any one's feelings or stepping on any one's toes. They got a new hired girl at his house the other day. She had pensive eyes, a quiet way, and seemed quietly religious. Besom said she was just the kind of a girl he liked to see around the kitchen, and he flattered Mrs. Besom for her perception in reading human nature.

That first evening the new girl caught Besom in the pantry. He was on tiptoe, and had just reached down a bottle from the top shelf. He started to put it back, hesitated, and finally said:

"I wanted to warn you about this bottle. It contains a fluid known as kronkikology. I have to take a sip now and then for my liver, but it is death to a well person. Don't never touch this bottle Agusta—don't even smell of the cork."

The girl soon discovered that it was a bad case of liver complaint. At least Mr. Besom entered the pantry regularly three times per day, and after taking his "kronkikology" he always uttered a hearty "Ah! me!"

The family didn't hear the breakfast bell yesterday morning at the usual time, and after waiting a while Mrs. Besom entered the kitchen to see what had occurred to delay the meal. She found the pensive hired girl lying on the floor, no fire in the stove and no meal under way.

"Krow—kronki—kron——?" muttered the girl.

"The girl has a fit—the hired girl is dying!" exclaimed Mrs. Besom as she rushed through the house.

Besom ran back to the kitchen with her, and as he snuffed the air in that room and looked down upon the pensive girl he called out:

"She's been drinking gin!"

"Youze liar!" shouted the girl, securing a hold on the stove leg to help her to her feet.

"Get right out of here, you great big hired girl drunkard!" called Mrs. Besom.

"Yes, and tread up mighty smart!" added Besom.

"Krow—kronk—kronkikology, juz as nizes shugar!" stammered the girl. "Hows liver complaint, mizzer Besom?"

"Put her out!" shrieked the wife.

"Puts who out? All rise—I'll go rise ouzz—oh! yes!"

She got hold of Mr. Besom's shirt collar and Mrs. Besom's hair, and the carpenters at work on a new house in the next lot heard so much direful noise that they felt called upon to go over to Besom's. They found the three in a corner, engaged in an earnest contest and it took some time to tell which was who. The pensive hired girl was carried outside the gate, more sober than when the unpleasantness began, and as the crowd stood on the doorstep and shook their fists at her and threatened her she held fast to a shade tree and called back:

"Whaz that you called it, Mizzer Besom—kronki—knonkilog? Diz you fink I was a fool, Mizzer Besom? Be careful of your liver, Mizzer Besom. Bezzer go in 'fore you catch kron—kronk—kold!"—Detroit Free Press.

DIFFICULT LOVE-MAKING.

The boy who sells fruit and confectionery on the train is usually a vigorous sort of boy, with an eye strictly to business, and with no romantic thoughts running through his active brain. One of them came very near ruining the happiness of two young souls for life, the other day.

A young man sat in the seat with a pretty girl, and though the passengers couldn't distinguish their conversation, from the noise made by the cars, it was pretty evident that what was being said was of great interest to the young couple.

He was saying:—"Jennie, darling, I have been wishing an opportunity to tell you of my great regard for"—

"Peanuts?" enquired the fruit confectionery boy, thrusting his basket in front of the pair.

"No!" exclaimed the young man in an annoyed tone, and waving his hand to one side.

"As I was saying, Jennie," he continued when the boy had passed on, "I have long wanted to tell you of my regard for you.—You are everything to me, and always in my absence my thoughts are continually dwelling upon"—

"Nice candy—prize in every box," interrupted the boy, totally ignorant of the interesting conversation he was injuring.—The young man shook his head, while the girl looked mad enough to bite a hairpin in two. When the boy had left, the young man resumed:

"I do not think you are entirely insensible to my regard, and I feel certain that you in some degree reciprocate. Tell me, darling. If I have a right to think that you are fond of"—

"Nice fresh figs—ten cents a"—the boy saw by the countenances of the pair that he could make no sale, and moved ahead with the basket. The young man finished with his eyes the sentence he had commenced, and waited for an answer. It came murmured in his ear that no other person might learn its import!

"Oh, Charlie, you've no idea how happy you make me by your avowal. You know that I care for you only, and that my regard for you is as lasting as—"

"Maple candy—very nice," said the boy displaying a tempting array of the delicacy.

"Clear out!" ejaculated the young man, between his teeth, in a savage tone, and as the boy cleared out, he turned to his sweetheart for the continuation of her answer.

"As lasting as eternity. I have always cared more for you than anybody else. All our folks think you are just splendid, and mother says you are as good as"—

"Pop corn—fresh this morning."

The young man rose hastily, and lifted the boy several seats down the aisle, and the girl fell to crying in her handkerchief. The young man resumed his seat, and sat in a moody silence until the train stopped at his station, when, in company with the young lady he alighted, when the boy after marking the spot where he was kicked for a few minutes, went on with his business, in utter ignorance of the fact that he had perhaps broken up a most interesting and happy courtship.

"Paris has perfumed hats," says an exchange. That's nothing new. Pass around a hat here any time in New Jersey and it's sure to have a cent or two in it.

ROMANCE.

I heard a couple of days ago a hitherto unpublished romance connected with the life of one of the most prominent officials of the Signal Service Bureau. He was, my informant states, engaged to be married to a lovely, charming, and wealthy girl. The eve of the wedding had dawned—if an eve can dawn—and they were occupying the same rocking-chair and talking as insanely as only lovers can talk, when the fair one said:

"Albert, duckey, there is one thing I wish you to do when you are married."

"Name it, lovely," he replied.

"That is, petty, to have no rain on Mondays, because you know, darling, that Monday is washing day, and if the things are not washed and dried then the week's work is so fearfully put back. You will, won't you, my owny?"

This young man's heart was torn, but he replied: "Maud, dearest, my duty to my bleeding country demands imperatively that I shall whoop her up the precise sort of weather that Heaven will probably send impartially during the next twenty-four hours upon the just and the unjust, without regard to age, sex or previous condition of servitude. If an area of barometic disturbance exist in the Middle States on Monday, how can I consistent with my duty declare that the probabilities favor clear weather with light winds from the southeast? No, angel; ask me anything but that. I could not love thee, so darn much, loved I not honor more."

"Then you do not love me?" she sobbed, bursting into tears.

HIS GROUND FOR DIVORCE.

A Raleigh lawyer was interviewed the other day by an agriculturist living a score of miles from the city, who said he wanted to secure a divorce from his wife.

"You don't live happy with her, eh?" inquired the attorney.

"No; we don't seem to hitch wuth a cent," was the quiet reply.

"Does she scold and fret and make your home a hell upon earth, so to speak?" continued the lawyer.

"That's her exactly."

"And you are prepared to prove that you have a peaceful disposition, and that you have done everything you could to make it pleasant?"

"You bet, I am! Anybody as knows me will swear that I wouldn't hurt a flea, and that I move around home like an angel."

"Well, I guess we can make out a case," said the lawyer as he took up his pen and began to jot down the points. After a moment he inquired:

"Do you think your wife will contest the case? Has she any defense?"

"We'al, now, I never thought of that," slowly replied the farmer. "I didn't know as she had anything to say about it."

"She may have. Has she any grounds for complaint against you?"

"I don't know much about law," answered the client in a hesitating way. "I know I've got a hankering after her sister Marier, and her sister Marier has a hankering after me, but whether them is good grounds for complaint I don't know!"

The lawyer hasn't filed a bill yet.

THE SITUATION.

The news from the disputed States leave every thing yet in doubt so far as the final result is concerned. It seems to us that there can be no doubt as to the election of Gov. Tilden by the people. The returns of the actual vote in Florida and Louisiana, and perhaps in South Carolina, leave us no alternative but to believe in Democratic success. These returns give us from every county and parish in the two former States, figures, which indicate, surely, the election of Mr. Tilden, and the returns from South Carolina seem to point with certainty to the election of Hampton and a majority, somewhat reduced, for Tilden. We have no fear for the result, except through the fraudulent actions of the Returning Boards of those States, which will unquestionably, judging from their antecedents, "count out," if possible, Gov. Tilden, and return a Republican majority. Whether the presence of a large number of our prominent citizens, who have gone South to overlook the count, will be productive of any good results remains to be seen. The universal feeling North is that if those Boards can by any possibility count out Tilden and elect Hayes, they will not hesitate to do so. Let us wait patiently a few days until the result arrives, feeling confident that in the end right must triumph and that the peoples' choice will be declared elected.

BEWARE.

We firmly believe that Samuel J. Tilden is honestly and legally the President elect of the United States, and we are also convinced that a conspiracy, hatched at Washington, exists to defraud him of an election and a majority of the people, of their choice.

The corrupt Grant Administration fear the official exposures that will surely follow in the wake of President Tilden's inauguration, and will therefore do anything and everything to have him counted out and Mr. Hayes fraudulently counted in.

To attain that end, the electoral votes of Louisiana, Florida and South Carolina, must be stolen from Mr. Tilden and given to Mr. Hayes, who requires every one of them to elect him.

The three States named are in the hands of Governors, the pliant tools of the Grant Administration, controlled by such men as Chandler, Cameron, Taft and Robeson.

Grant himself aids the scheme by sending, where no disturbance is threatened, bayonets to overawe and, if possible, prevent truthful returns.

It is the boldest attempt ever made to overthrow popular rights in this country, and only dread of the terrible outburst that will certainly follow the consummation of such a plot is likely to frustrate it.

The Republican corruptionists are desperate.

The honest masses are determined that justice shall prevail.

The elections in Louisiana, Florida and South Carolina will be thoroughly investigated, and if, through any species of chicanery, Mr. Tilden is deprived of a single legally entitled electoral vote, there will be trouble in the land.

The people won't stand any rebellion of the kind, as the conspirators will discover in due time.

BEWARE!

DOWN WITH FRAUD.

Zach Chandler, Secretary of the Interior, and Chairman of the Republican National Committee, just before leaving New York for Washington last week is creditably reported as saying—"I don't propose to be euchred in this matter, and Hayes has got to be the next President, whether he is elected or not." That reflects clearly the intended fraud of counting Mr. Tilden out of the electoral votes of Louisiana, Florida and South Carolina, three States presided over by corrupt carpet-bag Governors, and thereby counting Mr. Hayes in by giving him their aggregate nineteen votes.

That is the way such unprincipled politicians as Chandler propose perpetuating their plundering power.

It will not be tolerated by the people. This country cannot yet be Mexicanized.

If upon an honest examination of the votes cast, and upon the basis of equal and exact justice to every County or Election District, it is found that Mr. Hayes has a majority in Louisiana, Florida and South Carolina, Mr. Hayes will be recognized by every citizen as the President elect.

But, if upon a like showing, Mr. Tilden has a majority in either one of those States, he will be the legally chosen Chief Magistrate of the United States and must and shall be inaugurated as such.

Threatened fraud in deciding the result of the Presidential Election has aroused popular indignation throughout the country, and justly so, because its perpetration would foreshadow the end of American Freedom.

Let Truth and Honesty prevail, though ten thousand Chandler's die politically.

HISTORY.

In 1824 the Presidential Election went to the House of Representatives, neither, of the candidates, Jackson, J. Q. Adams, Clay and Crawford, having a majority of the electoral vote.

Kentucky's first choice was Henry Clay, and her second choice Andrew Jackson.

She so instructed her Congressional Delegation.

Mr. Clay was a member of Congress, and instead of doing as the people of his State willed, cast the vote of Kentucky for John Quincy Adams and defeated Jackson.

Mr. Adams thereby became President, and his first act was to make Mr. Clay Secretary of State.

The odor of corrupt trading filled the country.

Henry Clay never entirely outlived the unpleasant scent.

He could not reach the Presidency.

In 1828 an incensed people arose in their sovereign might, and sweeping down all opposition, carried Andrew Jackson in like a whirl-wind.

Beware of fraud.

History repeats itself.

Honesty is always the best policy.

THE WHISKEY RING.

President Grant has pardoned another of the notorious Whiskey Thieves out West, found guilty of defrauding the Government of its revenue and sentenced to imprisonment.

The other ring scamps will no doubt soon receive like clemency, and be turned loose to commence fresh depredation upon the Treasury.

Shielding criminals is plundering honest citizens and disgracing the public name, and that appears to be the ruling policy at Washington.

What better could be expected of an Administration that dismisses Bristow and appoints Zach. Chandler, that whith-washes Belknap and fondly embraces Babcock!

Nothing!

IMPEACHMENT.

Grant has no more legal right, under existing circumstances, to order troops into the South, as he has done, than to send them into Canada.

It was a flagrant violation of the Constitution, and for it, impeachment would be the just penalty.

The American people cannot guard too vigilantly the advance of military over civil authority.

That has dug the grave of more than one Republic.

CITY ELECTION.

The annual election for City Officers will soon be held, and it is of vital importance that the right kind of men be nominated and elected.

The Republicans seem disposed to abandon the non-partisan idea of conducting local affairs, and to battle under a strict party flag.

Very well.

Meet them as they like.

If street lights in Plainfield bear natural relationship to the National duty on pig iron, so be it.

Let the Democratic and Conservative citizens meet without delay and frame a winning ticket.

They have the material and they can gain the victory.

TILDEN ELECTED.

Mr. Tilden has a majority of about 8,000 in the State of Louisiana, which gives him 192 electoral votes, to say nothing about Florida and South Carolina.

Will he be cheated out of Louisiana?

He will, if Chandler and Kellogg can do as they desire and design.

The presence of so many keen and competent watchers from the North may prevent the contemplated fraud, but we anticipate the contrary.

Read the following telegram to the New York Staats Zeitung from its editor:

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 14.—The complete election returns from the parish commissioners, forwarded according to law in duplicates, most of which have already arrived here, while the others are upon their way, their contents having been telegraphed, show that the Democratic majority in Louisiana is 8,099. Nevertheless, the Returning Board will declare the Republican electors for President and Vice President to be chosen, and this will be done by rejecting the whole vote of some parishes and part of the vote of other parishes, all under a pretence whose absurdity can be shown in case an investigation should be set on foot.

It seems as if the Returning Board could not be restrained from the execution of this design by any means whatever. Inaccessible to reason or to moral pressure, the members of the Returning Board despise public opinion and point to the result of the election in most of the Northern States as a proof of the madness of a majority of the people to sanction frauds and usurpations of the worst kind.

Under these circumstances the gentlemen from the North who are now here will accomplish little; yet they can collect material for an impartial report and distribute it among the people. But even this, considering the indifference of the American people for fairness and justice, will only serve as a funeral discourse over the grave of the republic.

OSWALD OTTENDORFER.

REPUBLICAN EVIDENCE.

The Evening Telegraph, the leading Republican paper of Philadelphia holds the following in its issue of the 14th inst.:

"The President's utterances and actions with regard to the disputed results of the election held last Tuesday have given almost universal satisfaction, and have won the hearty commendation even of those who do not have any very great admiration for him or for his peculiar methods of administration.—The good impressions, however, which his wise and patriotic words, and his prompt and energetic movements for securing a fair count of the votes in the three disputed States have made, will be obliterated, so far as he personally is concerned, by the grant of a pardon to W. O. Avery, who was convicted in St. Louis of complicity in the whiskey frauds, and was sentenced, according to his deserts, to a heavy fine and to a term of imprisonment in the Penitentiary. This man Avery was more than almost any of the whiskey conspirators deserving of severe punishment, for he occupied an official position of great trust and responsibility in the Treasury Department at Washington, and for his betrayal of his trust there can be no possible excuse or extenuation. The despatch which informs us of the pardon of Avery also informs us that the friends of McKee—Avery's partner in crime who attended to matters at the St. Louis end of the line—are confident that he will be pardoned in a day or two, and there is no doubt whatever but that their confidence is well founded. It is just such actions as this that the friends of President Grant dare not undertake to defend, and that even the "organs" which never say anything but pleasant things of him, no matter what he may do to offend, can find no excuse for, that bring him into discredit, and that disgust so many thinking men not only with him, but with the party which he represents. It is tolerably safe to say that if Avery had been pardoned two weeks ago there would not now be any controversy as to whether Mr. Hayes or Mr. Tilden is the choice of the nation for President Grant's successor. Mr. Tilden would be the President elect by such an overwhelming vote that there would not be any possibility of dispute over it.

GRANT A PARTISAN.

In commending the sending of honorable and trusted citizens from the North to supervise election returns in the three disputed Southern States, that sound conservative paper, the New York Journal of Commerce, thus paints the partisan likeness of Mr. Grant:

"If President Grant had not behaved like a mere partisan in the election—using the whole power of his office to elect the candidate of his party—it would have been not unsuitable to confide the choice of these men to him.—But a man who has labored so hard and unscrupulously to carry the Southern elections for his friends cannot be trusted, whatever his promises now, to do even and exact justice between the two parties at the South. A President desirous to calm the excitement of the hour, and to act impartially in this critical juncture, would not have sent troops to Florida and Louisiana (South Carolina being already well stocked with bayonets) as he has done. As these soldiers are to be under the orders of the United States marshals, and the marshals are the head and front of the whole system of supervising and manipulating the election returns, we have no assurance that the troops will not be used, as they have been used before, in protecting instead of preventing rascalities. There was no danger of a riot or any disturbance in these States at the time the soldiers were ordered on. The act seems to have been without warrant in any view of the case, and we cannot but question its motive. It is well therefore that the President himself recognizes that he is not the man to whom the people look to constitute an impartial tribunal to pass upon the doubtful returns. In his invitations of particular citizens to proceed to Louisiana, he appears to have accepted the position of chief exponent of the pretensions of a party, and not of the wise and deliberate justice of a whole nation. His one-sided designations are a proclamation that another set from another source are needed to complete the supervisory tribunal.

SOUTH CAROLINA'S VOTE.

Governor Chamberlain's despatch to the Herald contains but little, so far as the results of the voting last Tuesday are concerned, and that little strangely vague. It is more than curious that in a State like South Carolina the Executive thereof should not be able to furnish us with something more definite. It will be fairly believed by the impartial that the Democrats, who have given the count on the vote for Governor in every county, are correct. The most striking point in his despatch, however, is the evident determination to throw out sufficient votes to give the Republicans a majority. Governor Chamberlain acts precisely as if the votes cast were to be but a small factor in the determination of the result. The means taken by the Democrats to proclaim the actual state of the polls at their closing have forced the game of Gov. Chamberlain, and a desperate game it is. He has clearly announced the startling fact that a board composed, in the majority, of officers seeking re-election to their present posts shall pass upon the validity of the returns and throw out districts at will; nay, that enough will be thrown out to settle the result. After all the parade of troops to "protect the colored citizens," after all the Republican jubilation that now every one could cast his vote in peace, after an election without riot or disturbance of any kind, we are treated to a glimpse of fabricated charges of "wholesale intimidation," a sort of sickening post-mortem and inquest on the "bloody shirt." If the troops had not been poured into the State; if the murders and assaults and brow-beatings of the colored Democrats had not been notorious; if the United States Marshals had not had the whole State in their hands for weeks before the election, arresting white men right and left, the country might, for all its suspicion of the rascals who have ruled in the South until it is impoverished and almost bankrupt, have lent an ear to Governor Chamberlain's ghost stories. They will not be listened to now. The troops are already in the State, and there is no danger of any disturbance, but we earnestly entreat the Republicans who are above winning by fraud to join hands with the Democrats, who only ask an honest count of an honest vote, to send representative men to be present at the canvass by this suspiciously composed board.—N. Y. Herald, Nov. 13th.

The latest returns leave no doubt of the election of Luttrell, Dem., to Congress from Fourth District of California.

THE REASON OF IT.

The organs will be heavy this morning with reasons for the result. We venture to suggest a few:

1. Gov. Tilden had too many votes.
2. The general dissatisfaction with the Administration was not quieted by the nomination of Gov. Hayes. Too many people believed that his Administration would be merely a continuation of Grant's.
3. Hard times. People wanted a change, and thought perhaps turning out the party in power might give it.
4. The Democrats used the best intellects in their party to address their best arguments to the intelligence of voters. The Republican canvass ran more in party grooves, and depended less on argument than on prejudice.
5. Gov. Hayes didn't have votes enough.—N. Y. Tribune, Nov. 8th.

PENNY WISE.

The disastrous fire at Perth Amboy last Saturday, and not the show of a Fire Department in the place to protect property, plainly exhibits the penny wise and pound foolish system of doing things.

Perth Amboy would not tolerate the trivial expense of a Fire Department.

It was a useless expenditure of money, and besides, the boys might disturb the sleepy old Rip Van Winkle town by having a parade now and then.

A terrible dream!

But the town got a blaze, and had it not been for the noisy firemen from Elizabeth, would likely have gone up in a cloud of smoke.

The Common Council may, possibly, now purchase a half-dozen buckets.

The Fourth ward Republican club room will be formally closed for the season to-morrow evening, and an obituary notice will be read by Mr. Rankin, the President. Better luck next time—Elizabeth Monitor.

FOREIGN.

The sugar crop in Jamaica will be enormous this year in some parishes, the rains not only having been abundant, but seasonable. But the sugar planters are depressed by the extravagance and waste of the public money by the Government.

An American workshop and sawmill has just been built and fitted up here by two young men, who have brought the machinery from New York. The factory is the first of its kind in Jamaica, and will revolutionize the building trade.

A despatch from Calcutta, India, to the London Times, under date of Nov. 13th, says it is reported that 20,000 persons perished in the cyclone of Oct. 31, and some estimates place the loss of lives as high as 40,000. In the town of Burrishol, capitol of the Backergunge district, 3,000 houses were leveled with the earth. Letters from survivors report that a great wave nine feet deep swept over the large island of Dakhin, Shahabazpore. The whole of Eastern Bengal appears to have suffered severely from the cyclone, and Calcutta narrowly escaped.

The reports of famine from Bombay are worse. A water famine is feared in some districts.

England has lost $500,000,000 by Turkish, Spanish, Egyptian and South American defaults.

Dr. W. B. Carpenter, the English Psychologist, is about to investigate spiritualism, with Mrs. Kane as the medium. Mrs. Kane is better known as Maggie Fox, who, with her sister Kate, produced the celebrated "Rochester rappings" in 1847, out of which modern Spiritualism is said to have grown.

The Cunard line steamship Russia, which sailed from Liverpool, Nov. 11, had on board £279,400 in specie for New York.

A proclamation was issued Nov. 14, at Havana, professing immunity to all Spanish deserters with the rebel army who surrender at once. After December 31 they will be shot wherever captured.

A writer in the Revue des Deux Mondes estimates at ten milliards of francs (about $2,000,000,000) the total cost to France of the war with Germany. The war indemnity alone was five milliards of francs ($1,000,000,000); the war contributions of Paris, two hundred millions of francs; requisitions in other departments, over three hundred millions. And all this beside the hundreds of thousands of men's lives destroyed, women and children made widows and orphans, and the horrors of the communism of Paris following this almost motiveless war!

The situation in Europe becomes more and more uncertain; the last advices indicate a disposition on the part of Russia to precipitate war at an early day. No surprise need be felt if the next advices are startling.

After a careful look over the polical field, we feel convinced that our table of the States with their complexion was and is correct. We again insert it this week.

Scarcity of Money.

There is no doubt but the present situation of all kinds of business and industry is fearfully depressed, and it behooves every family to look carefully to their expenses. Winter is coming on when children are liable to Croup, Whooping Cough, etc. Coughs and Colds will prevail everywhere, and Consumption with other Throat and Lung disease will carry off many.—These diseases should not be neglected, Doctor Bills are expensive, and we would advise our people to use BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP. It never has failed. One bottle at 75 cents will keep your whole family well during the winter. Two doses will relieve any case. Sold in all towns in the United States, and by your Druggist, William H. Voorhees.

A TIME-HONORED SPECIFIC.—The long and successful career of DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL, as contrasted with the speedy collapse of nostrums devoid of efficacy which have from time to time been puffed into a brief notoriety during the twenty odd years that this celebrated medicine has been sold, affords a proof that the American public continue to repose its confidence in deserving articles only. The PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL has long been recognized as the leading specific for Consumption, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Diptheria, and all other diseases of the breathing organs. It is, moreover, a certain, speedy, and safe botanic remedy for Dyspepsia, Liver Disorders, Scrofulous Affections, Gravel, Dropsy, Debility, and Constipation. Constantly accumulating evidence of an unimpeachable character establishes the fact that it not only entirely eradicates the disease to which it is adapted, but also that its action is remarkably prompt and thorough. The proof of its great merit has been demonstrated by its reliability in every particular. Sold by all druggists. Principal Depot, No. 232 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa.

LOOK!
The wildest excitement exists in many localities on account of the immense number of tramps who are perambulating over the country,
Out
of work, and many of them would not work if it was tendered them. The most of them are a ragged, thieving, dirty and worthless crew. The exception can be granted to an occasional few.
For
a whole flock of black sheep is truly a rarity. The general depression of business, and lack of employment everywhere has forced many to roam in search of work, and others travel, beg, and steal, because they don't want to work. In this connection we wish to call
Your attention to the fact that we propose to do our level best to keep up the high standard for respectability of this section of country as far as GENTEEL APPEARANCE IN DRESS can do so, and while the wearing of good clothes is no particular safeguard for your Lives and Property
there is no denying the fact that a neat appearing, well dressed man is not likely to get up a scare, equal to a rough and ragged individual. This brings us to
The
great question at issue which is to inform you that our new stock of Clothing is now in, and we are prepared to fit neatly every Man or Boy, who will come with the cash, in a suit to please, in every respect. Our prices are so very low that the
Tramps
Themselves can readily see that it will be cheaper for them to buy than undertake to beg or steal a new suit. We propose to keep the lead in our line of business. If you

Cider! New Cider!
Farm Cider!
Made in the afternoon and evening, and delivered at your door next morning, by the gallon or barrel. This is not Shoddy Cider! made from decayed, half-rotten apples, swept from the ground into a tub of water to let the stones and heavy dirt with which they are mixed settle to the bottom, so the said stones will not break the grinder knives. I then the rotten apples and all floating impurities are scooped out of the tub, a pint to a quart of dirty water accompanying each scoopful, and the liquid obtained from this mixture is sold as Cider! Shoddy.
The real, simon pure, old-fashioned farmers' Cider which we make is the pure juice of apples, all of which are perfectly sound, ripe and clean, and ground dry, and not one drop water is added to it. Our object is to make as good cider as it is possible to make, and deliver it as fast as made, so that our customers can have at each meal new, sweet Cider, (Apple Wine,) of the very best quality.
A glass of sweet cider taken with each meal we know is healthy, nutritious, fattening, purifying to the system, furnishing fresh food, and is highly anti-scorbutic, gives tone to the stomach, supplies to us the fruit acids (we so much need for our health. Persons wishing to be supplied can send their address to A. S. Brown, Box 44, Plainfield Postoffice, and the cider wagon will call at their door in a day or two thereafter. Our Cider Mill is on our farm, two miles west of Liberty Corner, where the public are invited to call and observe our mode of making Farm Cider. Get a few gallons for mince pies and fruit cake. A. S. BROWN.
N. B.—Please have something ready to put your Cider in when it arrives, so as not to delay the wagon.

Y. M. C. A. Social.

The Social given by the Young Men's Mutual Association, Thursday evening, Nov. 9th, which we briefly noticed last week, was a very enjoyable affair. At a quarter past eight the elegant Hall of the Y. M. C. A. was filled with a crowd of as happy and fine looking young men and ladies as ever graced that favorite resort. At a quarter to nine the President, Mr. Alex. Hutcheons, called the meeting to order and in a neat speech stated the objects of the Society, after which Mrs. D. Proudfit and Miss L. Smith sang "Welcome Swallows to Your Home." Miss Bessie Kenyon recited the "Angels of Buena Vista" in a manner so natural, yet so full of pathos, that had Mr. Whittier been present he would have been delighted. Miss K. has a voice of rare sweetness combined with power and is destined to take the foremost rank as a reader. The Rev. Dr. Smith, in his usual pleasing manner, made a few very appropriate remarks which were received with enthusiasm. Miss H. Smith gave "Archie Dean," which she rendered in a most truthful and graceful manner. Mr. John Ulrich recited "The Dream of Eugene Aram" in a scholarly like manner, which was very pleasantly received. After the rendering of the pieces, remarks, &c., supper was served by the members of the Association, during which time social chats, jokes and laughter were indulged in.

The music, both vocal and instrumental, was of the choicest selection, and rendered in a manner that the best of critics could not claim as anything but favorable.

The choir comprised Mrs. Proudfit, Messrs. Peter Hogart and Frank Kenyon.

Mr. Chas. Dunn presiding at the piano in his usual good natured and skillful manner.

The Association extend their thanks to those who so kindly assisted them in this their first entertainment, and would cordially extend an invitation to all young men to unite with them, as they are manfully struggling for an existence.

Railroad Accident.

The accident of last week on Central R. R. at Jersey City still occupies the public mind and we give in this article such particulars of the affair as may interest our readers. The train to which the disaster occurred left Plainfield at 3:21 and was due in N. Y. at 4:10; the Engineer in charge was Mr. William Peebles the fireman Mr. Frank Miller, of Jersey City. On reaching the terminus at Jersey City, the train ran into the depot at the usual speed; the Engineer on attempting to apply the patent vacuum brakes found that they were out of order and whistled "down brakes," but the brakemen on duty were unable to respond in time to avert the disaster which occurred—The engineer and fireman jumped off and escaped with slight injuries. We were present on Tuesday at the raising of the locomotive, &c.; and are enabled to describe what then transpired. On raising the engine which was No. 95, it was found that it had fallen over end for end. The entire outfit was completely stripped. The smoke-stack, cab, sand box, &c., were either knocked off or smashed in such a way as to render them entirely useless. An examination of the engine revealed the fact that the clock had stopped at 4:19 and that the machinery had been reversed, showing that the engineer had done all that was possible to avoid the result that followed. The tender had fallen on the engine and the baggage and smoking car rested on its side on the top. The whole were safely and expeditiously raised by means of the large derrick employed on the river and the engine &c., taken to the shop to be repaired. Mr. Elmore D. Moffett, of our city, accompanied by his little son, boarded the train at Elizabeth and took a seat in the smoking car. They were uninjured, but the little boy received such a wetting that Mr. Moffett found it necessary to purchase a new suit of clothes for him in New York, to avoid the cold which he would otherwise have contracted. We observe that the New York papers suggest that had tampers been placed at the end of the track, the progress of the engine would have been arrested, and the disaster prevented, but the opinion appears to be general, that the effect would have been that the cars would have telescoped and a great loss of life ensued. With this opinion, from the observations we made while on the grounds, we are forced to agree.

Disastrous Conflagration at Perth Amboy.

13 BUILDINGS BURNED—LOSS ESTIMATED AT FROM $75,000 TO $100,000.

On Saturday evening last about half past 5 o'clock, a disastrous conflagration broke out in the usually quiet city of Perth Amboy, (the reflection of which was plainly seen in this city) which threatened at one time to destroy the business portion of the city; 13 buildings were destroyed, involving a loss of from $75,000 to $100,000. On Sunday last our reporter visited the scene of conflagration, and was kindly furnished information from prominent citizens and business men of the place. The fire originated in the grocery and ship-chandlery store of Messrs. McCormick & Convery, situated on the north side of Smith Street, between High and Rector Streets. In the rear of the store, in a cellar, is kept kerosene, turpentine, oils, paints, &c. About half past 5 o'clock, one of the clerks, a small lad, named Mackie, proceeded to the cellar with a can in which to put kerosene for a customer; coming up stairs with the same, he discovered that he had left the top of the can in the cellar; he proceeded to get the same, and striking a match, (not stopping, boy like, to turn up the gas which was burning low at the time) found the top and dropped the match, it is supposed, into a pan near the tank containing the oil, the result of which was the instant igniting of the same, and in less than five minutes the rear part of the store was in flames. The clerk immediately gave the alarm, but he barely had time to make his escape with his life, he being somewhat burned in so doing, but not dangerously. Mr. McCormick immediately repaired in the direction of the cellar, but was driven back by the smoke and flames; he then turned his attention to saving the books, money, &c., by putting them in the safe and locking the same, and just gained the street as the tank containing the oil exploded, sending up an immense flame and black smoke, and soon the whole structure was on fire. Great excitement prevailed at this time; dwellings adjacent immediately took fire, furniture was being conveyed from the scene of conflagration to neighboring dwellings for safety, people were running hither and thither with pails, ladders, ropes, &c., and rendering every assistance in their power to subdue the flames; the fire was gaining headway rapidly, and about six o'clock telegrams were sent to Rahway, Elizabeth and Newark for aid. A special train arrived at half-past 7 o'clock from Elizabeth, bringing with it Rolla Steam Fire Engine No. 2, and a goodly number of firemen. After the arrival of the steamer it was found that she could not use the salt water from the river; she was therefore taken to a well used at Mr. William King's Cork Factory, situated a short distance from the fire, but in less than 10 minutes the water was exhausted; water was then taken from cisterns of private residences near the fire, and by thus shifting around, the firemen, by 10 o'clock, had the fire under control. The wind was very light from the west, which somewhat favored the buildings on the other side of Smith St., from taking fire, although the heat was intense. The citizens worked manfully, wetting the roofs and fronts of the houses, and, with the aid of canvass, carpets, &c., saved these buildings. The water in the cisterns having been exhausted, the street was dammed up, and the water from the steamer and other sources, scooped up, mud and all, and thrown upon the buildings. About 11 o'clock complete control was had of the flames, thirteen buildings having been burned, as follows:

Eastward from McCormick & Convery's—1 story brick building, owned by Mr. Jno. G. Garretson, and occupied by Mr. M. A. Davidson, clothier, and by Coutts Bros. as a market, &c.; a 3 story brick French roof dwelling, also belonging to Mr. J. G. Garretson, and occupied as a meat market on the 1st floor by Mr. S. G. Garretson, and the upper part as the residence of the former gentleman. Westward from McC. & C's—2½ story dwelling owned by Mr. Wm. Hall, Pres. of the Middlesex County Bank, and also owner of the building in which the fire originated; 2½ story dwelling, occupied by Mr. A. E. Glenville, stationer, and dealer in pianos, &c., the upper portion as a private residence, and owned by the estate of the late Dr. C. McK. Smith; 2½ story building owned by Mr. Geo. Coutts, and occupied on 1st floor by Mr. B. Livingston, clothier, and dwelling, and the upper part as residence of Mr. S. Garretson; 3 story building owned by Mr. Elam Sanford as a residence, in which also, was the Post Office, W. U. Tel. Office, and Millinery establishment of Miss M. Sanford; 2 story building owned by Mr. A. B. Smith, and occupied by Mr. J. L. Hare as a Furniture store on 1st floor, and the upper part as his residence; "Arcadia" building, 66x100 ft., an old Revolutionary 2 story structure of wood and brick, on the corner of Smith and High Sts. and owned by Mr. A. B. Smith, which was occupied on 1st floors by Mr. — Hansen, as a lager beer saloon, Mr. Wm. H. Moore, Druggist, Le Compte, barber, and a shoe shop, and the upper part as dwellings.

The heaviest losers by the fire are Messrs. McCormick & Convery, Jno. G. Garretson, Wm. Hall, B. Livingston, E. Sanford, Wm. H. Moore and A. B. Smith. Others were more fortunate in saving their household effects, &c. Mr. Sanford, postmaster, saved the letters, postage stamps, &c., but lost his household effects.

The Packer House at one time was in imminent danger of destruction, but by the prompt action of the firemen and citizens was saved. The firemen were entertained at this hotel, and everything was done, that could be, for their accommodation.

Had the wind been blowing as fresh on that evening as it did on the following day (Sunday,) it would have taken both sides of Smith St., from High St. to the river. The 3 story brick building of Mr. Jno. G. Garretson prevented the flames from crossing Rector St.

The facilities for the extinguishment of fires in that city are very poor; not a company of any kind exists, and no wells or cisterns are dug here and there you find those that have ladders and fire buckets, but outside of that, the city is at the mercy of the fire fiend. Our reporter was requested to make mention through our columns for the necessity of better water facilities in case of fire; it was thought that a pipe could be laid along the track of the Easton & Amboy or Packer R. R.; from New Brooklyn or New Market, (as the road is down grade) and so on into the city, when hydrants could be located and a good supply of water had, the citizens and the R. R. Co. furnishing the means wherewith to complete the same. A city older than the great Metropolis, and not a fire company of any kind! Immediate steps are to be taken for the erection of fine fireproof buildings on the site of those destroyed. Now let Perth Amboy proceed at once to organize good fire companies, and be ready to meet and battle against the fearful fiend—Fire!

The following is a partial list of the losses and insurances: McCormick & Convery, loss on stock, $10,000, insurance, $5,000; B. Livingston, clothier, loss on stock, &c., $8,000, insurance, $3,000; Wm. H. Moore, druggist, loss on stock, $3,500, insurance, $2,000.

The place was visited on Sunday last by parties from Rahway, Plainfield, New Brunswick and the surrounding country for miles around, and the streets were lined with every kind of vehicle—from a sidebar to a farm wagon, and the sidewalks were thronged with pedestrians looking at the smouldering ruins.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

The Tilden and Hendricks banner in this village was, by some vandal, cut down on Sunday evening last about 9½ o'clock.—The act was discovered immediately afterwards by parties returning from the Methodist church, and the banner furled up and put into a place of security until the next morning, when it was returned to its place. We are glad to announce that the act is severely condemned by the Republican citizens of the village, several of whom gave valuable assistance in restoring it to its old position.

Our distinguished friend Brittin, of Hotel fame in this village, gave a pleasant little supper consisting of poultry, &c., with fixings, at his House on Wednesday evening. Of course, it was one of the results of the election. A choice party sat down and highly enjoyed themselves in eating and other exercises until the clock reminded them that another day was approaching, for the discharge of the duties of which, a little sleep was required. The affair was a great success, and spoke volumes for the ability of mine host and Mrs. Brittin to meet the demands of those who love the good things of the table.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

A FEW weeks since we called attention to the deplorable condition of the board walk in front of property owned by Mr. Elliott, Somerset Street. We now gladly give publicity to the fact that Mr. E. is causing a new and substantial walk to be laid, which when completed will be a great benefit to the traveling public.

Every citizen in North Plainfield having a driven well on his premises, has been visited by a person representing a gentleman named Green and presented with a bill, claiming royalty for the use thereof. Our citizens are not so "Green" as to pay the claim, until they know more about it.

PROCEEDINGS COMMON COUNCIL.

FRIDAY EV'G, Nov. 10, 1876.

Council met pursuant to adjournment.

Members all present except Mr. Harris.

Pres. Mr. Smith in the chair.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Mr. French presented com'n from Messrs. Saydam & Jackson to P. P. Good, City Judge, relative to money placed in the hands of the city by one William Stewart, amounting to $100, for the support of Malinda Terry and child, and of which amount $25 had been expended in conveying said Terry and child South, according to agreement made satisfactory to all parties; the said Stewart claimed the $100, as the city had no further charge of the said Terry and child, and he (Stewart) put the matter in the hands of the said Saydam & Jackson for settlement.

Mr. Voorhees moved that the matter be referred to the Com. on Laws & Ords. Lost.

Mr. Brown moved that it be referred to the Com. on Alms. Carried.

Mr. French presented sundry claims as follows: R. MacDonald, groceries, (2 bills) $158; A. Coddington, McNabb & Co., coal, (2 bills) $6; T. Flynn, rent, $12; P. Muldoon, board, $18; John Harding, rent, (2 bills) $16; Theo. Pruden, rent, $20; M. McNierney, rent, $20; T. J. Gillies, Overseer of Poor, $4 30; M. B. Long, medical services, $10; John M. Schorb, board, $48; French & Martin, clothing, $5; S. A. Hope, rent, $8; A. R. Coriell, rent, $5; C. G. Crawford, book for Clerk, $14. On motion the above claims were referred to the Alms Com., with the exception of claim of C. G. Crawford, which, on motion, was referred to the Com. on Printing.

Mr. Brown presented claim of Berry & Thorn, $12.15. On motion, this claim was referred to the Com. on Fire, Water and Lamps.

Mr. French, from Com. on Alms, reported the following claims correct: G. Voorhees, $7 10; D. Hand, $34 28; G. W. Rockfellow, ag't., $95 50. On motion, the above claims were referred to the Aud. Com.

Mr. Ryder, from Com. on Fire, Water and Lamps, reported correct the following bills: N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Light Co., $105.75; Wallace Vail, $16. On motion, these claims were referred to the Aud. Com.

Mr. Tier, from Com. on Licenses, reported favorable upon license of P. J. Flanigan, with a res. that the license be granted. A motion of Mr. Voorhees, that the report be received and the resolution adopted was carried. Messrs. Mulford, Young and Thorn voting no.

Mr. Mulford called from the table the bill of Messrs. Saydam & Jackson, $39.50 services relative to New St. Sewer. The bill was then read by the Clerk and a motion made that the bill be referred to the Com. on Laws & Ords., and they requested to report on same this evening. Adopted.

Mr. Simpson, from Aud. Com. reported the following claims correct: D. Hand, $34.28; N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Light Co., $105.75; G. Voorhees, $7.20; Wallace Vail, $16; G. W. Rockfellow, ag't., $95.50. On motion report was received, and warrants ordered drawn for the same.

Mr. French moved that when Council adjourn it adjourn to meet one week from to-night, (Friday) at 7½ o'clock p. m. Carried.

Mr. Simpson moved that the President of this Council appoint a Committee of three to examine the Assessors tax lists previous to this year and ascertain what taxes can be collected therefrom. Carried. The President appointed as that Com. Messrs. Thorn, Simpson and Young.

Mr. Young, from Com. on Laws & Ords. reported the bill of Messrs. Saydam & Jackson, $39.50, correct. On motion, report was received, and claim referred to Aud. Com.

Council then adjourned.

Personals.

Commissioner Chase of the Centennial Exhibition, from Vermont, was in town this morning and paid our office a visit.

Esquire Nelson Webster, of New Brooklyn died yesterday, the 16th inst., at his residence, of paralysis. The funeral will take place from the First Baptist Church on Monday, 20th inst., at 2 o'clock p. m.

Mr. William Stearns, long an attachee of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and occupying prominent positions, has been appointed Assistant Superintendent of that road. The appointment gives universal satisfaction. He is undoubtedly the right man in the right place.

Sheriff Thompson visited Scotch Plains last Saturday and dined with Under-Sheriff Nicholl.

Our friend H. L. Niles, formerly of the Central Times of this city, is in town looking as natural as ever.

Mr. Edward C. Hinman, late city editor of the Elizabeth Herald, died at his residence on Linden street, Elizabeth, Monday last, of pleurisy.

Mr. C. B. Rogers arrived in our city from Florida on last Tuesday. Like all other Republicans he confirms the assertion that Florida is Republican. Ben of course, is authority—this settles it.

Mr. Alex. Hutcheons was considerably injured on Tuesday at Nash's Marble yard by the falling on his heel of a large block of marble.

Chas. W. F. Wittke, the Deputy Postmaster of Westfield, who a short time previous to the election was injured by the premature discharge of a cannon and subsequently amputated, is rapidly recovering. He was well enough on election day to go out and vote.

The family of Mr. Barzilla J. Randolph has been singularly unfortunate during the last few weeks. About six weeks ago his daughter was taken with pneumonia; Mr. R. was himself attacked by the same malady some two weeks after, followed by his son, who was taken down two weeks ago. The aged father of Mr. R. is also an invalid. They are all, but the old gentleman, gradually recovering, and in every probability will be about in a few days. The old gentleman's illness is, we understand, of a serious character. Mr. Randolph has our sympathies in his afflictions.

Correction.

TRIP TO CHINA AND RETURN.

MR. AND EDITORS:

In the last issue of your paper I notice you mention a letter written in China and sent to me in the year 1846, in part what you state is correct, but part incorrect. The facts are: In the year 1846 I was at Canton, China, attached to the ship Natchez; we had to wait three months before we could accumulate sufficient tea for our cargo; my sister, then living in New York City, wrote me a letter addressed on the back of a letter sheet, without envelope, "John T. Lee, ship Natchez, Canton, China, care Capt. John Land"; before the letter reached Canton I had sailed for home. Howland & Aspinwall, the China shipping merchants of N. Y., were the owners of the vessel; their agents in China forwarded the letter back to N. Y. to Messrs. H. & A., which appears on the redirection of the letter. Where it has since been I cannot say, but the addresses show it has been to China, N. Y. City, Dead Letter Office, at Washington, and finally reached my P. O. Box at this place after an unaccountable delay of 30 years. There were no postage stamps then, and the postage is marked on with pen and ink. Among the items mentioned in the letter is a note that peaches are selling in N. Y. at one shilling a basket, and the choice, one shilling and sixpence per basket. Out of ten relatives mentioned as then living, only three are at this time alive. Some might style this letter as stale news.

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders.

ELIZABETH, Nov 15, 1876.

The Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, convened at their room in the Court House, at 11 a. m. All the members being present, except Messrs. Baldwin and Devlan.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

There were no petitions, memorials, or reports of committees. The County Attorney's opinion on the subjects referred to him at the last meeting, was then read, and on motion by Freeholder Russell, they were received to be placed on file.

By Freeholder Randolph:

Resolved, That to settle all differences and misapprehensions, as regards pay for services rendered, as Judges, Inspectors and Clerks of election, that where 300 votes and under, have been polled, 2 days pay shall be allowed, except in cases where over 16 hours of actual labor has been performed, and in the event of such cases, then the said officer shall be entitled to three days pay, and where the districts or wards shall exceed 300 votes, then they shall be allowed 3 days pay.

For taking the ballot box to the Clerk's office one day's pay, and mileage will be allowed. Members of the Board of Canvassers will be entitled by law to one day's pay for each days actual service and mileage and such will be allowed. And all former resolutions conflicting with this resolution be and the same is hereby repealed. Adop'd.

By Freeholder Hubbard:

Resolved, That when this board adjourns it be to meet four weeks from this day, December 13, 1876, at 11 o'clock, a. m.—Adopted.

By Freeholder Runkle:

Resolved, That the sum allowed for pay for rooms in which the election was held on Nov. 7, 1876, shall in no case exceed $15. Adopted.

On motion the board then adjourned.

JOHN M. WELDON, Clerk.

STATE ITEMS.

The schools in Vineland are closed in consequence of the prevalence of scarlet fever.

Chief of Police Oliver, of New Brunswick, was kicked in the abdomen by a mare, Wednesday last, and seriously, but not dangerously, injured.

It has been decided that the State Educational Exhibit at the Centennial shall be removed to the State House in Trenton, to remain permanently.

A man named Post, of Hackensack, was arrested at Paterson Wednesday last for passing a twenty dollar counterfeit note on the First National Bank of Portland, Conn.

John E. Ziger, a resident of Bray's Hill, Hunterdon County, while suffering from mental derangement a few days ago, committed suicide by hanging himself to a bed-post.

Diptheria is spreading so alarmingly in Paterson that the Mayor Wednesday last issued his proclamation to enforce sanitary precautions with reference to keeping the streets clean.

The Hoboken firemen who disbanded a short time ago in consequence of the refusal of the Police Commissioners to punish an officer who had interfered with a fireman at a recent fire, have resumed duty, the difficulty, having been amicably arranged.

Senators Abbett, Dayton and Hopper, Democrats, and Senators Leaming, Magie and Potts, Republicans, have been designated by Gov. Bedle to complete the State Board of Canvassers for the canvassing of the votes for Electors. They will meet in Trenton on the 28th inst., at 2 o'clock, P. M.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Ellis A. Apgar, will on Monday, Nov. 20th, issues an order for the payment of the $100,000 State School appropriation, in favor of the County Collectors of the various counties.

Among the bets to be paid in Newark is one in which a Republican, weighing about 215 pounds, has got to wheel a Democrat, weighing upwards of 255 pounds, around Military Park, in a wheelbarrow, headed by a band of music. The time for the payment of the bet, from last accounts, had not been agreed upon.

An unsuccessful attempt was made last Sunday evening to assassinate Gov. Joseph D. Bedle, of this State, at his residence in Jersey City. Early in the evening a man rang the bell at the Governor's residence on Sussex street, and inquired for Mr. Bedle. On the Governor's coming to the door the man asked him if he knew a certain woman in Perth Amboy, and said that he was going to get square with him. The ruffian then attempted to strike the Governor with a billet of wood. But Mr. Bedle was too quick for him and shut the door in his face. The man went away, but returned again and attempted to gain admission to the house, but was arrested before he succeeded. When brought to the police station he gave his name as John Shanaply. He is believed to be insane. The news of the affair spread rapidly in Jersey City and created the greatest excitement.

A boy named powers, ten years old, while returning from church at New Brunswick, last Sunday, was crossing the railroad track when the Western train came along. Not having time to get out of the way, the little fellow made a desperate attempt to save himself by jumping on the cow-catcher, but he missed his footing and fell, and his head was severed from his body.

The grape-growing interest is larger around Egg Harbor City than most Jerseymen are aware of. This year the yield of grapes was nine hundred tons, and they manufacture 1,200,000 gallons of wine.

Harry Hunter, son Mr. Hunter, of the firm of Halsey & Hunter of Newark, died at his father's residence last Monday, from the effects of the bullet wound he received several months ago by the accidental discharge of a pistol in the hands of a comrade, while at boarding school in Freehold. For a long time after the accident he lay between life and death, and to the astonishment of almost every one recovered so as to be able to be about as usual. Last week he began to show signs of trouble, and on Friday last was seized with an attack resembling epilepsy, became unconscious and continued in a comatose state until death ensued. The immediate cause is supposed to have been trouble in the brain, resulting from a pressure from the bullet. Mr. Hunter will have the sympathy of large circle of friends, having lost a son, daughter and grandchild within a few months.

Mr. John Remsen, of Three-Mile-Run, near New Brunswick, shot a magnificent white or spotted owl on his farm, at about sunrise on Wednesday morning last. It measured four feet ten inches from the extreme tip of its wings, and was near the size of a goose. The owl was on the wing and over one hundred yards from him when he shot it. This species of owl is said to be from a climate much colder than our own, and very rarely seen in this region.

It is currently reported that E. P. Williams, the dry goods merchant of Elizabeth, absconded on Saturday last, as he has not been seen since that time, and his whereabouts is unknown.

Mr. Williams was under indictment as accessory to a conspiracy to defraud the National State Bank of Elizabeth, and on Tuesday last plead guilty to the charge and was to be sentenced on Tuesday of next week, in the interim being at liberty under $10,000 bonds.

Lack of courage to face the sentence of the Court is said to be the cause of his sudden departure. His bondsmen are Richard Kipling, Otis Woodruff and Amos Clark, 2nd.

Clark, deceased, for the year 1874, the subscriber will, on the nineteenth day of December, 1876, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of that day, at the Town Rooms in the village of Westfield, sell the following land and premises: 4 acres on Walnut Street and Mountain Avenue in Road District No. 4; 12 acres on Jerusalem Road, adjoining Robt. French in Road District No. 7; 6 acres in Big Woods near Turkey Swamp in Road District No. 7; 1¼ acres, house and lot, on Broad Street, bounded by Hotel, Geo. A. [illegible], Baptist Church, Benj. Marsh, Grave-yard, Joshua Brown and J. Osborn in Road District No. 8, and 1½ acres on Broad Street, opposite Harris [illegible], adjoining L. Hetfield and O. M. Pierson in Road District No. 8, taxed to the said estate of John M. Clark, deceased, to make the said taxes, amounting to Eighty-eight Dollars and Thirty-one Cents, together with the costs, interest, fees, charges and expenses, for the shortest time for which any person or persons will agree to take the same, and pay such taxes, interest, costs, fees, charges and expenses.

MORGAN'S
SPARKLING
APOLLINARIS
Natural Mineral Water.

The attention of the public is invited to the above celebrated Water, the qualities of which will be briefly described; and in presenting it to the public the proprietor feels it his duty to give, at the same time, its chemical analysis, which has been most faithfully accomplished by the celebrated Dr. [illegible], and found, in 16 ounces, a temperature of [illegible] deg., to give the following results:

Acid, Carbonic,	[illegible]
Soda, Muriate,	[illegible]
" Sulphide,	[illegible]
" Phosphate,	a trace
" [illegible]	a trace
" Carbon,	[illegible]
Magnesia, Carbon,	[illegible]
Lime, Carbon,	45
Oxide Iron,	04
Alumina,	13

By a careful examination of the above, the Carbonates and Sulphides will be found in greater proportion, and the Chlorides (common salt) in a lesser one, than in any other mineral water, including [illegible], Vichy, Seltzer or Wiesbaden. These Waters, containing the Chlorides in excess, prevent their continuous use. Several hypotheses have been advanced as to the action of the Alkaline Mineral Water. The fact that the ashes of the mucus become less tenacious upon the addition of Carbonates, seems certainly to indicate that Carbonates play an important part in the formation of mucus, and that, in diluted solutions they are not only capable of exciting the Ciliary movements through the entire digestive organs, but will re-establish the extinguished or lessened Ciliary vibrations. The use of MORGAN'S APOLLINARIS Water has the most wonderful results, and the highest recommendation that could be given is the fact that it is strongly recommended by parties whom no one can accuse of being easily deceived by therapeutic results, viz: the learned professors of the Vienna schools; while in London, by Sir Henry Thompson, where its constant use in Kidney disease has given it unparalleled success. The Therapeutic properties of the Apollinaris may be given as Antilithic Tonic, slightly chalybeate, Aperient, Antacid and Restorative.

Its use in the following diseases has been attended with perfect success:

Chronic Catarrh of the Stomach.

When there is a disagreeable feeling of pressure and fullness, which is increased by eating, filling the stomach with gas, caused by decomposition of food, the gastric fluid being abnormal, eructations of gas, heartburn and the sensation of hunger is almost lost; in these cases a goblet of the water, taken half an hour before meals, will be found of great value.

In Affections of the Throat,

such as dryness, hoarseness, difficulty of breathing, enlargement of the glands, the Water will be found to combine with any mucus that may be present, and hasten its ejection. To persons under treatment for Consumption the quantity of Oxygen will be increased, and also the red blood corpuscles. For those who are delicate the water may be warmed to any temperature.

For affections of the Bladder, Kidneys, Stone or Gravel, the dissolving power of the Alkaline Carbonate needs no comment. Congestion of the Liver, caused by obstruction or pressure of the Veins (or gall ducts), enlargement of the whole organ, the Apollinaris is particularly beneficial, for the Alkalies, in the form in which they enter the body, can undoubtedly be used for a long time. For complaints peculiar to females, Amenorrhoea, Dysmenorrhoea or Leucorrhoea, which are essentially perversions of nutrition, the combinations contained in Apollinaris, viz: the Bicarbonate and Sulphides of Soda, will be found to increase that portion of the blood which forms the different tissues.

In cases of fever, especially amongst children, where medicines are rarely given, equal parts of new milk and the Water will be found not only refreshing, but will also reduce the temperature to the normal state, while it increases the secretion of the digestive organs.

The European press have been unanimous in their eulogy of the merits of this truly called "King of Seltzers."

Agent for Plainfield.

HAD NO FUN IN HIM.

One of the members of the Methodist conference, recently held in Detroit, says the Free Press, was out for a walk at an early hour one morning, and encountered a strapping big fellow, who was drawing a wagon to the blacksmith shop.

"Catch hold here and help me down to the shop with this wagon and I'll buy the whiskey!" called the big fellow.

"I never drink," solemnly replied the good man.

"Well, you can take a cigar."

"I never smoke."

The man dropped the wagon tongue, looked hard at the member, and asked: "Don't you chew?"

"No, sir," was the decided reply."

"You must get mighty lonesome," mused the teamster.

"I guess I'm all right—I feel first-rate."

"I'll bet you even that I can lay you on your back," remarked the teamster. "Come, now let's warm up a little."

"I never bet."

"Well, let's take each other down for fun, then. You are as big as I am, and I'll give you the under hold."

"I never have fun," solemnly answered the member.

"Well, I'm going to tackle you anyway. Here we go!"

The teamster slid up and endeavored to get a neck hold, but he only just commenced to fool about when he was lifted clear off the grass and slammed against a tree box with such force that he gasped half a dozen times before he could get his breath.

"Now, you keep away from me!" exclaimed the minister, picking up his cane.

"Bust me if I don't!" replied the teamster, as he edged off. "What's the use in lying and saying that you didn't have any fun in you when you're chuck full of it! Blame it! you wanted to break my back, didn't you!"

A noble Indian of Wisconsin carries about with him the following certificate, written for him by some obliging white man: This may certify that the bearer is an aboriginal cuss, in whom there is no guile. He never lifted a scalp nor robbed a hen-roost by day-light. He is father of some of his children, and uses no cologne. He has that noble attribute of his race, an untutored mind.—His squaw has gone to the spirit land, and he wishes to visit that earthly land of spirits where troubles are forgotten at the rate of ten cents a spirit. He respectfully asketh aid of the pale face. No orders for groceries received.

Not a thousand miles from Plainfield a wife lay in a dying condition. Having brought up a clever orphan girl, who was grown, the dying woman called the young lady to her and said: "I will soon leave you my little children motherless. They know you and love you, and after I am gone I want you and my husband to marry." The young woman, bursting into tears, said: "We were just talking about that."

A gentleman in Virginia City, Nev, whose Chinese cook left him, was unable to obtain any of numerous "Johns" for over a day, until he induced one of them to explain that some apparently meaningless strips of red paper on the kitchen wall contained the Chinese inscription: "Boss woman, long time tongue. Muchee jaw jaw."

A certain house in North Plainfield was startled at midnight, (just before election) by the cry of "a man in the house." The family arose and were informed by their son that he had become of age, and was a man, and that he was going to vote for Tilden in the morning.

NEW JERSEY
Enamel Paint Company,
RARITAN, NEW JERSEY.
Manufacturers of
Bradley's Enamel Paint.
Mixed Ready for Use, in any shade, Tint or Color desired.

THESE Paints are composed of the purest and best materials known to painters; the principal ingredients being Pure White LEAD, ZINC, and LINSEED OIL, which are made to unite in a homogeneous mass by the addition of other materials which add greatly to the durability, elasticity, beauty and strength of the Paint. The whole are chemically combined so that the pigments are held in permanent solution, thus forming a new compound which dries on the surface and adheres firmly to it, thus forming a Smooth, Glossy, Firm, Elastic, Beautiful and Durable Paint.

The Oil, which is the real life of the Paint, cannot leave it and be absorbed by the substance to which it is applied, as it does in paints mixed in the ordinary way, & thus leave the pigment dry and chalky, to wash & rub off in few months. This paint is unaffected by changes of temperature, is perfectly impervious to the action of water, is well adapted to all classes of work, & is in every way a better paint for either in side or outside work or boat painting than any other Paint known to the trade, and will last at least three times as long as the best Lead and Oil mixed in the ordinary way.

These Paints are Ready for use,
Are easily applied by any one, require no mixing, stirring or addition of dryers.

Liberal Inducements to Dealers,
And full satisfaction guaranteed to their Customers.

Sold by the Gallon, Keg or Barrel. Orders attended to promptly. For Price List and Sample Color Card, Address,

CAUTION!

The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Theo. A. Carman some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filled over one thousand pages and council were over two weeks in summing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an air-tight iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing stratum. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is of steel, made sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Carman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for defendant claimed that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement had been clearly proved.

Cider! New Cider!
Farm Cider!
Made in the afternoon and evening, and delivered at your door next morning, by the gallon or barrel. This is not Shoddy Cider! made from heated, half-rotten apples, scooped from the ground into a tub of water to let the stones and heavy dirt with which they are mixed settle to the bottom, so the said stones will not break the grinder knives. Then the rotten apples and all floating impurities are scooped out of the tub, a pint to a quart of dirty water accompanying each scoopful, and the liquid obtained from this mixture is sold as Cider! Shoddy. The real, simon pure, old-fashioned farmers' Cider which we make is the pure juice of apples, all of which are perfectly sound, ripe and clean, and ground dry, and not one drop of water is added to it. Our object is to make as good cider as it is possible to make, and deliver it as fast as made, so that our customers can have at each meal new, sweet Cider, (Apple Wine,) of the very best quality.
A glass of such cider taken with each meal we know to be healthy, wholesome, invigorating, purifying to the system, furnishing brain food, and is highly anti-scorbutic, giving tone to the stomach, supplies to us the fruit acids we so much need for our health. Persons wishing to be supplied can send their address to J. E. Brown, Box 66, Plainfield Postoffice, and our cider wagon will call at their door in a day or two thereafter. Our Cider Mill is on our farm, two miles east of Liberty Corner, where the public are invited to call and observe our mode of making Farm Cider. Get a few gallons for mince pies and bad colds. J. E. BROWN.
N. B.—Please have something ready to put your Cider in when it arrives, so as not to delay the wagon.

POETRY.

CALL ME WHEN BREAKFAST IS READY.

A SONG OF THE GIRL OF THE PERIOD.

Call me when breakfast is ready—
O, mother! don't call me before;
Do not deny me the pleasure
Of moderate rest I implore.
Eight hours of sleep are too little
For delicate maidens like me;
Dearer, by far, is my pillow
Than cup of the daintiest tea.
Mother, I cannot endure it,
This getting up early's a bore—
Call me when breakfast is ready,
O! please do not call me before.

Call me when breakfast is ready—
O, mother, don't call me too soon;
Shopping, of course, needs attention,
But that can be done before noon.
Talk of the folly of fashion,
I do not consider it so;
Parties must not be neglected,
And style is important, you know.
Mother, it makes me so nervous
To think of your step at my door;
Call me when breakfast is ready,
Oh! please do not call me before.

Call me when breakfast is ready—
Oh, don't call me early, I pray;
Doctors advise me to be quiet,
My spine is affected, they say.
Sleep is a potent elixir,
And better than drugs or the knife;
Why, then, so much in a hurry,
Since rest is the solace of life?
Mother, do have some compassion,
And chide my late rising no more;
Call me when breakfast is ready,
O! please do not call me before.

Call me when breakfast is ready—
O, mother! I think I've been told,
Multitudes struggle for riches,
And barter their comforts for gold.
Hypocrites often rise early—
Their motives are perfectly plain;
Sundays they always sleep later,
Because they have nothing to gain.
Mother, I cannot endure it.
This getting up early's a bore—
Call me when breakfast is ready,
But please do not call me before.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

FIFTY CENTS CAPITAL.

Farmer Brown was a very respectable old man. He had some oddities, but they were harmless ones, and people who knew him best rather laughed at them than feared them.

The farmer had two sons, Marcus, a good, steady boy, who worked with his father on the farm, and Horatio, who was just home from college, and was considered handsome and smart by all the neighbors.

Mrs. Brown had been dead some years, and her sister, Miss Eminetta Griggs, better known as Aunt Ermy, was housekeeper and general manager of the men folks on the farm.

Aunt Ermy was a very industrious woman, both with her hands and with her tongue, and could do more and say more in a given time than any other woman in the village of Tusculum. She knew it, and was proud of her gift. As she was also a woman who knew "what was what," she could give it to you in a nut-shell. Her opinion of the family was, of course, perfectly reliable, as well as pithy and concise.

"You see, Horatio is smart, but he is lazy. Here he's been at home most two months, and here he is, readin' and fishin' and huntin', that's what 'Ratio does. And brother ain't very patient, and naturally he don't like that kind of doin's. He's awful disappointed, and angry at 'Ratio; but 'Ratio takes it cool as a cowcumber, and brother gets angrier and angrier, and things ain't as they orter be. Now look at Marcus, he ain't particular handsome to look at, but 'handsome is as handsome does.' That's what I say."

And what she said was true. Marcus was very handsome in all his doings, and Horatio was, indeed, very lazy. When his father asked him what he intended to do with all his learning, Horatio would look very wise for a little while, and then answer:

"I really don't know, father, I haven't decided yet. I am studying nature just now."

Then he would take his gun or fishing rod and saunter away, as if nature had an appointment with him, and he had just recollected it. And Mr. Brown went back to his work, grumbling to himself; and sometimes it made him petulant even with Aunt Ermy and with Marcus, who had done nothing wrong.

Things were bad enough in the summer, but in the autumn something happened which made them still worse. One bright cool morning, when Horatio was on his way to the woods to kill partridges, he saw a great cloud of dust rising from the middle of the road, and coming rapidly toward him. Then he saw a red cow, and the next instant, in the thickest of the dust behind, he saw a girl holding fast to the cow's tail, and running with all her might.

"Why, that's Gazena Hartman," he said to himself. Then he said aloud: "Zena, what are you doing?"

"I am having a ride," she answered, laughing merrily, and showing all her little teeth as she flew out of sight.

But Horatio could not forget her. Gazena's red cheeks, her flashing eyes, her curly brown hair, flying in the wind were before him all day, and saved the lives of many little birds.

"How she has grown, and how bright and pretty she is. 'Having a ride,' indeed! How handsome she would look in a fine carriage!" And he had a great many other thoughts on the same subject.

After supper he asked his father:

"What is Hartman doing now? Does he get along well with his little farm?"

"I don't know," answered Mr. Brown, gruffly. "I have enough to do to mind my own business. I don't meddle with other people's."

Horatio did not make any reply; but, as he had no business of his own to mind, he thought he would meddle just a little. "Hartman is a worthy man if he is a Dutchman, and it would please him to be kind to each other in this hard world."

The next morning Horatio took the trouble to go over to Hartman's farm to be kind to his neighbor. Gazena was not visible, but Gazena's father, short and stout, stood at the gate smoking his pipe.

"Good morning," said Horatio, kindly. "How do you do?"

"Do pretty well," answered the farmer.

"Fine morning," said Horatio.

Mr. Hartman looked around to see how fine the morning was, but he reserved his opinion.

"I hope Mrs. Hartman is well," said Horatio.

"Yes, yes, pretty well," answered the husband. "She's very busy. We are all very busy. And now I go to work in mine field. Good day."

A few days afterward the young man went again to the little farm and presented some birds to Gazena's father. "I shot them myself," he explained.

"So! I nefer kill de leedle birds," said Mr. Hartman, regretfully.

Then Horatio kindly offered to carry them into the house.

"Nein, nein, I do dat mineself," said the farmer. "Mine vife, she's very busy always. She vonts no strange peoples around. Our place is not a big one, and I like to fill by mineself."

Horatio understood this delicate hint, and retired politely. He was provoked, but he did not tell his neighbor so. The father of such a daughter must be humored if he was blunt.

As for Gazena herself, Horatio could not understand her at all. When she happened to meet him, she gave a little nod, a sly look and a merry smile, but she never spoke to him, or stopped long enough for him to speak to her more than a monosyllable or two. She always seemed to be in a great hurry—"very busy," as her father said.

At last, one evening, he met her at one of the neighbors, and insisted upon walking home with her. And, as he was not sure that he would ever have such a chance again, he decided to make the most of it.

"I have been trying to speak to you for the last five months," he said. "Why do you run away from me so?"

"Oh, I don't know; it's such fun!" answered Gazena, laughing.

"It's not fun to me," said Horatio. "It makes me feel unhappy. Do you dislike me?"

"No, I don't care anything about you, it's only the fun," said Gazena, too frankly.

"But won't you feel sorry for me, and try to like me?" asked Horatio.

"Like you!" she said. "What do you want me to like you for?"

"Because—because—you know you will like somebody sometime, and get married—"

"No, never," interrupted Gazena. "I don't want to get married. I am going to be a nun and work on the farm."

"No, you won't," said Horatio. "You will get married, and—and I want you to marry me."

Gazena stopped suddenly, and looked up at him with flushed eyes. "You are a bad boy!"

"Don't you know you shouldn't talk so to me?" she said hotly and fast. Then she ran away and left him alone on the road.

Some owl must have heard this conversation, and told the story, for Aunt Ermy said to Mr. Brown the next evening: "So we're go'n to have a weddin', I suppose they'll have to come and live here."

"Who is coming to live here?"

"Why, haven't you heard? 'Ratio has proposed to 'Zena Hartman. Of course she'll have him."

Farmer Brown was so angry at first that he could not speak. But he got over that in a few minutes, and spoke his mind pretty freely to his son. "I won't have it!" he said. "You shan't bring a Dutch girl into this house where your mother has lived—not while I am alive!"

"Who said I would!" asked Horatio, quietly enough; and he, too, was very angry and disgusted with everybody, Gazena included.

When Mr. Hartman heard the story, it made him laugh, and he only said:

"Vot? Gif mine daughter to you lazy man? Not mooch!"

Gazena did not laugh at all. She cried every night when she was safe in her bed.—"Oh, what bad people they are! I wish I could get a chance of speaking my mind to somebody."

She had her wish. One afternoon she met Farmer Brown as he was going to his fields. They were alone on the road and he spoke first.

"Look here, my girl, you had better be careful what you do, you are not wanted at my house. Do you understand?"

Gazena's face turned red, then white, but she answered bravely.

"Farmer Brown I ain't your girl, so you needn't say so. And I don't want to live with proud folks, and work for my husband. We are as good as you be, my father is."

And away she went.

Farmer Brown was so surprised at this speech that instead of going to his fields he went to bed, declaring that he was sick and should die. That was a way he had. It was one of his oddities.

When he was more than ordinarily troubled about his affairs he always thought he was going to die. Sometimes he made a few last remarks, then took a dose of rheubarb, and then—the next morning he was well as ever.

So when Aunt Ermy called out: "Come in quick, boys! Your father thinks he is dyin'!" The boys went into the house without hurrying much. They had seen their father in the same condition before.

The scene was quite impressive. Mr. Brown lay on the bed, dressed in his Sunday clothes, his head propped up on several pillows.

"Come here, boys," he said, in a weak voice, "I am going to die for good this time and I want to speak to you."

The boys stood by the bed, and Aunt Ermy stood down near the patient, who spoke thus:

"Ermy, you have been a good sister to me, it is my wish that you should stay here till you die. You hear, Marcus? Take good care of her. The house is yours, my son, and the land; the whole farm is yours, because you have been a good and dutiful son. Horatio, come here, I haven't much to say to you. Here is fifty cents. Go buy a rope to hang yourself with."

Horatio took the fifty cents with very faint thanks. If he had any doubts before, he was certain now that his father was not going to die. He did not even stay to see. He put on his hat and marched out of doors in a transport of mingled wrath and mortification.

Alone in the open air he began to plan what he should do. He would go to a large city, and become a great preacher, a great lawyer, a great—

"No, I won't," he said, stopping suddenly. "I will stay here and work. I will be a great farmer and marry Gazena Hartman! Then we will see who will buy a rope and hang himself! Aha! I will keep this fifty cents for good luck" (taking out the coin and holding it up in his fingers.) "There that's settled."

He went back to the house and to his room, slept a few hours, got up very early, made a bundle of his clothes, and left the house before anyone was awake.

At broad daylight Farmer Brown got up well and strong as ever—of course. But it was some time before he discovered his son had gone.

The next day the whole village of Tusculum was a-buzz with great news. 'Ratio Brown had left his father's house and had gone and hired himself for a year to Mr. Maynard, of West Farms! Wasn't it queer? And then how long would it last?

It lasted a whole year to begin with. Then it was said that Farmer Maynard found Horatio so handy that he hired him for another year, and paid him good wages, all of which was true. During the first and even the second year, Horatio was not once seen in Tusculum. But one bright day, when Mr. Hartman was enjoying his afternoon dinner pipe surrounded by his women folks, there was a knock at the door that startled Gazena.

"Come in," said Mr. Hartman and Horatio came in.

Gazena blushed rosy red. Mrs. Hartman started, and her husband took the pipe out of his mouth. But before he had time to speak, Horatio said:

"Mr. Hartman, I have come to see you on business. I have worked hard for two years, and am now a pretty good farmer. I have saved all my wages, and have bought forty acres of woodland and a yoke of oxen. Now I have a plan for making money out of my trees, and by next year I intend to buy forty acres more and make more money. If I succeed, will you give me your daughter—if she is willing?"

"Now look what a boy!" said Mrs. Hartman. "He works hard two years, and no mother, no home, and he say nothing, but is good and true all by himself. Now I like that; that's very good. I take him, and you take him, father, and our 'Zena, she take him too. She took him two years past, when he go away, and she cried so to break her heart. I knowed it then. Now you take him, father."

Two such long speeches overpowered Mr. Hartman. He "took" Horatio.

Then Mrs. Hartman remembered her chickens had not yet had their dinner, and Horatio was left alone with Gazena and his dozing new pa. Gazena had not said a word all this time, and had tried to look as if she was somewhere else—very far away. How she felt was what Horatio wanted to know, for he did not much admire this new Dutch way of courting. So he turned to the young lady and said: "Gazena, will you come out on the porch with me?"

Gazena got up obediently and went to the porch, but she looked down at some tin pans that were drying in the sun, as if they were novel objects, both new and interesting.

Horatio took courage, and said what he had to say as well as he could say it; then he waited for Gazena's answer.

"I will do as father and mother say," she answered; "but there's one thing, I have never been engaged before, and I don't want to be engaged now. So, if you don't mind, I'll be a nun as I said I would till—till—"

Horatio did not mind, and was quite willing to let her be a nun one year longer. It was decided that he would come every other Sunday to see his little nun, and that was all to be a secret in the family.

"Because," said Gazena, "I don't want people to talk about it, and look at me as if they had never seen me before."

Horatio was very happy and worked harder than ever. He cut down his trees and burned the lumber to make "black salts," which he sold at a good price in the city. With that money he bought forty more acres of woodland, and early in the spring he sowed wheat on the cleared land. Then he hired from Farmer Maynard a small cottage, with orchard and garden to match. It was quite a pretty little place.

"It will do very well to begin with," said Horatio, "and in two or three years we will build a house just as we want it."

"Yes, indeed," said Mrs. Hartman. "You begin small and you grow big, but you begin big and you grow small; except you be very rich and it is not everybody who can."

But now something was the matter with Gazena. She did not look as happy as might have been expected. No, she did not object to the cottage; it was large enough for her. Yes, she was willing to give up being a nun, and June was a very pretty month to be married in. But—

"I will tell you what it is," she said, one evening to Horatio, "I was saucy to your father once, and I am sorry for it, though it was the truth I told him. I don't want to live with proud folks to look down on me: but I don't like to marry a man that has no father when his father is living."

"You mean that you want me to make it up with my father."

"Yes, I mean just that. Now please go and tell him, and make peace—that will bring us happiness. It will be so right and nice."

Horatio promised that he would go, and he went the next afternoon.

It was more than three years since he had left home. He had sometimes seen his father riding past the West farm, but they had never met face to face, or spoke to each other.

"Let him alone," Farmer Brown had said to Aunt Ermy, when she had proposed to go and see Horatio. "Let him alone and don't bother."

But when the wedding was talked about, Aunt Ermy could restrain herself no longer.

"Marcus, I suppose you have heard that your brother is going to be married?" she said, one day after dinner, addressing her nephew, but intending her speech really for her brother-in-law.

"Well," said Mr. Brown, "what of it?—It don't hurt us any, does it?"

"No, but—you see he has taken that Gazena."

"Of course he has. Why shouldn't he? She is the pluckiest little girl I ever saw."—And Farmer Brown began to laugh.

Suddenly, while he was laughing, the kitchen door opened, and Horatio walked in. They all stared at him for a moment; then he said:

"Well, father, how about that fifty cents?"

"All right!" said his father. "I never got so much out of fifty cents in all my life."

"I declare," said Aunt Ermy, advancing upon Horatio with open arms. Thus peace was made and sealed.

The Brown-Hartman wedding was the event of that Summer. Everybody in Tusculum remembers it to this day, and says there never was a handsomer bridegroom nor a prettier bride.

Gazena really looked very pretty—"beautiful," Horatio said. And Mr. Hartman gave her away as if he knew that it is not every father who has such a daughter to give away.

After a substantial dinner at the bridegroom's father's, the newly married pair took a short wedding trip as far as their little cottage, which Farmer Brown had bought and presented to his daughter Gazena.

BEEFSTEAKS AND PIES.

Every body, except cannibals and the Ashantee consumers of steaks from the living kine, prefers well-prepared food to the other kind. There is no farmer's boy who eats a greasy lump of shoe-leather fried in a pan and called a beefsteak, who would not prefer a well-broiled porter-house from the hand of a good cook. Here, then, dear madame, is a point of departure. Well-cooked food is not only more toothsome, but it is more nutritious. Your grandmother would have scorned a fried steak. Pork fried in its own juice is another thing. Yet the American beefsteak, the national dish for breakfast, is generally fried. It is often of a pale, measly complexion. Its dry and hard surface is vainly irrigated with luke-warm grease, in which lumps of soft butter float—pardon, madame, the unsavory details which imperious truth imposes. Is that proper food for a human being? Yet the average American human being is subjected to it in the great multitude of honest homes. Can you do nothing about it?

Then pies. Even that dismayed Frenchman would not deny that we have as many pies as religions, and he would be a bold Frenchman also if he asserted that we are as fond of our religions as of our pies.—Pies, indeed, there must be. They are as ancient as Thanksgiving, and the pie on the table of that great day was as constituent a part of it as the minister in the pulpit. Nay, what is the festival itself but a humble and pious offering of thanks for the copious harvest of pie—in its original material? Indeed, the more metaphysical inquirer might justly ask, as he surveys the autumn fields gorgeous with the massive pumpkin, "what is it there for except to make pie?" It is as manna fallen upon the earth. It is a celestial hint of pie. It is a heavenly command of pie. There is a time in the life of the contemplative American when he perceives in himself nascent doubts of pie. He may even go so far as to protest that heavy white dough, "shortened" with Heaven and the lard pot know what, is not wholesome food.

But what said the learned and eloquent Rufus Choate, when his mouth fairly watered at the luxury of the forecastle and galley of a half-starved coasting smack? "On Monday, gentlemen, the wholesome and toothsome duff; on Tuesday, the nutritious and delicious dunny-funk;" and in the climax his rapt eye beheld in vision the very transfigured material of pie, although he called it by a kindred name, when he exclaimed, "and on Wednesday, gentlemen, with his own paternal hand, the captain dealt out to them squash; not the cold and shriveled vegetable of our Northern clime, but the gorgeous, the luxuriant, the exuberant squash of the tropics."

Think, madame, that you deal with this esculent—squash or pumpkin, it is all the same; concede that the German will surrender his sauerkraut, the Scotchman his oatmeal "parritch," the Irishman his potato, the Italian his maccaroni, the Frenchman his frog, as soon as the American his pie; yet are you not morally bound to consider the nature of crust, and can you as a friend of truth, assert that the white, soggy slab of "stuff" that underlies your pie is either wholesome or toothsome? The question that comes home to you is, can't you brown it? Can't you make it dry and crisp without too much reference to the lard pot? When it is apple with which you are concerned, the responsibility is greater, for, so to speak, your apple-pie wears a Fall suit; it has a coat and trowsers, an upper and a lower garment; and, dear madame, since "it is not always May," why should the innocent fruit always be clad in white?—Brown it, madame, brown it!

These are simple hints, but they involve health, comfort and progress. Let us regard what has been said as a first lesson—studies, if you please, for beginners. Devote your energy to securing a juicy, broiled steak, dry and mealy potatoes, brown but not buttery pastry, and light, thoroughly baked bread—"only these and nothing more"—and not your children only, madame but all wearied souls who have been long watching for the dawn, will rise up and call you blessed!—Harper's Mag. for Dec.

AN ARMY EXAMINING BOARD.

Board of examiners and victim applying for commission:

Examiner—"Who was the greatest general of ancient or modern times?"

Mr. Green—"Some say Alexander, some Napoleon, others General Grant, but I think Moses was the greatest, because he carried an immense army with women, children and baggage across an arm of the sea, and didn't use a pontoon train."

"Who is the greatest man in the United States to-day?"

"Dr. Mary Walker."

"Who founded the city of Sevastopol?"

"Excuse me, general."

"Oh, yes! Sevastopol—Hannibal, general."

"Now, Mr. Green, suppose you were marching your command through a hostile country, flight in front, and you were hemmed in by the enemy on both flanks, with an impassable river in front and the sea in rear of you, what would you do?"

"Well, I think I should sit down and write to mother;" and he passed—out.

A fashionable young man, dressed in much shirt-collar, a big seal ring and baggy trowsers, returned home last evening and complained of being so tired and fagged out that he could scarcely stand up. His mother asked him if he was playing base ball, and he said no, he had only "taken a short walk down town, and carried his new cane." The new-fashioned cane, it may be as well to explain, is thick as your arm and weighs something less than fifty pounds.

PRIMARY MEETING.

The Democratic and Conservative voters of the City of Plainfield are requested to assemble at Laing's Hall, Wednesday Evening, Nov. 29th, at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of nominating a Mayor and other City Officers, to be supported at the approaching City Election, also to transact whatever other legitimate business that may come before them.

By order Plainfield Dem. Ass'n,
JOHN H. EVANS, Pres.
W. W. GAMBLE, Sec.

THE OUTLOOK.

The political status remains with but slight change, about as it did at the time of our last issue. The Returning Board of South Carolina, by order of the Supreme Court of that State, canvassed, on Friday and Saturday, the entire vote of the State for electors, acting ministerially only, and reported a majority for Gov. Hayes, of about 600. On Tuesday the Board made a report to the Court giving the names of those who were elected, and stating in a memorandum annexed their opinion that certain irregularities, which they claimed affected some of the Republican candidates should be corrected, and also that the vote of Laurens and Edgefield counties, which gave large Democratic majorities, should be excluded on account of frauds and intimidation. On Wednesday the Court entered an order commanding the Board to issue certificates to those having the highest number of votes for members of the Legislature, including the counties above named. The case of the electors was also taken up and a rule issued to the Board to show cause why they should not correct the statements of the County Canvassers by the precinct returns in their possession.—While these proceedings were in progress the Board met and issued certificates to all the members of the Legislature except for Laurens and Edgefield, thus securing a majority of the Legislature to the Republicans and securing the defeat of Hampton and the election of Chamberlain. They also issued certificates of election to the Hayes and Wheeler electors and to all the Republican State ticket. The Board then adjourned sine die. The resulting excitement is very great, but the citizens are determined to rely on the Courts and exhaust all legal means of redress.—General Hampton has issued an address to the people reciting the above facts and counselling order which will undoubtedly be strictly maintained even under the exasperation engendered by this great outrage. In Louisiana all is yet in doubt and some days will transpire before any report can be expected from that quarter. The situation in Florida, so far as arriving at any result is concerned, is not materially altered. All the information that reaches us, however, goes to confirm our previously expressed opinion that both the latter States have elected Tilden electors. We find in our exchanges and in the assurances of adherents of both parties generally, that this is beginning to be the prevailing sentiment of the citizens of the North. We can do nothing here, however, in the matter, and bide our time, counselling our readers to remain cool and patiently wait for the end, assured that the right will triumph and that full justice will be accorded to those entitled to it.

THE SITUATION.

We ask for the following editorial of the Philadelphia Evening Telegraph, of 17th instant, a careful perusal:

The news which we have to offer from Louisiana to our readers to-day is not pleasant news. The Returning Board upon which the eyes of the whole nation are now so intently fixed has determined to exercise its functions in secret, and there is very little reason to doubt that it has been encouraged to do so by the prominent Northern members of the Republican party who are now in New Orleans for the ostensible purpose of supervising the proceedings in connection with the count of the vote in the interests of fair play, and for the obtaining of evidence with regard to the manner of the count that may be of use in event of Congress being called upon to decide with regard to the legality or illegality of the returns as certified. The letter which these representative Republicans have addressed to the Democrats in reply to a request for joint action in exercising an extra-judicial supervision of the proceedings of the Returning Board is a most disingenuous document, and it leaves the impression that the signers are now visiting in New Orleans for the single purpose of serving a purely partisan purpose, and not in the character of patriotic citizens who want to see justice done at all hazards. The plea that so long as the mere forms of law are observed it is the duty of good citizens to submit to injustice without a murmur, does not come with a good grace from men the majority of whom for the last sixteen years have been zealous in insisting that the spirit of the law shall not be sacrificed to the form, and in its whole tenor the letter is a direct encouragement for the members of the Returning Board to go ahead and count in Mr. Hayes, whether a majority of the legal votes in the State have been cast for him or not, and it is as distinct a pledge as it is possible for the signers to make, that if the board does not count in Mr. Hayes, no matter whether the count is rightfully or wrongfully made, all their influence and all the influence of the Republican party organization will be wielded in their support.

From the hour of his nomination up to the day of the election, we gave a consistent and zealous support to Mr. Hayes, for the reasons that we believed that, simply on personal grounds, he would make a better President than Mr. Tilden; that, beyond all personal considerations, we believed him to be the representative of sound and wholesome political principles and that if he became President of the United States he would be enabled to perform the duties of his office under far better influences than would be possible in the case of Mr. Tilden. We desired before the election to see Mr. Hayes made the choice of the nation for the position of Chief Magistrate, and we sincerely hope now that a fair canvass of the votes will show that he has been elected. We do not, however, desire to see Mr. Hayes become President through any jugglery, and we feel satisfied that if he is put into the White House by any dubious actions in either Louisiana, South Carolina, or Florida, a death blow will be given to the Republican party. The Republican party cannot afford to have Mr. Hayes made President by any other than fair means, and if the verdict of this Louisiana Returning Board, decided on in secret session, makes him President, it will be impossible for fair-minded people not to believe that, although the forms of law may be obeyed, that its spirit has been most outrageously violated.

This Returning Board, it should be remembered, is a discredited body, and it enters upon its present task of counting the vote of Louisiana for Presidential electors for good reasons for suspicions of its fairness. A Republican House of Representatives condemned the same Board in 1875, and the report of the special committee which investigated its doing in the way of manipulating the returns of 1874 was a unanimous one, Mr. Wheeler, who is now the Republican candidate for the Vice-Presidency, being one of its signers. The following conclusions of this committee are interesting reading just now:

WHEREAS, Said committee has unanimously reported that the Returning Board of that State, in canvassing and compiling said returns and promulgating the results, wrongfully applied an erroneous rule of law, by reason whereof persons were awarded seats in the House of Representatives to which they were not entitled, and persons entitled to seats were deprived of them.

Resolved, That it is recommended to the House of Representatives in Louisiana to take immediate steps to remedy said injustice and to place the persons rightfully entitled in their seats.

Can the Republican candidates afford to be declared the winners in the great contest which has just closed on the strength of a canvass made by this same board sitting in secret session? We do not think it can. Can the representative men of the Republican party who are now in New Orleans afford to refuse to unite with the Democrats in exercising a supervision over the doings of the board, or to give their influence to encourage the board in a proceeding that discredits in advance its verdict if that verdict shall be in favor of the Republican candidates for the Presidency and Vice-Presidency? We do not think they can, and if the present doings and prospective doings in New Orleans do a lasting injury to the Republican party, the men who at this critical juncture are assuming to represent the party will be responsible for it. It is never good policy to do evil that good may come of it, and it is a thousand times preferable that the Democrats shall for the next four years have control of the Executive branch of the Government than that the Republicans shall continue to keep control of it by illegitimate means or by means that there is reasonable ground for suspecting to be illegitimate.

That is the pointed language of a journal that supported Mr. Hayes, and which is published in the intensely partisan Republican city of Philadelphia. It reflects the sentiments of a vast number of that political name.

CLARKSON N. POTTER'S LETTER.

The New York Herald of Wednesday the 22nd inst., contains a long and exceeding important letter from the Hon. Clarkson N. Potter, of New York, on the questions involved or which may be involved in the great Presidential question now agitating the people throughout the country. The able manner in which the matter is discussed and the valuable information which it embodies, have prompted us to give our readers its salient points, referring them to the letter itself for a full perusal. After a long and full examination of the history of the State, of Louisiana as connected with the proceedings of the Republican party, since 1872, in which he recapitulates the various high-handed and unconstitutional acts of the General Government and the fraudulent and nefarious proceedings of the notorious Returning Board in that year and in 1874, he proceeds to examine the question of the proper remedy, should the acts of those years be repeated and the electoral votes of the State given unlawfully to Gov. Hayes, in this emergency. Proceeding on this point, he quotes the provision of the Constitution which declares that on the second Wednesday of February, the Houses of Congress are required to meet in Joint Convention, that the electoral votes may be opened and counted, and asserts incidently, that there needs be no fear, as has been suggested, that the House will not attend and perform its duties strictly and promptly on that occasion. Examining the rights and duties of the Vice President, he lays down the law clearly and convincingly, supported by undoubted authorities and precedents that that officer is restricted to the performance of the duties, simply, of opening and handing the returns to the tellers; whose duty it is to count, and after, "having examined and ascertained the votes, prepare and present a list to the Vice President showing the state of the votes, which list is to be read to the two Houses; whereupon the Vice President declares the result accordingly."

Mr. Potter goes on to show that in the count both Houses must concur, otherwise the votes cannot be received. This has been the practice in Congress down to the present time and the very necessities of the case render any other course impracticable.

These preliminaries being established and understood, he continues by asserting that, under these provisions, illustrated by several well-known cases, which he quotes, it will be competent for either House to take notice of any facts behind the returns, which, to it, may appear irregular and on that ground reject the votes of the State in which the error, fraud or whatever else it may be, occurs.

Should then the electoral vote of Louisiana be rejected and the votes of South Carolina and Florida given to Gov. Hayes, he will have 177 votes and Gov. Tilden 184, and then either Tilden will be elected or there will be no election for President. And it will then be the duty of the House of Representatives, under the direction of the Constitution, to proceed to choose a President by the votes of States, each State having one vote, and the person then chosen will be absolutely and lawfully President of the United States.

After alluding to those who, he says, "talks lightly of having the Vice President or the Senate receive and count the vote of Louisiana against the objection of the House, or of choosing some energetic man President of the Senate, that they may have a forcible officer to land the Republican party after the 4th of March or of an interregnum, in which General Grant shall hold over," and who he says "talk rebellion," he appeals to the better nature and forbearance of the people and expresses his belief that the people will not be found so anxious to sustain fraud to keep the minority in power, or so unwilling to maintain their constitutional rights, as is assumed.

The letter is an exceedingly able one and will repay an attentive perusal.

CLOSE CONTESTS.

The closeness of the present Presidential contest is not wholly unparalleled, although it is rare. John Adams got in by a close squeeze. Mr. Adams had 71 votes, and Jefferson 68. One of Adams' votes was from Virginia, and one from North Carolina. In 1805 Jefferson defeated Adams by only 8 majority, the electoral vote being—Jefferson 73, Adams 65. In 1812 a change of twenty votes in the colleges would have prevented the re-election of President Madison, who received 128 electoral votes, while DeWitt Clinton got 78. In 1836 Mr. Van Buren would have failed of an election had there been a change in 23 electoral votes, as he had but 22 over the number necessary to a choice—and Pennsylvania, having 30 such votes, gave him but a small popular majority. A change of 3,000 in that State's popular vote would have defeated him in the colleges, by sending 30 Whig electors to the Pennsylvania College. As it was, Colonel Johnson, the Democratic candidate for the vice-Presidency, was defeated in the colleges, because Virginia would not support him, her 23 votes being given for William Smith, of Alabama. Col. Johnson was chosen by the Senate, the only instance of the kind known in our history. In 1844 Mr. Polk was chosen through the aid of the New York electors, who were 36 in number, and as Mr. Polk had 170 votes, and the number necessary to a choice was 138—the whole number of electors being 275—he would have had but 134 votes had New York decided against him. Mr. Clay had 105 votes, and had he received New York's vote, he would have been chosen by 141 votes, or by a majority of only 5 votes. The vote of New York was lost to Clay by the running of James G. Birney as an Abolitionist candidate.

THE STATE CANVASSERS.

Governor Bedle has appointed State Senators Abbett, Dayton and Hopper, Democrats, Senators Leaming, Magie and Potts, Republicans, to act as a State Board of Canvassers to canvass and estimate the vote given for Presidential electors and Congress at the recent election. The Board will meet at Trenton on the 28th instant at 3 p. m.

Congress meets one week from next Monday.

It has now been ascertained that the next Legislature of this State will stand a tie (30 Republicans and 30 Democrats) in the House, while the Senate will be Democratic by a majority of one.

Wm. McKee was released from jail at St. Louis on Saturday afternoon, on a telegraphic order from Attorney-General Taft, a pardon having been signed by the President. Wm. O. Avery, released from the penitentiary Friday, on a pardon, left St. Louis for Washington Saturday.

The popular vote for President shows that Mr. Tilden made gains in every State except Rhode Island. The gains for Mr. Tilden in the Union, as compared with 1872, foot up nearly one million votes; and his majority on the popular vote over Hayes is 368,500.

There will be seven State Senators to elect next year in the following counties: Atlantic, Bergen, Cumberland, Hudson, Mercer, Morris and Ocean. Four of these—Atlantic, Bergen, Hudson and Mercer—are now represented by Democrats, the other three by Republicans.

Albert Runyon, the Comptroller who unjustly deprived us and other legally entitled newspapers from the publication of the State Laws last Spring, giving the same to papers of his own party, without regard to the provisions of the law, will now take a back seat.

One of the slates fixed up for the next Legislature is as follows: Leon Abbott, President of the Senate; Capt. Wm. H. Gill, Secretary. Randolph Rabe, (Dem.) Speaker of the House, and John Y. Foster, (Rep.) Clerk, the Democrats to have a majority of the Committees. Ex-Senator Hopper is named as next Comptroller.

The Elizabeth Monitor suggests that no more appropriate place to put the New Jersey Centennial building would be than on the property of the State Fair Association at Waverly. There the building could be seen year after year, and the memories of the Centennial would be revived by those who had been to the great show.

Nine members of a combination of train thieves, who have operated extensively along the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railroad between Cincinnati and the Arkansas line, have just been sentenced to the penitentiary for terms varying from five to eleven years. There are about thirty indictments standing against other members.

Among the names of the gentlemen mentioned in connection with the United States Senatorship from this State are ex-Gov. Parker, Hon. John R. McPherson, late State Senator from Hudson county, Hon. John P. Stockton, Hon. Orestes Cleveland, formerly Representative from the Seventh (Hudson) district in Congress. Hon. Robert Gilchrist, ex-Attorney-General, Hon. Abraham Browning, of Camden, Hon. Ashbel Green, and ex-Chancellor Williamson.

Secretary Z. Chandler said, just before he left New York city Thursday afternoon: "I've got one man already down South, and the Democrats will need a —— fast train to get the inside track of him. I don't propose to be euchred in this matter, and Hayes has got to be the next President, whether he's elected or not." These were the words of the Republican Chairman as reported by General James McQuade, who, with some other gentlemen overheard them when uttered.

THE NORTH IN THE ELECTION.

While Chandler and his allies are concocting schemes for "counting in" a defeated candidate for the Presidency, it may help to cool and temperate citizens towards a just estimate of the drift of popular feeling and public opinion in the North at this time, to recapitulate quietly the practical results in the way of majorities of the recent contest, and to compare with them the results reached in the election of 1872. In 1872 the Grant electors were chosen in all the New England States, in all the Middle, and in all the Western States. In 1876 Tilden electors have been chosen in one of the New England States, in three of the Middle States, and in two of the Western States. Now for the majorities.

SUMMARY.

Total Republican loss in majorities North and West, 1876:

New England States	67,173
Middle States	239,919
Western States	201,069
Total	508,161

In the face of these tremendous figures it may be wise for the unscrupulous partisans who by theirm al-administration and their notorious complicity with public rascalities of every sort have so completely broken down the Republican party in the great North and West, to go on in their shameless defiance of law and their utter disregard of the business interests and the national reputation of the American people. Perhaps, again, it may not be wise for them to do this. Suppose they should venture on Napoleon's experiment of a plebiscite to-morrow in the North and West exclusively!

GENERAL NEWS.

Judge Humphries, of the District of Columbia Court, has given judgment in favor of Admiral Porter and his force for part of their claim for prize money.

The appropriation for river and harbor improvements this winter will be light, as only a small portion of the $5,000,000 appropriated last winter has been expended.

Nine prisoners in the county jail at Columbus, Ohio, overpowered the sheriff Saturday evening and escaped. Four of them were recaptured. The leader of the gang was shot twice before he surrendered.

During a performance at Moore's Opera House at Sacramento, Saturday night, the floor gave way, followed by the gallery and stage, and precipitated over 1,000 people into a livery stable below, killing five outright and wounding about one hundred others, some of them seriously. Among the injured (not seriously hurt) is Eddie Peake of the Swiss bell-ringers. The room was formerly used as an armory and had just been fitted up as a theatre. Saturday night the opera house was opened for the first time, and being the first performance, the hall, which seats one thousand persons, was crowded. The lights were extinguished by the concussion, adding to the confusion, but averting the danger of fire. Hundreds of people crawled from the ruins before the police arrived. The following were taken out dead: S. W. Perry, janitor of the Court House; Frank Meyers and W. J. Forster, compositors in the Record Union office; Henry Vaca and Ezra Woolsen, formerly county treasurer. Many of the wounded are in a critical condition.

Murder Will Out.

A few years ago "August Flower" was discovered to be a certain cure for Dyspepsia and Liver complaint, a few thin Dyspeptics made known to their friends how easily and quickly they had been cured by it. The great merits of GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER became heralded through the country by one sufferer to another, until without advertising, its sale has become immense. Druggists in EVERY TOWN in the United States are selling it.—No person suffering with Sour Stomach, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, indigestion, low spirits, etc., can take three doses without relief. Go to your Druggist, Wm. H. Voorhees, and get a bottle for 75 cents and try it. Sample bottles 10 cents.

A TIME-HONORED SPECIFIC.—The long and successful career of DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL, as contrasted with the speedy collapse of the nostrums devoid of efficacy which have from time to time been puffed into a brief notoriety during the twenty odd years that this celebrated medicine has been sold, affords a proof that the American public continue to repose its confidence in deserving articles only. The PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL has long been recognized as the leading specific for Consumption, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Diphtheria, and all other diseases of the breathing organs. It is, moreover, a certain, speedy, and safe botanic remedy for Dyspepsia, Liver Disorders, Scrofulous Affections, Gravel, Dropsy, Debility, and Constipation. Constantly accumulating evidence of an unimpeachable character establishes the fact that it not only entirely eradicates the diseases to which it is adapted, but also that its action is remarkably prompt and thorough. The crucial test of experience has demonstrated its reliability in every particular. Sold by all druggists. Principal Depot, No. 232 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa. 17no3m

LOOK!
The wildest excitement exists in many localities on account of the immense number of tramps who are perambulating over the country,
Out
of work, and many of them would not work if it was tendered them. The most of them are a ragged, thieving, dirty and worthless crew. The exception can be granted to an occasional few;
For
a whole flock of black sheep is truly a rarity. The general depression of business,—and lack of employment everywhere has forced many to roam in search of work, and others travel, beg, and steal, because they don't want to work. In this connection we wish to call

JERUSALEM ☐ No. 26, A. F. A. M., will confer the third degree next Tuesday evening.

COOPER PETER, the Greenback candidate for President, received only about 400 votes in New Jersey.

GOV. BEDLE has commissioned Dayton Decker and Edward B. Stryker as Coroners of Union county.

GOV. BEDLE has issued his proclamation, designating Thursday, Nov. 30th as a Day of Thanksgiving.

LEAP YEAR is rapidly passing away, and our Plainfield girls who want a loving heart to cling to, must begin to talk business.

ANOTHER side track is being laid from the main line of the railroad track into Boice & Thickstun's Coal Yard on Cherry Street.

A SPECIAL meeting of Co. E, 3rd Reg., will be held at the Armory on Tuesday evening next, at 8 o'clock. By order of Wm. G. Smith, Capt.

MR. L. M. ROCAP has taken the stand known as the "People's Market" on Cherry Street, and proposes selling meats, &c., at low cash prices.

THE Thanksgiving turkey now scans the newspapers with an apprehensive eye, seeking what he don't want to find—the Governor's proclamation.

INDUCEMENTS are offered to builders, mechanics and others, by Wm. E. Marsh, Sr. For further information read his advertisement in another column.

Go where you will about Plainfield, the erection of new dwelling houses greets the eye, which evidences that improvement is not at a stand-still in our beautiful city.

A MEMBER of the Board of School Trustees is to be elected at the approaching Charter Election in place of Mr. Wm. H. Stewart, whose term of office expires at that time.

REMEMBER, ye denizens of the "Third District" that there will be but two polling places at the approaching city election—Laing's Hall and Vail's Real Estate Office, opposite the depot.

INVEST your money in good Bonds and Mortgages, well secured on good improved property. We would call attention to list of Bonds and Mortgages offered for sale by George A. Marsh, opposite Depot.

THE accumulated mud and filth in the receiving basins of the sewers under the railroad bridges was taken out by workmen on Saturday last—and left in a heap along side the road, at least in one instance, Peace Street, until this (Thursday) morning.

THE fourth meeting of the Plainfield Sabbath School Normal Class will be held Monday evening, Nov. 27, in the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association, at 8 o'clock. The subject will be a normal exercise, to be conducted by G. H. Babcock, Esq.

A WISE move has been made by the Common Council in renting the row of buildings known as "Battle Row," on Fourth Street, between Liberty St. and Plainfield Ave., to be converted into a poor house. By so doing an annual expense of from $300 to $400 will be saved the city.

SOME lover of mackerel stole a quarter of a barrel of that kind of fish from the front of R. MacDonald's store on Front Street last Monday evening. "Mac" would be obliged if the thief would return the barrel after he has eaten the fish, which it is hoped will make him so dry as to drink all the poor whiskey in Plainfield.

How many hats have been lost on the election, by men of both political parties, cannot be told. The nearest that we can come to it is to ask Eugene Laing, the Hatter, Front st., this city, where most of those who have lost hats, have bought them of him, because they are of the latest style and moderate in price. He has yet a fine selection of Fall hats on hand, notwithstanding the immense run.

WE are informed that Mr. P. M. French has withdrawn from the firm of P. M. French & Sons, proprietors of the City Flouring Mills, the firm name to be hereafter known as "French Bros." Mr. F. has for many years carried on a successful business on the present site of the City Mills, and now retires from active business to give the same to his sons. The "City Mills" will be properly and successfully managed by his successors.

ON Thursday evening last burglars effected an entrance into the dwelling of Mrs. Mary N. Pyatt, Samptown, and carried off 6 large and 6 small silver spoons and a silver butter knife, valued in all at about $24. Since writing the above we have learned from Mrs. Pyatt that the goods stolen were 6 large silver spoons, 9 silver tea spoons, 2 silver desert spoons, 1 silver butter knife, 1 silver sugar spoon, 2 silver salt spoons, valued at about $40, and marked "M. N. Kelly."

CITY election occurs Tuesday, Dec. 5th, at which time a Mayor, eleven Councilmen, City Judge, &c., are to be elected. At the same time will be elected two Chosen Freeholders. The Republicans meet to-night (Thursday) to frame a ticket to be supported at the approaching election. It will undoubtedly be partisan all the way through, no Democrat being accorded a place on the ticket, as in previous city elections. In the face of the immense reduction of the Republican majority of Plainfield at the late Presidential election, would it not be wise for the Democrats to also draw party lines and put in the field a ticket composed of sterling, honest men of the party, scores of which are to be found residing among us? We want men to represent us in our city affairs who are thoroughly conversant with the wants and needs of our citizens—men who have resided here for years and who represent property. We do not want men nominated who represent no financial interests in our city, who only desire to be elected for the honor of the thing. There are plenty of good, substantial men in the Democratic party of Plainfield who are capable of representing its best interests, and as the Republicans have seen fit to draw the party lines, let the Democrats do the same thing and "fight it out on that line."

Two members of the Board of Chosen Freeholders are to be elected at the approaching charter election.

MR. FRANCES' new dwelling on Fourth Street, opposite the depot, is nearing completion, and will be an ornament to that locality when finished.

THE high wind Sunday night last tore the netting of the Democratic banner to a considerable extent, and the same was taken down on Monday in consequence.

WHEN three good little boys get together of an afternoon, the chances are that there will be either a fight, a window broken, or some stray dog will have a pan tied to his tail.

THE county teachers' examination is ordered for Saturday morning next at 9:30, in Westfield. All applicants for the position of teacher will make their demands accordingly.

MR. F. WORMZER's fine brick dwelling on 5th Street, near Peace, is rapidly nearing completion. Messrs. Kriney & Co. are doing the carpenter work, and Isaac Milburn the mason work.

THE SERVICE OF SONG at the Union Prayer Meeting in rooms of Y. M. C. A. on Saturday evening next, will be conducted by Mr. S. H. Burr. Ladies and gentlemen willing to assist in this service are invited to be present at the opening of the meeting, 7½ o'clock.

THE Post Office Department has ordered that the further issue of Centennial stamped envelopes be discontinued. This order is in accordance with the notice given when they were first issued at the opening of the Centennial Exhibition. All that have been sold and remain unsold will still be valid.

THESE dull and lonesome evenings a man delights to cluster around his fireside, read his local paper, listen to the roaring of the winds and spit in the coal scuttle. There are a great many Democratic families in this county who do not take THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, and it is about time they subscribe.

OUR business friends who have been so much engrossed in election matters that they have overlooked all but things the most pressing, will do well to look about and see if they do not need bill heads, cards, circulars, note heads, or the like, all of which we are ready to print in neat style.

PLAINFIELD Council, No. 62, O. U. A. M., will hold their Third Annual Calico Social, in their Council Rooms, over Reynolds & Stelle's Drug Store, Wednesday, Dec. 6th, 1876. Tickets, admitting gentleman and ladies, including Supper, 50 Cents. The occasion promises to be one of unusual enjoyment.

JOHN WILL has reduced the price of peanuts to seven cents per quart. At his stand on Front Street, opposite Cherry, may be procured every kind of fruit, foreign and domestic, nuts of all kinds, &c. Try his Illinois hickory nuts. Peanuts fresh roasted at all times. Will's prices are lower than other establishments and his goods fresh.

WAR has finally been declared between the United States and Turkey. The first general engagement will take place next Thursday, Nov. 30, and in case this battle should not prove decisive another onslaught will be made on Dec. 25th. Both wings of the Turkeyish army will be demoralized, and, in short, the stuffing knocked out of them. "On to victory or the grave-y!"

WE call the attention of our readers to the fact that they can now purchase a first-class sewing machine and attachments at a much lower figure than heretofore, by calling at the Hat Store of Mr. E. M. Laing, Front Street, and consulting Mr. Theo. Mace, who has a large variety on hand and is determined to sell them at panic prices.—Inspect his stock before purchasing.

WE notice that in various parts of the State campaign clubs have resolved to maintain their organizations for the present, at least. This is a good move and should be adopted in Plainfield, where we have three fine campaign clubs. Let there be a consolidation, and rooms procured, where meetings may be held and free access by the members had. Organization of the Democracy told at the last election in Plainfield, by reducing materially the majority of our opponents.

THE young ladies of the German Reformed Church on Fifth St., beyond Peace, propose to hold a Fair about the Christmas Holidays for the benefit of their church. Persons in the several Protestant churches desiring to aid this worthy enterprise may leave their contributions of money or of articles for sale at Becker's Dyeing Establishment, opposite Parse & Whitney's store, on Front St. This is a commendable cause, and we hope that our citizens will rally to the support of these young ladies.

WM. MOORE, Esq., owner of the City Hotel property, this city, has purchased the hotel property in Somerville, known as the County House, James Van Pelt, proprietor, who, in turn has sold out his interest in the same to Messrs. Phineas Brintnall and James Stanton. The new proprietors will take possession on the 1st of next month. We wish the new landlords success in their venture. The public may rest assured that the "County House" will be kept as a hotel should be kept—in first-class style.

THE following books have recently been added to the Y. M. C. A. Library: My Opinions and Betsey Bobbets'; A Princess of Thule, Black; Margaret, Lyndon; works of Wm. E. Channing, D. D.; St. Philips, by author of "Rutledge"; Frank Warrington, by the same; Boston Paths, Ella Tompson; The Widower, Julia P. Smith; Lena Rivers, Mary Jane Holmes; West Lawn, by the same. The following are to be added Nov. 23: Widow Bedott Papers, Francis M. Whitcher; Nelly Kinnard's Kingdom, Amanda M. Douglas; Drifted Asunder, by the same; Tennyson's Poems; In Doors and Out, Oliver Optic; the Koran; Wych Hazel, by the author of "Wide, Wide World"; and Philip Nolan's Friends, E. E. Hale.

Two of our well-known citizens, Messrs. John W. Laing and Elisha Coriell, narrowly escaped meeting with serious injuries on Thursday evening last. They were driving through Front Street, seated in a top buggy, with Mr. Coriell handling the reins, when opposite the Post Office Mr. C. gave the mare he was driving a smart cut with the whip, and in stooping over to put the whip back into its socket, he allowed the reins to slacken somewhat, which gave the animal a start and she commenced to run, although under the control by the driver. When opposite Voorhees' Drug Store, the buggy collided with a farmer's wagon, the driver of which was pulling across the street. In an instant the fore wheel of the buggy was smashed and the buggy overturned. The occupants were dragged a short distance before the animal was caught by bystanders. Mr. Coriell received some bruises and scratches, while Mr. Laing escaped unhurt. It was a narrow escape, however.

MESSRS. Codington, McNabb & Co., our enterprising coal and lumber merchants, have purchased of the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company, the old Sherman property, corner of Central Avenue and Third Streets, which they propose to convert into a coal and lumber yard to accommodate their fast increasing trade. The property consists of a block of ground bounded by Madison Ave., Central Ave., 3d St. and the Central R. R. The price paid was $10,000. The above firm will remove from the plot all the buildings on it except the "Sherman house," and will transfer all their coal and lumber to the same as soon as practicable. The Central R. R. Co. will run a siding into the new yard for the convenience of the firm in unloading coal, lumber, &c. Messrs. C., McN. & Co. have also purchased the plot of ground owned by Mrs. McDermott, opposite the Sherman property and adjoining Spicer & Hubbard's Planing Mill, which they intend to use in connection with their business. The property on which this firm's lumber and coal yard is now located, belongs to Levi Hatfield, Esq.

Go to the Bankrupt Sale next Saturday.

COUNCILMAN E. C. Mulford is erecting a handsome brick residence on Fifth St., above Peace, Grecian style.

MESSRS. Clifton & Vail will offer the balance of their stock of groceries, fruits, &c., at public auction on Saturday evening, Nov. 25th, at 7 o'clock. See adv.

MR. J. VETTERLEIN will sell the goods in the store lately occupied by B. & J. Vetterlein, hardware dealers, Front Street, at Bankrupt Sale, commencing on Saturday, Nov. 25th.

THE Democrats and Conservatives will assemble at Laing's Hall, next Wednesday evening, for the purpose of nominating a Mayor, Common Councilmen, City Judge, Assessor, Collector, two Freeholders, two Constables, three Judges and one Clerk of Election for each polling district and three Commissioners. Let every one interested in the welfare of our city be there.

ABOUT these days the turkey, goose, chicken and other barn fowl, have selected high roosting places in anticipation of the Governor's Proclamation regarding Thanksgiving Day, but friend Dean of the "Avon Park House," has secured a sufficient number of the "birds" to warrant our stating that on Thanksgiving Eve, at his hostelry, the party throwing the highest number of troches will be entitled to ye turkey, goose, duck, chicken, or whatsoever may be "put up" at the time of ye "shaking." Go early and secure your Thanksgiving Dinner.

Central Railroad Appointments.

The Board of Directors of the Central Railroad of New Jersey have made the following appointments: William W. Stearns of Elizabeth, late Superintendent of the Long Branch division, to be assistant general superintendent to Col. Moore of the Central Railroad, its divisions and branches in New Jersey, and W. S. Polhemus to be assistant general superintendent of the Lehigh and Susquehanna division and branches. Mr. Stearns is the son of the late John O. Stearns, the first Superintendent and builder of a good part of the road. He is a favorite with everybody, possessing many of the traits of character which belonged to his late father.

Grand Encampment of Odd Fellows.

The following officers of the Grand Encampment I. O. O. F. were elected in Trenton on Monday last: Charles Carpenter, of Mount Sinai Encampment, No. 5, Jersey City, Grand Patriarch: Thomas R. Blackwood, of Fame Encampment, No. 26, Camden, M. E. G. H. P.; G. Ford, of Industry Encampment, No. 1, Paterson, R. W. G. S. Warden; Lewis Parker, Jr., of South Trenton Encampment, No. 40, Trenton, R. W. G. Scribe; Oliver Pierce, of Noah's Dove Encampment, No. 28, Elizabeth, R. W. G. Treasurer; John E. Sennier, of Washington Encampment, No. 18, Newark, R. W. G. J. Warden; Wm. B. Nutt, of Trenton Encampment, No. 2, Trenton, R. W. G. Representative to the G. L. U. S.

After the officers were installed the M. W. G. Patriarch appointed James A. Wells, of Mount Sinai Encampment, No. 5, Jersey City, W. G. Sentinel; Amos Howell, of Trenton Encampment, No. 2, W. G. O. Sentinel: John W. Wood, of Mount Ararat Encampment, No. 3, Newark, W. G. Marshal.

Wm. Irving Bishop.

The Y. M. C. A. have arranged for an entertainment by Mr. Bishop on Thanksgiving Night at the Congregational, Church, being an exposure of the frauds of the so-called Spiritualists. The feats will be performed in the full light and in the presence of the audience and afterward fully explained by Mr. Bishop. This entertainment is offered in the hopes to counteract the evil influences of a religious fanaticism which has made dupes of many thousands all over the world. Mr. Bishop is endorsed by many of the most prominent clergymen and other eminent gentlemen of the country. We call attention to one of many criticisms which we copy from the N. Y. Evening Post of, May 19, 1876:

"One of the most remarkable entertainments ever given in this city took place last evening at Chickering Hall. The announcement had been made in the daily press that Mr. W. Irving Bishop, whose private exhibition have called forth expressions of admiration from the favored few who have been permitted to witness them, would publicly expose the fraudulent practices of the men and women who describe themselves as 'Spiritual Mediums;' and as a consequence the house was literally packed with clergymen, lawyers and men of science. * * * The Rev. Dr. Charles F. Deems and Dr. Alexander B. Mott were chosen a committee to supervise the preparation of the apparatus, and pronounce upon its character. * * When the committee had pronounced themselves entirely satisfied with the performance, but unable to account for the wonderful phenomena presented, Mr. Bishop explained the whole secret, and to prove that the explanation was genuine, reproduced a number of his feats in plain view of the audience. His anotomical peculiarities, his strength, his surprising agility and his cool nerves were successively brought into play, to the great delight of the spectators, who showered him with hearty plaudits. The whole entertainment was in the highest degree satisfactory, and it is to be hoped that Mr. Bishop may be induced to repeat it.—His manner of performing the tricks he undertakes is far superior to that of any professional 'Medium' who has performed in New York within our recollection."

Full particulars are given in the advertisement as printed in another column.

Personalia.

We learn that Dr. Stillman, Jr., has received an appointment on the staff of the new St. Francis Hospital in New York. This institution accommodates about 250 patients and is very complete in its appointments.

Hon. John Eagen, of Elizabeth, may well feel proud of the large majority received by him for Assembly—over eight hundred—the highest majority yet received by any one in his District. Mr. Eagen is worthy of the honor conferred upon him, which shows that he has the confidence of the people he represents.

We are sorry to learn of the illness of Mr. Robert Freeman, who resides on Kensington Avenue, he having contracted a cold in overseeing the construction of new houses being erected by him.

We hear it mentioned in prominent political circles that Hon. Wm. H. Gill, of Elizabeth, is likely to be chosen as Secretary of the next Senate of our State Legislature. Mr. Gill is eminently qualified for the position and deserves recognized reward for his services in the cause of Democracy. We heartily second his nomination.

We learn with sorrow of the bereavement of Gen. J. Madison Drake, of Elizabeth, he having lost two promising young children in the last week from diptheria. Mrs. Drake has also been very ill from the same disease, but is now convalescent. The Gen. and his afflicted family have our heartfelt sympathy.

FIRE MATTERS.

Warren Hose Co. No. 3 will give an Invitation Hop at Laing's Hall, next Wednesday evening (Thanksgiving Eve). The occasion will undoubtedly be one of enjoyment, as the "Warren" boys never do things by halves.

An alarm of fire was rung from the tower in this city yesterday (Thursday) at half past 12 o'clock, which called out the entire Department, but happily proved to be a false one. It seems that the engineer of Pettibone & Co's Mill, cor. of Richmond St. and North Avenue, proceeded to blow the whistle for the commencement of work (half past 12), when he found upon letting go the whistle cord that something was wrong, causing the whistle to continue its screaming, which was taken up by the residents in this part of the city as indicating a fire at the mill, thence the alarm. Upon investigation it was found that the spring which closes the valve of the whistle was broken, and to stop it, it was necessary to mount the roof, which he did as speedily as possible and closed the whistle.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

Tuesday night last a general raid was made on the contents of clothes lines belonging to Messrs. Judson and Geo. Brown, Deer Street, and Mr. Wm. Smalley, Craig Place. The thieves succeeded in getting quite a harvest in the three places. Not content with taking the contents of Mr. Smalley's line, they also stole the milk pitcher from the stoop and then maliciously broke the same on a hitching post.

The ground in front of the stores owned by Mr. Wm. E. Marsh, Sen., Somerset St., have been greatly improved by the flagging of the entire front with blue stone flagging. Mr. David Thickstun did the work in a very creditable manner.

PROCEEDINGS COMMON COUNCIL.

FRIDAY EV'G, Nov. 17, 1876.

Council met pursuant to adjournment.

Members all present except Messrs. Tier and Young.

Pres. Mr. Smith in the chair.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Mr. Brown presented following claims:—Joseph Cutter, groceries, $77.38. On motion, referred to Com. on Alms. F. B. Gillette, salary, $62.50. On motion, referred to Com. on Salaries, Offices & Elections. J. W. Laing, horse hire, $7.50. On motion, referred to Com. on Sts. & Pub. Health.

Mr. Thorn, from Special Com. on procuring Ballot Boxes, reported the same as nearly completed, to cost not more than $4.50 per box. On motion, report received and Com. continued.

Mr. Mulford, from Com. on Sewers and Assessments, report as follows:

On Assessment and Map of Com'rs on Front St., from Grove St. to the city line at Evona, they find correct, and recommend that the same be put in the hands of the Collector. On motion, report received and recommendation adopted.

On Assessment and Map of Com'rs on Plainfield Ave., they find correct, and recommend that the same be put in the hands of the Collector. On motion, report received and recommendation adopted.

On Assessment and Maps of Com'rs on Linnfield Ave., they would recommend that three Com'rs, members of the Common Council, be appointed in accordance with the act passed and approved by the Legislature of New Jersey, April 4th, 1873. On motion, report received and recommendation adopted.

Mr. Brown moved that the chairman of this Council appoint Com. relative to Linnfield Ave. Adopted. The Chairman appointed as that Com., Messrs. Brown, Thorn and Mulford.

Mr. Ryder, from Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps, reported favorably on petition of Geo. H. Babcock and others for lamp on corner of Union and 9th Sts., and recommended that the petition be granted. On motion, report received and recommendation not adopted.

The same Com. reported correct claim of Berry & Thorn, $13.15. On motion, report received and claim referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. French presented Com'n from John Rafferty for permission to withdraw his petition for license. On motion, request granted.

Mr. Simpson, from Aud. Com., reported correct the following claims: Berry & Thorn, $13.15; Suydam & Jackson, $39.25; E. N. Miller, assignee, (3 bills) $699.44, flagging. On motion, report received and warrants ordered drawn for same, Mr. Harris voting nay on bills of E. N. Miller, assignee.

Mr. French, from Alms Com., reported the following claims correct: P. Muldoon, $18; T. Pruden, $20; M. McNierney, $20; Jno. Harding, (2 bils) $15; Jno. M. Schorb, $48; A. S. Coriell, $5; T. J. Gillies, $4.30; French & Martin, $5; S. A. Hope, $8; M. B. Long, $10; Coddington, McNabb & Co., (2 bills) $6; R. MacDonald, (2 bills) $158.00; T. Flynn, $12; Joseph S. Cutter, $77.38. On motion, report received and claims referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Voorhees, from Com. on Printing, reported correct claim of C. G. Crawford, $14. On motion, report received and claim referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Voorhees offered a res. that the Corp. Counsel be instructed to proceed at once against delinquents for non-payment of flagging of sidewalks, &c., and that the Com. on Laws & Ords. see that the matter is attended to. Adopted, Mr. Mulford voting nay.

Mr. French offered a res. that the buildings known as "Battle Row," be rented by this city for the purpose of a poor house, for the yearly rental of $400 per year, said building comprising 10 houses, capable of accommodating 3 families each; said buildings to be rented for one year with the privilege of five years more.

Mr. Mulford moved to amend—"with the privilege of one or more years up to five, with the same yearly rental." Amendment carried. Res., as amended, adopted.

Mr. Brown moved that when Council adjourn it adjourn to meet one week from tonight (Nov. 24) at 7½ o'clock. Carried.

Mr. Mulford moved that the petition of Evan Jones for a lamp on Putnam Ave., which was not granted, be referred back to the Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps for reconsideration. Carried.

Mr. Voorhees offered a res. that the Com. on Alms be requested to make enquiries as to cost of fixing up "Battle Row" as a poor house, and report at their earliest convenience. Adopted.

Council then adjourned.

GRANT'S THREE SPEECHES.

"Let us have peace," said President Grant,
As he seated himself in the chair of state;
But all of his words have been words of cant,
And all of his acts have been acts of hate.

"Let no guilty man escape," said President Grant,
When justice was hunting the Government thieves;
But his terrible threat was ridiculous rant,
And he quickly repented by granting reprieves.

"The count must be honest," says President Grant,
"For fraud in elections, we know, never pays;"
"A fair and just count" is what we all want,
"And Kellogg can do it—and elect Mr. Hayes."

STATE ITEMS.

It is a matter worthy of note that Gov. Tilden has a popular majority of about a million of the white votes of the country.

Annexation with Jersey City is talked of favorably by many of the largest property owners and tax-payers of Bayone.

A new time table will go into effect on the Erie Railroad next Monday. On account of the hard times the number of trains will be reduced.

In consequence of the scarlet fever breaking out in the State Normal Schools, Trenton, the pupils were sent home on Monday, and the schools closed until Dec. 8.

The State Prison contains 839 convicts, including 40 females, and the number is increasing so rapidly that more room is needed. About 400 men are at work on shoes. The daily cost per prisoner is a little more than 11 cents.

One firm of butchers at Communipaw slaughtered 900 head of cattle for shipment for Europe on Friday on the steamer Egypt. Another firm sent the same amount by the White Star steamer.

James Mulrooney, a boy who resided in New Brunswick, accidentally shot and killed himself while out hunting on Thursday afternoon last, on Mahlon Runyon's farm, near the Landing Bridge.

The Supreme Court has decided that money paid as bonus or interest at usurious rates can be recovered. The decision was rendered in the case of Robert McIntosh against Stewart Brown, both of Freehold. McIntosh, who is a boss mason, borrowed money several times from Brown, and paid him usurious interest. He sued to recover in the Monmouth County Circuit Court, and the decision was in his favor.—Brown appealed to the Supreme Court, which has now rendered a decision sustaining the court below.

J. V. N. Wyckoff, of Dutch Neck, heard a strange noise in his field last week, and on going out found a large Arctic owl sitting on the fence, with a flock of crows around him. He shot the owl, which measured four feet ten inches from tip to tip of the wings and two feet from head to tail.

The Paterson Board of Aldermen have decided to buy a steam road roller, to cost $4,000. They appropriated $10,000 for the current expenses of the Board of Education, ordered fire-escapes to be placed on the public schools, and presented an ordinance requiring them on the mills and shops.

According to the official returns the majority for Tilden in New Jersey is 12,445. That decides the 12,000 business. And yet Zach. Chandler and his followers claimed New Jersey for Hayes the day after election, the same as they have since been claiming the southern states.

A boy named James Mulrooney, while out hunting on the farm of Mahlon Runyon, near the Landing bridge, New Brunswick, shot and killed himself accidentally. He was standing with his chin on the muzzle of his gun, with the hammer at full cock, and carelessly striking the hammer with his knees the gun went off, the charge entering his brain and causing instant death.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A TEXAS COURT SCENE.

The court was in session; the presiding judge occupied the chair of state with all becoming dignity; the prisoner at the bar, arranged for alleged cruelty to animals, sat with bowed head while the prosecuting attorney hurled his thunderbolts, and gave to the case and the prisoner the darkest coloring. The jury nodded until the speaker commenced berating the counsel for defense—using expressions not over complimentary, and then the six pricked up their ears and listened. The counsel for the defense reminded the speaker that he was not in the habit of receiving such high compliments in open court. But the prosecutor, not noticing the interruption, continued to send his shafts of sarcasm and abuse with a liberal hand. A table stood between these two loving disciples of Kent, and the much abused counsel mounting it begun to lay his cane about the broad shoulders of the speaker with a touch which showed how much he was in earnest. "Lay on, Mac," cried a voice from the crowd. "Whatsoever thy hands find to do, do it with all thy might," shouted another. The belabored attorney, seizing a chair, hurled it at his opponent, but it missed its mark and went crashing against the wall opposite. The cries of the judge on the bench for "Order! order!" were drowned in the confusion.

"Arrest the combatants," cried the judicial functionary. One of the attendant officers started for the hero of the game, but hadn't quite reached him when a friend of that lawyer knocked the officer down. The judge, seeing the turn of affairs, descended from his lofty seat, and, taking a six-shooter from the floored officer, said that he would restore order in the court, at the same time waving the deadly weapon over his head. The crowd knew the judge too well to doubt for a moment that he meant what he said, and stood not upon the order of their going, but went at once. When the clouds (created by the passage of musty law books, etc., through the air during the conflict) begun to clear up, and somewhat of the dignity court restored, the judge said "that he regretted such a thing should have happened in a Texas court, and regretted it the more that his court should be the scene of such a disgraceful affair; that in the future when lawyers could not control their tempers in his court he would give them an opportunity to repair to a more suitable field, where they might satiate their blood."

The attorneys were fined twenty-five dollars each, and the gentleman who floored the officer was called on to pay $100 share in the entertainment.

A DISGUSTED WIDOW.

Capt. W——— has just returned from the Warren Springs. The Captain is a widower. At the Springs was a widow who rather set her cap for the Captain. The girls told him to look out, and the Captain replied, well he was ready.

Sitting out in the portico one evening, the cool breeze fanning like a ten-cent palm-leaf, and thinking of his daughters far away at school, the widow moved up close by and opened conversation.

"I hear, Captain, you have grown-up daughters."

"Yes, madam, I have."

"How I should like to see their pictures."

"I will show you a picture of my eldest daughter," said the Captain handing her one.

"Oh, such a sweet face," said the widow; and such a fine eye! Isn't she called like you, Captain?"

"I don't know, madame, that she is."

"It is a wonder to me, Capt. W———, you do not get married."

"Well, ma'am, I never think of it; for the woman I'd have might not have me, and then, you know, vice-versa."

"Yes, but what kind of a lady would suit you?" and the widow looked her sweetest.

It was right here the Captain's wonderful nerve forsook him, but setting his eye steadily at the widow's he hardened his heart and replied: "Madam, she must be ninety-five years old to a second, and worth two hundred thousand dollars."

"It is getting so chilly out here I must go for my shawl," said the widow; and she looked frigid zones at the Capt. as she brushed him by with a toss of her head.

DIPTHERIA.

Diptheria appears in three varieties, which are thus briefly described: 1. Fever, severe pains in the back and limbs, and very great prostration. There may be no soreness of the throat, but small white specks will be noticed on the tonsils. 2. Large patches of false membrane both on the tonsils and back of the throat; but the glands of the neck do not become swollen. 3. True malignant diphtheria, with swelling of the glands of the neck and under the jaw; profuse and often offensive exudations in the mouth and throat; more or less discharge from the nostrils.—Simple treatment will usually cause a recovery in a majority of cases under the first and second varieties. Chlorate of potash, tannin, and sulphate of iron, put dry upon the tongue and allowed to dissolve slowly, are found the most efficient remedies in the early stages of the disease. The dose should be small and repeated every hour. Chlorate of potash is, perhaps the best and most simple remedy for home use. But the advice of a good physician should be sought on the first symptoms of this dangerous disease.

DIDN'T MAKE A CENT.

An unknown man entered a hosiery store on Woodward avenue yesterday and asked to be shown "a few socks." When he learned the price per pair of woolen ones he put them aside and said:

"I guess I'll keep on wearing cotton ones. They say if you wear 'em right along through the winter your feet don't get cold."

Some cotton socks were handed out, and he persuaded the dealer to drop from twenty to fifteen cents per pair. Then he said:

"I can buy the same kind as these in Toledo for ten cents."

"It doesn't seem possible," replied the dealer. "Will you swear to it?"

"I will. I'll make affidavit to the fact."

The dealer told him to go around to a justice, make the affidavit, and he should have the four pairs at ten cents per pair. The stranger was as good as his word, and he chuckled and chuckled over his shrewdness until the document was made out and had been sworn. Then the justice remarked:

"A dollar is the fee!"

Something came over the stranger about that date. His knees wobbled a little, and he swallowed as if something choked him. He handed over the dollar, walked out, and the four pairs of socks are still left on the shelf. If the shrewd chap made any remarks to himself, he probably whispered:

"Virtue is its own reward, and you are one hundred and fifty pounds of fool!"—Detroit Free Press.

MORGAN'S
SPARKLING
APOLLINARIS
Natural Mineral Water.

The attention of the public is invited to the above celebrated Water, the qualities of which will be briefly described; and in presenting it to the public the proprietor feels it his duty to give, at the same time, its chemical analysis, which has been carefully and faithfully accomplished by the celebrated Dr. Kirchhoff, and found, in 16 oz. at a temperature of 70 deg., to give the following results:

Acid, Carbonic,	47.96
Soda, Muriate,	3.67
" Sulphide,	2.80
" Phosphate,	a trace
" Potass,	a trace
" Carbon,	9.65
Magnesia, Carbon,	3.29
Lime, Carbon,	.46
Oxide Iron,	.04
Alumina,	.12

By a careful examination of the above, the Carbonates and Sulphides will be found in greater proportion, and the Chlorides (common salt) in a lesser one, than in any other mineral water, including Ems, Vichy, Seltzer or Wiesbaden. These Waters, containing the Chlorides in excess, prevent their continuous use. Several hypotheses have been advanced as to the action of the Alkaline Mineral Water. The fact that the ashes of the mucus become less tenacious upon the addition of Carbonates, seems certainly to indicate that Carbonates play an important role in the formation of mucus, and that, in dilute solutions they are not only capable of exciting the Ciliary movements through the entire digestive organs, but will re-establish the [illegible] or [illegible] Ciliary vibrations. The use of MORGAN'S APOLLINARIS WATER has the most wonderful results, and the highest recommendation that could be given is the fact that it is strongly recommended by parties whom no one can accuse of being easily deceived by therapeutic results, viz: the learned professors of the Vienna schools; while in London, by Sir Henry Thomson, where its constant use in Kidney disease has given it unparalleled success. The Therapeutic properties of the Apollinaris may be given as Antacide, Tonic, slightly Chalybeate, Aperient, Anti-[illegible] and Restorative.

Its use in the following diseases has been attended with perfect success:

Chronic Catarrh of the Stomach.

When there is a disagreeable feeling of pressure and fullness, which is increased by eating, filling the stomach with gas, caused by decomposition of food, the gastric fluid being abnormal, eructations of gas, heartburn, and the appetite for hunger is altered [illegible] In these cases a goblet of the Water taken half an hour before meals, will be found of great value.

In Affections of the Throat,

such as dryness, hoarseness, difficulty of breathing, enlargement of the glands, the Water will be found to combine with any mucus that may be present, and hasten its ejection. To persons under treatment for Consumption, the quantity of Oxygen will be increased, and also the red blood corpuscles. For those who are delicate the water may be warmed to any temperature.

For affections of the Bladder, Kidneys, Stone or Gravel, the dissolving power of the Alkaline Carbonate Soda, as [illegible], Congestion of the Liver, caused by obstruction or pressure of the Veins (or gall ducts), enlargement of the whole organ, the APOLLINARIS is particularly beneficial, for the Alkalies, in the form in which they enter the body, can undoubtedly be used for a long time. For complaints peculiar to females, Amenorrhœa, Dysmenorrhœa or Leucorrhœa, which are essentially perversions of nutrition, the combinations contained in APOLLINARIS, viz: the Bicarbonate and Sulphide of Soda, will be found to increase that portion of the blood which forms the different tissues.

In cases of Fever, especially amongst children where medicines are never given, equal parts of new milk and the Water, will be found not only refreshing, but will also reduce the temperature to the natural state, while it increases the secretion of the different organs.

The European press have been unanimous in their eulogy of the merits of this truly called "King of Waters."

Agent for Plainfield.

NEW JERSEY
Enamel Paint Company,
RARITAN, NEW JERSEY.
Manufacturers of
Bradley's Enamel Paint.
Mixed Ready for Use, in any shade, Tint or Color desired.

THESE Paints are composed of the purest and best materials known to painters; the principal ingredients being Pure White LEAD, ZINC, and LINSEED OIL, which are made to unite in a homogeneous mass by the addition of other materials which add greatly to the durability, elasticity, beauty and strength of the Paint. The whole are chemically combined so that the pigments are held in permanent solution, thus forming a new compound which dries on the surface and adheres firmly to it, thus forming a Smooth, Glossy, Firm, Elastic, Beautiful and Durable Paint.

The Oil, which is the real life of the Paint, cannot leave it and be absorbed by the substance to which it is applied, as it does in paints mixed in the ordinary way, & thus leave the pigment dry and chalky, to wash & rub off in few months. This paint is unaffected by changes of temperature, is perfectly impervious to the action of water, is well adapted to all classes of work, & is in every way a better paint for either inside or outside work or boat painting than any other Paint known to the trade, and will last at least three times as long as the best Lead and Oil mixed in the ordinary way.

These Paints are Ready for use.
Are easily applied by any one, require no mixing, stirring or addition of dryers.

Liberal Inducements to Dealers.
And full satisfaction guaranteed to their Customers.

Sold by the Gallon, Keg or Barrel. Orders attended to promptly. For Price List and Sample Color Card, Address,

CAUTION!

The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Theo. A. Carman some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filled over one thousand pages and council were over two weeks in summing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an upright iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing stratum. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is of steel, made sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Carman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defence contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement had been fully proved.

TAX NOTICE.

The State, County, Township and Fire Taxes in Plainfield Township for the year 1876 are now due and payable to me before the first day of December next. Taxes remaining unpaid on the first of December, 1876, will be returned to a Justice of the Peace for collection, and 12 per cent. per annum added. I will receive taxes from 9 o'clock a. m. to 4 o'clock p. m., on every day from October second to December first, (Sundays excepted) at my office in Coward's Building, Cherry St., near Front.

The Court of Appeals in cases of taxation will sit at Laing's Hall, in Plainfield, on the fourth Tuesday in November next, at two o'clock, p. m.

L. E. CLARK, Collector.
Plainfield, Oct. 2, 1876. o13tf

Assignees' Notice.

Notice is hereby given to the creditors of Charles N. Hildreth, that all claims against his estate must be exhibited to the subscriber, his assignee, under oath or affirmation before the Thirteenth day of December next, being three months from the date of the assignment, or be forever barred from coming in for a dividend of the estate; and said creditors are further notified that a list of the claims against the said Charles N. Hildreth will be filed with the Surrogate of the County of Union, before the ensuing January term of the Orphan's Court, when exceptions thereto may be filed by any person interested.

L. E. CLARK, Assignee.
Dated November 13, 1876. 17n-6t

POETRY.

STANZAS.

How blessed are the beautiful!—the world bows down to them,
With sunshine and with melody the tide of life they stem;
They meet the light of loving eyes, the low and thrilling tone,
The homage of the willing heart breathed forth at Beauty's throne.

How blessed are the gifted ones!—the starry minds of earth,
Crowned with the royalty of soul, the spirit's conscious worth;
For silence waits upon their words with hushed and calm appeal,
The winged words of thought and power, their lofty birthrights seal.

How blessed are the fondly-loved!—for the sweet and watchful care,
That hovers round their gentle steps, like a breath of heavenly air;
For all the wealth of tenderness, for life's most envied dower,
To win that gift of priceless love, the sad earth's brightest flower.

Oh! far more blest to whom the strength of such deep love is given,
And the undying fount within, the sacred boon of Heaven,—
To pour those healing waters forth, even though they flow in vain,
And win from other bosoms nought but cold regard again,

Even though the sad and humble tears of wronged affections flow,
There is a spell of soothing still in that indignation throe;
The homage won from other hearts, the cup of joy and pride,—
What is it to the sunny waves from holier springs supplied.

MRS. GREEN'S SON-IN-LAW.

"Well, Sarepta, I've found out all about them."

Mrs. Green sat herself down in front of the fire, took off her bonnet, and shed upon her daughter a smile of great satisfaction.

"Found out all about whom, mamma?" Sarepta questioned, with sweet demureness.

"Well, upon my word, you are the most obtuse girl of my acquaintance. When you saw me come in just now, you understood that I'd been out walking, I suppose? Yes? Well, I'm glad you did. You know I don't often go out walking without an object, I suppose! I'm encouraged to find that you understand that, too. And you remember those two young men we met twice yesterday, when we went to your Aunt Jane? Of course you do; you needn't answer that. Well, now, knowing that I have been out, and with an object, does it occur to you that I went to find out all I could about those two young men?"

It will be seen that Mrs. Green had the gift of speech in addition to her many other attainments. Her daughter, too, was a fair practitioner, in her native tongue, but on this occasion she merely said:

"But I don't see why you should want to find out anything about them."

"Of course not," responded the matron. "But if I were your daughter, and you were my mother, you would understand it well enough."

"Why, what in the world has that got to do with it, mamma?"

But the young lady still kept her eyes rather too persistently fixed upon her little bit of embroidery, and it is to be feared that she was fencing with her parent.

"You know well enough that it has everything to do with it," responded Mrs. Green. "When two handsome young men meet us together in the street, and then put themselves out of the way to run against us again, you don't suppose they take such pains to get another look at me, do you?"

"They might. I'm sure you're worth looking at twice," responded the daughter, very prettily.

"That's nonsense, and you know it. They wanted to see you. You're young and rather good looking, although you are not altogether my style; and there are not so many young and pretty girls in this village that strange young men are going to neglect any of them."

"Oh, mamma! How you talk."

"I talk like a prudent woman, and act like one; so I went out to find out all about those two young men. One of them will do very well indeed."

"Which one is it who will do?" inquired Sarepta, laughing, and beginning now to show a little shy interest in the subject.

"That one with an Ulster overcoat on," replied the elder lady, shooting a very sharp glance at the young one.

"Why, they both wore Ulsters," put in Sarepta, falling into the trap with great simplicity.

"Aha! I thought so," chuckled the astute Mrs. Green. "You noticed them a little, while they noticed you a good deal. Well, it's the tallest one, I mean; the one with the dark complexion and black mustache. Charles Edgerton his name is."

"The other one is much the best looking and the most gentlemanly, I think," said the daughter.

"George Merton. Oh, yes; but he won't do at all. He is handsome, and has plenty of talent, too; but he has neither money nor position. Mr. Edgerton has plenty of both, so he's the one that will do."

"Why, I thought"—and then Sarepta stopped and bit her lip.

"Thought what?"

"Nothing; only that we were doing a rather queer thing, discussing these two ge——en as if they belonged to us."

"Queer, maybe, but prudent," and the prudent mother withdrew to meditate upon the advantages of a son-in-law with both money and position.

The fact goes without saying that there is more or less wickedness in this world. If there were not good Mrs. Green would have been spared the surprise, mingled with humiliation, that fell upon her that same evening.

Mother and daughter had set themselves down beside the evening lamp to chat and sew, and to have an altogether cozy evening, when the bell rang, and Mr. Charles Edgerton and Mr. George Merton were shown into the room.

Mrs. Green was almost astonished out of all courtesy in contemplating the impertinence of the young men of our day, who go calling without waiting for introductions. Her surprise was by no means lessened, but the course of her contemplation was turned when her daughter showed what the girls of our day are capable of, by welcoming the two gentlemen very serenely, and introducing them in a very matter-of-fact way to her mother.

The explanation of it was that these young persons had met in the merry Summer time in an out of the way country nook, where Sarepta was sojourning with a city cousin, friend of the Messrs. Edgerton and Merton.

Mrs. Green accepted the situation gracefully, and was pleasantly courteous as became so polite a lady. But when the call had ended, and mother and daughter were left again to each other's companionship, Sarepta listened to some animated remarks.

"A nice trick you played me!" said Mrs. Green. "Let me go out asking questions about those two men, and you knew all about them all the while! Why didn't you tell me?"

"Why, mamma, I didn't know that you wanted to learn anything about them. The first I knew you had found out all I had to tell, and more too; and so what was the use?"

"Well, you might have told me before. And how was it you didn't recognize them when we met on the street?"

"I did; I bowed and they lifted their hats the first time we met them. You did not see them at all that time, for you were busy looking at Mrs. Budes and her new cloak."

"The first time! Did we meet them three times instead of twice, then?"

"I did not count the times, but I think it must have been three."

"Humph? Well, I've nothing to do now but to see that no trouble comes of all your smartness. To begin with, I noticed that Mr. Merton was rather more attentive to you this evening than there was any necessity for. I want you to remember that he is not the one who will do."

There was no reply to this injunction.—Perhaps it was not heard, and subsequent facts rendered this all the more probable.

The two young men prolonged their stay in the village, and made frequent calls together at Mrs. Green's house. Mr. Edgerton was all that could be desired in the way of friendly courtesy, but George Merton was that, and more too. It became more and more apparent that he aimed to become the one who would do.

He came often with his friend, but more often by himself, and one day he called not on Sarepta, but upon Mrs. Green herself.—The nature of his errand may be gathered from a remark of that lady's during the conversation.

"I am very sorry matters have gone so far," she said, "and I tried in every way to prevent it. All I can do now is to say that I will never give my consent to your marriage with my daughter. I esteem you very greatly, but I long since have made up my mind that my son-in-law must have fortune and position."

"But, my dear madam."

"I have had my say, Mr. Merton, and nothing will ever make me say differently. I don't mind saying to you that the same question from your friend would receive a very different answer."

George Merton went away then, and Sarepta received a little lecture from her mother. The girl was a little pale, but very quiet, and her mother thought she was going to be very sensible. She felt a little discouraged, however, when Sarepta said, quite in her natural voice:

"I know he is poor, and without position, as you call it, but I will never marry any other man as long as I live!" and that ended the conversation.

After this matters went on much the same as usual, except that George Merton came no more to Mrs. Green's house. Sarepta was a little quieter than of old, but altogether acted in a practical manner, that gave her mother very great encouragement.

One afternoon the young lady dressed to go out for a walk, and stood for a time with one foot on the fender bar, listening to her mother's talk, which ran pretty much in this strain toward the close:

"I haven't seen Mr. Edgerton for two or three days, have you? And—his friend seems to have disappeared altogether. I must say it was very proper of him not to come here after I gave him so decided an answer. Why, bless my soul! Here he is now!"

And there, sure enough, he was, stepping leisurely in through the open door of the room. He had evidently screwed his courage up, and was keeping it up by a little bit of bravado not quite natural to him. His hat was pulled tight upon his head, his step had the least suggestion of a swagger in it, and he carried his hands in the pockets of the short, odd looking jacket which he wore for the apparent purpose of making him look unnecessarily independent.

His manner put Mrs. Green on the offensive, as if it were a challenge. Her face took on its hard, set look, her hands folded themselves together under her apron, and she stood looking at him very frigidly, and failed to notice that her daughter was not so much surprised as she ought to have been.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Merton," said Mrs. Green, very much as if he had been a sewing machine agent. "We were just speaking of—your friend."

"Ah, Charlie! Yes, poor fellow, he has gone back to the city. He really needed a longer rest, but he couldn't take it without losing his situation, and he cannot afford to do that."

"His situation? Why"—

"Yes, you know he is a bookkeeper. But, no; I remember now, my friend Mrs. Garwood got our names mixed in telling you about us."

"I see," said Mrs. Green, in a tone that implied many things.

"But come, dear, if you are ready we will go for our walk now," said George, in a queer, hurried way. "I just dropped in, Mrs. Green, to take my wife out for a walk."

"Your wife? What?" and Mrs. Green sat down and waited for more breath.

"Mamma, you will forgive us, won't you?" pleaded Sarepta. "Perhaps it was wrong, but you were so firm, so we were married yesterday."

"Of course I forgive you, now that there is nothing else for me to do," said the politic lady. "And if you will wait a minute I'll go with you. It will close people's mouths."

As they all started out together, Mrs. Merton said:

"George, you ought to have told me about this ridiculous mistake."

"I know I ought, but you see, my dear, I couldn't resist the temptation of giving your mother a son-in-law with 'fortune and position,' in spite of herself," he replied.

THE BAGGAGE MASTER'S WIFE'S STORY.

"Dinner ready?" said the baggage-master to his wife.

"Of course!" said the wife, in a tone of astonishment.

"Yes, yes," said the baggage-master, "You're afraid of your glass."

And then they laughed together.

"You don't know what he means," said the rosy little woman to me.

"Why, when I'm in a temper I smash things," said the husband, and went his way.

"In a temper," said the wife. "Why, Tom couldn't be in a temper if he tried.—Tom in a temper! Good gracious! But I'll tell you what he means, if you like—for you couldn't get it out of him. And as I've half an hour before me, and my darning in my hand, and you're waiting for the stage, it won't waste time for either of us. There was a time when I didn't think much about that, but that was a good while ago.

"My husband was baggage-master on this very line when I married him, and they said he was the most careful one ever known.—No forgetfulness in him. Never drank a drop and never snubbed the poor, bewildered people who asked him questions. Good natured he was as could be, and as firm as if he hadn't been good natured, and I was a silly, irresponsible girl, who had been at school a month before that of my wedding, and knew as much of housekeeping as a [illegible]

"He had saved a good deal of money, and had built a pretty house with only four rooms in it, besides the kitchen, but each as pretty as a picture, and a big bow window in the parlor that had cost ever so much. In the window plants were set, and an aquarium. No one had a prettier parlor anywhere. It was the pride of my heart.

"The great road ran just past the corner; it was at Lilliput Junction that we lived—and down below was the depot, and the train slacked up going through the town.—When Tom ate breakfast at home, which wasn't often, he kept ten minutes to get to the cars before they started, and so was never in a hurry.

"Well, one morning he had had breakfast at home, and had fifteen minutes to spare, when some one came rushing past the house on horseback, and cried out to Tom that old Hill, a brakeman on the road, had just been very much hurt by a train and he was going for a doctor. Tom liked old Hill, and he started to his feet at once. 'Bessie,' said he, 'I must see the poor old fellow. I have ten minutes or more for it. I can run to the depot in three. Now take my keys, my dear, and have them at the door for me when I pass. Remember how important it is.'

"You see the great bunch of keys was heavy, and he didn't care to carry them all with him down to where old Hill was and back. And I didn't wonder at it as I lifted them from the table, checks and chains and all. And I meant to stand at the door as he came up; but there was time to spare. So I just ran into the back yard to tell Mrs. Jones, next door, over the fence, about the accident to poor Hill—and got talking, and the time passed as time will in chat; and ten minutes is nothing, you know.

"And our house was on the street, one of a row. There was no getting to the back door without going around the whole of them. And the door had a patent lock and the big bow window was fastened down; and while I was chattering like a magpie I didn't see my husband flying up the road, with good three minutes before him, to get his keys and run to the depot in. 'Bessie,' he cried at the gate; but I didn't hear him. 'Bessie,' he shouted, as he shook the door—and there were my ears filled with the story my neighbor was telling me about the tipsy woman she'd seen run over, and you see Tom had tried the window by this time and found it down, and he had two minutes and a half left; and a man that misses his duty on a railroad pays for it, I tell you; and it wasn't temper, mark that; it wasn't because he felt like smashing my window, because I kept him waiting; it was to do his duty, come what might of it; and it was grand of him, I say. The next second Tom was through that plate glass window with a crash, and the bits lay scattered on the floor and on the ground, and some were in his flesh, but he had his checks and his keys, and was off flying.

"There never was a man that ran a race that ran so before; and a minute after, when I, without my bonnet, and not caring a bit what any one thought of me, stood staring down the road, I saw the up train rush by, and my Tom standing on the platform of the last baggage car, with his keys and checks in a belt about his waist, tying up his bleeding hand in his pocket handkerchief; and, in the midst of it, hurt as he was, much as he had lost in that great window, angry as he should have been at me—for I had been the cause of it all—my Tom nods his head to me and shouts at the top of his voice, so that I heard him above all the sounds of the train: 'All right, Bessie!'

"But, oh! it wasn't all right with me until I saw him again, and I would have gone down on my knees to him to beg and pray him to forgive me, only he wouldn't let me, but took me in his arms instead. He's that kind of great, strong, splendid man, is Tom, that he couldn't get angry at a woman.

"But it was a lesson to me, and, as Tom says, 'I'm always on time, whatever I have to do.'

"There's no delay. There's no putting off in my house, and I gossip when there's nothing else to do.

"'You see, you're anxious about your glass,' says Tom, when he's in a joking mood, as you heard him just now. But I've got to feel that I've my duty to do as well as Tom has, and that one of the duties we all have on the train of life, that flies on whether we want it to or not, is always to be on time."

HOW HE ROUNDED THE LAKE.

He was a tramp, bound Chicagoward, and as he boarded the couplers at the rear of an incoming engine, just across the line in Indiana, one recent dark and chilly night, he had faith to believe that he had a "soft thing" of it for a cheap ride. But the conductor, with his eagle eye and railway lantern, soon espied the moneyless passenger on his uncushioned and comfortless seat.—Did he order him off! No. He had a deeper plot. He let him remain, while on and on went the train, from station to station, until it reached a great tank, where the engines stop to "water up."

"Now for him," grinned the heartless conductor as he passed to the front.

"Now for him," he maliciously continued, as he grasped the water-trough from the fireman's hands and directed it over the back end of the engine.

"Now for him," he fiendishly grunted as he heard a Noah's deluge pouring over the head and down the back of the luckless tramp.

All grew still, and the conductor ordered his train on its way convinced that he had drowned the tramp; or at least flooded him so far away that he could never get back again.

But when that conductor drove into the depot in the early morning, there was a surprise in store for him.

"Be ye the conductor?" inquired a shivering voice at his elbow, as he stepped on the platform.

"Yes," said he, looking around and gazing upon a bedraggled and cinder-covered man.

"Then I want fer to ask yer why yer don't run around the end of the lake in comin' inter town?"

"I do," said the conductor.

"Yer do?" exclaimed the man.

"Certainly," was the reply.

"Wal, I gosh!" muttered the stranger in a bewildered tone, "blest ef I didn't think yer swum through the lake!"

Then the conductor knew that his tramp still lived and was water-proof.—Chicago Journal.

SLANDER.

The public man who tries to answer every slander set afloat against him will be kept as busy as a thin-skinned fisherman on a salt meadow in mosquito time. He may kill off a dozen tormentors, but a hundred will come to their funeral. Happy is the man who can sit unmoved in the presence of partisan malice, and feel that his record is all right, and that the confidence of the people in his integrity cannot be shaken by the idle breath of slander.

MAKING A HUNDRED DOLLARS A NIGHT.

One sultry afternoon a gentleman was sitting under a clump of trees not more than a third of a mile from the Washington House in North Conway, reading a volume of Dickens, when a stranger approached him and after expatiating a while on the beauties of the place, volunteered the information that he was short of money but had hit upon a plan whereby he could raise some if he could only secure the services of a second party.

"I am in the same condition as yourself," said the first, "and possibly I would like to enter upon the enterprise. What is your plan?"

"Well, I am stopping over here at the Washington House, and you know that hotel keepers are responsible for the safety of their guest's property."

"Yes, that's true," said the first. "I am also stopping there—it's a good house."

"Now," said the stranger, "if I can get some one to break into my room to-night and steal my pants, I'll swear that there was two hundred dollars in them; get the money and go halves with the fellow that does the job."

"But supposing he refuses to pay it?" queried the first.

"Oh, never you fear, there's no danger of that; he's got a house full of boarders, and rather than hurt the reputation of the hotel, he would pay over the money without saying a word."

"But isn't it rather risky?"

"Risky? No. All you've got to do is to come to my room, take the pants, and the thing is done—what do you say? We can make a hundred dollars apiece to-night easy."

"Well, I'll tell you what I'll do. I'm not very good at such things myself—suppose you do the stealing?"

This was agreed to. The garments were to be left on the back of a chair in the accomplice's room, and 12 o'clock the fellow with the speculative idea was to steal in and bear them away. Entering the room noiselessly, he proceeded to where the garments were and took them up in his hands, when a man jumped out of bed and seized him around the throat.

"It's me, Bill," said the thief, in a whisper.

"You—who are you, coming into my room at this time of night?" demanded the man; "what do you want?"

"I'm after them pants, you fool," said the thief, appearing to be displeased at his stupidity.

"Pants—why, what pants?" questioned the man.

"The pants with the two hundred dollars in them. What are you asleep?—we'll be caught if you don't stop making so much noise."

"Going to make a hundred dollars to-night, were you?" said the proprietor of the hotel, for it was he, tightening his grip on the thief's throat, as a servant who had been let into the secret entered the room, with a light.

The fellow was taken down stairs and bound hand and foot with a clothes-line, as tight as were ever the Davenport Brothers, and put into the cellar, to wait the verdict of the boarders the next morning, and how he made his escape therefrom can only be accounted for on the ground that truth is stranger than fiction.

THE MAN WHO HELD THE FORT.

The original man who "Held the Fort," and furnished the foundation for Sankey's little song, which the religious people sing and irreligious people whistle, was Gen. John M. Corse, of Chicago. It was the last year of the war, when Sherman was at Atlanta, preparing for the famous march to the sea. Allatoona Pass was a gap in the mountains of great strategetic importance. Its possession was indispensable to Sherman, for to lose it would have involved not only the success of his campaign but the safety of his army. Corse knew the responsibility which rested on him and his men, and the brave fellows knew it, too. He told them there must be no surrender and it was left out of their calculations. The bloody work began with desperate assaults by Gen. Hood; desperate but unsuccessful. After hours of fighting, Corse began to communicate with Sherman through the signal station on Kenesaw mountain. The smoke of battle delayed the progress of the conversation, but finally it lifted and the signal officer slowly read to Corse the inspiring words: "Hold the fort; we are coming."

The contest went on. Hood, too, knew Sherman was coming, and he increased the energy of his attack, but to no purpose.—In the afternoon Corse signalled this message:

ALLATOONA, GA., Oct. 6, 1864—2 p. m.—Capt. L. M. Dayton, Aid-de-Camp: I am short a cheekbone and an ear, but am able to whip all —— yet! My losses are heavy. A force moving from Stilesboro to Kingston gives me some anxiety. Tell me where Sherman is.

Of course, everybody knew Corse held out till help came, and the pass was saved.

IMPARTING INFORMATION.

Mack always likes to impart information, and often scrapes an acquaintance with strangers. They accosted a gentleman who was standing near the main building, apparently waiting for somebody.

Mack—"Fine day, sir."

This being a very plausible statement, the stranger nodded.

Mack—"This is, I guess the finest exhibition the world ever seen."

Stranger—"So I understand, sir."

Mack—"You would be surprised to learn the immense sum that has been spent on the grounds and buildings."

Stranger—"No doubt."

Mack—"Yes, sir; that main building itself cost—"

Just then another gentleman approached Mack's stranger, saying: "Ah! Gen. Hawley, could I see you for a moment?"

"Certainly," replied the General and turning to Mack as he walked away, he said: "I may see you again and get the exact figures."

"Thunder and lightning!" whispered Mack hoarsely, as he leaned against me for support.

"That's the high muncky-muck that runs this exposition."

PRIMARY MEETING.

The Democratic and Conservative voters of the City of Plainfield are requested to assemble at Laing's Hall, Friday Evening, Dec. 1st, at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of nominating a Mayor and other City Officers, to be supported at the approaching City Election, also to transact whatever other legitimate business that may come before them.

By order Plainfield Dem. Ass'n,

THE CRISIS.

The news received this morning from South Carolina is of a startling character. Might, not right, reigns in that State. The expressed will of the people has been set aside, the mandate of the Supreme Court defied and another of the sovereign States of the Union lies prostrate under the heel of Military power. The State House was taken possession of by Union States troops on Monday night and the Democratic members elect from Laurens and Edgefield counties, on presenting the certificates of the Supreme Court on Tuesday morning, were refused admission to the Chamber of the House. The Democratic members of the House then withdrew from the building and at a later hour they with two Republicans organized and were sworn in by Judge Cook. The people are greatly excited but have nobly kept the peace. During the excitement and while the crowd surrounding the State House appeared to be attempting to push in, Gen. Hampton, at the request of the officer in command, addressed them. He said:

"MY FRIENDS: I am truly doing what I have done earnestly during this whole exciting contest, pouring oil on the troubled waters. It is of the greatest importance to us all as citizens of South Carolina that peace should be preserved. I appeal to you all, white men and colored, as Carolinians, to use every effort to keep down violence or turbulence. One act of violence may precipitate bloodshed and desolation. I implore you, then, to preserve the peace. I beg all of my friends to disperse, to leave the grounds of the Capitol, and I advise all the colored men to do the same. Keep perfectly quiet, leave the streets, and do nothing to provoke a riot. We trust to the law and the Constitution, and we have perfect faith in the justice of our cause."

The whites immediately dispersed and were followed in a short time by many of the colored people.

The Democratic members of the Legislature, in retiring from the State House, read in the presence of the military and citizens the following protest:

COLUMBIA, Nov. 28.—We, a majority of the House of Representatives-elect, protest against the refusal to admit us to the Hall of Representatives. We protest against the military power of the United States barring the passage into the State House of members-elect of the Legislature. We protest against the legality of the proceedings, and especially against the Army of the United States being placed for the purpose of this exclusion under the command of John B. Dennis, a partisan of Gov. Chamberlain. We protest against the said Dennis' instructions to the guard to admit no one to the State House except upon his own pass or a pass of A. O. Jones, the former Clerk of the House, who may thus exclude all except his own partisans, and who, by the Republican programme, is to organize the said House.

We have presented ourselves with the judgment of the highest court of South Carolina, certified to by its Clerk, with the great seal of the court attached. As to our rights to participate in the organization of the said House, we are refused, by the orders of the said Dennis, admission to said hall except upon his pass, the pass of said Jones, or the certificate of H. E. Hayne, Secretary of State, who is now under condemnation of said court for refusal to issue certificates in accordance with its judgment and mandate.

In protesting against this bare-faced usurpation, this trampling on the laws and the Constitution of the State, this defiance of the highest tribunal of the State, it is our purpose to offer no resistance to this armed intervention, but to make our solemn appeal to the American people, without distinction of party. Our veneration for law, our respect for the Supreme Court and the usages of all legislative assemblages, forbid our participation in such unprecedented and revolutionary proceedings.

[Signed by all the Democratic members, sixty-four in number.

How these tidings will be received by the people all over the land we are not prepared to say. There was a time in our history when proceedings such as these would not be tolerated an hour. And they must now be reversed or our liberties are not worth the speaking of.

The people must speak; the great wrong must be undone at once, or we must surrender all pretensions to being a free people. We await the course of events.

The Union County Board of Freeholders has received an opinion from Attorney Stone, that when appropriations are exhausted the Board has the right to make others. The law prohibits an excess of expenditures over appropriations. The powers of the Board are not exhausted at the annual meeting, and they have the power to re-appropriate such moneys as in their judgment may be necessary to meet emergencies caused by flood, fire or accident, or, in fact, for any purpose which the Board of Freeholders was contemplated. The Board possesses the powers of appropriating and expending, and there is no reason why additional appropriations may not be made, providing that the requirements of the law are complied with. It was resolved to allow to election boards three days' pay for precincts having only 300 votes, two days for those with less, one day and mileage for carrying box to County Clerk's office; $15 for room rent.

I am authorized to take charge of election affairs in the above States, and to see that proper men are placed in office (whether elected or not). No man allowed to enter upon the duties of an office without special permission from U.S. G. and his subordinates. Hayes is the pass-word.

THE SITUATION.

The advices received up to this time, though of an exciting character, fail to give us any assurance of what will be the result arrived at in the States towards which the eyes of the whole country are now turned. In Florida the Returning Board was to meet on Monday last and, ignoring the claims of Gov. Stearns, commence the counting of the returns. Each party is sanguine that the count will show that they have carried the State. The odium resting on the Boards of Louisiana and South Carolina, has happily as yet not attached to this Board and we are hopeful that its proceedings will be of such a character as to satisfy the people of the whole country, whatever the result they announce may be, that equal and exact justice in that State has been done. Should the count prove that Gov. Tilden has carried the State, it will decide the question and, quieting the general excitement, enable the country to settle down quietly to business.

The condition of affairs in South Carolina is, to the last degree, deplorable. All law, all order, and even we may say, all decency have been ignored and the high hand of illegal power has been laid heavily on the people of this long suffering State. The history of the last two weeks can leave no doubt in the mind of any intelligent man, that a conspiracy, participated in by the General Government, has been concocted and is being carried out to render nugatory the expressed wish of the people of this State. Acknowledging the election of Gen. Hampton and a majority of the Legislature on the Democratic side, the Returning Board, setting at defiance the order of the Supreme Court of the State, gave certificates of election to Chamberlain and the State officers on his ticket and refused to certify to the election of the members elected from Laurens and Edgefield Counties on the Democratic ticket, thereby giving the Republicans the Legislature. Imprisoned and fined by the Court for contempt, their fine, we learn has been paid by the Republican National Committee, and Judge Bond, a creature of the General Government, has issued a writ of Habeas Corpus in direct violation of all law, setting them in effect free, and enabling them to go unwhipt of justice.

We simply state the facts and leave them to the consideration of a thinking people.

Affairs in Louisiana are "much as they were, only more so," The last week has brought to light attempted frauds on the Republican side, which have staggered even the Returning Boards, but of which, judging by the past, they will not hesitate to take advantage.

We hope to be enabled in our next issue to announce the results arrived at in Florida and Louisiana.

CITY ELECTION.

The election for municipal officers, also two Chosen Freeholders, occurs in Plainfield next Tuesday, Dec. 5th. The Republicans held a Primary on Thursday evening last and nominated a ticket. Next Friday night the Democrats and Conservatives will meet at Laing's Hall to put in nomination another ticket. We have faith that the nominations will be unexceptionable, and that the ticket nominated there will receive the support of a majority of our citizens.

APPLICATIONS TO THE LEGISLATURE.

By a new law it is enacted that notice of the intention to apply for the passage of any bill must contain a correct statement of the general object of said bill, and must be signed by at least one of the parties who intend to apply for the passage of such bill, and shall be published in at least one of the newspapers printed and published in the county where said bill is, or is likely to take effect; and the said notice must be published four weeks previous to the meeting of the Legislature.

In order to meet the requirements of this law, it will be necessary for all persons who intend to apply to the Legislature for the passage of any bill to have their notices published not later than the 7th of Dec.

THE WAY THEY DO IT.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 25.—There is considerable excitement here to-night over the detection of the Returning Board in plain fraud. The returns from the contested Democratic parishes were opened to day, and the Conservative committee were permitted to be present at the opening of the cases, though not at the canvassing of the votes. The returns from De Soto, sealed and dated Nov. 14, and marked received Nov. 18, were first opened.—Protesting affidavits were found attached to the returns when taken out of the envelope. Mr. Cavanac, of the Conservative counsel, glanced at the affidavits, discovered them to be dated Nov. 25, showing conclusively that the returns had been broken open and resealed while in possession of the Returning Board, and that the concoctors of the affidavit fraud had tripped up on the date. The board was dumfounded at this detection. Mr. Cavanac, turning to Mr. E. W. Stoughton, said: "You see this evidence of fraud?" Mr. Stoughton endeavored to account for it as a mistake, saying that the affidavit might have been signed in De Soto to-day. Mr. Cavanac replied that De Soto is seven hundred miles distant. Senator Sherman said that there was no use in disguising the fact that the returns had been tampered with. Mr. G. B. Smith, with indignant vehemence, said: "These documents have been tampered with, and this is an outrage," and Senator Trumbull substantially said that it was a palpable fraud.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Specie to the value of about $1,500,000 was withdrawn from the Bank of England to-day for shipment to New York.

GENERAL NEWS.

The political atmosphere is growing colder, and betting men generally seem to think it will stake-holder, too.

It is estimated that there are from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000 locked up in the pool boxes of those who hold stakes on the election.

A strange and shocking accident occurred at the upper rolling mill of the Lackawanna Iron and Coal Company, in Scranton, Pa., on Tuesday of last week, by which an old workman named Patrick McNally was torn to pieces by a massive fly wheel that was revolving with lightning-like rapidity. It was in the dim twilight of dawn when the horrible affair occurred, and McNally, who had occasion to go from one portion of the works to another where he had to pass close by the wheel, doubtless did not see it owing to its swift motion and the fact that he was near-sighted, and so he walked right into it, and in an instant his mutilated body was hurled in fragments about the mill, among the bewildered workmen. The sight of an arm or a leg descending among those who did not see the accident filled them with fear and wonder. The shocking affair soon became known, and when the wheel stood still its appearance told a fearful story. The trunk of the old man's body lay beside the pit, and the difficult task of collecting his scattered remains was entered upon. The head was missing and nowhere to be found until after several hours, when it was finally discovered in the pit beneath the wheel. McNally was over sixty years of age and leaves a wife and child to mourn his fearful fate. About a year ago a small boy while playing in the vicinity of this unguarded wheel was killed in a similar manner.

The Kansas and Colorado building, one of the largest of the Centennial State headquarters, estimated to have cost $12,000, has been sold for $800 to Kennedy and Wilson, hotel keepers, of Ocean Beach, N. J., who are reported to have made arrangements for its re-erection at that place.

The New Jersey Building, costing $12,500, is offered for $4,000. This, like the Michigan Building, has been put together with bolts and screws in such a manner as to be capable of being readily taken apart and re-erected without difficulty. The probable expense of removal to any part of New Jersey would be $1,500, exclusive of the cost of freight.

A number of frame pavilions and other ornamental surroundings of the enclosures of foreign sections in the Main Building and Agricultural Hall have been given to the Permanent Exhibition, and will be properly utilized in the Main Building. Among these are those of Spain, Sweden, Denmark, Netherlands and Chili, in the Main Building, and Brazil, Spain, Netherlands and Venezuela in Agricultural Hall. The Moresque pavilion of Brazil in the Main Building, is to be taken down this week and shipped to Rio Janeiro, where it will be re-erected as a memorial of the Centennial Exhibition.

TRENTON, Nov. 28.—The New Jersey Board of State Canvassers, comprising the Governor and Senators Abbett, Dayton, Hopper, Leaming, Magie and Potts met in the Senate Chamber to count the official vote of the State. Tilden's official majority is 12,445.

As an illustration of the great increase in the popular vote in this State it is only necessary to state that while Prof. Atherton, at the late election, had 1,730 more votes than Amos Clark in 1874, yet the majority of Mr. Ross this year is 1,100 more than it was two years ago. This year Mr. Ross had more votes in each of the counties than he had two years ago, thus: In Middlesex, 506 more, in Monmouth, 1,064 more, in Union, 1,262 more—in all 2,829 more.

One day last week a tramp went into the kitchen of a house in Burlington and demanded something to eat. On being told that there was nothing for him he wanted the meat cooking in the oven. He was told that it was not "done." He then said he would come again. About one o'clock the fellow called again, knocked down the cook, and made off with the meat over the back fence and was seen no more.

The New Jersey Court of Pardons met in Trenton Tuesday morning last and examined into the facts relating to the death of William Henry Beltz, who was shot and killed by John Henry Schwamb on the 4th of August last.—Schwamb's case had been presented to their attention by his friends, backed by a petition containing over two thousand signatures, among which was that of Mrs. Beltz, wife of the victim. After a prolonged session the court decided to commute the sentence from death to imprisonment for life. He was regarded as only technically guilty of murder, and received much sympathy as the father of a family of fourteen children, and a man who had previously borne a good reputation.

An inmate of the Old Ladies' Home, Newark, has a genuine curiosity. It is a handkerchief with a border of ancient thistle lace. In one corner is embroidered a crown of royal pattern. It is claimed that Charles I. of England held this handkerchief in his hand when he was beheaded, that it was picked up by a witness to the tragic event, and passed into the possession of the family of the old lady now at the Home. It can be traced back 150 years without difficulty, and has been mentioned in every will of the family as a relic of value. It was willed to the Old Dutch Church of New York by its last owner, but was finally given to the present possessor, the heir-at-law.

THE LAW CONCERNING TRAMPS.

For the benefit of all householders, especially such as are not familiar with the laws, we give the following synopsis of the law in reference to tramps:

The general law passed at the last session of the Legislature defines as tramps all persons who shall come from any other State or from this State, who have no legal settlement in the places in which they may be found, who live without employment, who refuse work when offered at reasonable rates of compensation, who gain their support by begging from house to house or in public places, and who are unable to give a satisfactory account of themselves or their business in such places.

It is the duty of any constable or police officer to arrest all such persons, either upon the complaint or information of any inhabitant, or on his own view, and bring them before a justice of the peace or other magistrate, whose duty it is, upon conviction either by confession or on the testimony of one or more creditable witnesses, to commit such persons to work upon any county farm, or upon the streets of the city or township, or any house of correction, poor house, work house or common jail, for a term not exceeding six months.

Whenever, in the judgment of the custodians to whom such persons are committed, suitable labor cannot be provided in the places to which they are committed, it shall be lawful upon the written order of such custodians, to bind such persons out to work for any person or corporation for the term of the original commitment, and it shall be lawful to compel the performance of such labor for the term fixed.

If any person not being in the place in which he usually lives shall apply to the Overseer of the Poor of the town in which he then is, stating that he is desirous of returning to his home but has not the means to do so, the said Overseer may give employment to such person, until in his judgment a sufficient sum is earned to pay traveling expenses, with any reasonable addition from the city, county or town treasury. He may cause such person to be returned to his or her home, whether in this State or elsewhere; provided that the expense shall not exceed twenty dollars.

The custodian of tramps committed to his charge may, at discretion, discharge any such persons before the expiration of his or her term of commitment, upon not less than ten days' good behavior, or upon receiving a satisfactory assurance that such person will not again become a charge upon the public within one year after his or her discharge.

The Chosen Freeholders of any county are empowered, upon the recommendation of the Court of Common Pleas of the county, to erect suitable buildings for the confinement of persons convicted under this law, the buildings to be in charge of the Sheriff of the county or the Warden of the county jail.

The fees to be paid the committing magistrate in these cases are the same as provided by law for like services; and any officer wilfully refusing to arrest any tramp shall be subject to a fine of ten dollars, to be paid in to the poor fund of the district in which the officer resides.

All public places provided for the keeping of the poor are declared to be workhouses for the accommodation of tramps, and the keepers of such institutions are required to furnish employment for not less than six hours each day to all such persons committed to his charge.

SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY.

AN UNRIVALLED ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE

When Scribner issued its famous Midsummer Holiday Number in July, a friendly critic said of it: "We are not sure but that Scribner has touched high-water mark. We do not see what worlds are left to it to conquer." But the publishers do not consider that they have reached the ultima thule of excellence—they believe "there are other worlds to conquer, and they propose to conquer them."

The prospectus for the new volume gives the titles of more than fifty papers (mostly illustrated), by writers of the highest merit. Under the head of "FOREIGN TRAVEL," we have "A Winter on the Nile," by Gen. McClellan; "Sauntering about Constantinople," by Chas. Dudley Warner; "Out of My Window at Moscow," by Eugene Schuyler; "An American in Turkistan," etc. Three serial stories are announced: "NICHOLAS MINTURN," by Dr. Holland, the Editor, whose story of "Sevenoaks" gave the highest satisfaction to the readers of the Monthly.

The scene of this latest novel is laid on the banks of the Hudson. The hero is a young man, who has been always "tied to a woman's apron strings," but who, by the death of his mother, is left alone in the world,—to drift on the current of life,—with a fortune, but without a purpose.

Another serial, "His Inheritance," by Miss Trafton, will begin on the completion of "That Lass o' Lowrie's," by Mrs. Hodgson Burnett. Mrs. Burnett's story, begun in August, has a pathos and dramatic power which have been a surprise to the public.

There is to be a series of original and exquisitely illustrated papers of "Popular Science," by Mrs. Herrick, each paper complete in itself.

There are to be, from various pens, papers on "HOME LIFE AND TRAVEL." Also, practical suggestions as to town and country life, village improvements, etc., by well-known specialists.

Mr. Barnard's articles on various industries of Great Britain include the history of "Some Experiments in Co-operation," "A Scottish Loaf Factory" in the November number, and "Toad Lane, Rochdale," in December. Other papers are "The British Workingman's Home," "A Nation of Shopkeepers," "Ha'penny a Week for the Child," etc.

A richly illustrated series will be given on "American Sports by Flood and Field," by various writers, and each on a different theme. The subject of "HOUSEHOLD AND HOME DECORATION" will have a prominent place, whilst the latest productions of American humorists will appear from month to month. The list of shorter stories, biographical and other sketches, etc. is a long one.

The editorial department will continue to employ the ablest pens both at home and abroad. There will be a series of letters on literary matters, from London, by Mr. Welford.

The pages of the magazine will be open, as heretofore, so far as limited space will permit, to the discussion of all themes affecting the social and religious life of the world, and specially to the freshest thought of the Christian thinkers and scholars of this country.

We mean to make the magazine sweeter and purer, higher and nobler, more genial and generous in all its utterances and influences, and influences, and a more welcome visitor than ever before in homes of refinement and culture.

FIFTEEN MONTHS for $4. Scribner for December, now ready, and which contains the opening chapters of "Nicholas Minturn," will be read with eager curiosity and interest. Perhaps no more readable number of this magazine has yet been issued. The three numbers of Scribner for August, September and October, containing the opening chapters of "That Lass o' Lowrie's," will be given to every new subscriber (who requests it), and whose subscription begins with the present volume, i. e., with the November number.

Subscription price, $4. a year,—35 cents a number. Special terms on bound volumes. Subscribe with the nearest bookseller, or send a check or P. O. money order to Scribner & Co., 743 Broadway. N. Y.

Scarcity of Money.

There is no doubt but the present situation of all kinds of business and industry is fearfully depressed, and it behooves every family to look carefully to their expenses. Winter is coming on when children are liable to Croup, Whooping Cough, etc. Coughs and Colds will prevail everywhere, and Consumption with other Throat and Lung disease will carry off many.—These diseases should not be neglected, Doctor Bills are expensive, and we would advise our people to use BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP. It never has failed. One bottle at 75 cents will keep your whole family well during the winter. Two doses will relieve any case. Sold in all towns in the United States, and by your Druggist, William H. Voorhees.

A TIME-HONORED SPECIFIC.—The long and successful career of DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL, as contrasted with the speedy collapse of nostrums devoid of efficacy which have from time to time been puffed into a brief notoriety during the twenty odd years that this celebrated medicine has been sold, affords a proof that the American public continue to repose its confidence in deserving articles only. The PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL has long been recognized as the leading specific for Consumption, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Diptheria, and all other diseases of the breathing organs. It is, moreover, a certain, speedy, and safe botanic remedy for Dyspepsia, Liver Disorders, Scrofulous Affections, Gravel, Dropsy, Debility, and Constipation. Constantly accumulating evidence of an unimpeachable character establishes the fact that it not only entirely eradicates the diseases to which it is adapted, but also that its action is remarkably prompt and thorough. The crucial test of experience has demonstrated its reliability in every particular. Sold by all druggists. Principal Depot, No. 916 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa. 17nov6m

LOOK!
The wildest excitement exists in many localities on account of the immense number of tramps who are perambulating over the country,
Out
of work, and many of them would not work if it was tendered them. The most of them are a ragged, thieving, dirty and worthless crew. The exception can be granted to an occasional few.
For
a whole flock of black sheep is truly a rarity. The general depression of business, and lack of employment everywhere has forced many to roam in search of work, and others travel, beg, and steal, because they don't want to work. In this connection we wish to call

THANKSGIVING Turkeys and Chickens at Ten Eyck's Meat Market, Cherry Street.

WE issue our paper one day earlier than usual to allow our employees the privilege of visiting their friends on Thanksgiving Day.

THERE will be a pigeon shooting match at Campbell's Club House, adjoining the Driving Park, to-morrow, (Thanksgiving Day.)

THE front of Mr. Frank McIntyre's new brick building on North avenue, near the depot, will be the handsomest in the city when completed.

THE Messrs. Ohl Bros., of Evona, have lost two valuable setter hunting dogs within the past week, from diptheria. Mack and Oakey will be missed by all who ever shot over them.

WASHINGTON Lodge, No. 33, A. F. & A. M., of Elizabeth, N. J., will confer the Third Degree in Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, this city, Tuesday evening, Dec. 5th. The fraternity are invited.

THE snow, beautiful snow, fell all day Sunday and part of Monday, but did not last long on the ground, the moist earth absorbing it to the regret of those who thought they were sure of the first sleigh-ride.

MR. CHRIS. VAN ARSDALE, proprietor of the City Hotel, renewed his license at the last meeting of Common Council. "Van" makes a good landlord, and we are glad to know he intends to remain among us.

MR. C. H. Edwards, late Organist of St. John's M. E. Church, Brooklyn, will preside at the Organ at the Congregational Church, on Thanksgiving evening. The Musical programme will be commenced at a quarter before 8.

MR. G. W. BIRD, son of Morgan Bird, Esq., has opened a coal and wood yard on Fourth Street, near Cherry, and proposes selling coal and wood at market prices.—Being his first start in business we wish him success.

THE Boards of Appeal in case of taxation by City, Township and Fire Department, met at Laing's Hotel, on Tuesday last, to receive and adjust mistakes in taxation.—But few cases were presented which speaks well for Assessor Hubbard.

MESSRS. CHAS. HUNTER and Wallace Vail are opening and grading a new avenue from Fourth Street to Union Avenue, commencing along side of Vail's Grove, the new avenue to be called ——— Avenue. Mr. Geo. Angleman is doing the work.

WE are informed that the sale of tickets to the Annual Calico Social of Plainfield Council, No. 62, O. U. A. M., announced to take place next Wednesday evening, is beyond the expectation of the Committee in charge, and an enjoyable time is promised all who attend.

WM. WARD, Esq., Grand Chancellor of the Knights of Pythias of N. J., visited Perseverance Lodge of this city Thursday evening, Nov. 22, 1876. A good time was had generally. There were visiting brothers present from Scotch Plains, Elizabeth, Bound Brook and Somerville.

OUR neighbors of the Times are handy at figures. Can they figure how those dates of returns and accompanying affidavits became so terribly mixed in South Carolina the other day? Oh! of course, the immaculate party would'nt do anything wrong. Oh! no, only rebels and traitors do such things!

THANKSGIVING to-morrow. Let us hope we may return thanks that our national difficulties are adjusted by the news that Tilden & Hendricks have received their just dues and are acknowledged President and Vice President of these United States, as they surely are by an honest vote and count.

REV. J. S. STOCKBRIDGE has concluded to build a handsome residence for himself and family on the corner of Ninth and Union Streets. Messrs. Wrighton & Bilyen have received the contract for the mason work and Shepherd, Johnson & Godown, the carpenter work. This insures Mr. S. a good building.

ON Tuesday last quite an amusing affair took place at Benedict's Stables, Cherry Street, the occasion being the trial of 2 horse clipping machines, one a Clark's hand clipper in charge of Mr. Peter Osborn, the other Benedict's Lightning Pneumatic clipper in charge of Mr. B. The Lightning clipper came out ahead, clipping a horse in 54 minutes. Another trial is announced to take place shortly.

SPECIAL services in the interest of the Missionary cause, will be held next Sunday, Dec. 3, in the Methodist Episcopal Church. Rev. John M. Reid, D. D., of New York, one of the Missionary Secretaries, and among the ablest pulpit orators in the denomination, will be present through the day, and preach in the morning. He will also speak in the afternoon meeting of the Sunday School at half-past three o'clock, and in the evening service at half-past 7.

LAST Thursday evening a dispute arose between a colored man named Peter Robinson, and Lewis C. Howe, a white man in the employ of Mr. Benjamin Mumford, in the yard adjoining that gentleman's residence on Front Street. As Howe, who was driving a carriage, was leaving the yard, Robinson threw a large stone at him, striking him square in the mouth, breaking the lower jaw and knocking out his front teeth. Dr. Hart, of North Plainfield was at once summoned, who dressed the wound, which is a serious one. Robinson was arrested and sent by Judge Good to the County Jail to await trial for the assault.

SEVERAL attempts at house breaking have occurred in our city during the past week, which evidences that there is a regular gang of inexperienced thieves in our midst. Friday evening last the office of Young, Wood & Co., lumber merchants, on Peace street, was entered by parties breaking out a window light, and papers, &c., strewn about the floor by the thieves in the search for plunder. The handle of the safe was dented as though it had been pounded with some hard substance, with the hope, perhaps of causing the safe to open. Nothing of value was however, obtained by the parties. On Friday evening, the residence of Mayor Sutphen was entered through a back second story window by means of a ladder placed against the side of the building. The thieves were evidently frightened away before they had a chance to obtain anything, although the next morning it was found that a trunk containing furs and children's clothing had been opened in the room in which the parties entered and the contents scattered about the floor. The ladder was obtained from Mr. Wm. C. Ayres' yard adjoining His Honor's residence. The same night thieves attempted to enter the residence of Mr. Dunn, Front street, 2 doors above Peace street, but were heard before they could effect an entrance, being saluted with several shots from a revolver by Mr. Dunn. An unoccupied furnished residence of Mr. Wm. Jones, on Broadway seems to have been a rendezvous of thieves or tramps, as investigation of the premises shows that crockery and goods have been scattered over the floors and some articles stolen. Capt. Breen, on Saturday, arrested four young lads belonging to this city, toward whom strong suspicion attaches as being the parties interested in one or more of the above attempts at robbery. Three of the parties arrested were on Tuesday committed to the County Jail to await trial, sufficient evidence having been found against them to warrant their commitment, while the other two are held as witnesses.

OUR readers who desire anything in the line of Upholstery, should call upon Hugo Wiegmann, whose advertisement appears in another column.

City Election.

Owing to a previous engagement of Laing's Hall, the Primary Meeting to nominate candidates for the City and County Officers for the City of Plainfield and County of Union, will be held at the above place Friday evening, Dec. 1st, instead of Wednesday evening as announced last week.

Sad Accident.

On Monday last Messrs. Joseph Blatz, John Will, Clark Watts, Fred. Kirch and Ed. Keller, went on a hunting expedition near Mt. Bethel, and dividing into parties of two, were scouring the woods for game, when Mr. Will and Kirch, (who is his brother-in-law,) chased a rabbit into or under a hollow stump. Mr. Will stood away from the stump about five or ten feet in an oblique direction, while Mr. Kirch endeavored to dislodge the rabbit from its hiding place by punching under the stump, at the same time laying his gun across his knees, the muzzle pointing toward Mr. Will. By some means the weapon was discharged, the contents entering Mr. Will's person just above the groin. He instantly fell to the ground and Mr. K's wild calls for assistance soon brought to the scene their comrades, who proceeded to form a litter and carry the unfortunate man to the residence of Mr. Daniel Cory, who resides about a half mile from the scene of the accident. Here all possible attention were shown the sufferer, and finally after tightly bandaging the body about the wound with a sheet to stop the flow of blood, he was conveyed to his residence in North Plainfield, and Dr. Sutphen called, who dressed the wound, which is a serious one. On Tuesday, Dr. Hart, of North Plainfield, was called into consultation, and an examination made of the wound, which is more serious than at first supposed. Mr. Will keeps a fruit and confectionery store on Front St., opposite Cherry, and is universally esteemed as a fellow-citizen and friend. We trust his injuries are not as serious as at first conjectured.

We stop the press to announce the sad news of the death of Mr. Will at 5.10 p. m., (Wednesday,) leaving a loving wife and two children to mourn his sudden demise.

Terrible Tragedy.

The quiet little hamlet of Samptown, Middlesex County, situated about three miles south-west of Plainfield, was thrown into a terrible state of excitement last Saturday evening caused by a tragedy the particulars of which are as follows: The evening in question, three young men, named respectively Joseph Brokaw, Thomas and Ellsworth Teple, residents of the village, visited the residence of Mr. Andrew Clawson, to spend the evening with his son, Wm. D. Clawson, a cousin of the Teple's. Mr. C. keeps a small grocery two doors from his residence in the village, and here the young men amused themselves during the evening by playing on a violin, cracking jokes, &c. Shortly after 8 o'clock the trio started for their homes. When in front of the residence of Mrs. Mary N. Pyatt, (which adjoins Mr. Clawson's store) they proceeded to serenade the daughter and two friends of that lady, who were supposed to be in the house, with the understanding between themselves that at the conclusion of the song Mr. Thomas Teple was to fire a salute from a pistol in his possession. Mr. B. commenced singing but before the song was finished he noticed Mr. T. in the act of firing his pistol, when he stopped and told him "not to shoot until he was through singing." Mr. T. did as requested and attempted to lower the hammer of the pistol, when it slipped from his thumb and exploded, the contents, (a home made lead slug) entering the right temple of his comrade, (Mr. Brokaw) and passing through his brain, coming out at the top of his head, also tearing off the end of the fore finger of Mr. Teple and blacking the face of Wm. D. Clawson, with powder. Mr. Brokaw was tenderly taken up and carried to the residence of Mrs. Mary N. Pyatt, in an unconscious condition, and everything possible done for him by the above family and friends. Dr. Titsworth, of New Market was immediately summoned and did all in his power to alleviate the unfortunate man's sufferings, assisted by Dr. Endicor, of Dunellen. Dr. Coriell also visited the scene. Mr. Brokaw died on Sunday morning about 4 o'clock, without having uttered a word after the accident. County Physician Voorhees, of Middlesex County, was summoned and arrived at about 9 o'clock, Sunday morning, and with the assistance of Drs. Titsworth and Endicor of New Market, made an examination of the wound and at 11 A. M., took the testimony of Messrs. Wm. D. Clawson, Thos. and Ellsworth Teple, also Messrs. Peter Lane, Steuben Coriell and Andrew Clawson, (the three latter being the first to arrive after the shooting and also to assist in removing Mr. Brokaw.) He considered an inquest unnecessary and granted a permit of burial, after exonerating all the young men concerned in the shooting. The remains were then conveyed to his late home, at the residence of his aunt, Widow Blackford, whose farm he was working, up to the time of his sudden death. His funeral services were preached by the Rev. Wm. Berlew, pastor of the Samptown Church, on Sunday morning last and his remains followed to the grave by a large concourse of people. Mr. Brokaw was 22 years of age, and was universally esteemed by all who knew him for his many good qualities. Mr. Teple is about 20 years of age and is overwhelmed with grief at the fatal occurrence. The unfor*tunate young man had on Saturday fashioned* the slug with which he was shot, from a piece of lead. The event has cast a gloom over the whole community. This should be another warning against the careless handling of fire arms.

Personals.

Mr. B. Frank Webster, for the fourth time, has had a surgical operation performed upon the lump or obstruction in his mouth, at a well-known hospital in New York city, and is reported as progressing favorably under the treatment received.

Nathan Harper, Esq., who was nominated as Councilman at the late primary held by the Republicans in the old Presbyterian Church, has notified them that his nomination was without his consent or knowledge, and that he absolutely refuses to run on that ticket.

We regret to learn of a serious accident happening to the aged mother of Mr. Alphonso L. Munday, that lady having slipped on the icy step of the stoop in front of her residence on Cherry Street, last Monday morning and sustained a fracture of one of her ankles.

James M. Dunn, Esq., our esteemed fellow-townsman and merchant is prostrated at his residence by serious illness, rheumatism being the principal cause. Mr. Steven Staats has kindly consented to assist in attending to the business of Mr. Dunn's store until he can again attend to it himself.

The thanks of the Junior is tendered Mr. and Mrs. Searle for a fine, fat Thanksgiving Turkey. Their fowls seem always to be the fattest and best flavored in the market; perhaps it is because they feed them so high and care for them so tenderly before decapitation.

Jeremiah Van Winkle, Teller of the 1st National Bank, was prostrated by sudden illness, resembling a paralytic stroke, last Saturday, and is confined to his residence in consequence. We trust his recovery to former good health will be speedy and that we may soon once more see him again at his post where he has for so many years enjoyed the confidence of his employers and the public.

Councilman J. B. Brown is having the grounds about his residence on Cherry St. handsomely graded and ornamented. Our worthy friend, Street Commissioner Wilson, who thoroughly understands such work, is contractor for the same.

☞ A Mayor, eleven Councilmen, City Judge, two Chosen Freeholders, &c., are to be nominated next Friday evening.

THE Post Office will be open Thursday, (Thanksgiving) from 7 to 10, A. M. No mail will be received or dispatched after that hour.

THIS evening (Thursday, Thanksgiving Night) our citizens will be offered a rare treat if they but visit the Congregational Church. Read the advertisement in another part of the paper.

F. W. PACHTMANN & BRO., 363 Canal St., N. Y., issue their 39th Holiday Announcement, and invite the public to their exhibit of Holiday, Watches, Chains, Rings, &c. See adv. next week.

THE 5th meeting of the Plainfield Sabbath School Normal Class, will be held Monday evening, Dec. 4, in the rooms of the Y. M. C. A., at 8 o'clock. The subject will be a specimen lesson, to be conducted by Rev. J. L. Hurlbut.

WE are glad to note the fact that a great many customers who left the Barber Shop, corner of Cherry and Front Streets, at the time of the change in proprietors, have since returned and are now patronizing Mr. Johnson, (Offley's successor). Mr. J. is a practical workman himself and has a good corps of assistants, and everything about his place is clean and tidy.

Overcoats.

A change of advertisement for Lilienstern, the Clothier, on Front St., opposite the Old Presbyterian Church, came too late for insertion this week. He, however, states in it that he is giving overcoats away, accepting at the same time a small gratuity for the same. Go and ask him about it yourself, and if you don't get an overcoat—why look at his immense stock of ready-made clothing.

FIRE MATTERS.

The Board of Fire Commissioners will hold their regular monthly meeting next Thursday evening, Dec. 6th, in their rooms over Pope Bros. store.

What has become of the association once known as the "Plainfield Association for the Relief of Disabled Firemen?"

Chief Doane and Assistants are not much troubled with fire duty.

"No 2" steamer was taken out by the boys for a wash Tuesday evening last and "Jake" was in his glory. Everything worked satisfactory.

Warren Hose boys have a "Hop" to-night.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

The citizens of North Plainfield were startled about half past five o'clock on Saturday morning last by a tremendous crash, which upon investigation proved to be at the large and recently constructed brick warehouse of Mr. L. B. Boice, on Somerset Street, the upper floors and rear wall having fallen in beneath the weight of grain stored within. For a time the scene was one of unusual excitement and desolation, and a large crowd quickly gathered about the scene speculating upon the cause of the disaster, and the chances of the front wall falling. Workmen were promptly set to work by Mr. Boice, who was summoned from his residence, and the task of removing the debris, saving what grain possible and shoring up the front wall and roof at once commenced and continued until the whole was done, the workmen continuing their labors on Sunday, as the building was unsafe to leave in its then present condition. The cause of the disaster was found to proceed from the crumbling of a partition wall in the cellar, on which rested iron columns which supported the second and third floors.

The building was of brick, three stories high, 61 feet front by 45 feet deep, with two eighteen inch stone walls running thro' the cellar from front to rear, seven feet high, on which rested the first floor, supported also by four brick piers on either side of the walls. On top of these stone walls rested iron columns, which supported the second floor, the third floor likewise being supported by iron columns resting on the second floor. On the upper floor was stored about 36 tons of corn, bran, flour, potatoes, &c., in bulk and barrels, and the second floor contained 48½ tons of oats, flour, feed, &c., loose and in bags. On the lower floor was stored hay, grain, &c., the entire weight of the material stored within amounting to 108¾ tons.

The heavy weight caused one of the stone walls to crumble, letting the iron columns down through it, the upper floors of course following them, and pushing outward the rear wall and forcing outward to a great extent the front wall. The roof also sags downward and will have to be taken down, as will also the front wall to the iron girders in the first story.

In the centre of the building, between the two stone walls, was a drive-way on the first floor, wherein teams were driven and grain loaded or unloaded from the wagons. It was a fortunate thing that the accident did not occur during the day time when vehicles and workmen were passing through the drive-way, or a serious loss of life would have occurred. The loss by the loose grain becoming mixed with the mortar and debris is considerable.

The building was commenced August 28d last, and finished Nov. 1st. The mason work was done by Mr. William Smith, and the carpenter work by Messrs. Shepherd, Johnson & Godown, the material being furnished by Mr. Boice.

Mr. Boice does not blame the contractors for the disaster. He endeavored, in all instances, to procure the best of material for the construction of the building, and felt assured when the same was completed that he had as strong a building as could be found in the State. The fault lies in the fact that that the stone wall was not built of the right material. We will here state that Mr. Smith, the mason, informed Mr. Boice that the walls ought not to be constructed with the stone furnished, but should be constructed of brick and be 20 inches thick.

The work of rebuilding will commence at once, Wm. Smith having the mason work. It is needless to say the warehouse will be properly constructed this time, the old walls will be taken down and re-built of brick, 24 inches thick with blue stone flagging in several courses.

The total loss on building and material is put down at near $6,000, on which, of course, there is no insurance. Mr. Boice receives the sympathy of the entire community in his loss and misfortune, while it is a source of congratulation that no one was injured by the disaster.

Mr. Boice desires us, through our columns, to thank the neighbors and citizens generally, who so generously and fearlessly responded to the exigencies of the occasion and assisted in removing the debris and strengthening the standing walls and roof.

In justice to Mr. George Polhemus, who drew the plans for the building, we will state that a 20 inch brick wall was, by him suggested, instead of the one constructed.

Johnston Drive has been declared completed by the contractors for macadamizing, Messrs. Hands & Wadley, and now only awaits the acceptance of the Township Committee to legally throw this fine thoroughfare open for public travel.

The auction sale of the fine stone mansion property of Mr. T. A. Brown, on the mountain side, fronting Grove Street, did not take place last Thursday, as advertised, the right kind of purchasers not being present.

Ground has been broken for the erection of the new church of the Holy Cross, on the corner of Mercer Avenue and Washington Street, and the building will be rapidly pushed forward to completion.

Wm. E. Marsh, Sr., has laid a blue stone flag walk, four feet wide, on North side of Jackson Avenue from Somerset Street to Westervelt avenue, which contains 6,000 square feet of flagging. Let others follow where he leads.

☞ All Democrats and Conservatives are invited to be present at Laing's Hall, Friday evening, Dec. 1st, for the purpose of assisting in the nomination of Municipal and County Officers.

PROCEEDINGS COMMON COUNCIL.

FRIDAY EV'G, Nov. 24, 1876.

Council met pursuant to adjournment.
Members all present.
Pres. Mr. Smith in the chair.
Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Mr. Brown presented petition of C. Van Arsdale for an Inn and Tavern license to sell spirituous and fermented liquors in the building now occupied by him, situated on the corner of Cherry and Second Sts. On motion, petition referred to Com. on Licenses.

Mr. Mulford presented petition from Wm. Flanders to the bad condition of Front St., from 1st Baptist Church to Plainfield Ave., and asking the Council to take some measures to make it passable for vehicles. On motion, referred to Com. on Sts.

Mr. Brown presented claim of Wilson & Simpson for graveling of 7th St., in August, 1875, $75. On motion, referred to Com. on Sts. Also, claims of David Lesson, (2 bills) $16.75. On motion, referred to Com. on Alms.

Mr. Thorn presented claims of A. W. Gale, $18, (4 ballot boxes.) On motion, referred to Com. on Salaries, Offices and Elections.

Mr. Thorn, from Special Com. on procuring ballot boxes, reported the same completed, and delivered to the City Clerk. On motion, report received and Com. discharged.

Mr. Ryder, from Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps, reported on petition of property owners on Putnam St. and LeGrande Ave., referred back to said Com. for reconsideration, for the location of lamps in that vicinity, and recommended that 1 be located on the northeast cor. of Putnam St. and ———, 1 on the northeast cor. of Carlton and Putnam Sts., 1 on the northeast cor. of Kensington Ave. and Putnam St., 1 on the northeast cor. of Putnam St. and Park Place, and 1 at the intersection of LaGrande Ave. and Franklin Place; and after the same is located as above described, be lighted and cared for at the city's expense.

Mr. Brown moved that the report be received. Mr. Mulford moved to amend—"and the recommendation of the Com. adopted."

Remarks were made by Messrs. Brown, French, Smith and others of the Council relative to the matter, and upon the amendment of Mr. Mulford being put to vote, was lost. Messrs. Brown, French, Thorn, Voorhees, Simpson, Tier, Harris and Young, nay, and Messrs. Smith, Mulford and Ryder, aye. The original motion of Mr. Brown was then adopted.

The same Com. to whom was referred petition of property owners on Plainfield Ave. for reconsideration for the location of lamps, report that they have located 1 on the northwest cor. of Plainfield Ave. and Pemberton Ave., 1 on the west side of Plainfield Ave., directly opposite ex-Mayor Evans' door, 1 on the southwest cor. of Plainfield Ave. and Sherman Ave., 1 on the northeast side of Plainfield Ave., about 230 feet south of Randolph Road, 1 on the southwest side of Plainfield Ave., about one-half way between Sherman Ave. and 8th St., opposite a tree, 1 on the northeast cor. of Plainfield Ave. and 8th St., 1 on the southwest side of Plainfield Ave., half-way between 7th and 8th Sts., and recommend that the same be lighted and cared for at the city's expense.

Mr. Mulford moved that the report be received and the recommendation adopted.

Remarks were made by different members of the Council in this particular, and upon a vote being taken upon the motion of Mr. Mulford, it was lost. Messrs. Brown, Thorn, French, Tier, Harris and Simpson, nay, and Messrs. Smith, Ryder, Mulford, Young and Voorhees, aye.

Upon these two petitions for the location of lamps the Council thought that they were needed in the vicinities mentioned; but as the funds of the city were low, and their term of office drawing to a close, led them to act in the manner that they did.

Mr. Tier, from Com. on Licenses, reported favorably upon the petition of C. Van Arsdale for an Inn and Tavern license, with a res. that the license be granted. On motion, the petition was granted; Mr. Harris voting nay, and Messrs. Mulford, Young and Thorn not voting.

Mr. Voorhees, from Com. on Salaries, Offices and Elections, reported correct the following claims: F. B. Gillette, $62.50; A. W. Gale, $18. On motion, report received and claims referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Brown, from Com. on Sts. and Pub. Health, reported correct claim of John W. Laing, $7.50. Also, claim of Wilson & Simpson, $75. On motion, these claims were referred to the Aud. Com.

Mr. Simpson, from Aud. Com. reported the following claims correct: P. Muldoon, $18; T. Pruden, $20; M. McNierney, $20; Jno. Harding, (2 bills) $15; Jno. M. Schorb, $48; A. S. Coriell, $5; T. J. Gillies, $4.30; French & Martin, $5; S. A. Hope, $8; M. B. Long, $10; Coddington, McNabb & Co., (2 bills) $6; R. MacDonald, (2 bills) $158.00; T. Flynn, $12; Joseph S. Cutter, $77.38; J. M. Stiger, $10. On motion, report received and warrants ordered drawn for the several amounts.

Pres. Smith presented petition from Messrs. L. W. Serrell and others, relative to the bad condition of Front St., from Grove St. to Plainfield Ave. On motion, petition referred to Com. on Sts.

Mr. Brown moved that when Council adjourn it adjourn to meet one week from to-night, (Friday) at 7½ o'clock. Mr. Thorn moved to amend by making it Monday evening, Dec. 4th, 1876, regular meeting night. Amendment adopted.

Council then adjourned.

COMMUNICATED.

STATE ITEMS.

John H. Banta died in Paterson on Monday of last week. He died some time ago, and both deaths are attributed to grief and trouble. They had saved their earnings before marriage and deferred that event until they got enough to build a house. They made no wedding trip or display but put everything into the building. They paid the contractor in full, but neglected to file the contract; the builder did not pay for the material and under the lien law the Bantas lost their home, became disheartened and discouraged, and from that time seemed to have lost all ambition, and continued to run down until they went into a decline and at last died.

S. M. Mayenburg, of Paterson, has purchased the entire lot of raw silk exhibited by the Maritime Customs Department of the Chinese Government at the Centennial Exhibition.

In Sussex county Peter Cooper only received ten votes. The total vote is 808 larger than at the last Presidential election, and 1,124 larger than when Gov. Bedle ran two years ago. The Democratic vote has increased 893 in four years, and the Republican vote is 40 less. In Somerset county the vote was 1,250 more than in 1872, and 872 more than in 1874. Of the increase 871 was in Somerville and 220 in North Plainfield.

The Agricultural Report for October shows a falling off in the wheat crop in New Jersey. The corn crop was also injured by the prostration of fields by the blow in September. The potato crop averages 73 per cent.; sweet potatoes and beans abundant.

The stock of the Phillipsburg Gas Company is all taken, and they have now secured a charter, ready for operations early next Spring. Many of the business men in Easton have made application to the company to extend their pipes across the river.

The authorities of Phillipsburg have decided to put the tramps to work, and on Wednesday morning of last week they were put to breaking stones in the lock-up yard. They are to work two hours under charge of the police, and then to be furnished with breakfast.

The Board of Aldermen of Paterson have decided to place fire-escapes on all the public schools. An ordinance, providing for similar safeguards in all the mills and shops in the city, has been submitted to the board for consideration.

A fiendish attempt was made to throw from the track the 6:20 train from New York, on the Long Branch Railroad on Tuesday night of last week. Some malicious scoundrel had placed between the frog and the guard rail, at Valentine's switch, Woodbridge, a piece of rail about three feet long. Fortunately the fragment of rail was struck in such a manner that the wheels passed over it without throwing the train from the track, although every car was severely shaken. It was a miraculous escape as the train was making good speed when Engineer Haney first felt the shock.

The contract for building the new depot at Rahway has been awarded.—Mr. White, of Jersey City, the gentleman who built, for the Penn. R. R. Co., all the buildings on the meadows this side of Jersey City, has the mason work. The carpenter work was awarded to the firm of Meeker & Hedden, of Newark. The new depot is to be a very fine building, and when completed will add much to the convenience of the city.

The Fire Department Committee of the Common Council of Rahway have ordered a new Truck, which is to be completed soon. It is to be a very neat and tasty apparatus, and the Truck boys will no doubt feel a just pride in having under their charge such an attractive and useful piece of property.

On Thursday night last water was struck in the artesian well at the brewery of Messrs. Lembeck & Betz, in Jersey City. The well is over 1,300 feet deep, and cost about $16,000.

Police Officer Robert Stirling, of Jersey City, was last week sentenced to nine months' imprisonment for assault and battery upon Robert Fitzpatrick. His offence was aggravated by perjury.

A very singular and tragical event occurred near Oakland station, on the New Jersey Midland, recently. A party of men had assembled at the house of Peter S. Post, a farmer of that locality, for the purpose of making preparations for going out hunting next day. They were engaged in cleaning out their guns, etc., when one of them, who was handling a loaded rifle, by some mischance discharged the same. The ball went through the ceiling overhead, and through a bed on which Mr. Post's son, Isaac, aged eight years, was lying asleep, and then passed through his groin, lodging in the abdomen. The men, alarmed by the boy's cries, were horror-stricken at the shocking result of the carelessness of one of their number, while the family of Mr. Post were overwhelmed with grief. A surgeon was called, but his services were unavailing, and the lad died next evening at eleven o'clock.—This is one of the most singular and deplorable accidents that has ever occurred in the vicinity from the careless handling of firearms.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

SIR WALTER SCOTT.

There is a story told of Sir Walter Scott's experience with a doctor that is certainly good enough to be true.—While in a small English town his servant fell sick, and a medical man was sent for, and Sir Walter, looking up when he entered, saw before him a grave, sagacious-looking person, attired in black, with a shovel-hat, in whom, to his utter astonishment, he recognized a Scottish blacksmith, who had formerly practiced with considerable success as a veterinary operator in the neighborhood of Ashestiel. "How in all the world," exclaimed Sir Walter, "came you here. Can it be possible that this is John Lundie?" "In truth it is, your honor—just a'that's for him." "Well, let us hear. You were a horse-doctor before; now, it seems, you are a man-doctor. How do you get on?" "Ou! Just extraordinar' weel; for your honor maun ken that my practice is vera sure and orthodox. I depend entirely upon twa simples." "And what may their names be? Perhaps it is a secret?" "I'll tell your honor" (in a low tone); "my twa simples are just laudamy and calamy." "Simples with a vengeance!" replied Sir Walter. "But John, do you never happen to kill any of your patients?" "Kill! Ou, ay. May be sae. Whiles they dee and whiles no, but it's the will o' Providence. Ony hoo, your honor, it will be lang before it makes up for Flodden!"

A DISAPPOINTED WIFE.

A downcast looking woman, about forty years old, called at a lawyer's office on Griswold street yesterday, and asked the attorney if he could see to a little business for her. He replied that he could; and she explained:

"My husband went to the Black Hills over four months ago."

"Yes, I see. That is desertion, and good grounds for a divorce," he replied.

"I don't want no divorce, sir. What I want is for him to send me some money."

"And he won't?"

"Well, he hasn't sent me any yet."

"And what can I do?" asked the lawyer.

"Put a lawsuit on him and scare him into it," she answered.

He gloomily replied that the Court here had no jurisdiction in such a case, and that he could do nothing.

"Why, if I was a lawyer I could put a suit on him in an hour—I know I could!" she protested.

He shook his head.

"Well, all right," she said, as she rose to go, "I thought lawyers had some get-up to 'em, and I always held my breath when one passed the house, but this thing has opened my eyes.—You don't know any more than I do, sir, and I don't know anything! Good day, sir!"—Detroit Free Press.

You must have clean lips. One of the highest characteristics of ministerial manhood is purity of speech. If all other men are careless in their words, he must have watch upon his lips, and put a bridle upon his tongue. Nothing will injure a minister's influence and reputation more speedily than improper conversation. An unchaste story, a lewd entendre, a filthy joke, a questionable word or gesture, a sentence that would make a woman blush in public or in private, in select or in mixed company, is a burning shame and scandal to any minister of the Gospel. An impure story is next to an impure action; and a filthy joke is morally as wrong as a filthy deed.

A private letter from Atlanta, Georgia, records this interesting incident at the polls on Tuesday, Nov. 7th. One old colored man had worked all day in the Democratic cause, and had secured the votes of fifty of his own race. At about 5 o'clock in the afternoon he espied Ben Hill coming toward the polls, and coolly walking up and taking him by the arm, said: "General, I have voted about fifty of my people. I want to have the honor of voting one distinguished statesman—the colored man's friend." He gave Ben Hill a ticket, marched him to the polls and voted him, while such a yell went up from the throats of the assembled two thousand white and colored men as has not been heard in Atlanta for years.

MORGAN'S

SPARKLING

APOLLINARIS

Natural Mineral Water.

The attention of the public is invited to the above celebrated Water, the qualities of which will be briefly described, and in presenting it to the public the proprietor feels it his duty to give, at the same time, its chemical analysis, which has been most faithfully accomplished by the celebrated Dr. Kirchhoff, and found, in 16 oz. at a temperature of 70deg., to give the following results:

Acid, Carbonic,	47.04
Soda, Muriate,	3.57
" Sulphide,	2.30
" Phosphate,	a trace
" Fluate,	a trace
" Carbon,	9.65
Magnesia, Carbon,	3.39
Lime, Carbon,	.45
Oxide Iron,	.04
Alumina,	.12

By a careful examination of the above, the Carbonates and Sulphates will be found in greater proportion, and the Chlorides (common salt) in a lesser one, than in any other mineral water, including those of Vichy, [illegible] or Wiesbaden. These Waters, containing the chlorides in excess, prevent their continuous use. Several hypotheses have been advanced as to the action of the Alkaline Mineral Water. The fact that the ashes of [illegible] become free [illegible] upon the addition of Carbonate of [illegible] to indicate that Carbonates play an important role in the formation of [illegible]; [illegible] they are not only capable of exciting the Ciliary movements through the entire digestive organs, but will re-establish the extinguished or repressed Ciliary vibrations. The use of MORGAN'S APOLLINARIS WATER has the most wonderful results, and the highest recommendation that could be given is the fact that it is strongly recommended by parties whom no one can accuse of being easily deceived by therapeutic results, viz: the learned professors of the Vienna schools; while in London, by Sir Henry Thompson, where its constant use in Kidney disease has given it unparalleled success. The Therapeutic properties of the Apollinaris may be given as antacid, Tonic, slightly chalybeate, Aperient, Acidulous and Restorative.

Its use in the following diseases has been attended with perfect success:

Chronic Catarrh of the Stomach.

When there is a disagreeable feeling of pressure and fullness, which is increased by eating, filling the stomach with gas, caused by decomposition of food, the gastric fluid being abnormal, eructations of gas, heartburn, and the sensation of hunger is almost lost; in these cases a goblet of the water, taken half an hour before meals, will be found of great value.

In Affections of the Throat,

such as dryness, hoarseness, difficulty of breathing, enlargement of the glands, the Water will be found to combine with any mucus that may be present, and hasten its ejection. To persons under treatment for Consumption the quantity of Oxygen will be increased, and also the red blood corpuscles. For those who are delicate the water may be warmed to any temperature.

For affections of the Bladder, Kidneys, Stone or Gravel, the dissolving power of the Alkaline Carbonate [illegible]. Congestion of the Liver, caused by [illegible] of pressure of the Veins [illegible] and the whole organ, the APOLLINARIS is particularly beneficial, for the Alkalines, in the form in which they enter the body, can undoubtedly be used for a long time. For complaints peculiar to females, Amenorrhœa, Dysmenorrhœa or Leucorrhœa, which are essentially [illegible], the combinations contained in APOLLINARIS, viz: the Bicarbonate and Sulphide of Soda, will be found to increase that portion of the blood which forms the different tissues.

In cases of Fever, especially amongst children where medicine is [illegible], equal parts of new milk and the Water will be found not only refreshing, but will also reduce the temperature to the normal state, while it increases the secretion of the digestive organs.

The European press have been unanimous in their praise of the merits of this truly called "King of waters."

NEW JERSEY

Enamel Paint Company,

RARITAN, NEW JERSEY.

Manufacturers of

Bradley's Enamel Paint.

Mixed Ready for Use, in any shade, Tint or Color desired.

THESE Paints are composed of the purest and best materials known to paint; the principal ingredients being Pure White LEAD, ZINC, and LINSEED OIL, which are made to unite in a homogeneous mass by the addition of other materials which add greatly to the durability, elasticity, beauty and strength of the Paint. The whole are chemically combined so that the pigments are held in permanent solution, thus forming a new compound which dries on the surface and adheres firmly to it, thus forming a Smooth, Glossy, Firm, Elastic, Beautiful and Durable Paint.

The Oil, which is the real life of the Paint, cannot leave it and be absorbed by the substance to which it is applied, as it does in paints mixed in the ordinary way, & thus leave the pigment dry and chalky, to wash & rub off in a few months. This paint is unaffected by changes of temperature, is perfectly impervious to the action of water, is well adapted to all classes of work, & is in every way a better paint for either inside or outside work or boat painting than any other Paint known to the trade, and will last at least three times as long as the best Lead and Oil mixed in the ordinary way.

These Paints are Ready for use,

Are easily applied by any one, require no mixing, stirring or addition of dryers.

Liberal Inducements to Dealers.

And full satisfaction guaranteed to their Customers.

Sold by the Gallon, Keg or Barrel. Orders attended to promptly. For Price Mist and Sample Color Card, Address,

CAUTION!

The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Thos. A. Carman some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filled over one thousand pages and counsel were over two weeks in summing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an air-tight iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing stratum. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is of steel, made sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Carman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defence contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement had been clearly proved.

POETRY.

WHEN SCHOOL LETS OUT.

BY HENRY T. STANTON.

When school lets out at sundown time,
And shadows long up hill sides climb,
With leap and romp and laugh and shout,
In hat and smock and roundabout,
By grain-field fence, through pasture-grass,
A foot-worn way, the scholars pass;
A bright-faced and brown-faced lout,
Go heart-glad home, when school lets out.

I sit and watch, where, white and slow,
The mistress moves in grace below;
A lithe young girl, with folded hands,
With low down looks in wide brown bands,
Who floats in light where deep shades lie,
With sweet, sad looks in lake-blue eyes;
I sit and watch, and hope and doubt
I know not what, when school lets out.

Were I so young as they who know
The mild maid rule, just there below,
Would I be glad as they who pass
By grain-field fence and pasture grass?
Would I be glad the home-bound way,
And laugh and romp and shout as they?
It might be so in roundabout,
But not as now, when school let's out.

Some day—how soon I cannot tell,
But some day soon, I know full well—
My feet shall fall with beat as low
The green-laid way that hers do go,
And I shall feel my great heart rise
To tender looks from lake-blue eyes.
And these shall be, no fear, no doubt,
Her hand in mine, when school lets out.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE DAUGHTER'S SACRIFICE.

Mary Goldthwait was sitting by the well-filled grate in her father's drawing room. It was on a cold evening in winter, and the wind howled mournfully around the street corners and through the narrow lanes and alleys. Mary was a pale, slim girl, but possessing a beauty which even the most fastidious could not have questioned. Her hair, which was of a deep, golden brown, lay neatly waving upon a brow as pure as snow, and the soft, lustrous eyes, which seemed to have the same deep golden hue, shed a light from the soul which could only have emanated from a source of purity and worth. She had seen 28 years of life, and yet she remained a maiden, beneath her father's roof. A close calculator of physiognomy would have said that Mary had some heart-grief that made her look so pale. So she had, though perhaps no one save herself, on earth, knew all her heart secrets. She had lost a beloved mother when she was 20, and since that she had seen one brother and one older sister laid away in the tomb. She sat now with her small hands clasped over her bosom, and her eyes turned downward till the long lashes lay like golden pencilings upon her cheek.

Near her, in his great arm chair, sat her father. He was a tall, slim man, whose head was white, and whose face deeply furrowed by the hand of time. There were some kind marks upon his features, and some hard, bold ones; but now he looked troubled and very unhappy.

"Mary," he said, in continuation of a conversation already commenced, "for twenty-eight years I have found a home for you and your every wish has been promptly met and answered. Your good has been my highest aim, and your peace and happiness my only joy. You are advancing in years, and soon your father must leave you alone. But I—I—cannot leave you at the mercy of the cold world. Now a good home is opened to you, and you must accept it. Men might call me selfish could they know all my motives; but I am sure you will not. A crisis has come; a volcano has grown up beneath my feet. In a few more short days it must overwhelm me in utter ruin, if I be not saved. Mr. Smith has asked me for your hand. He has seen you at church, and he has watched you narrowly. He loves you. He is wealthy—more wealthy than your father was. And he holds notes of mine—notes to the amount of $100,000."

"But your name is not alone on these notes?" gasped Mary.

"No—only the first of four; but I am holden for the whole. Yet the quarter part of that is more than sufficient to ruin me."

"And Mr. Smith makes my hand the equivalent?"

"Yes. Or—I must say he has not said so: But he knows my situation, and knowing it, he has asked for the hand of my child. Ah, Mary, it does not seem to me that God has kept your hand till now that it might be the means of lifting your old father up from ruin. You have even rejected suitors that I have favored, but I do not think you have rejected a better man than Mr. Smith."

Ah, that old man had forgotten one! He had forgotten a bright-haired youth who once laid his heart at Mary's feet. But that was long years agone, and his mind went not back so far.

"Now what shall I tell Mr. Smith?"

"My heart is broken and torn," she said, gazing sadly into her father's face, "but my hand is free. Tell Mr. Smith this. Tell him I will give my hand to save my father, and forget not to tell him that my heart is not in the trade, for I would not deceive."

"Oh, you will love him, Mary. He has promised that you shall have all you can ask for, and I know he will be kind."

"I have said that I will marry him," the fair maiden returned, "and so you may tell him. But you will only cruelly deceive him did you tell him no more. Tell him my father has cared for me and protected me through a weary life, and now I am ready to save that father from ruin. Tell him this and then he shall know all."

"I shall tell him to come to morrow evening, Mary, for he so wishes. Oh, I know you will be happy. He will make you one of the best husbands. He is rich—very rich."

"In what, father?"

The old man started at these words, for they were spoken very strangely. "In the goods of this world, and in—in—honor and manhood," he replied.

Mary did not speak further, for she wished not to worry her father. She knew that his soul was already tortured by misfortune and commercial calamity, and she would not make her sacrifice for him ungrateful by casting a shadow of reproach upon him.

Ere long old Andrew Goldthwait allowed his feelings to run in a more pleasing channel. The ruin which had stared him in the face was to be averted, and in his soul he believed that his child would not be one whit worse off for the transaction. He knew Mr. Smith to be wealthy, and he believed him to be a kind and honorable man. He fancied too that he could look into and read his daughter's heart. He thought she wept and sorrowed for the mother and brother and sister she had lost, and that she objected to this match because she had resolved not to marry. But he flattered himself that at the end of the first year of married life he should find her a happy wife.

On the following evening Mary sat again by the grate in the drawing room. She was alone now, and her face was more pale than usual.

But she was calm—as calm as the marble statue that stood near her.

The outer door was opened, and she heard the tread of heavy feet in the hall. Then the inner door swung back, and her father entered. She looked up and saw another man—it was he to whom she had promised her hand; the man whose money was to save her parent.

Mr. Goldthwait introduced Mr. Smith. Mary arose and extended her hand. It was cold, but it did not tremble. She looked up into his face, and she saw a man of medium height, with a high brow, dark eyes, and a neatly trimmed beard. He greeted her politely, and then took a seat.

Some half an hour was spent in conversation, generally between the two men, and then the remarks grew gradually less, until a silence ensued.

Nearly ten minutes elapsed before another word was uttered, and the stillness was oppressive, when the visitor broke the spell.

"Miss Goldthwait," he said, in a low, soft tone, "you are, of course, aware of the object of my visit here this evening; and I know you will pardon me if I speak plainly."

Mary looked up, but she made no reply. The tones of the speaker's voice was so kind and gentle that she began to pity him. She felt that she ought to go and find some wife who could love him.

"Your father has spoken plainly with me," resumed Mr. Smith. "He has told me that you feared you had no heart to give, but that you will yet be my wife.—Yet he assured me that you will learn to love in time. I once thought I should never love again, but the sight of your face dispelled the illusion. I will tell you all, and then you shall judge for yourself whether I have a heart for you."

Mary had now fixed her eyes steadily upon the speaker, and her features had assumed an eager, wistful expression.

"Long years ago I loved a beautiful girl, and she loved me in return. I was young then, and I only thought of love, and I did not dream that fate would crush my soul's dearest hope. The fair girl was all to me. I held her in my soul as my very life, and not a thought had I of the future but was of her. And I knew that she loved me as well, for she had told me so a hundred times. But a terrible crash came upon my joys. My idol's father was wealthy and I was poor. He was a merchant—I only an humble clerk. When I told him of my love he spurned me from his door, and bade me never enter it again. O, heaven, what a wreck of soul was that! Who shall picture the utter midnight of the blasted and broken heart? Who shall tell its wailings, and its deep, dark griefs? All crushed and broken down, I fled from the place where my love had grown up, and in the heat and whirl of business I tried to forget my sorrows.—Worldly fortune seemed to single me out as its especial favorite. My wildest and most reckless transactions turned out well, and money seemed to fly out as if by magic from everything I placed my hand to. Thus passed away eleven years, and then I came to this city where I settled down. That was one year ago. I saw you, I loved you; you opened my crushed heart and let the title of love forth. I asked the merchant again for his child, and—and—"

The speaker's lips trembled, his bosom seemed heaving with a powerful emotion.

"Mary," he said, in a broken tone, "I have asked thy father, and he has told me—yes. Will you be mine?"

The maiden had no more doubt. Years seemed to have passed like magic from the calendar of the past; it seemed only yesterday that a loved youth has told his tale of love, for since then only grief had been hers, and grief was no more now. She sank forward and at the next moment she was clasped to the bosom of the man who for long years had possessed her heart.

"James Smith!" gasped the old man, starting to his feet in astonishment.

"Yes, sir," returned the young man, looking up through his tears, but yet holding the loved one in his embrace.

"The James Smith who used to be my brother's clerk?"

"Yes, sir, the very same. Do you retract your promise?"

"No, no, no! O, my soul, no! Take my child—take her, and if you love her, forgive her father."

"Ah," replied the happy suitor, as he led Mary to a seat, and then sat by her side, and drew her head upon his shoulder, "if I forgive, then I must remember a wrong, and that I will not do. Let us forget all of the past but its joys, and look to the future for what duty and love can give us. I am now content."

"And so am I," uttered the aged parent.

"And what say you?" asked James, gazing into Mary's face.

"Ah," she replied, in a tone too deep for mere passing emotion, "content were too poor a word to tell all I feel. God grant that I forget him not in this great joy!"

THE VALUE OF AN OATH.

BY JUDGE CLARK.

It was an unpopular case to defend. The crime charged against my client was one of shocking atrocity, the murder of his own child. The popular verdict had already condemned him, and there was little doubt but that the jury would go the same way.

Arthur Berkley, the prisoner, had married Edith Granger, a wealthy heiress whose father had died, leaving her his whole fortune, to the exclusion of a profligate son whom he had disinherited and driven from his home.

Mrs. Berkley died within a year after marriage, leaving an infant a few weeks old, a feeble little creature, requiring constant and assiduous care. Indeed, Dr. Baldwin almost took up his quarters in the house, often passing the night there, that he might be at hand in case of need.

One of these nights, the doctor, as he afterwards stated in his evidence, after retiring to bed, feeling solicitous about his little charge, got up and stole softly to the nursery to see that everything was right.

He found the door ajar and a dim light burning within. As he advanced, he distinctly saw Arthur Berkley standing by the table, holding to the child's mouth the bottle from which it was accustomed to receive its food. At the sound of the doctor's footsteps, he quickly put down the bottle, and stealthily left the apartment by a side entrance.

Not a little surprised at these movements, the doctor approached and laid his hand upon the child's face, which he found in violent convulsions, which were followed, in a few seconds by the stillness of death.

A post mortem examination, and analysis of the contents of the stomach, placed it beyond doubt that prussic acid had been administered. And an examination of the bottle, found where Berkley had left it, proved that the milk in it contained a large quantity of the same deadly poison.

On this evidence Berkley was arrested and indicted for murder; and there was not a dissenting voice as to his guilt. An incentive to the crime was found in the fact that, as heir to the child, he would inherit the fortune which had descended to the latter through the death of its mother. No wonder a deed so monstrous, actuated by motives so mercenary, should excite the deepest indignation.

Berkley's previous character had been good. He had always appeared gentle and kind; had been a devoted husband; and, during the brief period of his life, had shown the tenderest attachment to his child.

In my conference with him, he seemed overwhelmed with grief, but strenuously denied all imputations of guilt, asserting that he had not gone to the nursery after retiring that night till called by the alarm of the child's death.

Of course, his statements, in the face of proofs so damaging, weighed but little. I had no confidence in them myself. Still, it was my professional duty to see that a man on trial for his life, who had entrusted me with his cause, had every right the law accorded him. This duty performed, my conscience would be clear whatever the result.

It would be tedious to dwell on the steps preceding the trial. I interposed no obstacles in its coming on speedily. My aim was not to thwart the ends of justice, but to see it fairly meted out.

Dr. Baldwin was the first and chief witness. He told his story clearly and methodically; and it was easy to see it carried conviction to the jury. My rigid cross-examination only served to bring out his evidence with more distinctness of detail. I elicited the fact, for instance, that the child's nurse lay in the same room; that she was asleep when the doctor entered, and that it was to her he first announced the child's death. I also examined fully as to the prisoner's acts at the time the alarm was given, endeavoring to show that he came from the direction of his own chamber appearing to have been just aroused from sleep. But I made nothing of this, the witness stating that his agitation had distracted his attention from these points.

The doctor had only recently settled among us, but his conduct had been so exemplary that he had made many friends. He had especially won the confidence of the prisoner. I interrogated him as to his past career, but brought out nothing to his discredit.

The evidence of the chemist who made the analysis was next put in, and the State's attorney "rested."

"I have brought the nurse here," he said, "but as she was asleep when the prisoner entered, her evidence is unimportant. I thought it my duty to have her here, however, to afford the other side the opportunity to call her if they desire."

Nothing could render the prisoner's case more hopeless than it was already, while something might come out to his advantage.

"I will call the witness," I said.

She was a middle-aged woman, of not unprepossessing appearance. Her agitation was visible; and I noticed that, in taking the oath, she laid her hand beside the book and not upon it.

"I ask that the witness be sworn with her hand on the book," I said, calling attention to the omission.

The judge so ordered; and the witness' hand shook violently as she reluctantly obeyed the direction, and the oath was readministered.

After a few preliminary questions as to the hour of her retiring, her falling asleep, &c.

"What is the next thing you remember?" I asked.

The witness hesitated.

"Answer the question," said his Honor.

"I—I heard a noise as of some one coming into the room," she faltered.

"Did you see any one enter?"

Another pause.

I repeated the inquiry.

"I did," was the answer.

"What did the person do?"

The woman's face grew paler, and it was with difficulty she found utterance.

"He came to the side of the cradle," she said, "with the bottle of milk in his hand, and put it to the baby's mouth."

The judge and State's attorney both bent forward in eager attention. The latter, it was evident, had not expected this testimony.

I felt that my questions, thus far, had only served to draw the halter closer about my client's neck. But I had gone too far to retreat.

My voice trembled almost as much as that of the witness as I proceeded.

"Did you recognize that person?"

"I did," was the answer, scarcely audible.

My client's life hung on the answer to the next question! The silence of the court room was death-like. I dreaded to break it. The sound of my voice startled me when I spoke.

"Who was it?" I asked.

Her lips moved, but no sound came.

"By the solemn oath you have taken on that sacred book, and by your hopes of salvation hereafter, I adjure you to tell the truth!" I said, earnestly.

Her agitation was fearful to witness. She shook from head to foot. A deadly pallor overspread her face. Slowly raised her trembling hand, and pointing at Dr. Baldwin.

"That is the man!" she almost shrieked.

Then, in quick, wild accents she went on to tell that on finding himself discovered by reason of her waking, the culprit, who was no other than George Granger, Mrs. Berkley's profligate brother, had disclosed to her that his purpose was to regain his lost inheritance by putting out of the way those who stood between him and it, promising the witness to provide for her handsomely, if she kept his secret; but, when put to the test, she had found herself unable to violate her solemn oath.

George Granger, alias Dr. Baldwin, would have left the court room, but an officer was ordered to detain him; and when his disguise was removed, though he had been absent many years, there were many present who could testify to his identity.

My client was acquitted on the spot; and his cell in the prison was that night occupied by his false accuser.—New York Ledger.

SIMON STRINGER'S RELIGION.

Simon Stringer was a bluff old farmer. He prided himself on being a plain, matter-of-fact man, about whom there was no foolishness or sentiment. On more than one occasion he had mortified his wife and daughters by hustling them out of religious meetings when they had begun to show signs of emotion. He said he didn't believe in "mirakerious conversions," and that people who cried and yelped over getting religion "wasn't gettin' it by a darned sight." He believed that the genuine article was soothing and calming, and not exciting in its influence.

Once the Campbellites held a protracted meeting in his neighborhood, and as it was carried on without any sudden outbursts of feeling, Simon took kindly to it and attended regularly. One Sunday morning he told his wife to lay him out two suits of clothes.

"Why, Simon," exclaimed she in her shrill tones, "whatever do you want with two suits of clothes?"

"That's my business—not yours," he replied quite gruffly. "You lay out my black suit for me to put on, and wrap the brown one up in a bundle, and don't ask any fool ish questions."

His wife wonderingly but silently complied, and Simon donned one suit, and with the other under his arm, mounted his horse and rode away, followed by the anxious eyes of the big and little Stringers, who marveled greatly, and said one to another, "What's dad going to do with his tother clothes?"

Simon didn't return till supper time. He took his place at the supper table, which was the usual signal for the family to begin an onslaught on the victuals, but on this occasion his voice arrested every fork in its descent, and for the second time that day astonished the Stringers. Glancing around the startled circle, he thus delivered himself:

"I want it understood that the head of this household has this day been baptised. He is a follower of the meek and lowly Jesus, and the first critter at this table that dips into anything before a blessin' is asked 'ill get smashed baldheaded. Drop yer eyes, ye heathen."

The blessing was asked, and that meal was eaten in silence.

After the chores were done, the Stringers were straggling off to bed, when the stern voice of the old man again arrested them, and filled their minds with grave forebodings as to what was coming next. He addressed them as follows:

"Come into this room, every devil one of you, and flop down on your knees. It is my duty as a devout Christian to have a family worship, and I'll have it, too, and have respectful attention, or I'll bust some domestic ties asunder. This mansion must resound with praises to the Most High, or it will resound with some one gittin' a h—l of a thrashin'—I mean being severely chastised. The first one that snickers, or makes an unseemly noise, I'll get up and throw a cheer through him, or her, as the case may be. Let us pray."

The prayer was prayed, and never was there a more attentive audience.

This sort of thing continued about two weeks, and the Stringer family was kept in a state of extreme misery. The younger members had been several times severely whipped for conduct unbecoming the children of a true believer, and the elder ones had received harsh reprimands for failing to fall into the new order of things and comport themselves with due dignity.

Then one morning Simon came in, with a bad limp, a battered milk-pail, and the knee of his pants torn. Dropping into a chair at the table, he plunged his fork into the nearest dish. The children looked up from the backs of their plates questioningly, and the old woman squeaked, "Why, Simon!"

"Shut up, and eat!" he growled, and then in a few moments added:

"This blessin' and prayer business is suspended fur awhile. I don't forgit my obligations an' duties as a Christian, an' I'll resoom 'em arter I've converted that doldinged red heifer. The 'tarnal critter presoomes too much on my Christian forbearance. Durn a hypocrite. I won't pray when my soul ain't into it, it's too great a strain. Fur the time bein' I hev descended from grace. Pass the tomatusses."

A sigh of relief went round the circle, and if the red heifer had known how she had risen in the esteem of a majority of the Stringers her fractious soul would have leaped for joy.

That was several years ago, and now the red heifer is a cow, and the worst one in the neighborhood. The Stringers say, as they punch and plague her: "S'long as we keep Old Red wild, dad won't git any more o' that awful relijun."—Brunswick News.

Scene—a barroom. Time—midnight.

Wife—"I wish that man would go home, if he's got one to go to."

Landlord—"Silence; he'll call for something directly. He's taking the shingles off his own house, and putting them on ours."

By this time James began to come to his right senses, stretched himself as if he had just awoke, and said, "I believe I will go."

"Don't be in a hurry, James," said the landlord.

"Oh, yes, I must go," said James, as he started.

After an absence of some time the landlord met and accosted him with, "Hello, Jim, why ain't you been down to see us?"

"Why, I had taken so many shingles off my own house that it begun to leak, so I thought it time to stop the leak, and so I have done it," said James.

An exchange says the champion mean man lives in Montgomery county. He has been married four times. When his second wife died he split his first wife's tombstone and laid the two bodies side by side, each with half a slab. When his last two wives departed, he placed them head to head with the first two, so that the split tombstone would do for all four. He will not marry again for fear he cannot utilize that stone again in case there is another death in the family. His neighbors do say he buried his aunt at the foot of his grape vine so that she would be useful as a nourisher of the plant. If this is true, that mean man beats the parsimonious Frenchman, who, after blowing the fire, used to put a cork in the nozzle of the bellows in order to save the wind for the next time; and he removes the sack from Crackstummer of Derby, who always saved the backbone of the shad in order to avoid buying combs for the family.

THE LATEST.

As was pretty generally anticipated the Returning Boards of Louisiana and Florida have consummated their determination and by throwing out the majorities in a sufficient number of Democratic Counties, have given these States to Hayes and Wheeler. It is unnecessary at this time to comment on these acts. There is but one opinion entertained on this subject, by a vast majority of the people of our country. Fraud, and fraud only, has been the instrument by which this result was achieved, and we are satisfied that the investigations, which will be at once instituted, will render this fact so patent that there will not remain a doubt of it in the mind of any unprejudiced man in the nation. Of course, the result will not be definitely announced and settled until February and no man can now say what developments may be brought to light before that time, to effect the solution of the question. We are yet firm in our belief that justice will be done, and that the man, who was really elected by the people, will be inaugurated on the 5th of March next.

CONGRESS.

The Senate met at noon on Monday last, Mr. Ferry in the Chair. Mr. Blaine, of the State of Maine, Messrs. Chaffee and Teller, the Senators from Colorado, and Mr. Price, the new Senator from West Virginia, vice Caperton, deceased, were sworn in.—The new Senators from Colorado drew for their respective terms, when Mr. Chaffee secured the long term, ending March 4, 1879, and Mr. Teller the short term ending March 4, 1877.

Committees were appointed to notify the President and the House of Representatives that the Senate was ready for business, and at 12:30 a recess for three-quarters of an hour was taken.

When the Senate re-assembled, Mr. Edmunds submitted a lengthy resolution instructing the Committee on Privileges and Elections, when appointed, to inquire whether in the recent election in South Carolina, Louisiana and Florida the right of any citizen to vote has been denied or abridged, and also as to the eligibility of electors, which was read, ordered to be printed and lie on the table.

Mr. Ingalls, (Kan.) submitted a joint resolution recommending that a Convention be held at Columbus, Ohio, in May next, to revise and amend the Constitution of the United States.—Ordered to be printed and to lie on the table. The Senate then, at 1:20, on motion of Mr. Wright, adjourned.

The session of the House opened in the presence of an immense concourse of spectators. The Speaker's chair was draped in mourning in respect to the memory of the late Speaker, Mr. Kerr, of Indiana, whose death occurred during the recess. The Clerk, Mr. Adams, called the House to order, and after calling the roll, proceeded to the election of Speaker. Hon. Samuel J. Randall was nominated by the Democrats, and Hon. Jas. A. Garfield by the Republicans. The whole number of votes cast was 249, of which Mr. Randall received 161, and Mr. Garfield 82. Mr. Randall was escorted to the Chair, and made the following address:

GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES: Called to this position because of the death of the late Speaker, Mr. Kerr, of Indiana, I only express the universal sentiment in saying he was a good and great man, whose public and private life was characterized by purity, patriotism and unswerving integrity. Nobody can more completely appreciate than I do the high honor of presiding over the deliberations of the Representatives of the American people, and for this mark of your esteem and confidence I return my profound and heartfelt acknowledgment. In the discharge of the important duties confided to me I shall endeavor to be absolutely fair and impartial, while enforcing the rules and upholding the constitutional prerogatives of the body. I shall, at the same time, protect each and every member in the rights and privileges to which he may justly be entitled. In the exercise of the Parliamentary powers of the Chair it will be my duty and my pleasure to give true expression in the appointment of Committees to the opinions and wishes of the House upon every question presented, believing myself, as I really am, no more than the voice of the House itself. We stand in the presence of events which strain and test in the last degree our form of government; our liberties, consecrated by so many sacrifices in the past, and preserved amid the rejoicings of an exultant people to our Centennial anniversary as one among the nations of the earth, must be maintained, at every hazard. [Applause.] The people look confidently to your moderation, to your patient, calm, firm judgment and wisdom, at this time fraught with so many perils. Let us not, I beseech of you, disappoint their just expectation and their keen sense of right, but by vigilance prevent even the slightest departure from the Constitution and laws, forgetting in the moment of difficulty that we are the adherents of a party, and only remembering that we are American citizens, with a country to save, which will be lost if unauthorized and unconstitutional acts on the part of the Executive officers be not frowned down at once with relentless and unsparing condemnations.

Mrs. Alice Smith and two little girls named Miller, the youngest, Mary, six years old, went to the woods near East Rahway, N. J., on Tuesday last, to gather fagots. When they secured as many bundles as they could carry, they collected chips and made a fire to warm their hands. Approaching too near little Mary's dress was caught by the flames. Her sister caught the little one in her arms to extinguish the fire, and Mrs. Smith also came to the rescue.—All three were burned so badly that Dr. Silvers, who now has them in charge, entertains no hope of their recovery.

The round-house of the Central Railroad of New Jersey at High Bridge is to be closed, and locomotives on the Bound Brook branch will be run through from New York to Philadelphia.

TERRIBLE DISASTER.

A disaster, the like of which has no parallel in the history of this country for years, occurred in Brooklyn, N. Y., on Tuesday night last. While the play of the "Two Orphans" was being performed in the Brooklyn Theatre before a crowded house, and just after the curtain rose on the beginning of the last act, it was discovered that the scenery in the rear of the was on fire. The flames were first seen by Miss Kate Claxton, who was performing in the play; other actors and actresses immediately after saw the danger, and endeavored to calm the audience.

Miss Claxton states that at the beginning of the last act of the "Two Orphans," just as the curtain went up she heard a rumbling noise on the stage, and two minutes after she saw the flames. She thinks it caught in the flies, and it immediately enveloped the stage.

Mr. Studley and Mr. Murdoch were on the stage, together with Mrs. Farren and herself, and efforts were made to quiet the audience. She said to them: "Be quiet, we are between you and the fire. The front doors are open and the passages are clear."

The flames were then swooping down upon the four, and she ran out and down into the audience and escaped.—Mrs. Farren, Mr. Murdoch and Mr. Studley also joined in the effort to quiet the audience. No fire was used in the presentation of the play.

Of course, as soon as the audience caught sight of the fire a wild rush was made for the exit doors, of which there were six, but in the panic that ensued, the frantic men, women and children were hurled to the floor and trampled to death.

After the fire had been subdued by the firemen, a search was began for bodies in the ruins, it being surmised that possibly some one of the numerous spectators present might have lost their lives, but the workmen and spectators were unprepared for the frightful sight that met their gaze upon exploring the smoking ruins.

bodies have thus far been found, in most cases the remains being so disfigured and burned as to be beyond recognition except by trinkets or portions of clothing on the bodies.

Most of the bodies were found in one part of the theatre, in a small compass, piled one on top of the other. The reason of this was that the upper galleries gave way in the mad rush for the doors when the alarm came, which precipitated the entire mass of struggling human beings into the cellar beneath, where they must have been suffocated by the foul gases and air occassioned by the fire.

The intensest excitement prevails and the scene beggars description. It is conjectured that the fire was caused by a "drop light" coming into contact with portions of the scenery, which being of dry and inflamable material immediately took fire and burned like tinder.

Two well-known actors, Mr. Murdoch and Claude Burroughs perished in the flames.

CHARTER ELECTION.

The annual election for City Officers for Plainfield, also two members of the Board of Chosen Freeholders, occurred last Tuesday, Dec. 5th, and resulted in the election of the Republican Ticket. The Democrats did not make a straight ticket, nominating Councilmen and other officers of both political parties, but substituting Democratic names for Freeholders, and School Trustee and heading the same Citizen's Ticket.—

The total number of votes polled was as follows:

First District, 550.
Second District, 409.

In 1st. Dist. Citizen Ticket rec 206 votes.
" 2nd " " " " 151 "
" 1st. " Rep. " " 344 "
" 2nd " " " " 258 "

Mr. Job Male, the Mayor elect, is a gentleman of well-known ability, and was elected to the same office during the first year of Plainfield's history as a city, administering the affairs of his office faithfully and honestly. He had no opposition at the late election, his name appearing on both tickets. The retiring Mayor, Dr. J. C. Sutphen, has faithfully served his constituents for the past two years, and has administered the affairs of the same in an impartial manner.

Below we give the names of all candidates with the number of votes received in each case.

Burglars have been operating extensively at Oxford Furnace and Washington, Warren county. They entered the office of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company there, but found very small booty. Several dwellings were entered at Washington, among them that of Mr. D. M. Ferry.—The burglars were heard by Mr. Ferry, but too late to prevent the thieves making off with jewelry and other valuables amounting to about $900.

SALE OF THE CENTENNIAL BUILDINGS.

The sale of buildings connected with the Centennial Exhibition attracted about four hundred persons to the Centennial grounds at Philadelphia Saturday last. The following is a list of the buildings sold, the prices obtained and the original cost of the structures:

Buildings which cost altogether more than $2,500,000 were sold for $296,160.

THE BEATEN PARTY.

"My son," said a pious father out on South Hill to his hopeful son, "you did not saw any wood for the kitchen stove yesterday, as I told you to; you left the back gate open and let the cow get out; you cut off eighteen feet of the clothes line to make a lasso; you stoned Mr. Robinson's pet dog and lamed it; you put a hard-shell turtle in the hired girl's bed; you tied a strange dog to Mr. Jacobson's door bell, and painted red and green stripes on the legs of old Mrs. Polaby's white pony, and hung your sister's bustle out at the front window. Now, what am I—what can I do to you for such conduct?" "Are all counties heard from?" asked the candidate. The father replied sternly, "No trifling, sir; no, I have yet several reports to receive from others of the neighbors." "Then," replied the boy, "you will not be justified in proceeding to extreme measures until the official count is in." Shortly afterward the election was thrown into the house, and before half the votes were canvassed it was evident, from the peculiar intonation of the applause, that the boy was badly beaten.—Burlington (Iowa) Hawk Eye.

Jeremiah F. Fairbanks, the defaulting cashier of the State National Bank of Elizabeth, was taken from the County Jail to Trenton, Tuesday last, by United States Marshal Plummer to receive sentence at the hands of Judge Nixon, of the United States Court.—Upon arriving at the Capitol, the prisoner was driven to the Court-room.—He remained there with his friends for a short time, when it was announced that Judge Nixon would again postpone sentence in his case until the January term of the Court. It is the general impression that this step was taken in the hope that E. P. Williams, the absconding merchant of Elizabeth, who was the instigator of the embezzlement, would in the meantime be re-captured. Since his flight to escape sentence three weeks ago no traces of his whereabouts have been discovered, although photographs of him have been sent to the various cities of the Union and detectives have been actively at work in the search. A petition is now being circulated asking Judge Nixon to suspend sentence in the case of Fairbanks, the petitioners saying that they believe him to be honest, and that his greatest fault was weakness in allowing himself to be the dupe of Williams.—Exchange.

STATE ITEMS.

Ice 4½ inches thick was cut at High Bridge last week.

The registering turnstiles at the Hoboken ferry-house were put into operation on Sunday last, causing much dissatisfaction.

William H. Taylor and Frederick Cooper, sentenced to the Middlesex County Jail for four years for burglary, attempted to saw through the gratings of their cell on Thanksgiving Day, but were detected.

The Passaic County Medical Society appointed a committee of nine physicians to report fully upon the subject of diptheria in Paterson, the number of cases, their location and the sanitary precautions.

The commissioners who are to condemn land for the Hudson River Tunnel Company, consisting of B. W. Williamson, ex Chancellor of New Jersey, R. C. Bacot, C. E. and ex-Judge James L. Ogden, met on Saturday last at Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City. They elected Mr. Bacot President, and after viewing the ground to be condemned adjourned until next Wednesday until ten o'clock, A. M.

A large and destructive fire occurred at New Brunswick last Friday night.—It took place in the buildings occupied by Hon. Levi D. Jarrard as stores and stables. The flames spread with great rapidity, and property was consumed to the value of about $30,000. Three men were badly injured by the falling of a wall. The insurance on the property destroyed amounts to only $15,000.

Mrs. Sophia Dodd, wife of Zophar Dodd, of Bloomfield, Essex county, committed suicide, as is supposed, by drowning herself in a cistern. She had been acting strangely for some time past. On Wednesday night, (29th ult.) she lay upon the lounge and slept there, refusing to go to bed. The next morning Mr. Dodd awoke early and, not finding his wife in the room where he left her, he searched the house, but failed to find her. He then went into a little area adjoining the kitchen, where he noticed the trap door which covered the cistern was raised, and that a strap by which the door was lifted was hanging in the inside the cistern. He called his son, and on looking into the cistern found his wife lying there dead. She had, it is supposed, got up, gone to the cistern, opened the trap door, and let herself down into the water by the strap. She was 72 years of age, and leaves a husband, two sons and a daughter.

ST. NICHOLAS.

"THE King of all Publications issued for the young on either side of the Atlantic."—Southampton (England) Observer.

The third volume of this incomparable Magazine is now completed. With its eight hundred royal octavo pages, and its six hundred illustrations, its splendid serials, its shorter stories, poems, and sketches, etc., in its beautiful binding of red and gold, it is the most splendid gift-book for boys and girls ever issued from the press. Price, $4; in full gilt, $5.

"ST. NICHOLAS is full of the choicest things. The Publication is, in all respects, the best of its kind. We have never yet seen a number that was not surprisingly good."—The Churchman, Hartford, Conn.

ST. NICHOLAS for 1877, which opens with November 1876, begins a short and very entertaining Serial from the French, "The Kingdom of the Greedy," a story adapted to the Thanksgiving season. Another Serial, of absorbing interest to boys, "HIS OWN MASTER," by J. T. Trowbridge, author of the "Jack Hazard Stories," begins in the CHRISTMAS HOLIDAY NUMBER.

Besides Serial stories, Christmas stories, lively sketches, poems and pictures for the Holidays, and some astonishing illustrations of Oriental sports, with drawings by Siamese artists, the Christmas Holiday Number of ST. NICHOLAS, superbly illustrated, contains a very interesting paper, "THE BOYS OF MY BOYHOOD," by William Cullen Bryant; "The Horse Hotel," a lively article, by Charles A. Barnard, splendidly illustrated; "The Clock in the Sky," by Richard A. Proctor; "A Christmas Play for Homes or Sunday-schools," by Dr. Eggleston; "The Peterkins' Christmas Tree," by Lucretia P. Hale; "Poetry and Carols of Winter," by Lucy Larcom, with pleasure.

Do not fail to buy ST. NICHOLAS for the Christmas Holidays. Price 25 cents.

During the year there will be interesting papers for boys, by William Cullen Bryant, John G. Whittier, Thomas Hughes, William Howitt, Dr. Holland, George MacDonald, Sanford B. Hunt, Frank R. Stockton, and others.

There will be stories, sketches, and poems, of special interest to girls, by Harriet Prescott Spofford, Susan Coolidge, Sarah Winter Kellogg, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Louisa Alcott, Lucretia P. Hale, Celia Thaxter, Mary Mapes Dodge, and many others.—There will be also "TWELVE SKY PICTURES," by Professor Proctor, the Astronomer, with maps, showing "The Stars of each Month," which will be likely to surpass in interest any series on popular science recently given to the public.

Amusement and instruction, with Fun and Frolic, and wit and wisdom, will be mingled as heretofore, and ST. NICHOLAS will continue to delight the young and give pleasure to the old.

The London Literary World says: "There is no Magazine for the young that can be said to equal this choice production of SCRIBNER'S press. All the articles, whether in prose or rhyme, are throbbing with vitality. * * * The literature and artistic illustrations are both superb."

The London Daily News says: "We wish we could point out its equal in our own political literature."

GOOD NEWS FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

To meet the demand for a cheaper ST. NICHOLAS Gift-Book, the price of Vols. I and II has been reduced to $3 each. The three volumes, in an elegant library case, are sold for $10 (in full gilt, $15) so that all may give their children a complete set. These volumes contain more attractive material than fifty dollars' worth of the ordinary children's books.

Subscription price $3 a year. The three bound volumes and a subscription for this year, only $12. Subscribe with the nearest newsdealer, or send money in check, or P. O. money order, or in registered letter, to SCRIBNER & Co., 743 Broadway, N. Y.

THE OLDEST AND THE BEST.

These are the claims which the publishers of the NEW YORK OBSERVER make for their paper in their prospectus of the fifty-fifth volume. And, while history bears them out in the first, an undeviating course in sending out a large, full, fresh, readable family newspaper, gives them at least a right to the second. In the great multitude of papers that are published, the OBSERVER holds its own position, and an enviable position it is. No paper reaches us that we can recommend more heartily. It is published at $3.15 a year, post-paid, and the premium picture and chromo humbugs are left for those who have nothing better to offer. S. I. Prime & Co. 37 Park Row, N. Y.

MANY thousands of dollars has been spent in distributing, free of charge, Sample Bottles of BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP to all parts of this country, to those suffering from Coughs, Asthma, Hemmorrhages, Consumption, and other Throat and Lung Diseases, that the afflicted might satisfy themselves, that this remedy would save them from those fatal diseases. No person has ever used this medicine without getting immediate relief, yet there are a great many poor, suffering, skeptical persons going about our streets with a suspicious cough, and the voice of consumption coming from their lungs, that will not try it. If you die, it is your own fault, as you can go to your Druggist Wm. H. Voorhees, and get a Sample Bottle for 10 cents and try it; three doses will relieve any case. Regular size only 75 cts.

A TIME-HONORED SPECIFIC.—The long and successful career of DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL, as contrasted with the speedy collapse of nostrums devoid of efficacy which have from time to time been puffed into a brief notoriety during the twenty odd years that this celebrated medicine has been sold, affords a proof that the American public are not slow to repose its confidence in deserving articles only. The PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL has long been recognized as the leading specific for Consumption, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Diptheria, and all other diseases of the breathing organs. It is, moreover, a certain, speedy, and safe tonic remedy for Dyspepsia, Liver Disorders, Scrofulous Affections, Gravel, Dropsy, Debility, and Constipation. Constantly accumulating evidence of an unimpeachable character establishes the fact that it not only entirely eradicates the disease to which it is adapted, but also that its action is remarkably prompt and thorough. The crucial test of experience has demonstrated its reliability in every particular. Sold by all druggists. Principal Depot, No. [illegible] Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa.

LOOK!
The wildest excitement exists in many localities on account of the immense number of tramps who are perambulating over the country,
Out
of work, and many of them would not work if it was tendered them. The most of them are a ragged, thieving, dirty and worthless crew. The exception can be granted to an occasional one,
For
a whole flock of black sheep is truly a rarity. The general depression of business, and lack of employment everywhere has forced many to roam in search of work, and others travel, beg and steal, because they don't want to work. In this connection we wish to call
Your attention to the fact that we propose to do our level best to keep up the high standard for respectability of this section of country as far as GENTEEL APPEARANCE IN DRESS can do so, and while the wearing of good clothes is no particular safeguard for your

THANKSGIVING Day was observed in Plainfield by a general suspension of business and religious exercises in the various Churches.

AMONG the latest novelties in business cards that we see about town, is one just issued by our old real estate friend, uncle Billy Marsh.

CHARLES G. LOCKWOOD, the celebrated Tenor, will sing in the Grand Concert at the Congregational Church, Thursday evening, Dec. 21st.

MRS. CASE returns her grateful thanks to the generous friends of Plainfield who so kindly aided her at the death and burial of her dear husband, John M. Case.

THE young ladies of the Plainfield Mission Band will hold a Parlor Sale in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church, on the evening of Wednesday, the 13th inst. Admission ten cents.

THE tresselled coal siding leading into the coal yard of Mr. David Boice, cor. Cherry St. and Railroad, was yesterday (Wednesday) tested by a locomotive and train of coal cars, and found to be equal to the test.

COUNCILMAN Demarest has erected a lamp post in front of his residence corner of Putnam Street and Park Place at his own expense, the city refusing to grant the application for a lamp there.

JOHN M. LORETZ, Jr., Organist, will preside at the organ during the Grand Concert at the Congregational Church, Dec. 21st.— Mr. Loretz was present at the opening of the M. E. Church, this city, Aug. 3d, 1871.

A ROASTING pig was one of the wagers made on New York State between two of our townsmen. Last Wednesday evening "Charley" paid the bet by presenting the winner with a fine young porker, ready dressed for the oven.

WE call the attention of our readers to advertisement of F. L. Fisher's Anchor Oil in another part of our paper. We have been using oil of the above brand and consider it far ahead of any heretofore used. Read his advertisement and give the oil a trial.

The members of Warren Hose, No. 3, desire to extend thanks to those citizens who kindly loaned them flags, pictures, &c., to decorate the Hall on the occasion of their Hop last Wednesday evening, also to Messrs. L. B. Boice and Wm. H. Egbert for donations bestowed on that occasion.

MR. JAMES E. MARTINE is about improving his already valuable property on Prospect Avenue, by the erection of two new dwellings thereon. Now, friend Martine, if you will make a fine lake on the grounds owned by you through which Cedar Brook runs, you will further improve your property.

MRS. WILL will continue the business formerly conducted by her late husband, on Front St., opposite Cherry, where may always be found a choice assortment of fruits, confectioneries, nuts, &c., always fresh. The public are solicited to patronize Mrs. Will, who is deserving of their support in her recent affliction.

REV. John D. Bagwell, of this city, in response to numerous solicitations from various portions of the State, has consented to take the lecture field during the present season. His new Lecture "The Problem of the Century" will be delivered at North Branch, Somerville and Harlingen during the course of next week.

WE are informed by the gentlemanly ticket agent at our depot, Mr. Edward Nelson, that the total number of passengers from this city, who visited the Centennial Grounds via the New York and Bound Brook Railroad during the time of holding the exhibition was 6,595, and that the total amount received for fares was $18,290.

MR. C. M. FINE having leased the store on Cherry Street, adjoining Mulford's Stationery store, has stocked the same with a full assortment of Foreign and Domestic Segars, Tobacco, Pipes and smokers' materials generally. Mr. F. is incapacitated for manual labor by reason of a paralytic stroke, and hopes to gain a livelihood in the above business. Give him a call.

On Thursday last we were invited to take a ride behind friend J. Egbertson's spanking bay team, with "Uncle John" handling the ribbons. After a pleasant drive we found ourselves at Mr. Gid. Smalley's stock farm, near New Market, where we were favored with an exhibition of speed by a promising young two year old colt, belonging to "Uncle Billy" Moore. The animal, which has a fine pedigree, gives great promise. Mr. Smalley has many fine horses in his keeping which receive daily training, and no one knows how to handle or break an animal better than Mr. S. or his son. A splendid half-mile track on the premises affords excellent training ground.

CAPT. BREEN, who for some weeks past, has been working up the numerous petty robbery cases which have lately occurred in our city, last week came to a conclusion in the case by finding some of the goods concealed in a house on Front Street, occupied by a Mrs. Ellen Cook, who claimed that they were purchased of a peddler. The plea would not work, however, when she was brought before City Judge Good, who forwarded her to the County Jail at Elizabeth to await a hearing before the Grand Jury. The goods found were some of those stolen from Mrs. Jones residence on Broadway some time since. The discovery made and prompt action taken will tend toward breaking up a bad gang.

MR. JOHN TIER has posted notices about and on the pond adjoining his residence, known as "Tier's Lake," prohibiting skating or trespassing on the same. He has been compelled to do this, against his own feelings, but simply as a matter of financial interest, by the failure of visitors to the lake to heed his entreaties and requests to not litter the icy surface with stones, sticks, segar stumps and other filth, as the same ruins the ice and the machines for cutting the same. It is to be regretted that Mr. Tier has been compelled to adopt such stringent measures, but he is not to be blamed for the same, as self protection is one of the first laws of nature. If the law-makers will not protect him he certainly has the right to protect himself.

THE Regular Communication of Jerusalem ☐ held at Masonic Hall on Friday evening, Dec. 5th, was one that will long be remembered by the Craft in this vicinity. There was present on that occasion over one hundred members of the Fraternity to witness the conferring of the Third Degree in Masonry by the officers of Washington ☐ 33, of Elizabeth, which was done in an able and masterly manner by Bro. Moore, the W. M., assisted by his proficient officers. They came in large numbers by special train chartered for the occasion. After closing the ☐ the visitors were conducted to the rooms of mine host, Chris. Van Arsdale, of the City Hotel, where a bountiful repast was served, and amid conviviality and good fellowship the moments slipped away until it was time for the visitors to return to Elizabeth, which was done by special train leaving here at 11:45, all expressing themselves highly pleased with their reception and entertainment.

One of those pleasant little episodes that go so far toward dispelling the sadness of parting with friends and kindred, took place on the 1st inst., aboard the Steamship Adriatic, upon the sailing for Europe of Mrs. C. Medina, sister of Mrs. Chas. H. Hart, of North Plainfield. It was a surprise in the shape of a floral offering from the gentlemen of Grace Church, of this city, in grateful appreciation of her talents, and her kind use of them in behalf of the Church, the design being a large basket surmounted by a lyre. The whole forming, as Capt. Perry pronounced, the most artistic piece he had ever seen on his vessel. It was composed of the choicest flowers and reflects credit upon the already well established reputation of the designer, Mr. Wm. H. Brower, Florist, 935 Broadway, N. Y.

A RICHARD CLARK, of this city, was sentenced during the Summer months to imprisonment in the County Jail for stealing a load of watermelons, and was released at the expiration of his term only to be again arrested last week for burglary; this time the charge being sustained by his own son, a young lad, who averred that his father had property in his possession stolen from the residence of Mr. J. W. Jackson, on Crescent Avenue, some months ago. Capt. Breen found carpets and silver spoons in the prisoner's domicile. Clark was taken before that terror of law-breakers, Judge Good, who promptly sent him down. The lad made the complaint out of revenge against his father for having him arrested for assault and battery. Thus is the gang of "bad men and women" being broken up.

Fashionable Wedding.

This (Thursday) evening, Miss Sadie R. Boice, eldest daughter of our respected townsman, David J. Boice, Esq., was united in the holy bonds of wedlock to Mr. John Runyon, of New Brunswick, at the 1st Baptist Church, this city, Rev. D. J. Yerkes officiating.

Only One Elected.

By some oversight the Republicans failed to put more than one candidate for Justice of the Peace on their ticket at the late election, where the law requires two, and consequently Mr. Joseph Richardson, who ran on the Citizen's Ticket is elected with Mr. Nodyne who ran on the Republican Ticket.

Grand Concert.

A grand musical entertainment will be given in the Congregational Church, this city, Thursday evening, Dec. 21st, under the direction of talented and well-known artists from New York, comprising Fred Steiner, basso; Charles G. Lockwood, tenor; John M. Loretz, Jr., organist; Prof. Durege, pianist; Fritz Eisner, solo violinist. Further particulars will be given next week.

Our Town Clock.

Our much abused and condemned Town Clock is again at a stand still. We learn that application was made to our Common Council months ago to appropriate $50 toward keeping the clock in repair, Mr. Clare, the Watchmaker, agreeing to wind the clock and keep the same in order one year for that sum. After performing the duty through the Summer months and receiving no pay for the same, he has given up the key and the clock stands still. Here now is a chance for the outgoing or incoming Council to immortalize themselves by making the desired appropriation. The amount is small and the clock should be started.

The Star Society

Is composed of a band of little girls ranging from eight to twelve years of age, with Lulu Needham, as President. The Society will hold a Fair in the store room of Mrs. Mundy's building on Front Street, next to Van Name's Oyster Saloon, on Monday and Tuesday afternoon and evenings, Dec. 11 and 12, from 3 to 9 o'clock, P. M. They will have for sale Ice Cream, Cake, Fancy Articles, &c., the proceeds of which is to be devoted to relieving the wants of a destitute family. Many of the articles to be sold are being made by the little girls themselves, and the secret of, who the poor family is that they propose to help is known only to themselves. Admission to the Fair 10 cents; children 5 cents.

Horse and Wagon Stolen.

Last Tuesday afternoon Mr. Edward P. Sanger, of Evona, hitched his horse and buggy under the sheds attached to Laing's Livery Stables, and went up town to attend to some business matters. In the evening when he went for his animal he found the rig gone, since which time no trace of the same has been found. One of the hostlers states that he saw a short, thick set man unblanket the animal and drive out of the yard about six o'clock, going toward Dunellen, and naturally thought it was, Mr. Sanger. The animal was a bay mare, about 13 years old, and nearly 15 hands high. No shoes on hind feet, splint on inside of one fore leg. The buggy was a shifting top, square-box, with the top off, but the lazy back left on the seat, body painted black, considerably worn off. Hatfield & Jackson plate on back. Split in off shaft. Blue cloth cushion with blue flannel patch on same. Red and white worsted lap robe, fringed blanket and pair of driving gloves under seat.

FRITZ EISNER, Solo Violinist, will be present at the Grand Concert in the Congregational Church, Dec. 21st.

W. Irving Bishop.

The above named gentleman gave our citizens an entertainment at the Congregational Church last Thursday evening, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., which was highly creditable to himself and the Association, and pleasing and entertaining to his audience. His performance, which was the exposure of the so called miracles of the Spiritualists, was simply wonderful. We have not the space to devote to an extended notice of the various tricks and exposures made by him. Those who did not go and see him made a grand mistake. Mr. Bishop is a wonder. He performs miracles behind a curtain, tied hand and foot and then performs the same feats in plain view of the audience, explaining that his power to do the same lies in his muscles alone. Four of our most respected and influential citizens, Revs. Mr. Bliss and Ketcham, and Drs. Probasco and Chas. Stillman, Jr., were invited on the stage to act as a Committee to see that the tricks of Mr. Bishop were done fairly, and each and every one made statement that no other aid was used than simply that of muscular effort by the performer, an abundance of which he seems to be peculiarly endowed with. Mr. Bishop is a young man, and has made the exposure of Spiritualism a study of years. Mr. Edwards, the celebrated Organist, formerly of one of the leading churches of New York, rendered some fine music during the evening.

Personalia.

We learn with sorrow of the sudden death of a young daughter of Mr. Geo. Demarest, of this city, which melancholy event occurred at Paterson on Saturday of last week, she being on a visit to that city, and her sickness (membraneous croup) of short duration.

Mr. Joseph Haines has been appointed freight agent at the depot in this city in place of Mr. A. M. Cady. Mr. Haines is well known to the traveling public and is one of the Company's most trusted officers. His predecessor has made many friends here during the short time he was among us, and the transfer, we learn, is only caused by one of those sudden changes so often made by railroad officials.

PROF. DURAGO, Pianist, at the Congregational Church, Thursday evening, Dec. 21st.

Bad Boards—the Returning Boards.

Upsets and Runaways.

On Tuesday last as Mr. Abram Egbertson, of the firm of Egbertson & Co., Livery Merchants, was exercising one of the above firm's trotting horses, "Gold Dust," he met with an accident which might have proven serious had he been driving any other than a gentle animal. Just as he was driving under the railroad bridge at Central Avenue the front axle of the wagon broke and let the occupants of the vehicle, Mr. E. and David Runyon out upon the ground.— Mr. Egbertson held on to the reins and was dragged a few feet, but soon stopped the animal. Neither gentlemen were injured, outside of bruises from the fall. The cause of the disaster was a flaw in the axle.

The same day a runaway occurred which, although involving a considerable amount in horse flesh and carriage, happily did not prove serious.

It seems that Mr. Wm. S. Darling's coachman had returned to his employer's residence, at the head of Prospect Avenue, (formerly "Short Hills") after taking the family out for a drive, and, as was his usual custom after depositing the occupants of the carriage at the house, started the team toward the barn, he walking along side. The animals being blooded, and "feeling their keeping," went a little faster than usual toward the barn, and one of them pulled the other into the main road (Prospect Avenue) leading past the house and continued on a run toward Plainfield defying the efforts of the coachman to stop them. The horses ran through Prospect Avenue to Cherry Street and through the same to Front, their speed being accelerated by the efforts of bystanders to stop them. As they turned into Front St. it was anticipated that the carriage would be overturned, but luckily that did not happen, and the animals continued on a run toward Evona, striking, in their course, a wagon belonging to Mr. Geo. Good, which was turning into Front St. from Somerset upsetting the same and spilling out Mr. G., happily not injuring him. In front of Demarest's Grocery Store, the carriage struck a horse in the head, which was attached to one of Mr. D's grocery wagons, standing in front of the store, but did not injure him seriously. Alarmed by the noise and shouts of persons who endeavored to stop them, the animals continued on their course toward Evona. Councilman John H. Tier, who was out riding behind his pacing mare, saw the runaways coming as he neared William Street, from Evona, and giving speed to his animal made William St. before the runaways. After they had passed Mr. Tier turned and followed them, picking up on his way a laboring man who happened to be passing along the road. Now arose a race between Mr. T's pacer and the runaways.— After passing the rise in the road at Mr. Roesp's the animals came down to a steady, although fast trot, and a half mile further on Mr. Tier passed the team, which was keeping the middle of the road. He spoke to them in soothing terms and they slacked their pace. Finding they would not stop he sent his mare ahead and beat the runaways into Dunellen by about one thousand yards. Springing out of his buggy in front of Mr. Boice's grocery store, he threw a blanket over his dripping mare, and shouting to bystanders for help, he and his companion barely had time to spring into the road when the runaways were upon them. The workman caught the reins as the animals were passing and by a strong effort, assisted by Mr. Tier, succeeded in bringing the team to a standstill. Strange to relate not a particle of harness or any portion of the vehicle was broken. One of the horses had a cut on the forehead, caused by a person who struck the animal in its face with a shovel as the team was running through Prospect Ave., thinking to stop them. The team is a valuable one and are perfectly gentle at all times. Had not Mr. Tier followed them up there is no knowing where they would have stopped.

Wednesday morning about 11½ o'clock, a team attached to a wagon loaded with lumber, standing in Cook Bros. Lumber Yard on Cherry St., became frightened at a passing locomotive and dashed out of the yard before they could be stopped. In front of the CONSTITUTIONALIST office the wagon collided with a city lamp post knocking the same down. In front of the City Hotel the horses ran full tilt on the front stoop of that institution, where they were captured without serious injury to vehicle, horses or hotel. Mr. John Cooper, of Warrenville, who owned the team, promptly settled the damages.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

Mr. William Smith, who has the contract for erecting the brick walls of Mr. L. B. Boice's Warerooms, which fell in a few days since, is rapidly progressing with the work, and the building will soon again be in proper shape, with the assistance of Mr. John Hartfelder, who has the contract for the carpenter work. It is needless to remark that the building will be strong enough to stand any weight put inside of it, when completed.

Our citizens have been startled by the rumor that "Uncle" Peter Wooden, one of North Plainfield's oldest residents, has concluded to build him a new residence. Mr. Wooden is very reticent on the subject and will give but limited information to reporters of newspapers. However our reporter has gleaned the following facts regarding the matter. On Emily Street, near Somerset, Mr. Charles P. Hill, is excavating a cellar, by order of Mr. David Coon; over this cellar is to be erected a handsome and substantial residence for Mr. Peter Wooden, he, of course, to pay for the same. Further particulars next week.

George Dunham, colored, was arrested by Constable Everett on Saturday last, charged with stealing $70 from Henry Hamilton, of the same color. The money was found on the prisoner's person, and he was committed to the Somerset County Jail, by Justice W. W. Deane, to await trial.

Now that the election is over, let all those desiring building lots on favorable terms, consult the advertisement of Wm. E. Marsh, Sr., in another part of this paper.

The funeral of Mr. John Will, who was accidentally shot last week, was largely attended on Friday morning last, the remains being escorted to the depot by a body guard of members of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, A. F. & A. M., of this city. The body was taken to New York, where it was received by Mechanics Lodge, No. 31, A. F. & A. M., of which deceased was a member, and escorted to the Lutheran Cemetery, Brooklyn, where the remains were interred with Masonic honors.

The amount voted for to support the poor of North Plainfield Township at the last Township election ($1,300) being found to be insufficient, a special election will be held at Warren Engine House, on Tuesday, Dec. 19th, for the purpose of raising an additional amount sufficient for remainder of the year. Polls open at 7, A. M. and close at 7, P. M.

The German Liedertafel Society held a Ball at Smith's Hall, Thanksgiving Eve, and had a fine time. The Society is composed of some of our most respected German fellow citizens.

FIRE MATTERS.

On Tuesday last the barn on the property owned by Mr. A. D. Cook, situated on Clinton Avenue, (formerly the Berger property) narrowly escaped destruction by fire, the circumstances of which are as follows: During the afternoon a young son of Mr. Randolph who resides on the property, in company with others, were playing about the premises, when, by carelessness, he dropped a lighted match on the barn floor, the same falling through a crack, and igniting loose hay, &c., below. The flames were discovered in time to extinguish the same before serious damage was done, workmen employed in grading a street in the immediate vicinity coming to the assistance of Mr. R. It is stated that the young lad who so thoughtlessly jeopardized the safety of the building, will not be able to sit down comfortably for some time to come.

The members of Gazelle Steam Fire Engine Co. No. 1, will hold a special meeting in their rooms next Monday evening to appoint committees and make arrangements for holding their Nineteenth Annual Supper and Ball, at Laing's Hall, Monday evening, Feb. 21st, 1877.

The Invitation Hop of Warren Hose Co. No. 3, at Laing's Hall, Thanksgiving Eve, was an enjoyable occasion. Over fifty couple participated, and the Hall was appropriately and handsomely decorated with flags, pictures, &c. The music by Chilcoat was fine.

Members of Zephyr H. & L. Co. No. 1 and steamer No. 2, held a sociable in the rooms of the former Company on Monday evening last, using the truck room to dance in. The occasion was one of unusual enjoyment. Franco furnished the music.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

A distressing accident occurred last Sunday afternoon on South Avenue, near Fanwood Station, that came near resulting fatally to one or more persons. It appears that as Miss Jennie Jimmerson, daughter of A. L. Jimerson, Esq., of Netherwood, and her little brother, Winfield S. and sister Eva, were returning home from Sunday School at the Scotch Plains Baptist Church with their father's horse and carriage, and while passing under the telegraph wires at the first bridge south of the station, the horse got frightened at the loud humming noise made by the wires at that time, and became unmanageable and started to run. When he reached South Avenue he turned the corner so short and sudden as to throw the brave young lad, who had done all in his power to hold the runaway animal, out on the hard macadamized road, at the same time upsetting the wagon on its side and running with it in that condition, with two occupants in the same, two hundred feet, when the reins became entangled and the infuriated beast was caused to reverse his course, in doing which, the vehicle was righted up and ran about one hundred and fifty feet, when he broke loose from the wagon and went home. The unfortunate boy received some serious abrasions and wounds, and had his left elbow and ankle dislocated, his left leg broken, and the left side of his face and head fearfully bruised. It is supposed that the wounds on his head were occasioned by the hind wheel passing over it when he was thrown out. Strange to say his two sisters escaped without a bruise. The wounded boy was picked up and carried into the station, where kind friends did all in their power to alleviate his sufferings until his parents were sent for, and he was taken home. Drs. Bergen, of Scotch Plains, and Gillette, of Plainfield, were summoned to attend his injuries, and at last accounts the little sufferer was doing as well as could be expected.

If you have any household goods to move be sure and send for our old Democratic friend, "Uncle Jake," of this village, and he will move them for you in order and on time, "neck or no joint."

We notice that John R. Marsh, Esq., of this village, is erecting a very neat carriage house upon his premises. This will be a convenient improvement, not only to him, but in these dull times to the mechanics also.

Notwithstanding the "dullness of trade" in other localities, the energetic firm of Baker & Mead, in this village, seem to be doing a very thriving business. They have recently added largely to their stock, and by fair dealing and obliging, faithful clerks, they have secured a large "run of custom."

PROCEEDINGS COMMON COUNCIL.

MONDAY EV'G, Dec. 4, 1876.

Council met pursuant to adjournment.

Members all present except Mr. Voorhees.

Pres. Mr. Smith in the chair.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Mr. Thorn moved that when Council adjourn it adjourn to meet one week from Thursday, (Dec. 14th) at 7½ o'clock p. m. Carried.

Mr. Harris, from Com. on Police, presented the following claims. P. Breen, salary, &c., $55.77; Wm. Hadden, reg. and special duty, $45.42; Jno. R. Clark, do., $44.17; S. F. Randolph, special duty, $17; H. Vanness, do., $42.50; Geo. Eaton, do., $44.17. On motion, claims referred to Com. on Police.

Mr. French, from Alms Com., presented the following claims: T. J. Gillies, salary, $100; A. S. Coriell, rent, $5; Mrs. C. Flynn, board, $4; Alex. M. Runyon, coffin, &c., $12; Theo. Pruden, rent, $5; David Hand, board, $24.28; Clifton & Vail, oil, &c., $10.50; R. MacDonald, groceries, $73; P. Breen, agt., rent, $15; G. W. Rockfellow, agent, groceries, (2 bills) $70.40. On motion, claims referred to Com. on Alms.

Mr. Ryder, from Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps, presented claims as follows: W. L. Garrett & Co., repairing lamps, &c., $1.70; N. Y. & N.J. Globe Gas Light Co., $105.75. On motion, claims referred to Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps.

Mr. Brown presented claim of J. S. Cotter, rent, &c., $77.11. On motion, referred to Com. on Salaries, Offices & Elections.

Mr. French presented claim of R. R. Gilbert, $100, rent of building for small pox patient. Mr. French thought that the claim was exorbitant, as the building was very old and dilapidated, and in his estimation $25 would be quite sufficient.

Mr. Brown moved that the said claim be referred back to Com. on Alms. Carried.

Mr. Harris, from Com. on Police, presented report of Capt. of Police for month of November, as follows: Number of arrests, 6; number of tramps entertained at station house, 737, an average of about 25 per night.

Mr. Mulford objected to the report being placed on file, because of the reference to larceny, in the case of one of three boys, and said it was not larceny until it was so proven; therefore he would move that the report be referred back to the Capt. of Police for correction. Adopted.

Mr. Thorn, from Special Com. of three, appointed by the chair to investigate the tax list of 1875, and ascertain the probable amount of delinquent city taxes that can be collected, beg leave to report that they have investigated the same and find that the sum of $986 they consider good and collectable, and recommend that proper measures be taken to obtain the same. On motion, the report was received and the recommendation of the Com. adopted.

Mr. French, from Com. on Alms, reported correct the following claims: David Lesson, (2 bills) $16.75; T. J. Gillies, $100. On motion, report received and claims referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Ryder, from Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps, reported the following claims correct: W. L. Garrett & Co., $1.70; N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Light Co., $105.75. On motion, report received and claims referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Harris, from Com. on Police, reported the 6 police claims referred to him this evening, correct. On motion, report was received and claims referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Young, from Com. on Salaries, Offices & Elections, reported as correct, claim of J. S. Cotter, $77.11. On motion, report received and claim referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Young presented petition of Messrs. G. W. Opdyke and others, residents and property owners on Broadway, to have the name of said street changed to Irving Ave. On motion, referred to Com. on Sts.

Mr. Thorn offered a res. that the Com. on Laws and Ords., investigate and ascertain by what means the delinquent taxes of the city for 1875 can be collected; and if the measure be feasible, that the Corp. Counsel be requested to press the collection. Adopted.

Mr. Simpson, from Aud. Com., reported as correct the following claims: William Simpson, $73; John W. Laing, $7.50; A. W. Gale, $18; F. B. Gillette, $[illegible]; W. L. Garrett & Co., $1.70; N. Y. & N.J. Globe Gas Light Co., $105.75; David Lesson, (2 bills) $16.75; J. S. Cotter, $77.11; T. J. Gillies, $100; P. Breen, $55.77; Geo. Eaton, $44.17; Jno. R. Clark, $44.17; H. Vanness, $42.50; Wm. Hadden, $45.42; S. F. Randolph, $17. On motion, report received and warrants ordered drawn for the several amounts.

Council then adjourned.

COMMUNICATED.

For the Constitutionalist.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

I will not make usual opening comments nor flatter you for your former loyalty to the poor in our midst, but call your attention to report of N. Y. Herald of the mechanics, laborers, and sewing women appealing to Police Courts for commitments to Blackwell's Island Workhouse. We have no "Island" here. We have the poor in our midst, and my means have already reached families of children without bread. I appeal through you to the public to aid the proper sources of relief more bountifully than usual, that our poor may get more than a crust of bread. Is the Y. M. C. A. Committee in working order? have they added to their number those who will visit the poor? granted they have already, then let us respond liberally.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE SUN.

1877 NEW YORK. 1877

The different editions of THE SUN during the next year will be the same as during the year that has just passed. The daily edition will on week days be a sheet of four pages, and on Sundays a sheet of eight pages, or 56 broad columns; while the weekly edition will be a sheet of eight pages of the same dimensions and character that are already familiar to our friends.

THE SUN will continue to be the strenuous advocate of reform and retrenchment, and of the substitution of statesmanship, wisdom and integrity for hollow pretence, imbecility, and fraud in the administration of public affairs. It will contend for the government of the people by the people and for the people, as opposed to government by frauds in the ballot-box and in the counting of votes, enforced by military violence. It will endeavor to supply its readers—a body now not far from a million of souls—with the most careful, complete, and trustworthy accounts of current events, and will employ for this purpose a numerous and carefully selected staff of reporters and correspondents. Its reports from Washington, especially, will be full, accurate, and fearless; and it will doubtless continue to deserve and enjoy the hatred of those who thrive by plundering the Treasury or by usurping what the law does not give them, while it will endeavor to merit the confidence of the public by defending the rights of the people against the encroachments of unjustified power.

The price of the daily SUN will be 55 cents a month or $6.50 a year, post paid, or with the Sunday edition $7.70 a year.

The SUNDAY edition alone, eight pages, $1.20 a year, post paid.

The WEEKLY SUN, eight pages of 56 broad columns, will be furnished during 1877 at the rate of $1 a year, post paid.

The benefit of this large reduction from the previous rate for THE WEEKLY can be enjoyed by individual subscribers without the necessity of making up clubs. At the same time, if any of our friends choose to aid in extending our circulation, we shall be grateful to them, and every such person who sends us ten or more subscribers from one place will be entitled to one copy of the paper for himself without charge. At one dollar a year, postage paid, the expenses of paper and printing are barely repaid; and, considering the size of the sheet and the quality of its contents, we are confident the people will consider THE WEEKLY SUN the cheapest newspaper published in the world, and we trust also one of the very best.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

HOW HE FOOLED HIM.

One day a strange customer came to an Easton grocer. He wanted some goods and he paid cash down. The next day he made another purchase and paid cash, and as the days went by his face become familiar. One day he returned with the change given him and said:

"I believe I am an honest man. You paid me twenty cents too much."

The grocer received it and was pleased. Two days after that the stranger returned from the curbstone to say:

"Another mistake on your part; you overpaid me by forty cents."

The grocer was glad to have found an honest man, and was puzzled to know how he could have counted so far out of the way. Three days more, and the stranger picked up a dollar bill in the street and said:

"This is not my dollar, I found it on the floor, and you must take charge of it."

The grocer's heart melted, and he wondered if the world was not progressing backward to old time honesty. A skip of one day, and then the honest man brought down a wheelbarrow, ordered eighteen dollars' worth of groceries, and would have paid cash had he not forgotten his wallet. He would hand it in at noon as he went past, he said, and it was all right with the grocer.

It was the last of the honest man; morning fades to noon, and noon melts away in darkness, but he cometh not. There are no mistakes in change—no more dollars on the floor, and the grocer's eyes wear away off expression, as of yearning to see some one for about two minutes.

A FORGETFUL MAN.

His wife sent him up town for "sumthin or rather" early in the evening. On the way he met a friend, and they spent half an hour in an animated dispute as to whether Tilden or Hayes had the best chances for an election, and when he left his friend at the corner of Fourth and Vine streets he had entirely forgotten what Maria had sent him after. It was in vain that he tried to think up his forgotten errand. For three long, weary hours he wandered around from saloon to saloon, trying to stimulate his unreliable brain and prick up his memory.

'Twas no use. The more he stimulated the more he did not remember. He hated to go home and acknowledge as much to his wife, and so he just dropped in on his friends to gather a little sympathy. After he had managed to scrape considerable of the article together, and just as the clock on St. Xavier Church was chiming the midnight hour, the telegraph editor opened a dispatch and remarked that the Associated Press announced the death of Dr.——, the famous physician of ——.

"By the jumping Juniper Jupiter, I remember now," said the visitor, rising slowly from his seat and turning as pale as a cholera patient; "I remember now. My wife had the cramp colic! D—n politics! I wonder if she's alive yet?" And he shot out of the door after that doctor without staying to hear what the outlook was.

CLOSED FOR RETURNS.

At 8 o'clock yesterday morning the proprietor of a small saloon on Beaubien street put down the curtains, locked the door, and was walking off when he was hailed by a policeman. The saloonist crossed the street to the officer and said:

"Dot blace is closed up for von week."

"What's the matter?" asked the officer.

"Well, I gan't stand such foolings aroundt. In the first blace a man comes in and says, 'well, Dilden is elected,' and he kicks ofer the chairs. Pooty soon comes anudder man in, and he says, 'Hooray! Hayes has got 'em now!' and he kicks ofer a dable. Anodder man in a leedle vhile comes in and galls out, 'Nopody is elected any more!' and he preaks some glasses.—Shust like dot has it been for a week, and I am clear discouraged. If somebody says Dilden is elected, I pelief dot; if somebody says Hayes is elected, I pelief dot; if somebody says nobody is elected, I feels like dis gountry vhas going to some dogs right away."

"Yes, it does bother one," consoled the officer.

"Tell all ter boys dot I have closed for returns, and dot somepody gan't get in," replied the man, and he turned his face homeward.

A gentleman caught a negro carrying off some of his fancy poultry the other night. "What are you doing with my chickens?" he yelled. "I wuz gwine ter fetch 'em back, boss.—Dere's a nigger 'roun' here what's been 'sputin' longer me 'bout dem chick'uns. I said dey was Coaching Chynie, an' he said dey wuz Alabamar pullets, an' I wuz jes' takin' 'em 'roun' fer ter 'stablish my nolledge. Dey don't lay no aigs, does dey, boss? Ef dey does, I'm mighty 'shamed er hustlin' uf 'em 'roun'. Aigs is scase."

A short time ago Isaac Berdan cut down an old hickory tree which stood on the Berdan farm, near the Midland Railroad, in Bergen county. Upon splitting the tree a plug was found in it, and on drawing it out a bunch of hair of a brown color, and evidently cut from a woman's head, was found in the hole in which the plug had been placed. Over the plug there were 40 rings or circles, showing that 40 years had elapsed since the plug had been driven in the tree. What tale of love and romance may hang by this.

In Algeria there is a river formed by the union of two streams, one coming from a region of ferruginous soil and the other draining a peat swamp. The acid in the latter acting upon the iron in the former makes a true ink, and the river is actually a stream of good writing fluid.

MORGAN'S
SPARKLING
APOLLINARIS
Natural Mineral Water.

The attention of the public is invited to the above celebrated Water, the qualities of which will be briefly described; and in presenting it to the public the proprietor feels it his duty to give, at the same time, the chemical analysis, which has been most faithfully accomplished by the celebrated Dr. Kirchhoff, and found, in [illegible] oz., at a temperature of 70 deg., to give the following results:

Acid, Carbonic,	[illegible]
Soda, Muriate,	3 57
" Sulphide,	[illegible]
" Phosphate,	a trace
" Potass,	a trace
" Carbon,	[illegible]
Magnesia, Carbon,	[illegible]
Lime, Carbon,	[illegible]
Oxide Iron,	[illegible]
Alumina,	[illegible]

By a careful examination of the above, the Carbonates and Sulphides will be found in greater proportion, and the Chlorides (common salt) in a lesser one, than in any other mineral water, including Ems, Vichy, Seltzer or Wiesbaden. These Waters, containing the Chlorides in excess, prevent their continuous use. [illegible]

Chronic Catarrh of the Stomach.

When there is a disagreeable feeling of pressure and fullness, which is increased by eating, filling the stomach with gas, caused by decomposition of food, the gastric fluid being abnormal, eructations of gas, heartburn, and the sensation of hunger is almost lost; in these cases a goblet of the water, taken half an hour before meals, will be found of great value.

In Affections of the Throat,

such as dryness, hoarseness, difficulty of breathing, enlargement of the glands, the Water will be found to combine with any mucus that may be present, and hasten its ejection. [illegible]

The European press have been unanimous in their eulogy of the merits of this truly called "King of Waters."

NEW JERSEY
Enamel Paint Company,
RARITAN, NEW JERSEY.
Manufacturers of
Bradley's Enamel Paint.
Mixed Ready for Use, in any shade, Tint or Color desired.

THESE Paints are composed of the purest and best materials known to painters; the principal ingredients being Pure White LEAD, ZINC, and LINSEED OIL, which are made to unite in a homogeneous mass by the addition of other materials which add greatly to the durability, elasticity, beauty and strength of the Paint. The whole are chemically combined so that the pigments are held in permanent solution, thus forming a new compound which dries on the surface and adheres firmly to it, thus forming a Smooth, Glossy, Firm, Elastic, Beautiful and Durable Paint.

The Oil, which is the real life of the Paint, cannot leave it and be absorbed by the substance to which it is applied, as it does in paints mixed in the ordinary way, & thus leave the pigment dry and chalky, to wash & rub off in a few months. This paint is unaffected by changes of temperature, is perfectly impervious to the action of water, is well adapted to all classes of work, & is in every way a better paint for either inside or outside work or boat painting than any other Paint known to the trade, and will last at least three times as long as the best Lead and Oil mixed in the ordinary way.

These Paints are Ready for use.
Are easily applied by any one, require no mixing, stirring or addition of dryers.
Liberal Inducements to Dealers.
And full satisfaction guaranteed to their Customers.

Sold by the Gallon, Keg or Barrel. Orders attended to promptly. For Price List and Sample Color Card. Address,

CAUTION!

The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Theo. A. Carman some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filled over one thousand pages and counsel were over two [illegible] in arguing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an upright iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing stratum. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is of steel, made sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Carman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defence contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water [illegible] and therefore not patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement had been clearly proved.

POETRY.

For the Constitutionalist.

TO F. G.

BY CAROLUS SCHLECHTUS.

Our sweetest, purest thoughts are those
That ne'er can be expressed;
Unsaid, unwritten they repose
Concealed within the breast.

A poet's finest poems lie
Unsung within his heart;
Altho' he oft, perchance, may try
Their meanings to impart.

But 'tis in vain he strives to hold
His thoughts in doubtful mold,
T' express the feelings of his mind,
Its raptures to unfold.

Great grief is silent: words are vain
To hearts bowed in despair;
In speechless agony and pain
Great sufferings we bear.

Thus love—unutterable love—
Doth flood the soul with light;
And like yon glorious orb above—
Always transcendently bright.

In idle words it seeks not vent,
Nor verses halt and lame,
But deep down in the soul is pent
A bright, tho' hidden, flame.

Sweet girl, then, how can I portray
The love for thee I feel?
Alas! 'tis in vain I should essay
My feelings to reveal.

Plainfield, Dec. 4, 1876.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

JUDITH'S TEMPTATION.

How bright and cheerful the kitchen of the old Stedhurst farmhouse looked to Judith Black upon the dreary December evening when she first came to live! How merrily the fire flickered on the walls with red, fantastic reflections! How the tins sparkled against the wall, and what a song of welcome the old copper teakettle sung upon the hearth! And Mrs. Stedhurst's geraniums in the window, with their velvet leaves and spikes of vivid scarlet blossoms—to Judith they seemed fairer than any conservatory, crowded full of fan palms and camellias and trailing jasmine.

Judith Black had been very poor. She had been a dressmaker, but times were very hard. She had striven to get work, but applicants were many, and the cup of starvation had been perilously close to her lips when she crept into the office where Edward Stedhurst saw her, and engaged her to help his mother about the housework.

"I sha'n't like her, Ned," said Mrs. Stedhurst, when the "new girl" had gone up to her own room for the night, and mother and son were together before the kitchen fire.

"Why not, mother?"

"She's too pretty; and she has such a haughty, queenly sort of a way. I shouldn't think of asking a lady to scrub the floor and feed the pigs."

"That's nonsense, mother," said Edward, half vexed, half laughing. "She can't help her face, can she? It is some of the scraggy faced, smallpox marked girls who were so exacting as to the wages they would receive and the duties they would be called upon to perform, that I wouldn't have 'em in the house on any terms. Judith was the only one who was willing to come for any sort of work, and willing to accept moderate wages."

"She'll suit you," said Mr. Stedhurst, who had come in while the discussion was going on. "Take my word for it, mother, she'll suit you."

Judith Black stayed for a month, and then Mrs. Stedhurst engaged her for another month.

"She is neat," said the lady, "and she is quick to learn, and I believe her to be thoroughly trustworthy."

"If only Ned don't fall in love with her," humorously suggested Mr. Stedhurst.

"Why shouldn't he fall in love with her if he wants to?" said Mrs. Stedhurst, valiantly.

"My dear, my dear," remonstrated Mr. Stedhurst, "what do you know about her?"

"What do you know about any girl, for that matter?" said Mrs. Stedhurst. "She is certainly very pretty, and very faithful, and very honest."

"Honest," put in Mr. Stedhurst, dryly, "because she has no temptation to be otherwise."

"Now, Phineas, you are too bad," said Mrs. Stedhurst, impatiently. "The currant jelly has never been disturbed in the closet, and I have left the sugar bowl twice on the dresser with thirty-three lumps of sugar in it, and thirty-three there were, and I counted them after she had gone to bed."

"Not very great temptations, those," said Mr. Stedhurst, smiling.

"No," said his wife, "but straws show which way the wind blows."

About a month subsequent to this conversation, Edward Stedhurst came to his father.

"Father," said he, "I was twenty-one years old in October."

"Yes," said Mr. Stedhurst.

"And you were a year younger than that when you were married?"

"I believe so, Ned."

"Have you any objections to my taking a wife?"

"None in the world—if it proves that she is the right sort of a wife!" answered the old gentleman.

"Father, I have fallen in love with Judith Black," confessed Edward.

"Just exactly what I have feared all along," said Mr. Stedhurst, with a shrug of his shoulders.

"Why do you use the word 'feared,' father?" questioned Edward.

"Because, my lad, she is almost a stranger to us."

"Father, I would stake my life on her truth and honesty," said the young man.

"Because you are in love with her, my son. Edward, have you spoken to her yet?"

"Not yet, sir."

"Will you do me a favor?"

Edward smiled a little.

"That depends upon what it is, father."

"Will you wait a week before you ask her to become your wife? Will you wait a week without asking any questions?"

"If you desire it, sir."

"At the end of that time I will tell you what I think upon the matter."

And Mr. Stedhurst went out.

The next day he brought down an armful of old coats, vests, etc., from the garret.

"Judith," said he, "these things are getting motheaten. They belonged to an old uncle of mine, who died ten years ago—an odd, miserly old fellow who hoarded everything up, and died in a cellar at last. I want them cut into carpet rags."

"Yes, sir," answered Judith Black, in the soft, low voice which was habitual to her. And when her day's routine of duty was done, she went to work diligently with Mrs. Stedhurst's large shears.

She was all alone in the kitchen the next afternoon just as the clock was striking three. And as she worked she sung softly to herself an old Scotch ballad, "Bonnie Dundee."

Picking up an old waistcoat of ginger-colored cloth, she chipped off the buttons, and mechanically tugged the pockets inside out to cut them away. There was a piece of folded brownish paper in one of them. Judith took it out, without thinking much of it, and unfolded it.

To her surprise, she perceived that it was a twenty-pound note.

In her first astonishment she uttered a little cry, all alone though she was. And then she remembered what Mr. Stedhurst had said about the miserly old one who had "hoarded up his little gains and died in a cellar at last." This, doubtless, was one of the old man's hiding places—and he died and made no sign.

And this precious bit of paper—was it not hers by right of discovery?

Her eyes gleamed and her fingers trembled convulsively as they tightened upon it! She needed it so much! She was so poor—so pinched for money. And these Stedhurst's, to whom it would naturally revert, were rich and did not need it. They would never know. Nobody would know.

For a minute the temptation battled fiercely with her better nature. For one minute only; and then she rose up and went straight to the door of the tool room—went with drooping eyelids and a scarlet stain on either cheek.

"Come in," said Mr. Stedhurst, as she knocked at the door, and she entered.

"Mr. Stedhurst," said she, in a voice that would falter a little in spite of her resolution to control it: "Here is some money—a twenty pound note. I have found it in the pocket of one of those old waistcoats."

"Ah," said Mr. Stedhurst, putting down his plane, and taking the crumpled bit of paper. "And why didn't you keep it? Did it not occur to you that I would never know anything about it?"

"Yes," said Judith, slowly, "it did occur to me, sir."

"Then why didn't you keep it?"

"It was not mine," Judith answered, in a low tone.

"Judith," said old Phineas, "I put that money there."

"You did?"

"I did. To test you. To make sure that the girl to whom my boy had given his heart was worthy of him."

Judith's face glowed a deep scarlet.

"I—I don't understand you, sir," said she.

"No, I suppose not. But you will in a few days."

And she did when Edward Stedhurst asked her to be his wife.

"My own love," he said, "the house has been like a different place since you came into it. Will you promise to stay here always?"

And Judith's answer was "Yes."

HOW MARION GOT HIS RIFLES.

The close of the year 1780 was a sad period for America. The British held the country from Charleston to the upper Santee, and in order to complete their conquest had established a chain of posts throughout the State, each of which was strongly fortified and defended by a good garrison. Organized resistance to the British there was none. On the American side the principal actors in the struggle were the men who composed the famous "light brigade" of General Marion.

The favorite rendezvous of Marion was at Snow Island. This is a piece of high river swamp, as it is called in the Carolinas, and was surrounded on three sides by water so as to be almost impregnable. Here Marion had his camp. From this fastness he issued forth at pleasure to range the enemy's granaries, or capture a straggling party of his troops. Secure is his retreat, he had no fear of pursuit.

In the city of Charleston, the despotism of the British was at its height; the proud spirited people of that capital were held down by a grinding tyranny. Many of them were still open and uncompromising in their hostility to the English, while others, thinking they could best serve the cause in that way, affected a hearty submission to the conquerors, and were seemingly the most loyal of all King George's subjects. Yet, while the English saw this and congratulated themselves upon the good effect it would have on the colonists, these very "loyalists" kept the American commanders constantly informed of all that passed within the British lines, and many a disaster of the British was in this way directly attributable to them.

One of these persons was a lady of fine social positions and great wealth. Indeed, there few persons in all Charleston over whose submission to the crown the British were more elevated than they were over that of Mrs. Annie Gorden. She was a young and beautiful widow, just twenty-five, and for several years had been the standing toast of the beaux of the Carolinas. When the British took the city, she was one of the first to submit to the king, and since then her house had been the favorite gathering place of the redcoat gentry. Many of Mrs. Gorden's friends, who were staunch patriots to the last, quietly cut her acquaintance, and shook their heads in silent indignation when her name was mentioned, and when they dared to speak at all it was only to condemn the widow's treachery. In the camp of Marion, however, there was one cheek that kindled with pride and not with shame when the lady's name was mentioned; and as for General Marion himself, he could have told tales that would have startled the widow's Charleston friends, had it been safe to do so.

While Marion was creating so great an excitement beyond the gates of Charleston, Mrs. Gorden resolved to give a ball. Preparations were made on an extensive scale, and the royal element of the city was in high feather. The splendid mansion of the young widow was dressed with flowers from cellar to garret, and blazed with lights on the evening appointed for the assembly, and the band of the garrison discoursed sweet music to the assembled crowd.

The entertainment was at its height, when the crowd near the door suddenly parted, and a young man came forward hurriedly. He was tall and splendidly formed, and carried himself erect with a proud, martial air. He was dressed in the uniform of an officer of the tory legion; and his general appearance was that of a man who had ridden far and hard during the day. As the young widow saw him, her face flushed and then grew deathly pale, and she sprung forward with a cry of alarm.

"What are you doing here?" she asked, hurriedly.

"You will see," he answered, quickly, in a low tone. "Only, for Heaven's sake, swear black and blue to what I may say!" Then he added, calmly, and in a louder tone: "You see, my dear cousin, I have come back to my allegiance."

"I am delighted to hear it," she replied, warmly, taking the hint at once. "I never thought your heart would cling to the rebel cause."

"Faith," he said, laughing, "if my heart had clung to it, my stomach would have driven from it. I'm not fond of starving, my fair cousin, and King George lives well, you know. Hereafter, Thomas Wilson lives and dies a royal man."

Colonel Watson had been standing by, during this conversation, watching the couple closely. Now he stepped forward to the lady's side.

"Who is this gentleman?" he asked, somewhat sharply. "He seems wonderfully familiar."

"Oh," replied the lady, laughing, "he is my cousin, Lieutenant Thomas Wilson, and, as you will perceive, is in his majesty's service."

"You seem rather careless of your dress, considering the occasion, sir," said the colonel, tartly. He was annoyed at the great interest which the lady had shown in the new comer.

"My business must be my excuse, colonel," said the young man, respectfully. "I am the bearer of a letter from Major Gainey, and my orders are to lose no time in delivering it. I have ridden hard all day, sir, and upon reaching your headquarters learned of your presence here. This lady being my cousin, I felt no hesitation in coming here at once, trusting for pardon to the urgency of my mission."

As he spoke, he handed to the colonel a sealed letter. Watson took it hastily, and broke the seal. As he read it, a smile of satisfaction overspread his features.

"This is very good," he said, gleefully. "Gainey is picking up recruits by the hundreds. Wants four hundred rifles, fifty sabers and some ammunition at once. I will send them? To be sure, I will. Have you wagons, lieutenant?"

"No, sir," replied the young man. "Major Gainey was afraid to send them down. There's no knowing when or where one may meet that cursed Swamp Fox and his sneaking cutthroats."

"Very good," said the colonel. "I'll furnish you with four wagons, and a guard of fifty mounted men. You will start at sunrise in the morning, lieutenant. Call at my quarters at midnight, and you shall have the necessary orders. Now, sir, you had better take rest, as you will need it."

"First let me offer him some refreshments," said the widow, quickly. "He is tired and hungry, I know, and no guest must leave my house in such a state."

"Return quickly, then," said the colonel. "I shall be miserable while you are gone."

The young man offered his arm to the lady, and they left the ballroom; but instead of going to the dining-room, she led him straight to her chamber, and then locking the door, said, anxiously:

"For Heaven's sake, Charles, what is the meaning of this?"

The young man did not answer verbally, but catching her to his breast, kissed her passionatley, and, to be frank, the young widow did not resist him.

"It means," he said, at last, in reply to her repeated questions, "that we want arms, and I have come for them."

What else they said matters not now; but before they separated, Mrs. Gorden seemed very well satisfied with the young man's explanation. They then repaired to the supper-room, where the lieutenant found ample refreshments, and the lady returned to the ballroom, where Colonel Watson was impatiently awaiting her.

At midnight the lieutenant called at headquarters, and, faithful to his promise, Colonel Watson was there. The necessary orders for the delivery of the arms and ammunition and wagons to Lieutenant Thomas Wilson, of the "loyal legion," were made out, and the colonel also placed in the young man's hand a sealed letter of instructions to Major Gainey. The rest of the night was spent in procuring the desired articles, and at sunrise the next morning Lieutenant Wilson, with his wagons and their contents, escorted by a guard of fifty men, set out for the "High Hills of Santee," where the tory major's headquarters were located.

The wagons and their escort made good time, and by sunset were forty miles from Charleston. The sun was scarcely half an hour high, when Lieutenant Wilson ordered a halt, for the purpose of camping for the night. The mounted men fastened their beasts to the trees, and removing their saddles, prepared to cook their evening meal; the teams were unhitched from the wagons, and the command busied themselves in preparations for a comfortable night. Every one was busy, and no one noticed that while these arrangements were in progress Lieutenant Wilson had drawn off from the party and disappeared in the woods that bordered the road. Suddenly there was a crackling in the brushwood, which caused the British troopers to spring to their feet in alarm. As they did so, a voice, which sounded not unlike that of the young lieutenant, shouted, loudly:

"Surrender, or you are all dead men!"

General Marion secured his prisoners, together with the arms, ammunition, wagons and horses, and set out, after a rest of a few hours, for "Snow Island." At the request of the bogus Lieutenant Wilson, he sent back one of the redcoats to Charleston with a note to Colonel Watson, informing him of the trick that had been played on him by the young officer—who so far from being a lieutenant in the tory legion, was none other than the famous Charles Hampton, a captain in Marion's brigade, who planned and carried out the affair successfully—thanking the colonel for the excellent weapons and other materials he had sent him, and promising to do good service with them.

The British commander was furious when he read the note, and saw the hoax of which he had been made the victim. He went in haste to Mrs. Gorden, but the fair widow had sailed for England. He was compelled to swallow his mortification in silence, and a few years later, when he went over, his chagrin was not a little increased by the tidings which reached him that Mrs. Gorden had married the young officer who had tricked him out of his rifles.

THE OLD SOLDIER.

He was quite an old man, and he had quite a bad limp, and he remarked as he touched his hat: "All I want is money enough to get to Savannah. I feel that I have not long to live, and I want to be buried in that nice, cool graveyard just outside of Savannah."

The appeal didn't open a single wallet. He was talking to three men who had found a shady spot under a grocery awning, and he seemed a little disappointed. Pulling a new string he remarked:

"Gentlemen, won't you do something for an old soldier?"

"Were you a soldier in the last war?" asked one of the group.

"I was," was the prompt reply.

"What branch of the service?"

"The heavy artillery."

"Where were you stationed?"

"Well, slowly replied the stranger, as if he hadn't expected such a question, "we were sometimes here and sometimes there. The fact was, our artillery was so heavy that we generally kept it on a hill. The Confederate government didn't seem to expect that us three or four men were going to drag a big cannon all over the country and whip the Yankees to boot. Yes, I was wounded in the left leg."

"In what action," was asked.

"I never knew what they named it; my business was to get up and hump and knock thunder out of the whole Union regiment at once, and you just bet I didn't have any time to feel around and ask what they were going to name the battle. I went into the war to fight; and didn't I just throw myself though?"

"Did you throw yourself under the wagon?" quietly asked one of the three.

Sometimes I did, and sometimes I didn't. They used to let me fight any way to win. I've fit from under a wagon and from the top of a tree, and the boys used to call me the Wild Cat."

"They must have seen you 'clawing' to the rear," suggested another of the trio.

"Very likely, gentlemen. Sometimes I could fight better at the rear, and I went back. Then I'd change and fight on the flank, and then I'd advance and mow 'em down in front."

"Where did you say you were wounded?"

"In the leg—just about there. The surgeon said that three or four bullets hit me at once."

"Be honest now, old man, and tell us if you didn't get that leg hurt in a mill or around machinery?"

"Great God! do you doubt my word?" gasped the old man.

"We do!" they replied in chorus. He closely scanned each face and was indulging in gestures to show how he deplored such conduct toward one who had fought bravely, when one of the men said:

"Come, now, speak the truth, and we'll raise you thirty cents." The old man turned to go, halted, hesitated, and then replied:

"I suppose, gentlemen, then I fell off a building in Atlanty and hurt my leg, but it happened so durned close after a battle that I could never tell whether the fall or fight hurt me the most. Now, please pass in your ten centses!"

WRITTEN BY ITSELF.

My life is shortly told. My first impression was the sensation of a tremendous but short squeeze, which instantly awoke me into life and thought. I was now spread out to the light, and a glow of intelligence completely pervaded me. My ideas were at first new, multiferious and confused—nations, politics, courts, wars, speeches, merchandise, fightings, feasts, marriages, ditties, poetry, etc., etc., made up all my thoughts, which were various and mixed. I lay in a silent state of wonder and great amazement.

I soon found that I was but one of a very large family, and was ushered into this curious world at the same time. Our whole family was laid in regular order in a pile; my situation being one of the first born, was particularly uneasy, damp, and uncomfortable. I had a silent, intuitive longing wish to get into the world, which was at last gratified.

Morning came, and I was carefully folded and laid, Moses-like, in a basket, by a boy who was called the carrier, and borne into the street. The said carrier I soon found was an object of interest and desire. He was soon accosted by an elderly looking man, with threadbare, rusty breeches.

"Have you a spare paper this morning, my boy?"

"No sir," was the short reply, and he trudged on with us, muttering: "Not as you know of, old gripes. You are the same chap that promised me some coppers for the paper the other morning, and hain't paid me yet; you are too stingy to take the paper—you won't get another from me, I guess."

My brethren were now fast leaving me, being deposited at their proper destination. At length my turn came, and and I was tucked in the crevice of a shop door. The first sample of this kind was not at all alluring. I had not been long in my new situation, when a reluctant early comer, swinging a key in his hand, wistfully eyed me, and casting a look about him, feloniously seized me, and thrust me into his pocket. My rightful owner, by virtue of advanced pay, being in sight, hailed and arrested the pilferer, and with threats compelled him to relinquish the prize. He entered his store, and I soon found that I was the first object of his attention. After hastily drying me by the fire, (which process I narrowly escaped conflagration, he ran over me, and fixed his eyes upon sales at auction, advertisements, &c. I was then more particularly examined, and dismissed with condemnation.

"Nothing but foreign news—congress and cabinet—love stories, and accidents by flood and field. A newspaper should be a commercial report, one side at least should be devoted to prices current." I was then pettishly thrown upon the counter, but was soon in requisition. A boy came in, with a "Please to lend me your paper for a few minutes, just to look at the ship news?"

The request was reluctantly granted, with something about the plague of paper borrowing, and a determination to stop it. I was soon borne to a neighboring house. The good old woman, whose husband was at sea, eagerly sought the ship news, but was quite disappointed in her search.

"How negligent and careless these printers are," said she; "not a word of intelligence of the Wing Bird, but they print of Poland and [illegible]."

Miss [illegible] took her turn. She sought the stories, poetry, and marriages, which in half an hour she devoured with a wonder that they put anything else in the paper. An elderly lady now took me, adjusting her spectacles, surveyed me a little while, and [illegible] a column of deaths, and not more than fifteen or twenty murders and accidents.

In this way I passed through all the hands of the family, and after being well soiled and somewhat torn by the little ones, was sent home. For three whole days I got no rest, [illegible] abused. At the end of this period I was supplanted by a new face, and was then discarded and thrown aside till the servants [illegible]. I now, however, again [illegible], and employed as a wrapper to some merchandise, and sent into the country. There I again became the object of interest, made the rounds of the neighborhood, and was a "nine days wonder."

I am now quietly hanging up in a thatched [illegible], in a farmer's kitchen, from which I have written this brief memoir. I have seen a good deal of the world, and learned that mankind are [illegible], and that there is a world of great variety of tastes and wishes it is impossible to please all.

THE SITUATION.

Slowly but surely the fact is coming home to the people that Gov. Tilden was legally elected in November to the Presidency. Returning Boards may, by their crookedness, have for a time blinded or perplexed them as to the actual state of affairs, but circumstances convincing and assuring are gradually bringing the facts to the light of day. We entertain no doubt that every contrivance will be resorted to by the Republican leaders to delude the people into the belief of the election of Gov. Hayes, but it appears to us that such contrivances must certainly fail. We have all seen enough, we feel justified in saying, we know enough to make it positively certain that Gov. Tilden is entitled to the office and will be inaugurated on March 5th, 1877, at Washington. There is now no dispute that the Electoral vote on the day after the election stood 184 for Tilden and 165 for Hayes, leaving still in doubt the States of South Carolina, Louisiana and Florida. These three States have since been claimed by the Republicans for Gov. Hayes, but under such questionable authority that the claim cannot be allowed until it has been subjected to a thorough investigation. Such an investigation, we are persuaded, will make the fact of fraudulent transactions on the part of the Returning Boards, so evident, that no question can exist as to whom the votes of these States belong. This will of course elect Gov. Tilden. Should, however, the fact be found to be that Gov. Hayes has received legally and rightfully the votes of those States, there yet remains the vote of Oregon which is claimed for Gov. Tilden and which, if there is any virtue or consistency in the law, clearly belongs to him. The whole weight of authority seems to establish this view of the case and is undoubtedly conclusive in his favor. This gives him 185 votes, a majority of the Electoral College, and ensures his election. The Democratic National Committee announces Gov. Tilden's election and we feel assured that the final result will confirm this announcement.

TILDEN'S ELECTION.

A Congratulatory Address by the National Democratic Committee.

ROOMS OF THE NATIONAL DEM. COM., WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 13, 1876.

To the People of the United States:

The National Democratic Committee announces as the result of the Presidential election held on the 7th of November, the election of Samuel J. Tilden, of New York, as President, and Thomas A. Hendricks, of Indiana, as Vice President of the United States.

We congratulate you on the victory for Reform. It now only remains for the two Houses of Congress, in the performance of their duty on the second Wednesday of February next, to give effect to the will of the people, thus expressed in the Constitutional mode by a majority of the electoral votes, and confirmed by a majority of all of the States, as well as by an overwhelming majority of all the people of the United States.

By order of the Executive Com.,
ABRAM S. HEWITT, Ch'n.
F. O. PRINCE, Sec.

The situation in South Carolina is briefly at last accounts, this: The illegal Republican House continues to hold its sessions in the State House being guarded by Chamberlain's constabulary, who are in turn guarded by Federal soldiers, who are nominally under the command of Gen. Ruger, who is actually under command of Chamberlain. A committee of the legal House waited upon Gen. Ruger to inquire whether the troops are to be employed to keep them out of the State House. Ruger replied that he was instructed by President Grant to recognize Chamberlain, and that if Chamberlain's constabulary resisted their entrance, the troops would interfere on their side.—Meanwhile, the Republican House without a quorum, proposes to impeach the Supreme Court Judges; and the Democratic House, with a lawful quorum, are proceeding against Chamberlain for treason in filling the State House with armed men and waging war against the State. The Supreme Court has enjoined the banks which are the depositaries of the State funds against paying any money to the order of Chamberlain's Treasurer, and will sustain all taxpayers in refusing to pay their assessments to that unlawful government.

CHARLESTON, DEC. 11.—Sixteen negroes were arrested in Abbeville county, charged with the murder of two white men, whom they ambushed and shot near Lowndesville, on Monday last.—Six of the negroes made a full confession, implicating their fellow prisoners, and divulging a plot for the murder of white men in the village and the capture of the women. Twenty of them were in the conspiracy.

Of the sixteen arrested, thirteen were started from Lowndesville to Anderson, the intention being to send them from Anderson to Abbeville by railroad.—This roundabout course was adopted to avoid lynching by men who were said to be on the direct road from Lowndesville to Abbeville.

The prisoners were safely landed and incarcerated in jail, but three of them have since committed suicide.

COLUMBIA, DEC. 13.—The Senate and the Rump House passed a concurrent resolution to adjourn sine die on the 20th inst. The Constitutional House passed a resolution inviting the Senate to attend the counting of the Gubernatorial vote to-morrow, at 2 P.M. The returns elect Hampton, and he will be immediately inaugurated. The Constitutional House and the Democratic Senators balloted for United States Senator, but by agreement reached no election. Neither Corbin's contempt case, nor the injunction against Cardoza, as Treasurer, from drawing and disbursing public funds, are decided. The people are very quiet and calm.

INDIANA DEMOCRATS IN COUNCIL.

INDIANAPOLIS, DEC. 13.—The Democratic State Central Committee met here to-day, pursuant to the request of the Democratic electors, to consider the political situation. A number of prominent politicians, including Gov. Hendricks and the State officers, were present, in addition to a representation from each Congressional District.

Ex-Congressman Julian, who had been to Louisiana, being called upon, gave it as his opinion that the election in that State had been as quiet and peaceable as the election in Indiana, and that Tilden had carried that State overwhelmingly. He hoped the Democrats would have pluck enough to stand up for their rights. He was satisfied we shall have no war.

Gov. Hendricks was called upon for his views, but the Chairman reminded the meeting of the impropriety of one so personally interested speaking at this time.

The members gave the sentiments prevailing in their respective Districts as follows.

First District—The people believed Tilden elected, and were disposed to see him through.

Second District—In favor of the inauguration of Tilden and Hendricks.

Third District—But little excitement among the people, who, however, were convinced of Tilden's election, and were willing to follow their leaders.

Fourth District—Requested the State Committee to demand the inauguration of Tilden, and favored a State Convention.

Fifth District—Wanted a State Convention, and were willing to meet the emergency let it be what it may.

Sixth District—Our people are all in favor of seeing our man duly installed in office.

Eighth District—Willing for a peaceable solution of the question, provided it results in the inauguration of Tilden.

Ninth District—Gen. Manson said there was great excitement among his people, and some were inclined to go to extremes, but he did not believe we ought to talk about war. He did not think a minority of the United States would insist upon the inauguration of a President. He felt there was certainly some way for a peaceable settlement. The people cannot afford a civil war.—Right is right, and he felt that the great and honest Republican party would see that right is carried out.

Tenth District—The people of this district believed Tilden should be inaugurated. They deprecated war talk, although some of the working classes were strongly inclined that way.

Eleventh District—A certain element in this district was decidedly for war, but were looking to the action of this meeting, and particularly wanted a State Convention to decide upon a plan to be pursued. The feeling is, "We must have our rights; peaceably if we can, forcibly if necessary."

Twelfth District—This district was determined that Tilden should not be counted out. Submission now meant submission for all time.

Thirteenth District—The people of this district expect this committee to take the initial steps to secure the inauguration of Tilden.

A resolution was then adopted calling a Convention of the people, regardless of their past political opinions, at each County seat, on Dec. 23, to select and instruct delegates to assemble in State Convention at Indianapolis, on Jan. 8, to consider public affairs, and to take such action as will secure a full execution of the Constitution and laws.

A committee being appointed to prepare an address to the people, a recess was taken until three o'clock.

The day named for the State Convention is the inauguration day of Governor-elect Williams.

WASHINGTON, DEC. 11th.—Speaker Randall received a letter to-day from an ex Republican Governor in the West, saying that since the conduct of the Returning Boards in Florida and Louisiana had become known, the people were quite united in the West in denouncing the fraud, and in favor of the inauguration of Tilden.

BROOKLYN'S HEAVY LOSS.

Brooklyn for two days last week devoted herself to the interment and the honor of her dead. Many of those who lost their lives in Tuesday's fire were buried on Saturday and Sunday, and on the former day the city, with a long and imposing procession, bore to Greenwood the remains of 100 unrecognized or friendless victims of the calamity, and laid them in one great grave. The wintery harshness of the day interfered somewhat with the plans, but did not prevent solemn and impressive obsequies. On Sunday three great meetings were held to express the general grief for the lost and the general sympathy for the bereaved survivors, and addresses were made by Mr. Beecher, Dr. Inglis, Dr. Storrs, Dr. Duryea, Dr. Cuyler, and others.—Many sermons were preached in New York and Brooklyn Sunday on the theme of universal sorrow. The funeral of the two actors Murdock and Burroughs in the Church of the Transfiguration called out a large attendance of the theatrical profession. Subscriptions for sufferers by the fire are coming in freely, and a large number of benefit performances is to be given for them. Very thorough investigations have proved that 271 persons perished in the Brooklyn Theatre, and have verified every name of these; the bodies of 217 have been identified.

And now we are told that "bull-dozing" to a considerable extent has been carried on in our own New Jersey. It appears that as the result of this, that on the 6th inst., a notice was served upon Mr. Leonard of Monmouth county, Republican candidate for the Lower House of the Legislature by his Democratic competitor that he would contest his seat in the House upon the ground of "intimidation and fraud." Also, Mr. R. L. Hutchinson of the 3rd Legislative district of Mercer county, defeated Republican candidate for the same branch of the Legislature has served a like notice upon his successful Democratic rival for the same natural reasons. Where was Dictator Grant that he did not have a portion of his army here to compel "elections to order?" Or perhaps he is keeping them in reserve to organize the Legislature, &c., next month, according to the programme of "the party I represent."

ANNAPOLIS, MD., DEC. 13.—Third-class Cadet Midshipmen Joseph Beal, of Washington, and R. W. Barclay, of Missouri, were to-day dismissed for hazing.

OREGON.

A statement by the Democratic Candidates for Presidential Electors.

SAN FRANCISCO, DEC. 9.

A press despatch from Salem, Oregon, says that the following statement by the Democratic candidates for Presidential Electors was published in last evening's Daily Mercury, headed "True Statement to the People of Oregon":

"Inasmuch as grossly false statements, purporting to relate what occurred at the holding of the Electoral College to-day, are being industriously circulated by members of the Republican party, we the undersigned submit the following as a faithful detail of the proceedings in question in the said Electoral College, held in Salem on the 6th day of December, 1876. At the hour of 12 there were present in the room designated as the one in which the Electoral vote should be cast the following persons: J. C. Cartwright, W. H. Odell, S. W. Watts, Henry Klippel, W. B. Laswell, and E. A. Cronin. At the said hour the door of the room in which the said Electoral vote was to be cast was opened, and the Secretary of State handed to Mr. Cronin an envelope containing the certificates in triplicate of the election as Electors of E. A. Cronin, J. C. Cartwright, and W. H. Odell. After handing the certificates to Mr. Cronin, the Secretary retired from the room. Immediately afterward Mr. Cartwright opened the door and admitted one Mr. Minto, a police officer of the City of Salem, and Deputy United States Marshal. Minto, upon there entering, closed the door, locked it, and took out the key, whereupon Cronin requested him to leave the room. Cartwright and Odell insisted at first upon Minto's remaining, but finally, upon the request of Cartwright, Minto retired, leaving the key in the door.—Odell then locked the door and took the key, but on the request of a Democrat re-placed the key in the door.—Cronin then read, in the presence and hearing of all those in the room, one of the certificates showing the election of himself Odell and Cartwright. After the reading Cronin inquired of Odell and Cartwright if they were ready to vote with him and proceed with their business as Electors. They answered by demanding the certificates in Cronin's possession, Cartwright acting as principal spokesman. Cronin in reply proposed to proceed with the vote for President and Vice President, stating in effect that the certificates would be produced and attached to the certificate showing the result. Cartwright and Odell refused to proceed and requested Klippel and Caswell to retire, which they declined to do. Cartwright then arose and, addressing Cronin, said: "If you want a row you might as well have it now as at any other time;" and Cronin replied, "Sit down. We are not here to have a row, but to vote for President and Vice President." Cronin then again requested Cartwright and Odell to proceed with the election.

Cartwright then moved that Odell should act as Chairman and upon the vote of himself and Odell declared the motion carried, and Odell then appointed Cartwright Secretary. Dr. Watts then read a paper purporting to be his resignation as Elector. Cartwright moved the acceptance of the pretended resignation, and it was declared carried;, and immediately thereafter, by the votes of the two, Watts was declared the Elector to fill the vacancy. These proceedings were interrupted throughout by dialogue, which had the character of altercation, between Cronin on one side, and Cartwright and Odell on the other, Cronin insisting that the latter should act with him, and proceed with the business of the College, and they refusing to do so.

After the pretended appointment of Watts, Cronin arose, and, addressing Cartwright and Odell, said in effect if not in these precise words: "Gentlemen, do you refuse to act with me in proceeding with the business of the Electoral College?" One or both of them replied, signifying an unqualified refusal. Cronin then said that this refusal to act created vacancies in the Electoral College, and that he appointed J. S. N. Miller, of Jackson county, to fill one of said vacancies.—Mr. Miller, having been introduced into the room and informed of what had taken place, asked Cartwright and Odell if they refused to act with Cronin in casting the vote of the State.—Cartwright, answering, said they had so refused, and Mr. Miller then signified his intention to accept the appointment. The two then appointed John Parker Secretary, and the votes were taken by ballot for President and Vice-President, and the business formally proceeded with to the end.—Pending these proceedings Cartwright, Watts and Odell were engaged in signing papers.

The Newark Advertiser, that virtuous old lady, scolds like a fishwoman over that one Democratic Elector in Oregon. Her heart is almost broken. But she thought it was fine fun when she heard that the black and white rascals of a Returning Board in Louisiana had thrown out about 12,000 Democratic votes, on the flimsiest sort of a pretense. Keep cool, aunty.—New Brunswick Times.

Jack McCann, who murdered Wild Bill in the Black Hills last Spring, was on Thursday of last week found guilty at Yankton, D. T., and sentenced to be hanged.

TALLAHASSEE, DEC. 13.—The investigation by the Congressional Committee was fairly opened to-day. The first County taken up was Leon, which is not yet finished. The committee to-day divided into two committees.—The Republican members voting against the division were Messrs. Walling, DeBolt and Woodsworth. The sub-committee will start for the Eastern Counties to-morrow morning, stopping in Jefferson County for a day or two.—It is believed the headquarters of the committee will be Jacksonville. It is impossible to say when the committee will complete their labors.

The Supreme Court met this morning and took steps toward bringing forward the mandamus case. The argument will be opened to-morrow morning, and the decision reached before the week has closed.

A despatch from Washington announces that the Senate Committee started for Tallahassee this morning.—They will reach this city Saturday night. The work of the committee has as yet furnished no testimony that was not brought out before the State Canvassing Board.

The Victory Webb Type and Press Manufactory Company, of London, have commenced a suit against Henry Ward Beecher and other trustees of the Christian Union Publishing Company for $50,000 loss and damage caused by the defendants ordering a printing press in 1872 and then rejecting it.

MANY thousands of dollars has been spent in distributing, free of charge, Sample Bottles of BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP to all parts of this country, to those suffering from Coughs, Asthma, Hemmorrhages, Consumption, and other Throat and Lung Diseases, that the afflicted might satisfy themselves, that this remedy would save them from those fatal diseases. No person has ever used this medicine without getting immediate relief, yet there are a great many poor, suffering, skeptical persons going about our streets with a suspicious cough, and the voice of consumption coming from their lungs, that will not try it. If you die, it is your own fault, as you can go to your Druggist Wm. H. Voorhees, and get a Sample Bottle for 10 cents and try it; three doses will relieve any case. Regular size only 75 cts.

A TIME-HONORED SPECIFIC.—The long and successful career of DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL, as contrasted with the speedy collapse of nostrums devoid of efficacy which have from time to time been puffed into a brief notoriety during the twenty odd years that this celebrated medicine has been sold, affords a proof that the American public continues to repose its confidence in deserving articles only. The PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL has long been recognized as the leading specific for Consumption, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Diptheria, and all other diseases of the breathing organs. It is, moreover, a certain, speedy, and safe botanic remedy for Dyspepsia, Liver Disorders, Scrofulous Affections, Gravel, Dropsy, Debility, and Constipation. Constantly accumulating evidence of an unimpeachable character establishes the fact that it not only entirely eradicates the diseases to which it is adapted, but also that its action is remarkably prompt and thorough. The crucial test of experience has demonstrated its reliability in every particular. Sold by all druggists. Principal Depot, No. 916 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa. 17no6m

How sweet is his slumber! How calm is his rest?
The spirit is gone to the land of the blest;
He wearied of earth, with its sorrow and gloom,
And welcomed death's slumber in life's early bloom

But why should we mourn! The angels have come
And taken off loved one to Eden's bright home;
The glad angels saw that he wearied of life,
And bore him away from its care and its strife.

Death touched with his hand the beauty and bloom
And changed the bright rose for the lily's perfume
We know he has gone the bright fields to roam,
And we try to rejoice that our loved one is home.

We saw the death stream when his feet touched the tide,
But we saw not the beauty on Eden's bright side.
Life's trials are over, the cross is laid down,
And now he is wearing a diamond-set crown.
How gladly he laid down the sorrow and sin
When the pearly gate opened to welcome him in!

SHERIFF'S SALE.—In Chancery of New Jersey. Between Ziba H. [illegible], complainant, and Virginia Gardner, James C. Freeman, et als. defendants. Fi. fa.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale at public vendue, at the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on Wednesday, the 17th day of January, A. D., 1877, at two o'clock P. M. all that tract or parcel of land and premises, hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being in the township of Westfield, in the county of Union and State of New Jersey. Beginning at a stone in the line of Wm. H. Brower in the southerly line of the road leading from Plainfield to Scotch Plains; thence with the line of said Brower south forty-six degrees east (as the needle pointed in 1860) fourteen chains and sixty-five links to a stone; thence with the line of said Brower north forty-three and one-quarter degrees east two chains and ninety-eight links, more or less, to the middle of the road leading from the above described road to Fanwood Park, known as Hunter Avenue; thence with the middle of said Hunter Ave. a southeasterly course four chains and thirty-one links, more or less, to the line of Stiger; thence in the line of said Stiger south forty-three and one quarter degrees west ten chains and thirty-eight links, more or less, to a stone in the easterly line of an old street now closed; thence with the easterly line of old street north forty-seven degrees west eleven chains and ten links to a stone and making a corner for said Stiger; thence north forty-six and one-half degrees east three chains and seventy-five links to a stone and making a corner for said Stiger, and being the middle of a new street (said new street beginning at a point in the road leading from Plainfield to Scotch Plains, and running in a southeasterly direction sixty-six feet wide to the southerly line of said property); thence with the middle of said new street north forty-three and three-quarter degrees west seven chains and ninety-three links to a stone in the southerly line of the first mentioned road and making a corner for said Stiger; thence with the southerly line of the first mentioned road north forty-two and three-quarter degrees east three chains and forty-four links to the place of beginning, containing thirteen acres of land, more or less. The above described streets are to be used as public property so long as required for that use and so understood by both parties in this conveyance, excepting and reserving, however, so much of said premises as was sold to W. B. S. Taylor by deeds of J. C. Freeman and wife, one dated February 24, 1874, and recorded in the Clerk's office of Union County, in Book of [illegible], page [illegible], and another dated January 1, 1871, and recorded in said office in Book 87, of deeds on page [illegible], and excepting also a lot sold to said Taylor by Virginia Gardner, being one hundred feet on the road leading from Scotch Plains to Plainfield, and two hundred feet deep, and lying next to Brower's land.

LOOK!
The wildest excitement exists in many localities on account of the immense number of tramps who are perambulating over the country.
Out
of work, and many of them would not work if it was tendered them. The most of them are a ragged, thieving, dirty and worthless crew. The exception can be granted to an occasional few.
For
a whole flock of black sheep is truly a rarity. The general depression of business, and lack of employment everywhere has forced many to roam in search of work, and others travel, beg and steal, because they don't want to work. In this connection we wish to call
Your attention to the fact that we propose to do our level best to keep up the high standard for respectability of this section of country as far as GENTEEL APPEARANCE IN DRESS can go so, and while the wearing of good clothes is no particular safeguard for your Lives and Property
there is no denying the fact that a neat appearing, well dressed man is not likely to get up a scare, equal to a rough and ragged individual. This brings us to
The
great question at issue which is to inform you that our new stock of Clothing is now in, and we are prepared to fit neatly every Man or Boy, who will come with the cash, in a suit to please in every respect. Our prices are so very low that the
Tramps
Themselves can readily see that it will be cheaper for them to buy than undertake to beg or steal a new suit. We propose to keep the lead in our line of business. If you
Are thinking of going to the Centennial, and want a suit that will pass you through in good style, a substantial, stylish and good fitting suit, you don't want to delay coming
and taking a look through our store, because we mean just what we say, we will sell you Clothing for yourselves or boys that will give you satisfaction in style, fit, good wear, and what is of vital importance these hard times VERY LOW IN PRICE.

CALL and see Geo. A. Marsh, opposite the depot. He has $15,000 of First Bonds and Mortgages on improved property in Plainfield for sale.

THE members of the incoming Common Council were sworn into office last Thursday evening, all being present and qualifying but one, Mr. Potter, who was absent from the city.

THE benefit of a local notice is well illustrated by the fact that from such a notice in these columns Mr. E. P. Sanger recovered his stolen horse and buggy. All the local news may be found in THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

MR. E. P. SANGER's brother's family had purchased tickets for the Brooklyn Theatre, the night it was burned, but on account of a slight indisposition of one of the number, the party did not attend the performance.

OUR respected friend W. Manning Jennings was kicked in a leg by a horse he was doctoring on Friday week last, which confined him to the house some days. We are glad, however, to see him around once more.

THE Republican banner was torn into ribbons by the gale last Saturday morning, the portrait of Mr. Hayes being blown out of the network and carried north as far as the corner of Front and Cherry St. Oregon!

A LARGE drove of mules and horses being driven through Clinton Avenue, on Tuesday last, stampeded, and ran pell mell over fields and highways, causing their drivers considerable trouble to get them together again.

THE eminent Artists that will appear at the Grand Concert next Thursday evening, are Miss Lasar, Soprano, Mr. Lockwood, Tenor, Mr. Steins, Basso, Mr. Loretz, Jr., Organist, Mr. Eisner, Solo Violinist, Mr. Durege, Pianist.

A LARGE pile of railroad ties and cord wood belonging to the Railroad Company, and stored along side the track below Dunellen, caught fire from sparks from a passing locomotive on Saturday evening last, and was totally destroyed.

MULFORD ESTIL has laid in a large stock of fine stationery, toys, &c., for the holidays, which for variety and cheapness cannot be equalled in this city. He invites an inspection of his goods. Read his advertisement in another column.

WE are in receipt of a letter from our former townsman, John J. Shotwell, son-in-law of A. Vanderbeek, now located at Cottage Grove, Minn., wherein he states that on Dec. 9th, the thermometer stood there at 28 degs. below zero, and on the 11th at 23 degs. above.

CLARE, the Watchmaker and Jeweller of Cherry Street, announces that he has laid in a large stock of new goods in his line suitable for holiday gifts. He is determined to offer none but good goods at fair prices. All guaranteed. Read his advertisement. Clare is reliable. Buy of him.

WILLIAM E. CRANDALL, aged 24, son of the late Rev. Lucius Crandall, of Plainfield, was one of the victims of the fire of the Brooklyn Theatre last week. His remains were brought to this city for interment. They were identified by the studs in his shirt bosom. The body was much charred and the features unrecognizable. The funeral sermon was preached in the Seventh Day Baptist Church by Rev. Mr. Maxson.

The light tracking snow which fell Sunday night, caused numerous hunters to sally forth on Monday morning after the unwary rabbit who, in its frisky gambols the night before, had left the imprint of its nimble feet on the snow, and many was the unlucky "bunny" that fell a victim to the practiced eye of the hunter who crept toward the lair of the unsuspecting animal as it was reposing therein.

A FALL of snow to the depth of about one inch Monday morning last made the owners of sleighs look about to see where the same were stored, in anticipation of a further fall of snow and good sleighing, but their anticipations were frustrated by the weather clearing up on Tuesday. The "bottom" is, however good for snow, and perhaps, before Christmas, we may have good sleighing over Johnston Drive, weather permitting.

THE new proprietors of the County Hotel, Somerville, Messrs. Phineas Brintnall and Jos. Stanton, are now in possession of the above house. The public may be assured of always receiving the right kind of treatment by the new proprietors should they stop at the County House. Mr. Brintnall has had years of experience in hotel keeping, and therefore knows how to meet the wants of the public, while all who meet "Phin" once, will desire to renew his acquaintance.

AN attempt was made to burglarize the boarding house of Mr. Cloyd, corner of Front Street and Central Avenue, last Friday evening, which was frustrated by Mr. C. rising about five o'clock in the morning to see what time it was by the clock. The thieves heard him and decamped, taking with them an overcoat and leaving numerous articles packed up ready for transportation. An entrance was effected through one of the windows of the dining room on the first floor. Look well to your fastenings and see that your fire arms are loaded.

A MASQUERADE surprise party was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Hiram De Camp at Laing's Hotel last Tuesday evening, which was attended by about forty couples of the *many friends of the above-mentioned gen*tleman and wife. Of course it was necessary to let "Uncle John" into the secret, but "High" was kept in complete ignorance of the affair. Upon the arrival of the party which met at Miss N. Randell's on Second Street and started from there, they were ushered into the large dancing hall of the hotel, where Jakey Wearts, of New Brunswick, with two other pieces of music, soon set the grotesquely arrayed throng at work keeping step to his excellent music. At 12 o'clock masks were taken off and all sat down to a bountiful repast spread in the dining room, furnished by the ladies of the party. Dancing was continued until near daylight. The party was gotten up under the management of Mr. Thomas Pell, and was a success throughout. We would like to describe the various costumes worn on the occasion, but failing to get a description of them all we will defer that part until a future issue.

We learn that Elston Marsh, Esq., is confined to his residence by an attack of billious fever.

THE ladies of the German Reformed Church, will hold a Fair and Festival in the Y. M. C. A. Rooms, Dec. 20 and 21, day and evening, at which time they will offer for sale Fancy Articles, &c. The admission fee will be 25 cents, Children, 10 cts. Help a good cause along by attending the Fair.

ACCORDING to the notice published in both papers by the City Clerk, two Justices of the Peace were to be elected at the late Charter Election, but by an oversight only one candidate was run on either ticket, consequently one Justice is elected on each ticket, as the law requires two to be elected, the Times' manner of buildozing to the contrary notwithstanding.

THE Republicans got out their cannon and gave a salute, also built a large bonfire, and otherwise "demonstrated" one night last week over the delusive idea they are entertaining that Hayes has been counted in President. The next morning they heard from Oregon, and the next a "breeze" came and tore their banner into shreds. Better wait "till you're out of the woods before you holler."

THE Star Society (an association of nine little girls from our Public School) held their Fair agreeable to notice in our last issue, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons and evenings. The success attending their efforts so far exceeded their fondest anticipations that they are now enabled and intend, instead of only relieving the immediate wants of one worthy family as originally intended, to divide the nett proceeds among others whose straightened circumstances shall awaken their charity. They desire to tender their sincere thanks to the very many friends who so ably assisted them by donations, by their patronage, and the very many acts of kindness so cheerfully bestowed by those whom they called upon for favors. The use of the building, flags for display, gas, and in fact, most everything needed for the occasion was cheerfully tendered, free of charge, proving that a generous public is ever ready and willing to encourage a sincere effort to relieve the wants of those of our neighbors who are less fortunate than ourselves, for all of which they tender their grateful acknowledgements.

PLAINFIELD had a narrow escape from a big fire on Monday evening last. Mr. John Chandler, ex-chief of the Department, stepped into Pettibone & Co's hardware store, on Front Street that night, and had no sooner closed the door than he remarked he smelled smoke, which he supposed was the burning of the clothing of some of the employees. Quietly passing to the rear of the store he found smoke coming out through the cellar gratings on the outside. An investigation was then made when a fire was discovered in the basement under Lilienstern's clothing store adjoining Pettibone & Co's. A fire was burning on the floor, and a wooden partition about one foot from the fire, would soon have ignited. A few pails of water soon extinguished the flames and saved the buildings. It seems that a son of Dr. Gamble, (who has rooms above) went into the cellar early in the evening to get some coal, and lighting a match to see by, found it would not hold out and therefore set fire to a bunch of paper lying on the floor, and when he started to return, stamped the flames out as he supposed. The fire caught in an old carpet valise, old broom, chips and general accumulation on the floor, and soon would have gained such headway as to have caused a serious conflagration. Had the fire not been discovered as it was it would have certainly caused serious damage, as both Mr. Lilienstern and Messrs. Pettibone & Co. would have closed their stores in an hour after the above occurred.

"BONNIE Sweet Bessie, Maid of Dundee," will be sung by Miss Lasar next Thursday evening.

Postponed.

The lecture by R. J. De Cordova, announced for Thursday, 14th inst., is unavoidably postponed until later in the season. The next entertainment of the Y. M. C. A. Course will occur Dec. 28.

Y. M. C. A.

The monthly reception of the Y. M. C. A. will occur on Thursday evening of this week. The programme is unusually attractive. Mr. Clark Evans will preside at the Piano, Madame Botts will sing, and Mrs. Jenkins will give readings and recitations. Exercises begin promptly at 8 o'clock.

"WHEN the Tide Comes In" will be sung by Fred Steins Thursday evening.

Grand Concert.

Announcement is made of a Grand Concert in the Congregational Church next Thursday evening, 21st inst., at which eminent talent will appear. The artists are all well known to the music-loving fraternity, and they should attest their appreciation of the same by purchasing tickets and attending. Reserved seats are for sale at Voorhees' Drug Store, where also a diagram of the church may be seen.

Fruit Mission.

Many of our readers will be glad to learn that some ladies of New York have for years been engaged in the good work of carrying fruit and other delicacies to the patients in the Hospitals. They desire the cooperation of other ladies residing in the neighborhood of New York. To this end a Committee, consisting of Miss Brown, Central Ave. and 6th St., Miss Leatham, La Grande and Putnam Aves., and Miss Brewster, Broadway, 3d house from Presbyterian Church, has been appointed an auxiliary to the Society in New York. Any fruit or other articles suitable for the sick entrusted to the care of these ladies, will be forwarded promptly. They should be sent in on Mondays, as the Committee in New York visit the Hospitals and distribute the gifts of the benevolent every Tuesday morning. Those who are blessed with health ought to remember, and to be glad to minister relief to the sick.

Value of an Item.

Our local columns last week chronicled the fact that a horse and buggy belonging to Mr. E. P. Sanger, of Evona, had been taken by parties unknown, from beneath the sheds attached to Laing's Livery, this city, Tuesday evening, Dec. 5th, together with a description of the animal and rig. The Chief of Police of this city, Rahway, Elizabeth, New Brunswick, and other cities were notified of the disappearance of the rig, while parties visited surrounding cities and towns for the purpose of ascertaining any particulars regarding the disappearance of the horse and buggy, but no news was received of the same. Finally a telegram was received at the office of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST on Saturday, stating that the horse and wagon was at Roselle, signed by M. M. Dilts, Constable. Mr. Sanger was notified, and on Monday went to Roselle and found his property there safe. It seems that the turn-out was found near Roselle about half-past eleven o'clock Tuesday evening, Dec. 5th, the horse headed toward Roselle from Elizabeth, and the animal in a dripping sweat. It is surmised that the parties who took the rig drove to Elizabeth and then facing the animal toward home sent her on the way alone. Mr. Dilts, constable, took charge of the mare, and happening to see the account of the theft in this journal, a number of subscribers to which reside in Roselle, immediately telegraphed to this office. On Monday, Mr. Sanger visited Roselle and received his property, settling all claims against the same for keeping. It is supposed that some parties unknown, who desired a ride *to Eli*zabeth from this city, drove the mare there and then turned her loose, facing her toward Plainfield, for her to make her way home as best she could.

On account of the length of Programme, the Concert next Thursday evening will commence precisely at 8 o'clock.

The Star Society hereby tender their grateful thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. F. Randolph for their co-operation in getting up their entertainment for the benefit of a poor family, without which it would not have been a success.

E. L. RANDOLPH, Sec.

ATTENTION is directed to the advertisement of Wm. H. Williams, the enterprising news dealer of this city. Parties desiring any of the leading Magazines for 1877 will do well to give him a call. He agrees to furnish them at 10 per cent. discount from the publishers' prices for one year. Send in your orders by January 1st, 1877.

Holiday Goods.

Compton, the old and reliable Confectioner of Plainfield announces through our columns that he is ready for the holidays with an immense assortment of Candies, Fruits, &c., which he desires to dispose of at low figures. The candies at this establishment are all made of pure material, warranted and therefore the place to buy for the little ones is at Compton's. Read his advertisement, and if you do not think he "holds the fort," look at his show window when he raises his curtain.

Warren Mission Festival.

The people of Plainfield are earnestly desired to remember the Warren Mission Festival, to be given during Christmas week to the children of the Sunday School. Let the friends of the Mission, by their generous gifts, make this an occasion of great joy to the children during the season of privation and suffering to the many families. Contributions of the following articles may be sent to the Mission Chapel on Wednesday, Dec. 27th, before noon: Poultry, Ham, Tongue, Sandwiches, Bread, Butter, Pie, Cake, Jelly, Apples, Oranges, Lemons, Sugar, Nuts, Raisins, Coffee, Candy, and Milk. Flowers for decorations will be very acceptable. d15w1

FIRE MATTERS.

The Nineteenth Annual Ball of Gazelle Engine Co. No. 1, will be given at Laing's Hall the eve of Washington's Birthday, Feb. 21, 1877. Tickets as usual, Two Dollars.

The members of Plainfield Steam Fire Engine Co. No. 2, will hold their Annual Ball at Laing's Hall, Thursday evening, Jan. 18th. No pains will be spared by the Committee to make the occasion one of unusual enjoyment. The previous balls of this Company have been most enjoyable occasions. The tickets will be one dollar, admitting gentleman and ladies.

DON'T forget the Concert which comes off next Thursday night, Dec. 21, at the Congregational Church.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

At the special election held in North Plainfield Township last Tuesday to raise additional funds for the support of poor, but 112 votes were cast, of which 95 was for raising an additional $1,000 and 17 votes against the same.

The Town Committee met at Warren Engine House Saturday night and formally accepted Johnston Drive from the contractors, Messrs. Hoxsie & Wadley, they giving bonds to keep the same in repair for one year. This fine thoroughfare is now open to travel.

A new lamp post and lamp has been erected in front of the residence of Mr. Wm. E. Marsh, Sen., Jackson Ave., which sheds its rays on the benighted traveler. A commendable and progressive movement.

The entertainment given by the teachers and scholars of the Public School, on Thursday evening last, was a complete success in every way, and reflects credit upon the Principal, Mr. Gauer, and his corps of assistants. Not being present we cannot give the entertainment the extended notice it deserves. We would gladly give publicity to the fact of a repetition of the same.

RAIN or shine, the Grand Concert will take place next Thursday evening, Dec. 21, at the Congregational Church.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was observed in the Baptist Church by Rev. J. C. Buchanan last Sunday morning.

The next Regular Monthly Meeting of Excelsior Hook and Ladder Co. No. 1, takes place on Monday evening, Dec. 18th, at 7½ o'clock.

We regret to learn that our Democratic friend J. H. Hedenburg, Esq., of this village is about to remove with his family to Virginia, because in these times we cannot afford to spare such good citizens from our community.

We are happy to announce to our numerous readers, that one of our correspondents has been enabled to secure for publication in our next issue, an address by an eminent clergyman of this vicinity, delivered on Sunday evening, 10th inst., on the late "great Brooklyn tragedy." Let no one fail to read it.

That once beautiful Hayes and Wheeler banner in this village seems doomed through Providence to bad luck, for soon after it was first put up a terrible "storm came and beat upon it," and it became fearfully "strained." Soon after this, we noticed that the locality of the brains of that distinguished gentleman was "stove in" and very unshapely, and now we understand that the wind storm of last Saturday morning struck the unfortunate concern in such a way as to "knock it all into smithereens," one portion of it bringing up *in the sympathizing boughs of a neighbor*ing weeping willow, another piece had rested itself in the rear yard of our kind-hearted friend Mr. J. S. Patterson, while the "main character in the drama" had his right eye woefully "punched." The fragments have been gathered and sent to the shop "for repairs" after which it may be again suspended in its old place, there to hang, unless other disasters befall it, until after the inauguration of President elect Samuel J. Tilden, when it will be taken down, carefully folded, safely and securely laid away among the archives of the once great Republican party, there to be sacredly kept as a memento of the desperate effort made by that party in the year of our Lord, A. D. 1876, to perpetuate the Grant dynasty.

If you wish to get a good seat at the Grand Concert next Thursday evening, go early, so as to avoid the rush.

During the ensuing Legislative session Gov. Bedle will appoint Prosecutors of the Pleas in Essex, Hunterdon, Middlesex, Monmouth, Morris, Ocean and Somerset Counties. Next fall the people will elect Clerks in Cumberland, Essex, Gloucester, Middlesex and Union; and Surrogates in Atlantic, Cape May, Middlesex, Salem and Union. Dr. Leaming, the present Surrogate of Cape May, having been elected Senator, will probably resign, and the Governor will appoint to fill the vacancy until next Fall.

The special legislative committee of the last session to prepare a general act for the government of cities will probably fail to perform that duty, and another committee will probably be appointed.

A babe in a *cradle in New Bruns*wick, temporarily left by its mother, was badly burned on Saturday by a spark from the stove setting fire to its bed clothing.

STATE ITEMS.

At about 5 o'clock Saturday morning last the Doe mansion, on the Boulevard, about midway between Elizabeth and Newark, was discovered to be burning. Before assistance had arrived the flames had gained such headway as to be beyond control. The dwelling was occupied by Mr. R. B. Amory, who was making preparations to move, and had some of his valuable furniture taken away before the flames broke out. Loss estimated at $30,000; insurance partial. The flames originated from a defective flue.

The barn belonging to John Loyster, of Lyons Farms, N. J., was destroyed by fire on Thursday of last week.—Seven horses, several wagons and sets of harness, together with fifteen tons of hay, were destroyed. Loss about $3,000.

At about 2 o'clock Saturday morning last, an incendiary fire was started in the stable of Edward Riggs, in the rear of the railroad depot in Burlington. Seventeen valuable horses were burned involving $20,000, on which there is an insurance of $3,000. The high wind carried the sparks to the roof of Bloomfield mansion, which was destroyed, together with two houses on Liberty Street. From this point the flames spread to a frame building on York Street, and crossing the street, ignited Burns's grocery store. Twenty dwellings were here destroyed, involving a loss of $150,000, only partially covered by insurance. The occupants lost nearly everything. Great destitution prevails and upwards of 50 families are homeless. Subscription lists for the relief of the relief of the sufferers have been opened. Mrs. Rodgers, residing on Broad Street, died from fright occasioned by the fire.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

HOW THEY SHOT A BEAR.

The sweetest little bear story of the blessed Indian Summer comes from Atlanta, Ga. Early last week, a negro, while walking through a meadow, suddenly realized that he was very tired, and straightway determined to take a nap. So he got behind a haystack near a fence—to give an air of reality to the story it may be stated that the fence belonged to a Mrs. Cousins, who lives not more than seven miles from Dalton—and was soon sound asleep.—He not only slept but snored with such vehemence as to frighten a colored brother who passed that way. The sound was unlike anything that the saunterer ever heard. He reconnoitered the haystack at a safe distance, and saw what he thought was a bear's head, but which was in reality the No. 12 brogans of the sleeper. He ran off for his gun and summoned another negro to the chase. The two sportsmen crammed their guns with bird shot, and holding an intrenched position behind two trees, took aim at the bear, shouted, and when the brogans moved slightly, fired nervously but only too accurately. The bear not only growled but swore, and swore with even greater volume than he had snored. The bird shot in the bear was as thick as caraway seed in a Christmas cookey.

WHICH IS RIGHT.

Either the Japanese people do everything backward, left-handed and upside down, or we do. A traveller in Japan writes:

"I see a man planing. He pulls the plane toward him. I notice a blacksmith at work. He pulls the bellows with his feet while he is holding and hammering with both hands. He has several irons in the fire, and keeps his dinner-pot boiling with the waste flame. The cooper holds his tub with his toes. All of them sit down when they work. How strange! There is an important difference between a European and an Asiatic. One sits down to his work, and the other stands up to it. Why is it that we do things contrawise to the Japanese? The Japanese say that we are reversed. They call our penmanship "crab-writing," because they say it goes backward. In a Japanese stable we find the horse's flank where we look for his head. Japanese screws screw the other way. Their locks thrust to the left, ours to the right. A Caucasian, to injure his enemy, kills him; a Japanese kills himself to spite his foe. Which race is right?"

WANTED TO SEE A MAN.

Among the audience at Ford's Grand Opera House on Saturday evening, was a gentleman connected with the reportorial staff of one of the daily papers of Baltimore. Accompanying him was a beautiful and interesting looking young lady. At the close of the first act of the "Two Men of Bar," he intimated to his fair companion that he desired to go out to "see a friend," and hoped that she would excuse him for a moment. The lady, in a tone smacking somewhat of indignation, quickly replied, "If you go, sir, I'll excuse you forever." This somewhat startling announcement from one's intended convinced the gentleman that his friend, which was in the shape of a whiskey straight, would have to wait until the play was over and the lady escorted home. For the balance of the evening the young man endeavored to remove from the young lady's mind the bad impression he had made, and convince her that he had never appeared before any bar but Sandy Bar.

* * *

"Jake," said the blushing damsel to a lover that her father had forbidden the house, "I don't care if you're feet are big; I love you just as much."—"Wall, Sally, I don't mind so much about the size of my own feet, but I wish your dad's were a little smaller; I should feel more confident, you know, about staying."

* * *

Irate Young Lady—"Mr. Cox, I declare your machines are the worst I ever saw—there's not even a looking glass!" Proprietor of Bathing Machines—"Why, miss, if there was looking glasses we should'nt get you ladies out of them 'ere machines for howers and howers!"—Punch.

* * *

Charles—"Tell me, Laura, why that sadness? Tell me, why that look of care? Why has fled that look of gladness that thy face was wont to wear?"

Laura—"Charles, 'tis useless to dissemble; well my face may wear a frown, for I've lost my biggest hairpin, and my chignon's coming down!"

* * *

"If there's no moonlight, will you meet me by gas light, dearest Juliana?" asked he. "No, Augustus, I won't! I am no gas meter!" replied she.

* * *

"That's the only wedding trip I shall probably ever take," said an old bachelor, as he stumbled over a bride's train.

* * *

Words of a dying cannibal:—"Write me down as one who loved his fellow-men."

NEW JERSEY
Enamel Paint Company,
RARITAN, NEW JERSEY.
Manufacturers of
Bradley's Enamel Paint.
Mixed Ready for Use, in any shade, Tint or Color desired.
THESE Paints are composed of the purest and best materials known to painters; the principal ingredients being Pure White LEAD, ZINC, and LINSEED OIL, which are made to unite in a homogeneous mass by the addition of other materials which add greatly to the durability, elasticity, beauty and strength of the Paint. The whole are chemically combined so that the pigments are held in permanent solution, thus forming a new compound which dries on the surface and adheres firmly to it, thus forming a Smooth, Glossy, Firm, Elastic, Beautiful and Durable Paint.
The Oil, which is the real life of the Paint, cannot leave it and be absorbed by the substance to which it is applied, as it does in paints mixed in the ordinary way, & thus leave the pigment dry and chalky, to wash & rub off in few months. This paint is unaffected by changes of temperature, is perfectly impervious to the action of water, is well adapted to all classes of work, & is in every way a better paint for either in side or outside work or boat painting than any other Paint known to the trade, and will last at least three times as long as the best Lead and Oil mixed in the ordinary way.
These Paints are Ready for use,
Are easily applied by any one, require no mixing, stirring or addition of dryers.
Liberal Inducements to Dealers.
And full satisfaction guaranteed to their Customers.
Sold by the Gallon, Keg or Barrel. Orders attended to promptly. For Price List and Sample Color Card. Address,

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE GREAT CALAMITY.

A Sermon by Rev. J. G. Buchanan, in the Baptist Church of Scotch Plains, Sunday evening, Dec. 10th, 1876.

MICAH, 6. 9. "The Lord's voice crieth unto the city, and the man of wisdom shall see thy name: hear ye the rod and who hath appointed it."

Micah flourished during the reigns of three Kings of Judah, and was for a time contemporary with the prophet Isaiah. It was permitted to Micah to discern very minutely many important events that were to transpire centuries in advance, both in Bethlehem and in Jerusalem. He saw in his prophetic vision the coming of the Messiah and the destruction of the city of David; and while he comforted Judah with these assurances of the birth, and reign, and conquests of the Messiah, he exhorted Jerusalem to beware of her conduct and turn an attentive ear to the prophecy of calamity. The minute fulfillment of both these prophecies is well attested by impartial history. Christ came in his humiliation, advanced through the fires of persecution to the throne of spiritual empire, and now sways the sceptre of His mediatorial reign; while on the other hand Zion has been ploughed as a field, and Jerusalem has become heaps, and the mountain of the house as the high place of the forest.

In the text God is proceeding in his controversy with the city. The man of wisdom is charged to see his name in the voice. He is warned to hear the rod when it is coming, and when it is come, to recognize the fact that the rod of God always contains the will of God, and that it is the part of wisdom to remember that there is a very significant sense in which God is said to appoint calamities.

The text is thus the utterance of an inspired man in view of a great calamity. It recognizes a divine providence in this transaction, and it sets forth the wisdom of him who seeks to learn the lessons therein conveyed. Following in the path of this example we do well to pause sometimes before a marked and overwhelming providence to which all eyes are directed; not merely to chasten our imagination with its terrors, but to receive in humility, and record in sorrow some of its impressions.

Such a providence has recently startled a near community, the entire country, and it is hardly too much to say, the whole world! The wires have carried the story across the mountains and beneath the seas. The columns of the press have been crowded with the horrible particulars of the dire disaster. The strong excitements of political complications have given way to the stronger excitement of an awful holocaust. Men have stood in mute amazement as the terrible story has been told them. A whole city, subdued and tender, speaks in bated breath. It forsakes its daily avocations while the long processions move slowly with the charred remains to the silent city of the dead. In all the streets appear the tokens of bereavement and the signs of sympathy. There are hundreds of stricken homes, and thousands of aching hearts. The scene is awful, the impression deep almost beyond example.

To gather up and examine briefly some of the causes which create and justify this impression will be the task before us to-night. And in the first place, we are appalled by a sense of the vast extent of the calamity.—The earlier announcements assumed a comparatively trivial loss of life. The eye fell upon the statement, passed rapidly over the estimates of pecuniary loss, and then wandered off to other things. But the tidings grew. A score—fifty, a hundred, two—three hundred victims. And then the vast extent of the disaster was apparent. Shocked and bewildered we could only look about us for something more or less terrible by which to measure the calamity. The story of the Richmond tragedy is recalled. We remember the loss of its three and a half score of souls. Two entire generations have passed since them, but the impression has not yet faded out of memory. The fall of the Pemberton Mill at Lawrence; the wild rush of the destroying waters at Mill River; the loss of the Lexington, the President, the City of Paris—we think of these, and many more—and tearfully we place beside them as a thing never to be forgotten, the Brooklyn calamity of 1876.

We will not recall the physical features of this sad calamity. You have heard and seen enough of these already—and you care to hear no more. But the physical suffering is not all. From each of these victims there stretched a tender chord of sympathy to one or two perhaps a score of other souls. Whole families, with all their interlacing bonds, were wiped out of existence in that fierce blast of death. Other families were rent asunder, and sorrowing members yet remain to go and weep in secret places alone, uncomforted. And here is the greater pain. With the victim there are a few sharp pangs, a quick benumbing of the senses and all is over. But who shall measure the agony that goes on? Nor is this all. There is one thought before the magnitude of which we almost shrink from standing. These men and women were and are immortal. There was a life no fire could quench. And one question will come up whether we ask it or not, a question taking in with its broad scope all the future of these immortal spirits. But from this question we who are human turn away to God who is divine, and we leave these souls to Him who is Judge of all the earth and doeth right.

The local intensity of the impression helps to measure the extent of the disaster. A vessel sails from a given port and is heard from no more. Years pass away and no one returns to tell the story, and the ocean keeps her secret well. Another strikes upon a rocky coast and the sea closes over the wreck and claims the dead. A thrill of horror passes round the world. But these lost passengers represent a hundred different localities. And the wider distribution of the forces of the shock diminishes their apparent energy. Here everything is concentrated on a single spot. This audience is gathered from a limited circle. The people are only a few paces from their homes; they are with their neighbors. Half the people of the city know something of one and another in that large company. The place is familiar to thousands; the building itself a kind of landmark. Everything is local, visible, concentrated. It is just as when you stand and see afar off the lightning playing from cloud to cloud, and striking down you know not where, and then coming nearer and without warning, concentrating all its energy in a single blinding flash and deafening peal of thunder, tearing the earth asunder at your very feet.

Again: We are impressed by the suddenness of the calamity. The number of victims would not be so appalling were they cut down by disease. An epidemic, hardly noticed, would claim a larger number in a single week in a city so large as Brooklyn. The death-rate during the month of December in that city will not be very large in its relative increase.—In a city of a third of a million of inhabitants, many thousands each year of all ages fall out of the moving ranks. There is in every community a strong and steady current sweeping daily into the sea of death.—But with all this there is not the shock of suddenness. Many go hence from years of suffering. Some die too young to miss the happiness of earth and pass at once into the bliss of Heaven. Others fill their appointed days and are gathered in a ripe old age to the dust of their fathers. To most of these there is time for thought and space for preparation. There are warnings of decay and signs of approaching dissolution. But here how different. Here is a scene of gayety; all is life and animation. Fascinated by the clever counterfeits of real life passing in successive scenes upon the stage; bewildered by the gaudy colors and the brilliant lights, and the flashing tinsel; captivated by the voluptuous forms and the graceful movements of the actors; charmed by the sweet strains of the accompanying music, they gaze upon the passing scenes as little concerned as if nothing could ever end the pleasing spectacle. Perhaps in that large audience there are some who look this night for the first time upon the fascinations of a theatre; they are all eagerness and excitement; not a word nor a movement escapes them; they are moved to laughter over a jest of the player, and a tear starts at the sight of the straw with the poor orphan stretched in rags upon it. Some of them have been reared in pious homes and taught to place the theatre in the list of forbidden things. They felt a momentary twinge of conscience as they took their seats and found their eyes riveted upon the free manners and the gaudy costumes of the players. But all this has long since been overcome. The barriers of conscience have given away,—And now just at the close the interest is culminating; the play is almost over; that peculiar fascination of the play-goer is coming on; the passion is striking its roots downward; the habit is forming; the path is being chosen. There are others there to whom this form of amusement has become almost a necessity; the habit is already fixed. The silver crown of age is there; the strength of manhood, the grace and loveliness of womanhood; the young are there in all the vivacity of early life. There is the attraction of beauty, the display of wealth, the haughtiness of pride. There is an atmosphere of gayety; eyes gleam and sparkle; faces glow with smiles; hearts beat high with hope and expectation; it is a gay and thoughtless multitude revelling in the intoxicating pleasures of a night. One-half hour, all this; the next, eternity!

Another thing impresses us: It is our constant liability to accident. War, famine, pestilence, in all their gaunt and haggard forms stalk through the land and leave behind a path of desolation. But this is in a measure looked for. The fate of war is destruction; this is the legitimate outcome of enlistment, and equipment, and service. Men carry guns to destroy other men; and when they learn a trade it is not surprising that they follow it. But an accident is unforeseen; it is a thief coming in the night; you cannot anticipate it, nor brace yourself against it; you have no apprehension; its causes are concealed; its course and its consequences alike unforeseen. And to these accidents we expose ourselves every day; perils beset us on every hand; our swiftly flying trains are at the mercy of a single hand and brain; one careless deed, one moment of thoughtlessness, and disaster follows. Our lives are exposed daily to the sagacity and forbearance of dumb brutes. We go without apprehension into dangerous places, and pay a premium upon the cupidity that economizes space and increases danger. We expose ourselves to known danger without complaint; we steal into traps, nibble the bait and scud away thankful that we escaped the spring. We fail to distinguish between fear and prudence. There is only a possibility on the one side, there is a strong probability on the other. We have passed through a thousand dangers safely and we risk a thousand more. Closing our eyes to peril and if possible forgetting it we rush on. There seems to be no alternative. It is this or nothing.

We are impressed by this matter also with the attractive nature of the play. This is the only feature of the play I care now to discuss: The numbers drawn toward it proved its attractiveness; the house was filled, not merely the private boxes and the family circle, but even the third tier. All grades of social rank from the highest to the lowest are there represented; all have a common interest in a common thing. It matters not that times are trying, business prostrate, money difficult to obtain, and thousands almost literally without bread. Some of these very persons, it may be, parted with their last dollar at the door on that fatal night. But the desire overcomes everything and they go—one to his private box—the other to his proper quarters on the third row. There is an irresistible attraction and the crowd gathers to that centre. There are other open doors in that city leading to far different scenes. Through these a few devout persons find their way into the place of prayer; they go there to meet God and renew their spiritual strength. Many in this crowd have passed by such open doors on their way to this place of amusement. Some of them it may be are numbered on the roll of membership in the same body of Christ. But here is the great central attraction. Money goes out freely here, perhaps days and weeks in advance; the services are not too long here; there is no general clamor to compress them within an hour. The message of man to man need not be restricted by the bounds of time.—Half the night is not too much to give, and even then it is with a sigh of regret the curtain rises on the last scene. This very piece has been witnessed perhaps a dozen times before; the tones of each actor's voice are familiar; it is well known what is coming and the performance is discounted in advance. There are no surprises; there is no celebrated delineator of character here; no master-interpreter of the art of Shakespeare. It is only an ordinary play, by ordinary players, heard and known for long—a thrice-told tale. Suppose then we ask the reason for the attraction? One will answer, It is the natural craving for amusement, harmlessly gratified; another, it is the desire to feel the charm of a faultless elocution; another, to look upon real life, to get under the influence of scenic representation, in which the artist speaks to the eye as well as the ear, to combine all the advantages of art and song, and rhetoric and elocution, to make an impression; another will claim the benefit of an educational force in the study of human nature, an economy of time in learning the motives and forces of human conduct. Upon the whole these men will place this institution among the fruitful agencies for the promotion of personal education and the advancement of social order. But I apprehend this would not tell the whole story. This crowd of people would not be attracted to the boards night after night with the same play upon them, were the considerations no more potent than those assigned. If these were all, who would condemn the stage? Nay, who would not commend it heartily? There cannot be too many educational forces, provided they operate in the right channels. Nor can they have too many robes of attraction thrown about them. God speaks to the eye in the lavish prodigality of Nature's charms. Every mountain, and every tree, and every stream, yes, and every star, is an object-lesson full of matter for the profoundest study. If you can make the stage a good interpreter, and keep it pure as the innocence of Nature herself, let us by all means have it, and let us all patronize it, and let us bid it God-speed on the errand of blessing to a struggling world.—But the difficulty lies in the fact that the moment you elevate the stage to such a position you push it beyond the point of patronage. An institution of the kind described could hardly keep its doors open for a month. No, no, it is not this. The one word that describes the wild rush into the presence of the player, is pleasure. Not instruction, not improvement, not moral influences, but simply pleasure. A business is made of pleasure, and that excitement runs through all its degrees, from the highest to the lowest.

This is not the time to say all that might in justice be said of the modern stage, with its various appliances. But this is precisely the time to utter a word of warning against the growth of respectable and even christian support of these institutions. I am sure that very much of it is bestowed without an adequate conception of the purposes for which they exist, and the foundations upon which they rest. It was a credit to the best portion of this nation that the sorrow over the martyrdom of Lincoln, mingled with the keenest regret that the fatal deed was committed where it was. Nor does the deepest feeling of sympathy with those who mourn over these untimely graves to-night, prevent me from here paying my tribute of respect to the same regret that will ever in the after years add its burden to their grief. So thoroughly did this sentiment possess the minds of the people of Richmond after the burning of their theatre in the year 1811, that it is said for seventeen years no institution of like character could find a foothold in that city. And if a sentiment at all approaching that, a spirit of fresh inquiry into the true nature of the modern stage, a sentiment that demands the lifting up of all pleasure into a moral purpose, or at least the elimination of all that is immoral could follow this awful calamity, these lives would not be sacrificed in vain.

But while we speak thus plainly, let us not be understood as pronouncing this tragedy a judgment of Jehovah upon the men that perished. I know nothing about the method of God's judgments in temporal disaster. He has not revealed that to me, nor as far as I know, to any one else. The principle upon which he acts in temporal judgments he has kept hidden in his own counsels. It is not for us to leap at ill-advised conclusions in these things; if we uniformly ascribe to the calamities that visit the world the character of special judgments, then by all rules of fairness we must acquit of all evil those who sail smoothly and fare well; and we should thereby limit also the operation of divine law to the present stage of mortal existence, and go far toward destroying all belief in future rewards or punishments. There are many mute but potent witnesses of the doctrine in its bearings on the great distinctions between good and evil. You may find them on the lonely heights of Nebo, in the valley of the Dead Sea, and in the re*cords of a drowned world; but their method* and their measure are alike unrevealed. There were present at one time with Jesus, those who told him of some Galileans whose blood Pilate had mingled with their sacrifices, interpreting this as a special judgment on the wicked men. But Jesus rebuked them saying: "Suppose ye that these Galileans were sinners above all the Galileans because they suffered such things?—Or those eighteen upon whom the tower in Siloam fell and slew them, think ye that they were sinners above all men that dwelt in Jerusalem? I tell you, nay; but except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish."—And so we may say: Think ye that these men were sinners above all that dwelt in Brooklyn and that live to-day? Let us not hold for a moment a thought so unworthy of reasonable men. Rather let us all ask: Have I repented that I perish not at the last? It is enough for us to contemplate the awful reality of three hundred souls called in the twinkling of an eye to stand in the presence of Him who has set His throne of judgment in the Heavens above.

But my friends, we should miss an important fact if we failed to notice that even this rod is divinely appointed. Beyond all happenings of time and sense there is always the unfathomable will of God. Mysterious as the providences of God sometimes appear they do fit someway into the mighty purposes of his unhindered will. It is idle to search for all the ways of that Being who permits sin and who punishes sin. But this we know; His will is above everything.—All accidents, and all calamities and all sorrows have their places. Those of you who saw the curious looms at the Centennial noticed the vast number of various colored threads, and the many shuttles carrying yet other colors, all moving hither and thither, apparently in the most hopeless disorder, and producing only the direst confusion; but when the work was completed and the loom stopped, lo! there was a portrait, and an inscription and the various insignia of patriotic feeling completer than the human hand could make them. So God takes up the threads of his providence, and is weaving them to day into a pattern more symmetrical and beautiful than anything akin to earth. Some day when all is finished we shall see it. Until that day let us wait and trust.

Just one thing more and we close. It is the most important thing of all; it is the lesson that comes up from every calamity and from every other happening of life, that meets us at every pause and confronts us at every turn; that lurks in every shadow of the Destroyer, and blazes out in every line of celestial light; that follows us wherever we go and abides with us wherever we stay; the one lesson of all time past and present and to come; the lesson we must heed if we hope to win Heaven at last; it is the voice of wisdom crying above the rod from Him who hath appointed it—PREPARE TO MEET THY GOD.

KIDNAPPING A ROBBER.

The post office at Oberville, a small Western town in the United States, was a very important place. The worthy postmaster kept a country store, where he dispensed goods of every description.

The district was comparatively new and formed one of those prairie villages which spring into existence miles away from other towns, and are a sort of nucleus or trading post for a large section of the country. Saturday was the principle trading day, and Mr. Harmon, the postmaster, and his assistants, were overwhelmed with business on that day.

But on the particular Saturday afternoon of which we wish to speak, trade had slackened earlier than usual and the proprietor and his men were enjoying a breathing time and chatting with several rough looking fellows who had gathered about the stove, many of them being strangers; for a stranger attracted but little notice in that community of new comers.

"Here comes Charley Gilbert, the very man I want to see," remarked Harmon, as a horseman dashed up to the door and dismounted.

He was a tall, broad shouldered young Hercules; and the large bay horse he rode looked well adapted to carrying such a weight, and exhibited due pride in serving his master. Both horse and rider were well known and respected throughout the settlement. Leaving his well-trained animal unhitched, Charley entered the store.

"You are just the person I want to see, Charley," said Mr. Harmon.

"Singular," said Charley, "I should think you would rather not see me, as you know the object of my call. People are not generally so welcome when they come for money."

"Well I am an exception in this instance, for I am anxious to get rid of the amount I owe you. Fact is, there have been burglars about and they tried to break into my store last night, but were frightened away; so I prefer you would hold this money against a more successful attempt of the kind."

And Mr. Harmon proceeded to count out a large roll of bills which Charley placed very carefully in his pocket.

"Now Charley," said neighbor Hill, one of the party seated around the stove, "you better buy a hoss-cart, 'cause some one might stop you to-night before you get back from Cranton."

The allusion to Cranton brought a slight blush to Charley's cheeks, for it was well known that he was on his usual Saturday evening visit to a certain young school mistress who dwelt in the neighboring settlement.

"How do you know I am going to Cranton?" asked Charley.

"Well I only suppose so, cause I've heard say you do go that way about this time o' week," and Charley not wishing to discuss the matter further, left the store, and mounting old Hero, was soon out of sight.

"Mighty fine chap that Gilbert is," resumed Hill to his fellow loungers; "been in the army and won his way, an' he now has got his [illegible] of land out here, and will soon have one of the finest farms in the country."

The short autumn day came to a close, and it was long after dark ere Gilbert reached his destination, and received his usual hearty welcome from Sarah Denton.

Saturday nights were the bright spots in her dull life as a school mistress, and were sure to bring her Charley. Old Hero had carried his master over the road so often that he knew just what was required of him and needed no urging.

It was late when Charley took leave of his sweetheart.

"Now do be careful," were her last words, "for you know there might be danger on the road, so many robberies have been committed lately."

"Never fear, Sarah, old Hero will take me home safely."

And with a good by kiss he mounted and rode away.

The night was dark—no light except the stars that sparked crisply from a clear sky, but had it been ever so dark, it would have made no difference to Charley. His thoughts were of the sweet girl he had just left, and paying no attention to his horse, he rode slowly along, intent upon plans for the future.

"The money I have received to-day will enable me to complete my home; then Sarah will be my wife, and we shall live on the farm, such a happy life," he mused.

A long, dark patch of forest loomed ahead through which the prairie road ran, and not until he had entered its dark shadows did the horseman arouse from his blissful reverie.

"What if I should be attacked?" thought he. "I have nothing to defend myself with, and enough money to make it a good haul for such gentry. Humbug! I don't believe there is any danger—"

"Halt!"

And two dark forms sprang into the road, seized the bridle, and the steely glitter of pistols leveled at him, within a few feet of his breast, startled him.

Like a flash his good right arm struck the weapon from the hand of one robber, and fell heavily upon the shoulder of the other, and with a sudden jerk of the powerful arm he was hauled over the saddle bow, while old Hero, in response to a dig of the spur, sprang away, jerking the other robber off his feet, and causing his volley to spread wide of his intended victim.

On through the gloomy woods, and on again upon the open prairie dashed the horse with the double burden, while the robber struggled like a child in the powerful grasp of his captor. A closing of the fingers over his neck soon reduced him to quiet, and held in this manner he rode an unwilling captive, and at last the lights of Oberville appeared, and soon they were in the village.

At a word from his master, Hero stopped in front of the post office, from the windows of which a cheery light shone, denoting that the assistants were still busy in replacing the goods that had been taken down during the day's traffic.

"Hallo!" cried Gilbert.

A head appeared at the door, and a voice answered, "Hillo! Who's there?"

"It's me, John, and I have got something nice here; come, help me with it," said Charley.

"It's Gilbert," said John, addressing his fellow shopman. "What's that you've got Charley, a saddle of venison?" John asked, as he approached.

"Better than that, John. It's a real little live deer. Come and lift him down, but hold him fast," said Gilbert.

The astonished shopmen gathered about, and Charley told them of his adventure.—Soon the robber was released from his unpleasant position on the saddle, and taken into the store, where his captor followed.

Here he was safely bound.

"I think I have seen the fellow before," remarked John, as he took a survey of the captive. "He is the stranger that was sitting at the stove here when Mr. Harmon paid you that money, Charley."

"Let's search him, and see what sort of plunder he has about him," suggested one of the shopmen.

The prisoner's pockets revealed a small flask of liquor a pack of cards, a little money and a savage looking dirk knife.

"Hillo, what's this?" exclaimed Gilbert, picking up a piece of paper that fell on the floor, and opening it, read; "One thousand dollars reward for the capture of one William Larkin, the supposed leader of a gang of robbers and horse-thieves. He is a short, slim man about five feet six inches in height, dark hair, heavy black eyebrows and moustache and peculiar looking small black eyes—"

"Answers the description to a T," broke in John.

"Yes, William Larkin or Curley Bill, I've heard of him. Charley, you're in luck.—This fellow is a prize, indeed," added one of his assistants.

"Yes, this placard is from the Sheriff of St. Joe, and is dated only a week ago," said Charley, after finishing the reading.

"Gentlemen," said the robber, "you have got the original Curley Bill, and when you deliver me up you will get the reward. I am in your power; these strings are bound my wrists most unmercifully tight"—with a grimace of pain. "Can't you afford to make 'em easier?"

"Yes, let them out a little, Jones," said John, addressing his fellow assistant,—"Make them safe, but not too tight, and I will watch the bird meanwhile."

So Jones proceeded cautiously to remove the bonds of the prisoner, while the others gathered around him.

The Committees of the House of Representatives accredited to the States of Louisiana, Florida and South Carolina, to investigate the actions of the Returning Boards of those States, are actively engaged in that work. Discoveries have been already made which will have an important bearing on the result to be arrived at. There seems to be but little doubt that in Florida, so far as the House Committee have gone, grave irregularities, to speak mildly, have been committed and indications point strongly to the fact that the State gave its Electoral vote to Governor Tilden.

In Louisiana, the attitude assumed by the members of the Returning Board toward the Committee is not one calculated to impress the country with a belief in their honesty. Had their returns been strictly in accordance with law or fair dealing, we can conceive of no reason why they should have hesitated to court the fullest inquiry into their proceedings. Their course must inevitably give rise to the gravest suspicions. In South Carolina, the Committee are busily employed and will, no doubt, in a few days report the result of their investigations. Gov. Hampton's assumption of his office and the events consequent upon this movement are already familiar to our readers.—The Committees from the Senate to the above States have also organized but, as yet, we have no report of their proceedings.

While we wish to make no statements that may have the effect to mislead our readers, or to raise hopes that may not be realized; we yet feel assured that Governor Tilden was elected and that the investigations, now in progress, will make this fact fully apparent to the satisfaction of the whole country.

For some time past a number of bogus telegrams have been received in Wall street, announcing the death of Commodore Vanderbilt. A detective was assigned to the case on Friday last he succeeded in arresting Edward A. Condit, of 139 West Houston street, N. Y. city, who answered to the description of the person who had employed the messengers to carry the dispatches.

During the Winter, Gov. Bedle will have the appointment of a Common Pleas Judge in place of Judge Bowne, whose term expires. Through the partizanship of the opposition, all the Common Pleas Judges are Republicans, and it is no more than just and proper that a Democrat should be appointed in Judge Bowne's place.

As the labors of the Investigating Committee sent South by the House of Representatives to investigate the returns of the late election progresses, unmistakeable evidence is brought to light of the intimidation of Democratic negroes from voting by the Republicans. Testimony after testimony has been taken showing that colored voters who desired to vote the Democratic ticket were intimidated from doing so by threats and violence to their persons by white and black Republicans.

An important meeting of influential business men was held in New York city last Friday evening, to discuss the political situation. Mr. Wm. E. Dodge addressed the meeting and stated that he had called them together to ascertain whether they could not suggest some means of solving the political problem. Business was greatly depressed and he believed that some plan might be made that would enlist the support of the leaders of both parties. Such a movement should not be in the interest of either Tilden or Hayes, or be conducted by politicians, but should look to an honest settlement that would be acquiesced in from every quarter.—A general conversation followed in which all took part, and it was agreed that another and larger meeting be had, excluding politicians and including solid business men. The meeting was composed almost equally of Democrats and Republicans.

The Committee sent by the House of Representatives to investigate the Louisiana election have telegraphed to the Speaker of the House that every obstacle has been and is being interposed by the Republican officials to the performance of the Committee's duty. Republican witnesses have been threatened and dare not testify without incurring the loss of position and personal danger; production of papers and telegrams are refused, it is believed upon assurances of protection from Washington. The President of the Western Union Telegraph Company has sent a message to the Chairman of the Congressional Committee stating that he has instructed the employees of the Company not to deliver any despatches, in answer to his subpœnas, until his refusal has been acted upon by the House itself. Under these circumstances the Chairman of the Committee has informed Speaker Randall that without the power of the House to enforce obedience to its process the Committee cannot discharge its duty.

An important meeting was held at the rooms of the Central Democratic Association at Philadelphia last Friday evening, which was attended and addressed by leading men on the political situation of the day. Resolutions were adopted recommending the holding of public meetings throughout the State to denounce the attempted usurpation by the National Administration. A Committee of seven was appointed to take the necessary steps for calling a public meeting in Philadelphia at an early date.

The great picture sale of rare paintings owned by John Taylor Johnston, Esq., of this city, at Chickering Hall, New York, attracts large crowds to the sale. On Monday evening the sales amounted to $[illegible] and on Tuesday evening, $174,775, making a grand total of $[illegible] thus far. Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Dec. 13, 1876.

The Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union convened at their room in the Court House, Elizabeth, at 11 o'clock, A. M., all the members being present but Freeholder Crane.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

There being no petitions, memorials or reports from committees, new business was then taken up.

By Freeholder Hubbard:

Resolved, That when this Board adjourn it be to meet three weeks from to-day, January 3, 1877, at 11 o'clock, A. M.

Adopted.

Freeholder Davies then tendered his resignation as a member of the Auditing Committee, which was on motion, received and accepted. The Director then appointed Freeholder Ryder in to fill the vacancy in said Auditing Committee.

By Freeholder Randolph:

WHEREAS, The County Clerk complains that the index-books in use in his office are so much worn and dilapidated as to necessitate rebinding, which involves transcribing as well; and

WHEREAS, The County is in possession of a complete set of index-books, comprising twenty-six volumes (from A to Z respectively) intended for the improved system of indexing adopted by Hudson and other counties; therefore,

Resolved, That a Committee of three be appointed to confer with the County Clerk, and report to the Board at its next meeting what action would be best to promote the interest of the public in the registry department in the County Clerk's office.

Adopted.

The Director then appointed Messrs. Randolph, Russell and Baldwin as such Committee.

By Freeholder Ryder:

Resolved, That Clerks of Election be paid one extra day each for making out returns and certificates after election.

Adopted.

By Freeholder Randolph:

Resolved, That a Committee of three be appointed to ascertain at what rates the necessary ballot-boxes for the County can be procured, and report at the next meeting of the Board.

Adopted.

The Director appointed as such committee Messrs. Hubbard, Winans and Russell.

On motion the Board adjourned.

JOHN M. WELDON, Clerk.

PROCEEDINGS COMMON COUNCIL.

THURSDAY EV'G, Dec. 14, 1876.

Council met pursuant to adjournment. Members all present except Mr. French. Pres. Mr. Smith in the chair.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

The following claims were presented: W. L. Force & Bro., printing, &c., $31.80. Referred to Com. on Printing. J. W. Laing, use of Hall for election, $15; Morgan Bird, rent of Station House, $150; N. Runyon, clerk of election, 1st dist., $6.50; Wm. B. Smith, do., 2d dist., $5; E. C. Moses, judge of election, $5; S. C. Ryder, do., $5; J. Q. Miles, do., $5; R. K. Davis, do., $5; J. N. Jenkins, do., $5; Levi Hetfield, do., $5. Referred to Com. on Salaries, Offices & Elections. John Hanlon, special police service, $3.25; P. I. Ten Broeck, do., $1.25; M. Conway, do., $3.25; Pettibone & Co., 2 pair pat. hand cuffs, $6. Referred to Com. on Police. M. Estil, $4.50; J. C. Runyon, printing, $16.80. Referred to Com. on Printing & Stationery. N. Rogers & Son, groceries, &c., $14.50; Shaw & Van Deventer, prescriptions, $24.75. Referred to Alms Com.

Com. on Police reported correct the four claims presented to them this evening, and on motion, they were referred to Aud. Com.

Com. on Printing, &c., reported correct claim of W. L. Force & Bro., $31.80, and on motion, same was referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Brown moved that when Council adjourn it be to meet on Wednesday evening next. Amended to Thursday evening and carried.

Mr. Harris presented the following:—Whereas, there are many who are indebted to the city of Plainfield as tax delinquents for the past few years, and who have not been compelled to pay the same; and whereas, by the 34th sec. of the city charter and an amendment thereto, passed April 1st, 1873, giving the power to the Common Council to appoint a magistrate as the said Common Council shall by ord. or res. direct, and the said magistrate shall thereupon issue his warrant or warrants to the city policemen or any of them, or such other person as the said Common Council shall for that purpose nominate and appoint, requiring him or them to levy the tax so in arrears in the manner prescribed by the laws of the State of New Jersey relative to the "collection of taxes in townships;" therefore, be it resolved, by the Common Council of the city of Plainfield, that the City Collector of taxes make out a correct list of all who are delinquents in their taxes, and place the same in the hands of the City Judge whereby he may issue his warrants for the collection of the back taxes, and that the City Judge make a return of the collected taxes to the City Treasurer; and resolved further, that the clerk of the Common Council send a notice of this res. to the City Collector of taxes. Res. adopted, all aye.

Mr. Brown presented com'n from Messrs. Thorn and Brown, tendering their resignation as Com'rs on Linnfield Ave.

Mr. Voorhees moved that their resignation be accepted.

Mr. Brown then stated, in reply to a question of Councilman Young as to his (Mr. B's) reason for resigning, that the duties of Com'r on said Linnfield Ave. was very important, &c., and as his term of office as Councilman would soon expire, he thought that the Com'rs on said Ave. should be appointed by the incoming Council, as the duties to be performed were such that it would need the attention of those connected with the same, and who would give it their entire attention.

Resignation accepted.

Mr. Thorn offered a res. that the Common Council of the city of Plainfield will not entertain any application or petition for crosswalks, or locate any lamps on any street or alley not dedicated or accepted by the city. Adopted. All aye.

Clerk presented a com'n from His Honor the Mayor and City Physician in reference to claim of E. H. Gilbert, $100, for use of premises for small pox purposes. On motion, referred to Alms Com.

Council then adjourned.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

The influence of the "hard times" are very visible in the receipts of taxes in Westfield Township; Mr. Geo. Squier the efficient tax collector having returned many more delinquents than the usual number, to the justice.

A Grand Christmas Entertainment for the Scholars, and their friends, of the Baptist Sunday School will take place in the audience room of that church in this village under the direction of Charles A. Smith Supt., on Wednesday evening next. Music and the presentment of presents will be the principal attraction. Let all attend.

Two weeks ago we announced the sad accident to the little son of Mr. A. L. Jamerson of Netherwood, which occurred at the south bridge, Fanwood Station, caused by a runaway horse, and at the same time the almost miraculous escape of his two daughters. This week we have another chapter to add to the list of accidents happening at that station; this time the locality of the probable fatal accident was the Iron Bridge over the railroad, south of Fanwood Station. It appears that on Sunday evening last, this inst., as Mr. Chamberlain of Rahway, son of the proprietor of Chamberlain's Hotel in that city, and a friend of his, a Mr. Scott, were on their way home from Scotch Plains, and had arrived at the bridge referred to, when the [illegible] p. m. train from N. Y. came thundering around the curve above the bridge and flashing its headlight upon it in such a way as to frighten their horse so that he became unmanageable and ran down the steep embankment at the southwest side of the bridge in the rear of Geo. Squier's coal yard upsetting their wagon and precipitating the two young men a distance of twelve or fifteen feet upon the frozen ground below with such force as to render them insensible for some time. They were a short time afterward discovered by Mr. Frank Squier, nephew of Collector Geo. Squier, who happened to be passing near, and after getting sufficient assistance, conveyed them to the Railroad Station where Dr. Bergen was called and dressed their wounds, after which H. H. [illegible], station agent, and Mr. Squier conveyed the injured young men to their home. At last accounts Mr. Chamberlain was doing very well, but little hopes however was entertained of the recovery of Mr. Scott. The [illegible] The wagon was [illegible] Company [illegible] their own [illegible] and placed [illegible] accident would have been avoided, and probably a life saved.

THE COUNT AND ITS EFFECT ON TRADE.

The Financial Chronicle does not believe it possible that the President of the Senate will undertake to count the vote for President. After quoting the old record of Senators Morton, Conkling and others, it says:

"There is no reason for solicitude on this point. These questions are all to be decided, not by politicians, but by the conservative portion of our people. We greatly wish a decision might be hastened, for there is a feature of it which should make us all solicitous for a quick adjustment. Our Congressmen scarcely appreciate the intensity of feeling with which the mercantile classes are compelled to consider the long continuance of the present uncertainty.—The suspense has necessarily deadened trade; and coming, as this depression does, after a tension since the panic seldom, if ever, in our history equalled, it is producing great distress. The Fall and Winter trade has already been destroyed; and if this contest is allowed to continue through January, and to grow in bitterness as during the past month, the Spring trade must also be considered dead—and what next?"

THE PEOPLE WANT PROOF.

There is no medicine prescribed by physicians, or sold by Druggists, that carries such evidence of its success and superior virtue as BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP for severe Coughs, Colds settled on the breast, Consumption, or any disease of the Throat and Lungs. A proof of that fact is that any person afflicted, can get a Sample Bottle for 10 cents and try its superior effect before buying the regular size at 75 cents. It has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wonderful cures are astonishing every one that uses it. Three doses will relieve any case. Try it. Sold by Wm. H. Voorhees, Druggist.

A TIME-HONORED SPECIFIC.—The long and successful career of DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL, as contrasted with the speedy collapse of nostrums devoid of efficacy which have from time to time been puffed into a brief notoriety during the twenty odd years that this celebrated medicine has been sold, affords a proof that the American public continue to repose its confidence in deserving articles only. The PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL has long been recognized as the leading specific for Consumption, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Diptheria, and all other diseases of the breathing organs. It is, moreover, a certain, speedy, and safe botanic remedy for Dyspepsia, Liver Disorders, Scrofulous Affections, Gravel, Dropsy, Debility, and Constipation. Constantly accumulating evidence of its unimpeachable character establishes the fact that it not only entirely eradicates the disease to which it is adapted, but also that its action is remarkably prompt and thorough. The crucial test of experience has demonstrated its reliability in every particular. Sold by all druggists. Principal Depot, No. 232 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa. 17no6m

RESULT OF CENTURIES OF CULTURE.—The successive editions of Webster's Unabridged are as perennial in interest as in value. Each successive reprint finds the work of our great lexicographer still unrivaled among English Dictionaries. In each reproduction we likewise find a mirror of the scientific progress of the age, a sleepless vigilance which nothing escapes, to catch every new shade of verbal significance, and to retain for our unapproached standard of language, that freshness which preserves it from ever becoming old. In the 1,840 pages before us there are compressed the results of centuries of culture, and the sum of the intellectual contributions of some of the greatest minds of the race. Whether regarded as a whole, or in detail, the book is equally marvelous. Its illustrations are copious, appropriate and carefully executed. The matter in the appendix is of a character indispensable for reference to all who read, and to all who write with serious purpose. The book is, in short, one which neither school nor study, library nor office, ought to be without.—New York Times.

BOREAS, you're becoming a bore.

WE wish our readers a "Merry Christmas."

THE Plainfield Steam Laundry is for sale. See advertisement.

ANOTHER fall of snow this morning, which makes the sleighing all the better.

FINER sleighing has not been witnessed for a long time than we are now enjoying.

PERTH AMBOY is to have a fire company, furnished with a "Little Giant" fire extinguisher. My!

JERUSALEM Lodge, No. 26, A. F. & A. M., will elect officers for the ensuing year, next Tuesday evening.

THE horse shoers are doing a lively business in sharpening the shoes of horses, since the sleighing commenced.

SOMETHING was seen on our streets this morning that has not been observed before in many a year—a chimney sweep.

MADAME BUTTS, the charming Soprano of the M. E. Church, of this city, has kindly consented to sing at Grace Church, on Christmas.

"A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year" depends much upon whether we try to make them so. There is a silver lining to the cloud, and we may turn it outward.

MESSRS. VAN DYKE & CO., Grocers, on Liberty Street, next to the railroad, have dissolved partnership, Mr. L. M. Van Dyke continuing the business. See advertisement.

WE state the following, as we know it will interest our readers—for the year 1877, Peck's advertisement will be found each week in the upper right hand corner of this page.

A VERY nice holiday gift for the boys is a bracket saw and designs, for sale by Messrs. Pettibone & Co., who are also offering a fine assortment of skates and cutlery for the holiday trade.

WE are happy to inform our patrons that Collier has the finest stock of Holiday goods to be found this side of New York. The prices are "Hard pan," and he is only too happy to show goods.

THE firm of Shaw & Van Deventer, Druggists, have dissolved co partnership. Mr. Shaw will continue the business at the old stand, while Mr. Van Deventer goes to New York to engage in the mercantile pursuits.

THE Rev. J. L. Hurlbut will preach a Christmas Sermon next Sunday evening, Dec. 24, in the Methodist Episcopal Church. Subject—The Sage and the Star. The service will commence at half-past seven o'clock.

PARTIES wishing to invest Trust Funds, can find $20,000 of First Bonds and Mortgages on the best improved property in the city of Plainfield, for sale at Geo. A. Marsh's office, opposite depot.

THE duty of lighting and extinguishing the street lamps these cold nights is an arduous one, but Councilman Ryder is equal to the emergency, aided by his efficient help, Jimmy Haley. The lamps are always well trimmed and lighted.

THE lovers of pigeon shooting are informed that there will be a Grand Pigeon Shooting Match at Campbell's Club House, on Park Avenue, on Christmas Day. In the evening a raffle for turkeys, chickens and a double barrel gun will take place.

A NUMBER of our young folks visited the Avon Park House, kept by Wm. Dean, last Tuesday evening, and had an enjoyable time in dancing and feasting until the small hours of morn. Mr. Dean understands how to cater to the wants of his guests.

The fall of snow and sleet, succeeded by snow, on Monday last, followed by freezing weather, has made fine sleighing, and our thoroughfares are crowded with sleighs freighted with human beings intent upon enjoying this, the first sleighing of the season.

ISAAC MILBURN, mason, has the contract for the mason work of two new dwellings being erected by Mr. Charles Hunter on 6th Street continuation, near Clinton Avenue, also for a new house being erected by Mr. Joseph Mahon, on Union Avenue. Messrs. Doane & Son have the carpenter work for the latter.

During the heavy wind storm of a week or so ago at low tide the water was blown out of the bars, at Amboy, and, excepting the two channels a person might have walked across from South to Perth Amboy. This does not often happen, and it was a rare sight for the youngsters to see.

THE exercises of the Sabbath School Christmas Service at the First Presbyterian Church, this city, next Sunday evening, promises to be of unusual interest. The programme comprises an address by Dr. Vincent; music by a special Quartette, and music and other exercises by the Sabbath School.

CONSTABLE *John M. C. Marsh, of West*field arrested another of the gang of boys charged with robbery in this city, on Monday last, and after a hearing before Judge Good, the young man Charles Perrine was committed to the County Jail to await trial. A quantity of the stolen goods has been found concealed in Westfield.

FRIEND William Shotwell, the grocer, North Plainfield, met with a mishap in front of our office Tuesday morning. In starting up his horse the animal slipped and fell in the road, breaking a shaft of the sleigh. The horse was soon relieved from his predicament by bystanders, and gro*ceries are selling as low as ever at Billy's store.*

THE poor "bunny's" have suffered again, the tracking snow of Tuesday sending forth innumerable hunters on the trail of the "cotton tails," armed with every conceivable weapon, from a gas pipe to a cannon. The Law, however, will soon "be up" for shooting the same expiring Jan. 1st. The time for shooting quails, grouse, wood duck, wood cock and squirrel expires at the same time.

AMONG the many subscribers who the past week have renewed their subscriptions to THE CONSTITUTIONALIST for another year we make mention of our old and valued friend and subscriber, Samuel D. Laing, of New Brooklyn, who pays for his paper in advance to Jan. 1st, 1878. Several new subscribers are also welcomed to our list, including that of our old friend and former townsman Isaac E. Parker.

SOME person, having no fear of the law, or of our valiant police, took a can of oil from the front of Wm. Egbert's Grocery Store, on Cherry Street, last Saturday evening, since which time nothing has been heard of the same. Mr. E. does not wonder at the taking of the oil, since the same is considered the best article in the market, and forgives the party who took it, because he undoubtedly wanted "light," which he can get from that oil.

AT the annual election for officers of Jerusalem Chapter, No. 21, R. A. M., of this city, held last Thursday evening, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

M. E. H. P.—Wm. H. Sebring.
King—B. F. Cariell.
Scribe—Wm. Alpaugh.
C. of H.—John Hall.
P. S.—James Pope.
R. A. C.—Augustus Fraser.
Secretary—Jacob Adams.
Treasurer—John N. Steiner.
Tyler—Eli Nelson.
1st Vail—Wm. E. Gardner.
2d " —Thos. Young.
3d " —Dr. J. B. Probasco.

THE tramps are still on the move. Last Sunday night 55 were accommodated at the Station House. Capt. Breen informs us that the average number lodged over night at these quarters for the past month, has been 48. We do think this kind of gentry should be set at work on our streets in some way as the law of the State provides, to earn their living. Morris County has tried it by setting her tramps at work breaking stone on the public highways in payment for their keeping over night, and the authorities finds it pays. By reference to the city's financial report it will be found that it costs our citizens a large amount each year to support the tramps.

A Grand Opportunity.

It will be seen by reference to our advertising columns this week that French & Martin have dissolved co partnership and now offer their entire stock of Men's, Youth's and Boy's Clothing at less than the Manufacturers' Cost, in order to wind up their partnership. They assure us that they will sell their Winter Stock at least 25 per cent. less than Newark or N. Y. prices for cash only. All those in want of Clothing will study their interest by giving them a call and ascertain for themselves, that the above statements are facts and no humbug.

Warren Mission Festival.

The people of Plainfield are earnestly desired to remember the Warren Mission Festival, to be given during Christmas week to the children of the Sunday School. Let the friends of the Mission, by their generous gifts, make this an occasion of great joy to the children during the season of privation and suffering to the many families. Contributions of the following articles may be sent to the Mission Chapel on Wednesday, Dec. 27th, before noon: Poultry, Ham, Tongue, Sandwiches, Bread, Butter, Pie, Cake, Jelly, Apples, Oranges, Lemons, Sugar, Nuts, Raisins, Coffee, Candy, and Milk. Flowers for decorations will be very acceptable. d15w2

Johnston Drive.

Tuesday afternoon last we enjoyed the pleasure of a sleigh ride over Johnston Drive, with but one sleigh or conveyance preceding us since the snow fell, and to say that a sleigh ride over that fine thoroughfare is a pleasure is but half expressing the sentiment of the participant. The road is in fine condition, the snow having fell, as the saying is—"as level as a barn floor," and the exhilerating feeling experienced by a ride on top of the mountains, over a smooth, level road, behind a fast horse, is a pleasure that only those who have enjoyed the same can express. The scenery on Tuesday from the mountain top was magnificent. The trees were shrouded with a coating of ice, which caused them to bend beneath the weight of the same; forming fantastic shapes, of all kinds, while the rays of the sun caused the icicles and congealed branches to glisten with all imaginable colors and shades. We predict that when once the public come to understand what a delightful drive and splendid panoramic view is opened to the sight from Johnston Drive, that it will become the drive of the County.

Sad.

One of the saddest events it has been our lot to record in a long time happened in this city last Friday morning, the same being the death of two children of Mr. Michael Hetring within two hours of each other, both being grown persons and suffering from that terrible disease, consumption. It seems that a daughter, Mary, aged 25 years, has been a sufferer from consumption for the past 15 months and about seven months ago, John, a son, aged about 20 years, contracted the same disease, and both children took to their beds, lying in the same room, (Mr. H. being a poor man and in needy circumstances, and residing in a small house.) Here both parties laid and suffered for months, both conscious that neither could ever recover, their only desire being that both would die at once.—Everything was done for them that loving hands and kind friends could do to relieve their sufferings. Friday morning about 3 o'clock, Mary died and the agonized cries and petitions of her brother, who lay on an adjoining couch, to be allowed to clasp his beloved sister to his breast once more before she died was pitiful and heartrending to those who stood beside the dying woman's bedside. Two hours after his sister's death, John, the son, also died, his death undoubtedly being hastened by the excitement consequent upon his sister's death. The funeral of the deceased, which occurred on Sunday, was largely attended. The funeral services were held in St. Mary's R. C. Church. Rev. Father Morris officiating.—The church was filled, and the sermon delivered on the occasion by the Rev. Father, was an impressive one and drew tears from many an eye in the audience. The deceased woman was the wife of John O'Connor, and leaves two children and a husband to mourn her loss. John, the son, was unmarried, and was a dutiful son and beloved by all who knew him.

Where to Buy Holiday Goods.

According to our usual custom each year as the Holiday season approaches, we desire to give our advertisers the benefit of our columns in informing the public where suitable Holiday Goods may be obtained. We believe that those who advertise their goods should be recognized by purchasers, who, by scanning the advertising columns of a newspaper can form an opinion as to where they may purchase. Home trade should be sustained, and we therefore call the attention of the reader to those merchants of our city who advertise and believe it pays.

L. L. COMPTON

Still continues to "Hold the Fort" in the Candy and Confectionery line, as a glance at his large show windows will show. His toys and confectionery are manufactured from the very best of material, and consequently should have a preference over inferior stock. The little ones must have candy and Compton's is the place to get the same. Go to his beautiful store on Front Street, and buy something for the little ones.

WM. H. VOORHEES,

The Druggist, has a beautiful assortment of Fancy Articles, suitable for Holiday presents. A bottle of delicious perfumery, or something in the line of Fancy Goods, which his show cases abound in, would make a suitable present to either sweetheart, sister or mother. We doubt if there is a finer assortment of Goods in his line of business to be found in the city.

D. C. GREEN & CO.,

The well-known Furniture Dealers on Front Street, near Grove, are disposing of an entire new article for Holiday Gifts, called Ja se po ri. It is something new and unique, and attracts the attention of the ladies as they pass by the above firm's store. By stopping inside, their large warerooms will be found filled with elegant furniture and exquisite Fancy Articles, which they are disposing of at extremely low figures. Call and examine the Ja se po ri ware anyhow, before purchasing your Holiday Goods.

ROBSON,

Next to the Post Office, has laid in a large stock of Ladies' and Gents' Kid Gloves, which, in connection with his other goods, he announces he is selling at very low figures. Glance at his advertisement in another column.

CLARK,

Jeweller, on Cherry Street, has a fine assortment of Jewelry, Watches, Clocks, &c., any of which would make a handsome and appropriate present. He announces that he has reduced the prices of his goods to suit the times. We commend the public to his establishment, and if you don't see what you want, ask him for a pair of his "Diamond Glass Spectacles," and after looking through them once, we warrant you will use no other, for everything will be clear to you then that CLARK is the Jeweller to buy of.

W. H. WILLIAMS,

News Dealer, offers unusual attractions to those literally inclined. Read his adv.

M. VERMEULE

Offers unusual attractions in the line of Furs, Lap Robes, Blankets, Gloves, Caps, &c. Mr. V. is too well known to need any extended notice. Those who need anything in his line, have only to deal with him once to return a second time should they desire to repurchase. Ladies need not go to New York for their Furs. They may rest assured of purchasing reasonable at Vermeule's.

MULFORD ESTIL

Announces that he has laid in a large stock of Toys for children, and Stationery for the older ones. His neat store on Front Street, opposite Cherry, is daily thronged with customers, who and there Toys, &c., of every imaginable shape and price to suit the little ones.

PETTIBONE & CO.,

Hardware merchants, on Front Street, (old Bank Building) will sell you something that will please your boy and at the same time prove useful to him. The Bracket Saw is something the young and inventive genius likes.

BERRY & THORN

At the "Old Reliable" stand of A. Berry, corner of Front and Cherry Streets, have some of the nattiest little sleighs and some of the most substantial skates that can be found in the city, suitable for the young folks, while, if you desire to present the older members of your family with something substantial and useful, they have every description of stoves, ranges, furnishing goods, &c. "Old Reliable" is a proper cognomen for this establishment.

AT CHAMBERLIN'S,

On Front Street, next to Voorhees' Drug Store, the display of Fancy China and Earthen Ware, Crockery, &c., is magnificent. Mr. C. has a knack of securing just the articles in his line that are appropriate for holiday gifts, and the name of "Chamberlin" has become a household word in consequence. We advise all our readers who desire to make a present of something unique, useful and at the same time cheap, to give CHAMBERLIN a call.

CRANE & TERRILL

Have Hats, Caps, &c., suitable for presents to either children or grown people. Prices are way down and stock complete. Just look at their prices in our column.

R. M. LAING

Offers unusual attractions in the Underwear and Gent's Furnishing Goods line. An appropriate present might be selected from his establishment.

SWAIN

Displays some fine Roger Groups, Engrav*ings, Chromos, Picture Frames, &c.,* in his show windows, on Front Street, near Laing's Hotel.

MISS AGNES Y. WILSON,

Next to the Post Office, displays Fancy Goods in the windows, which attracts bevys of ladies there to admire them, and we doubt not but that many a swain or brother will receive a handsome gift the coming holidays, which was purchased by friends at Miss Wilson's.

L. M. FRENCH

Advertises a fine lot of Sleighs for sale. Perhaps some of our readers may desire to present such an article to a friend. If they do they should examine the stock at Mr. French's before purchasing elsewhere.

PECK!

What shall we say of him? Everybody knows him and the children cry along the street to be taken to his store to see the fine things displayed there. His show window is the most attractive in the city, a fairy scene, with playing fountain and aquarium, being the attraction. Inside good goods, at low prices greet the eye, beside the vast array of fancy goods, &c., with which the store is stocked, and consequently the daily throng at his store.

DEMAREST

The grocer, still keeps his rooster at the head of his advertisement, which indicates that he is the "cock of the walk" in his business in the city. There are plenty of goods in his store that would make suitable holiday presents.

COLLIER

Who claims to be the "boss" jeweler of the city has an elegant stock of goods in his line any of which would make an excellent holiday gift. His prices are down to "hard pan."

For Boots, Shoes, Rubbers, &c., go to Doane's on Cherry Street. Chas. F. Everitt will sell you underwear and furnishing goods at reasonable rates.

For Clothing, read the advertisements of French & Martin, James B. Adams, Lillienstern, Watson & Co. They explain what they will do in their advertisements.

For Groceries you will find that the place to buy is of those who advertise, and there are several in our paper.

An insurance policy is not a bad present for the beginning of a new year. Reliable agents state their rates and companies through our columns.

C. O. Meeker & Co., advertise a superior article in the way of stoves, ranges, &c.—They are an old and reliable firm.

O. Runyon has a large stock of furniture and fancy articles just the thing for a good substantial gift.

A. V. Searing defies competition in teas, coffees, sugars, flour, &c.

French Bros., still continue to sell that excellent "Every Ready Flour," which is the best article in the world to assist in making your plum pudding with.

S. T. Varian has a fine assortment of Holiday Goods at his Furnishing Store.

Fisher's Anchor Oil is just the thing to fill your lamps with these long evenings.

There are lots of other advertisers who demand our attention, but for want of space we shall have to defer them to another issue. Read the advertisements yourselves.

Personalia.

We return thanks to Mr. R. S. Little for a couple of bottles of excellent grape wine manufactured from grapes grown on his farm adjoining his beautiful and cozy residence on Park Avenue.

We are sorry to learn of the loss sustained by Messrs. G. F. & C. E. Brown, window shade manufacturers, 135 Canal Street, New York, from fire on Tuesday morning last, but congratulate them upon having at least, a partial insurance. Mr. G. F. Brown is a resident of North Plainfield, Duer Street.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

Last Tuesday week, a young son of Mr. Martin Scribner, who resides at the foot of the mountain towards the "Rock" discovered a rabbit under an arch of a brick kiln and procuring a gun, made up his mind to shoot the animal, first stationing the hired man, John, at the one end of the drain, to prevent the rabbit from running away while he went to the other and fired at "bunny" as he squatted in the arch. Consequence, no rabbit, and John's leg full of shot. Injury not serious.

Two young men went hunting in Wash*ington Valley last Thursday, and while* one of them attempted to dislodge a rabbit from its burrow, a twig struck the trigger of his gun, which was discharged, the contents striking his companion, Hugh Fagin, in his face, destroying one eye.

Messrs. Wilson & Simpson and J. W. & H. Coddington are both cutting and filling their ice houses with Sparkling Spring Water Ice ten inches thick, taken from their ponds in Washington Valley.

Christmas Festivals.

We learn that the authorities of the various churches have decided to hold their Christmas Festivals on the same night, Wednesday, Dec. 27th. This we think is a good plan, as it will prevent large crowds attending one particular church and at the same time draw together the parents and friends of the children to their own church. To prevent a repetition of the crush of last year at Congregational Church festivities the trustees have issued tickets to be given to parents and friends of their S. S. scholars, and none others will be admitted. Lucky will the person be who secures one of those tickets. At the First Presbyterian Church a "surprise" is in store for those who attend. It will be something novel. The entertainments at all the churches will be of an interesting character.

Our Boulevard.

Park Avenue, from Seventh Street to its terminus presented an animated scene on Wednesday last, the fine sleighing affording excellent opportunity for owners and drivers of fast horses and family teams to test their speed and qualities over this beautiful avenue. By invitation of friend Jos. Ohl, we took a seat in his sleigh behind his fast team "Baby" and were soon on the ground speeding along with the multitude of horses and sleighs, and this is part of what we saw:

Among the finest teams we noticed:

Mr. Haley's team of stylish and handsome grays.

A team of large and handsome bays, belonging to Mr. John W. Laing. They are stylish and make a fine family team.

J. F. Rogers, team of handsome and stylish bays.

James Vermeule, driving a team of fine steppers, one, the bay mare "Warwick Maid" and the other his sorrel mare "Bertie." Mr. V. did not allow any double team to throw snow in his face.

D. W. Webb's team of fine bays, attached to family sleigh. They are a showy team and fast goers.

Wm. Taylor's team of fine matched grays, driven by that gentleman's trusted coachman, Geo. Bubble.

Isaac W. Pangborn, with his team of black and elegant geldings.

Wm. Stansbury, of Scotch Plains, who made the snow fly behind his fast team, a grey and bay, the latter by Guy Miller.

Mr. Alfred Gross's family team of stylish bays attracted attention.

Wm. Darling was out with one of his fine match team, a sorrel mare, "Belle of Quincy." She is a fast animal, and with her mate "Kitty Skinner," make one of the finest appearing and fastest teams on the road.

R. M. French, Esq., was also out with his fine, large family team, attached to his family sleigh.

One of the finest teams on the road was Mr. J. W. Gillies span of chestnuts, which for beauty and style are not easily excelled. They are also good steppers.

Mr. C. Schepflin's team of dark brown's attracted considerable attention by the easy and quick motion. They are splendidly matched.

Mr. John Egbertson bay's, "Harry" and Mate, make a handsome team, and are not wanting for speed when occasion requires.—They are kind, gentle and just the team for a gentleman's use.

His Honor, Job Male, appeared on the Avenue behind his handsome team of bays. They are a pleasant team.

Henry Hand's sorrel team, "Eclipse" and "Dick," both pacers, speeded over the avenue at a lively gait.

Samuel Yates drove his grey horse "Tom."

James Clark, Jr., was out with his handsome brown gelding "Keokuck."

Will Rogers and lady drove behind his sorrel mare, "Guernsey," which is a good stepper.

Wesley Johnson drove his trotter, "St. George." A fine animal and one not easily passed on the road.

J. G. Cadmus drove his clipped bay gelding, "Light Foot," and dares "Vandy" to pass him, if he can.

Will Runyon was out with his bay mare.

Percy Ohl's bay colt "Susie" is an animal of good promise, showing speed and bottom.

Lloyd B. Nelson, of New Market, drove his chestnut sorrel "Young Jupiter," who is as handsome as a picture.

Look out, here comes "Joe Platt," with his record of 39, driven by his owner, Ellis Campbell. All must clear the way for him although many tackle and give him a good brush.

Chris. Van Arsdale with his famous "Nellie V." whirls by like a flash, looking for "Joe Platt." Others she fears not. These two, who have contested together over the course in days gone by, are again anxious to test their respective merits over snow.

John Richards, of New Market drives a grey trotter, which shows a fast gait.

Vandy Bond, speeds by behind his fast trotter, a clipped black gelding, one of a team.

Councilman John H. Tier's pacer, "Pauline" makes the snow fly and passes with ease many of her competitors.

Howell Mettler drives his black gelding "Tommy Todd," a young animal of handsome appearance and a fast stepper. Mr. M. is a genuine lover of horse flesh and a good judge of the same.

El. Willis's "Leatherlungs," a pacer, still keeps up his record for a "goer," as many find to their sorrow, when they wake him up.

W. Heideloff drives one of his team of handsome clipped match mares, which shows evidence of speed.

Hallo, here comes Alf. Bedlow who has found his bay mare "Dolly," and is taking a little ride himself this time. "Dolly" is a fast stepper and has good bottom.

Ed. Shotwell is out with a bay mare of fine appearance, and which shows speed.—We were unable to learn the name of Ed's new purchase.

Wm. Dunham, of New Market was out with his bay trotter, accompanied by his family.

Peter Osborn handled the ribbons over "Lady Blanch" with his usual skill. The mare showed that she has lost none of her speed since last winter.

Dave Runyon was out with his cream gelding "Can't You Hold Him."

Abe Egbertson, drove a gray gelding of fine promise.

T. A. Van Zandt's black gelding attracted considerable attention by his fast motion.

El. Pack exercised his handsome black mare, a recent purchase.

*John Chandler's chestnut gelding "Day*light" is a handsome animal, and shows speed when required.

A. Vanderbeek jogged along with his grey mare "Rudder," and frequently astonished some one who attempted to pass him by showing them a clean pair of heels.

Robert Cook, with his black mare "Coal Yard," sped gaily over the road to the admiration of all beholders.

Wm. Manning was out with something new, a sorrel gelding, which gave evidence of being something fast. From the fact that he carries his head so high, seeming to want to fly, his friends have named him "Eagle."

Gid Smalley drove a young sorrel gelding, "Dandy," which proved to contestants that he is going to make a trotter. Gid is very proud of him.

Sol. Dunn's black gelding "Terror" is a beauty and shows a clean pair of heels when in motion.

Dr. Holcombe's grey mare "Katie S." as usual, kept her record good. She is a fine traveler.

Mr. R. S. Little drove one of his team of handsome chestnut bay mares, one of which is a Hambletonian, the other an Ethan Allen, named respectively "Pet" and "Belle." They are good steppers and very handsome. Mr. Little was driving "Belle" when we saw him.

Mrs. Daniel S. Berry, accompanied by a lady friend, handled the reins over her husband's handsome grey gelding with a practiced hand, and by no means was the last on the turn.

Jack Roselle drove a fine bay colt, which showed speed.

Mr. Eugene A. Grose drove his fine Spartan colt.

Wallace Vail was out with his brown gelding, "Charley," a splendid roadster.

Mrs. Ridgeway and sister drove a fast brown gelding.

David Leeson's grey horse, one of a match team, attracted considerable attention by his style.

Ex-Mayor John H. Evans's Hambletonian colt, a fine stepper, appeared on the avenue during the afternoon, and was the subject of comment on his fine appearance and move.

M. Vermeule, Esq., drove his Spartan colt, a fine animal.

Mr. George Hann attracted his [illegible] accompanied by one of his daughters.

John Steele drove his black mare. A good stepper.

FIRE MATTERS.

The Annual Ball of Plainfield Steamer No. 2, will be held at Laing's Hall, Thursday evening, January 18th, 1877. The entertainments heretofore given by this company reflect credit upon them, and the Committee this year promise to equal all previous efforts to make the occasion one of enjoyment. The tickets are One Dollar.

The tickets for the Nineteenth Annual Supper and Ball of Gazelle Engine Co. No. 1, to be held at Laing's Hall the eve of Washington's Birthday, February 21st, 1877, will be out and for sale by Christmas, printed in the usual fine style. The entertainments of this Company are known far and wide as being enjoyable occasions, and gotten up in elaborate style, with a select company attending the same. The approaching Annual will be no exception to the general rule.

The Fire Commissioners have caused all the covers over the Fire Wells to be cleaned from snow and ice and salt sprinkled about their edges, so that the wells may be found and opened easily in case of emergency.

The space in front of the Second Street Engine House is being laid with Belgian Block Stone, the soft nature of the ground at certain seasons of the year making it extremely difficult to draw the heavy apparatus into the house from the street.

The Westfield Baptist Church has extended to Rev. Chas. Harris, formerly of Ithica, N. Y., a unanimous call for pastor. Mr. Harris has been supplying the pulpit for some time and is very much esteemed. He is a young man of great talent and an earnest christian.

The Centennial anniversary of the Battle of Trenton will be celebrated by the people of that city on the night of Dec. 25th and on the following day in a rather peculiar but, perhaps, exceedingly appropriate manner. The programme of the ceremonies has not yet been completed, but it will embrace the representation of the battle itself. For this purpose a large body of citizens dressed in the uniform of the Revolutionary soldiers will march up on the Pennsylvania side of the Delaware river and encamp at Washington's Crossing or Taylorsville. They will then proceed across the river at midnight, just as Washington and his army did one hundred years ago, arriving on the New Jersey bank, they will march to Trenton to surprise, as of yore, the Hessians there encamped. The guards will represent the Hessian troops. A sham fight with blank cartridges will follow, and the subsequent proceedings will be in imitation of the Revolutionary battle.

The sale of the New Jersey Building, which was as it were a home to so many of our citizens during the Centennial Exposition, took place in the Centennial Grounds one day last week. The purchaser was Mr. Isaac A. Braddock, of Haddonfield, N. J., who bid $2,161. This, we are informed, is four times the price brought by any of the other State buildings. The intention of the purchaser is to have the building erected as the Town Hall in Haddonfield, upon a lot 100 feet front by 400 feet in depth.

With a sudden jerk of prodigious strength Curley Bill got his hands free, dashed his fist into the face of John, and sprang to the door, which had not been locked.

So sudden was his movement that ere the rest of the group could comprehend the scene he was clear of the store, and as Gilbert reached the door he saw the robber spring into the saddle on old Hero's back, and dash away.

Pursuit was not to be thought of; but Charley placed his fingers to his mouth and gave a shrill whistle, hearing which, Hero, despite the urging of his rider, suddenly wheeled about, and at the same wild gallop started back to his master.

Seeing which, Curley Bill attempted to throw himself from the saddle, but in so doing his foot caught in the stirrup, and he was dragged helplessly over the hard road. Fortunately for the victim of this mishap the distance was not great or the result might have been far more serious.

How often it is that the merest trifling accident contributes to the end of Justice!—Villains may successfully carry on their work for years, and in their fancied security forget the fate that must eventually overtake them—a slip, an accident, and the law claims her own.

Gilbert hastened to secure his horse, and the insensible form of Curley Bill was again carried into the store, where an examination revealed a broken arm and fractured leg, which would detain their prisoner as effectually as shackles and chains.

In a few days the sheriff came up from St. Joseph, and took charge of the maimed man, and through his confession many of his gang of desperadoes were killed or taken and the country freed of their presence.

Charley Gilbert received his well earned reward, and the money enabled him to complete his house handsomely and stock the farm over which Sarah Gilbert presides as mistress.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

OPINIONS OF THE CLERGYMEN ON THE BROOKLYN DISASTER.

Dr. Duryea—"If the poor play-goer cannot be given as good a chance for his life as the rich, he should not be let in."

H. W. Beecher—"You might as well expect to stop a herd of wild buffaloes by reading the ten commandments to them as to obviate all panics by simply requiring broader halls and passage-ways."

Dr. Storrs—"You may tell us that the gas and the smoke dulled them and rendered them insensible to pain, but there must have been silent resignation—an unexampled heroism that is itself a eulogy upon the dead and testimony to the training they received."

Dr. Hepworth—"It was no accident as the word is generally interpreted.—There are no accidents in God's world. What is done by man's folly is overwhelmed and controlled by a higher power. It will never do to believe in Providence when all things run smoothly, and then talk about 'accidents' when the dark places come."

Dr. Armitage—"This is Brooklyn's crown of thorns, and although it sets so heavily upon her brow, and inflicts wounds so malignant, it will in the end work good."

Rev. J. Spencer Kennard—"I believe that many actors are virtuous, and some plays are harmless, yet I do believe the theatre to be, in its actual and current history, an evil in the community. I do believe that we would be a more virtuous, honest, and happy community if every theatre were, from the date of this great tragedy, burned down, never to be re-built."

Dr. Chapin—"It is ever a visitation of God whenever we meet] him. The present is a time for consolation. Kindness and kind words go far towards healing the pangs of the wearied heart."

Rev. Dr. Rylance—"If the judgment of God is to be predicted of the burning of the theatre it may, with equal justice, be predicted of the burning of a church or the sinking of a ship at sea in which innocent and guilty go down alike together."

Stephen H. Tyng, Jr.—"Whether we are sympathetic with the principles of that profession or not we can at least learn charity from them. And the question propounded to the churches is this: Has the Church of Christ less humanity than the public places of amusement in this city?"

Rev. G. Barrett—"Prepare to meet thy God.

POLITICAL.

The Cincinnati Enquirer remarks that "there have been two Presidential elections in Louisiana and Florida this year—one by the people, the other by the Returning Boards."

Some excited Republicans of Oregon have burned Gov. Grover in effigy for signing Cronin's certificate. If such a thing had been done by Democrats in Louisiana, it would have been pronounced treason.

Morrissey has declared all the Presidential bets "off" in his pool, amounting to about $350,000, and it is supposed the other pools will follow suit, as the present complication was not contemplated at the betting.

The N. Y. Times impudently says "come what may, Mr. Hays will be inaugurated." If it means despite the popular and Electoral majority against him, we advise it not to put too much faith in the patience of a long-suffering people.

The N. Y. Times says in regard to Tweed's baggage, which was examined by the revenue officers, that his valises did not contain $10 worth of clothing, and there were no papers whatever that could be of value to the Government, State, or any party, and probably not even to Tweed himself.

Samuel J. Tilden, President elect by the grace of God and a majority of the electoral and popular votes of the people of the United States of America.—Ithaca Democrat.

Four out of five of the leading Republican paper of Boston agree in the declaration that Mr. Tilden has been Constitutionally elected President, and should be inaugurated.

If the attempt to hold a portion of our country under military rule is persisted in it will end in the destruction of the Republic.—Chief Justice Chase.

When we freed the negroes we had no alternative but to make them citizens, and when we made them citizens the Constitution left us no alternative but to treat them the same as white citizens.Dr. Bellows. And so, you built them a bank, and they put their money in it. Then you treated them like white citizens some more.—Louisville Journal.

Y., 1874; Western State Fair First Premium, Rochester, N. Y., 1875; Eastern State Fair, First Premium, Albany, N. Y., 1875; St. Lawrence Co. Fair, First Premium 1875, [illegible] Co. Fair, Diploma and First Premium, 1875. The same being the only Fairs at which it has been publicly exhibited.

Messrs. Williams & Co. are at this time manufacturing over two thousand per month, which are being sold by agents in nearly every town throughout the States. It retails readily at $6 each.

For cheapness, comfort, ease and durability it cannot be surpassed for the same money.

SPARKLING
APOLLINARIS
Natural Mineral Water.

The attention of the public is invited to the above celebrated Water, the qualities of which will be briefly described; and in presenting it to the public the proprietor feels it his duty to give, at the same time, its chemical analysis, which has been most faithfully accomplished by the celebrated Dr. Kirchhoff, and found, in 10,000 at a temperature of 70 deg., to give the following results:

Acid, Carbonic,	47.64
Soda, Muriate,	9.57
" Sulphide,	2.30
" Phosphate,	a trace
" Potass,	a trace
" Carbon,	[illegible]
Magnesia, Carbon,	[illegible]
Lime, Carbon,	[illegible]
Oxide Iron,	[illegible]
Alumina,	[illegible]

By a careful examination of the above, the Carbonates and Sulphides will be found in greater proportion, and the Chlorides (common salt) in a lesser one, than in any other mineral water, including Ems, Vichy, Seltzer or Wiesbaden. [illegible]

John Rafferty,

AGENT FOR GREEN'S PATENT
American Driven Wells.

In North Plainfield, Scotch Plains, Westfield, and Cranford. Residence on FRONT ST., bet. Cherry and Peace Sts.

All Orders addressed to P. O. Box 382 will receive prompt attention.

CAUTION!

The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Thos. A. Carman some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filled over one thousand pages and counsel were over two weeks in summing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an air-tight iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing stratum. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube; and the other end is of steel, made sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Carman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defence contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement had been clearly proved.

WM. J. NELSON.

THE SUN.

1877 NEW YORK. 1877

The different editions of THE SUN during the next year will be the same as during the year that has just passed. The daily edition will on week days be a sheet of four pages, and on Sundays a sheet of eight pages, or 56 broad columns; while the weekly edition will be a sheet of eight pages of the same dimensions and character that are already familiar to our friends.

THE SUN will continue to be the strenuous advocate of reform and retrenchment, and the substitution of statesmanship, wisdom and integrity for hollow pretence, imbecility, and fraud in the administration of public affairs. It will contend for the government of the people by the people and for the people, as opposed to government by frauds in the ballot-box and in the counting of votes, enforced by military violence. It will endeavor to supply its readers—a body now not far from a million of souls—with the most careful, complete, and trustworthy accounts of current events, [illegible]

POETRY.

SUMMING UP BY A POOR ATTORNEY.

M. P. H.

My case is hard, my suit is worn,
My hours of joy are brief;
And here I sit to-night, forlorn,
With signs of no relief.

Ambition's summons I have heard—
I've answered its demand;
'Gainst poverty I have demurred,
And ta'en an earnest stand.

For better days I've filed my prayer,
And divers motions made,
But such proceedings Judge Despair
Has most unjustly stayed.

A mandamus pauper I must be,
Made null by many a flaw.
Yet for my life I cannot see
Why I can't stand the law.

Hard Times has been my guardian
(In loco parentis)
So many years, that, as a man,
I'm quite non compos mentis.

To every Court I have appealed
Where Fortune, Justice, wits,
Till, thinking that my doom is sealed
I've nearly lost my wits.

I've argued points at General Term
Where Justice Hope presided,
And, though my grounds were always firm,
They always were derided.

Judge Happiness, who always looks
Both well, content and hearty,
Decides against me from the books,
And cuts me off ex parte.

The other day Attorney Fate—
Who's called amicus curiæ—
By special pleading laid me straight
Before a sleeping jury.

No matter where I fortune seek,
As much as I may crave it,
My cause is always rendered weak
By some foul affidavit.

My duty I have tried to do—
I've striven not to shirk it—
At Quarter Sessions, Special, too,
At Common Pleas and Circuit.

But search the records of the Court
(The Court of Life, I mean),
And not one favorable report
For me will there be seen.

Such is the story of my life—
A digest of my troubles—
Yet still I love the legal strife—
Still chase my favorite bubbles.

OLD SAYINGS IN RHYME.

As poor as a church-mouse,
As thin as a rail;
As fat as a porpoise,
As rough as a gale;
As brave as a lion,
As spry as a cat;
As bright as a sixpence,
As weak as a rat.

As proud as a peacock,
As sly as a fox;
As mad as a March hare,
As strong as an ox;
As fair as a lily,
As empty as air;
As rich as a crœsus,
As cross as a bear.

As pure as an angel,
As neat as a pin;
As smart as a steel trap,
As ugly as sin;
As dead as a door nail,
As white as a sheet;
As flat as a pancake,
As red as a beet.

As round as an apple,
As black as your hat;
As brown as a berry,
As blind as a bat;
As mean as a miser,
As full as a tick;
As plump as a partridge,
As sharp as a stick.

As clean as a penny,
As dark as a pall;
As hard as a millstone,
As bitter as gall;
As fine as a fiddle,
As clear as a bell;
As dry as a herring,
As deep as a well.

As light as a feather,
As hard as a rock;
As stiff as a poker,
As calm as a clock;
As green as a gosling,
As brisk as a bee;—
And now let me stop,
Lest you weary of me.
—Boston Gazette.

STELLA SPECIOSA.

BY R. F. BINGHAM.

I saw the star of even
Sail down the paling west,
And, from the verge of heaven,
Drop to her silent rest.

How peaceful moved she through
The soft, decaying light!
How lovely, pure, and true,
She looked her sweet "Good night."

Doth thus our planet move
Through the high walks of peace,
And thus unmingled love
Seem mirrored on her face?

Do the still spaces bar
The signs of human woe?
Doth earth shine soft afar,
As stars shine here below?

Are noise and pain and sin,
'Mong all her nations rife,
Entirely veiled within
This atmosphere of life?

O silent, silver orb,
Gliding in space along,
Doth aught but joy absorb
Your happy nations' song?

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE LOST BANK NOTE.

"James," said Mrs. Garret, while sitting at breakfast one morning, "I don't like that new girl. I have my suspicions about her."

"About Ann!" returned Mr. Garret, in surprise. "Why, its only a few days ago that I heard you boasting to Mrs. Bressmer you had the best cook in New York."

"So she is a good cook. I don't expect to get such another for twice the wages. It is not about her work—she does all that well—but I've no trust in her."

"What has she done?"

"What has she done?" echoed the lady, somewhat sharply. "Nothing, of course, or I'd soon send her packing! But she's shy, and secret, and won't tell me anything about herself; and has ridiculous airs about sleeping alone, and won't even allow Amanda inside her bedroom door. There's something wrong, depend upon it. If there wasn't a screw loose somewhere she wouldn't be here for such low wages."

"If that's a fault against her you can raise them," suggested Mr. Garret.

"There, James, you may as well go to your office, if that's all you have to say," cried the lady of the house. "But mark my words, before you go. I'll find Ann Walker out before long."

Mr. Garret sighed as he rose to depart. He well knew that remonstrance would avail nothing, for Mrs. Garret's prejudices were as the laws of the Medes and Persians, that changeth not, so he took himself off without another word.

"Amanda!" cried the lady, when left alone, "bring Horace up."

In response to this summons, a large, slatternly girl of eleven or twelve made her appearance from the basement, with a little boy in her arms, who made a snatch at an egg stand and knocked it on the floor in passing the table.

"You awkward, careless gypsy!" cried Mrs. Garrett, with great spirit, "that's the second thing you have broken this morning. Who do you think is going to pay for all you destroy? Come here, Horace, here, and have a nice piece of toast. What's Ann doing, Amanda?"

"She's dressing the turkey, mum."

"Did she scour the front steps this morning?"

"Yes, mum; she got up at five o'clock to do it."

"Go and tell her I expect her to wash the drawing room windows before dinner."

"Upon my word," muttered Mrs. Garret, resentfully, as Amanda retired to carry her message, "I'll pull her pride down for her a bit. Must wash the steps at five in the morning forsooth lest folks see her at all. I'll take that out of her."

In a few minutes Ann came up to clear the dishes off. She was tall and well proportioned, about twenty years of age, her face pale, refined in features, not handsome, but singularly intelligent and earnest in its expression.

She looked a little anxious and troubled as she noiselessly arranged the room, and when she was ready to go, she said, in a very soft voice:

"May I ask a favor, ma'am, that the cleaning of the front windows be put off till early in the morning?"

"No," answered her mistress, curtly, "I want them done now."

"I don't wish to be seen by passers-by," she urged, almost pleadingly. "It is of importance for me not to be seen by—by some one who might know me."

"You will obey my orders, girl, or leave the house!" returned Mrs. Garret, beginning to quiver with temper.

The servant courtesied and withdrew.

In a few minutes she was at the windows, but in a close sunbonnet, to Mrs. Garret's unspeakable disgust.

"I think I can see through my lady," was her inward comment. "She's some jailbird the detectives are after. I'll lay a trap for her, and if she's not caught in it, my penetration isn't much."

Rising from her sewing machine, which she had been busily plying in Master Horace' behalf, while her brain as busily revolved, she unlocked her desk, took from it a twenty dollar note, carefully marked the number, and dropped it, as if by accident, under the edge of the table. Then she cut and basted some more work, making enough rubbish about the floor to insure the servant's having to use her dustpan before dinner. By the time this was accomplished she discovered little Horace and the machine in such danger of coming to grief together that, first driving that innocent to the other side of the room, and then picking up her scattered shuttle and reels, she called Ann up stairs to put the parlor to rights, and left the room, taking Horace with her.

When Mr. Garret came home to dinner he saw by his wife portentous face that something dreadful had occurred.

"James," said she, solemnly, "I have found that girl out in a theft."

"Who? Amanda?"

"Pshaw! no. Your 'superior girl,' Ann. She has just helped herself to twenty dollars of mine."

"Good gracious!" cried Mr. Garret, pausing in the act of carving the turkey.

"Yes; it was a twenty dollar note which—ahem—happened to fall out of my desk on the floor this forenoon. I was busy with Horace and so ahem—forgot to pick it up before I left the room. When I came down to dinner I instantly missed it, and the abandoned creature actually said she might have swept it into the dustpan and burnt it. Fortunately I have the number of it, and after dinner you must go immediately and fetch a policeman."

Bewildered, though far from convinced by the proofs of Ann's guilt which his spouse cited, Mr. Garret suffered himself to be sent off on his errand of justice, and soon returned, in company with a detective, armed with a warrant, and Ann was imperatively rung up, while Amanda was ordered to remain that she might take a warning from the event about to take place.

"Ann," said her master, feeling very small, "Mrs. Garret missed some money, and this man has come to—"

"Find it, my dear," subjoined the officer, who had been regarding her with undisguised interest. "So if you'll hand over the keys of your kit we will proceed to business instanter."

"And," said Mrs. Garret, sternly, "If the stolen property is found in your possession, you will go to prison, miss—that you shall."

Ann's white face slowly kindled with a scorching red; her large, dark eyes dilated with a deep horror; her lips turned pale; her breath seemed to leave her in a gasp.

"You accuse me—of theft?" she faltered.

Mr. Garret silently put her into a chair. She looked as if the shock would strike her dead.

"Do you deny," demanded Mrs. Garret, none the less spitefully for this attention, "that you picked up that twenty dollar bill that was dropped on the carpet, just on this spot, this forenoon? Haven't you got it in your pocket, or trunk, or hidden about your bedroom at this moment? Go on with the search, Mr. Officer; she's determined not to confess. It was a national bank bill for twenty dollars, numbered 106,941."

"Seems to me I've seen your face before this, my gal," muttered the officer, confidentially. "You'll please fork over the key of your kit," young woman.

With trembling hands Ann waved him off, and untied a ribbon from about her neck, on which a very small key was suspended.

As she gave it to him a sort of sob shook her, and large tears rushed in torrents down her cheeks.

"I'll show the way," said the mistress of the house, sure by these signs of sorrow that the note was about to be discovered.—"James keep your eye on the unprincipled wretch, for there's no knowing what she may do."

Arrived at Ann's miserable bedroom, the officer first coolly rifled the pockets of all the dresses to be found hanging up, and not finding what he sought, dragged the single trunk out under the skylight and unlocked it.

Very neatly arranged were poor Ann Walker's simple belongings. Some daintily frilled underclothing, smelling of lavender; her modest Sunday apparel folded by itself in silver paper; a box of plain linen collars and cuffs, one or two books of such unexpected titles as "Longfellow's Hyperion," "The Holy Grail," by Tennyson, and some of Madame Michelet's in the original French; and a beautiful mother-of-pearl desk in the very bottom with the initials "A. W. A." in a silver monogram on the top.

"Now I'm blessed if this ain't a pretty kit for a servant girl," remarked the detective, taking out the desk and proceeding to pry it open with his pen-knife.

"A wholesale robber," groaned Mrs. Garret, clasping her hands; "and to think that I have harbored—"

"Halloo," cried the detective, opening the lid, and taking out a silver photograph case, richly chased, and garnished with an elaborate monogram, "Who's this?"

Then the pair had a fine surprise.

Opening the case, they saw two cartes—one of a majestic looking military man, apparently about sixty, the other of a young girl, clad in silk and richest lace, whose face bore the exact similitude of Ann Walker's.

"By the leaky!" ejaculated the officer, a light breaking all over his face, and astonishment prevented further articulation.

Taking a greasy pocketbook out of his breast pocket he opened it, and drew forth a photograph, which was Ann Walker's vignette.

"Them two's the same gal?" asked he, eagerly.

"Yes," answered the lady, with a glance.

"I thought I had spotted that gal the minute I set eyes on her," cried the man, exultingly; "and to think of me findin' her after all, and three of us shoutin' for her these six months. I'm a made man. Won't the gineral plank down the thousand pounds reward? Hooray!"

"What do you mean?" asked Mrs. Garret.

She began to believe she had been sheltering a very great criminal indeed.

"What do I mean?" grinned the detective. "Why, that you've made the orkardest mistake, missus, you ever made in your life. You've heard of Gineral Arnim as lives in the marble palace up the Hudson?"

"Of course I have—indeed, have some acquaintance with him." "Or, would give the universe to scrape one," she might with truth have added.

"That's unlucky—for you," observed the officer, with an obvious absence of sympathy; "for yer see this here cook as you've accused of stealing is his only daughter and heiress"—

"What?"

Mrs. Garret sat down on a broken-backed chair, with a face as pale as a ghost.

To think that her penetration should have served her so ill as to suffer her to insult this lady—this daughter of one of the grandest magnates in society.

"How, in Heaven's name, can I apologize for my mistake?" she gasped. "I'll die of shame outright!"

"Meantime we haven't found the bank note," observed the officer, with some malice propense. "Shall I go on with the s'arch?"

"No, no! For gracious' sake, leave me! Let me think!" groaned our friend, in real anguish of mind.

So the officer went down stairs with a very different manner from that in which he had ascended.

Meantime the following interview had taken place between the master of the house and the accused.

"Sir," said the latter, as soon as they were alone, "I think you have the feelings of a gentleman. Further concealment is useless, and before I leave this house I owe you an explanation."

Mr. Garret thought this was the beginning of a confession of guilt, and said:

"Yes, Ann," very sadly but kindly.

"I am not what I seem," pursued Miss Arnim, in an agitated manner. "You may heard of, six months ago, General Arnim's daughter, who disappeared"—

"Heaven!" muttered Mr. Garret. He now feared poor Ann was insane.

"My father," continued Miss Arnim, "wished me to marry a gentleman who was in every way repugnant to me, I having already given my heart to another, whose want of fortune was his only fault. I would not disobey my father by following the dictates of my heart, yet how could I go thro' the daily sorrow of thwarting his expressed wishes! I resolved to escape from both temptations for a time, and I could think of no way in which I could more securely hide myself than by going into service for a time. I confided my story to the good manageress of the "Domestic's Training Institution," who was a friend of mine, and through her influence I came here with the determination of doing my duty as conscientiously as it was possible. You have seen the result, Mr. Garret."

She burst into tears, though her eyes flashed through them with proud indignation.

By this time the earnestness of her manner and the calm refinement of her language had carried the conviction of truth to her listener's heart. He gazed at her in amazement and distress, while a flood of shame dyed his brow.

The detective now entered, and with a deeply respectful obeisance to the woman he had treated so insolently ten minutes ago, said:

"Please to accept my humble service, Miss Arnim, and to pardon my mistake.—What can I do for you, miss?"

"Bring me a cab, if you please," said Miss Arnim. Then turning to her former master, she said pleadingly:

"Let me ask as a particular favor, sir, that I may be permitted to go without meeting Mrs. Garret again. I can imagine now," she added, with a trembling voice, "what innocent and friendless girls feel when they are suspected wrongfully."

Little more remains to be said. The young lady had her wish, and returned to her father's house without another encounter with her amiable mistress; and so overjoyed was the General to receive back her whom he had bitterly mourned as lost by his own cruelty, that her engagement to Mr. Melville, a young lawyer, was immediately afterward arranged, with much rejoicing.

Little Master Horace proved, some weeks afterward, to be the real cause of that bank note's disappearance. It was found stuffed into the cavity under the shuttle of his mamma's sewing machine.

IT DIDN'T SUIT.

Two or three weeks ago a Detroit boy, after finishing the last chapter of a book called "The Pleasures of the Deep," pleaded with his father to let him ship aboard a lake schooner. The old man smiled a grim smile, took the case under consideration, and in a few days the boy was on the rolling deep, having shipped as a greenhorn on a vessel in the lumber trade. He sailed to Saginaw, came down and crossed to Toledo, and next day he appeared in Detroit, lame and stiff, his throat sore, one eye nearly shut and a feeling of humbleness running all through him.

"What, back again?" cried the old man, as the boy entered the house.

"Yes, father, I want to saw all the wood for Winter, bring all the coal, clean out the cellar and paint the barn, and you needn't give me but two meals a day?"

"Don't you like sailing?"

"Father, you don't begin to realize anything about it. The captain sailed right along on Sunday, the same as any other day and I believe he swore harder. He would not give me an umbrella when it rained, he made me sit up most all night, and two or three times he called me up at midnight and made me haul on ropes and drag old sails around. I like land, father, and I wished you owned a farm."

With this number closes the Ninth Volume of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.—We return thanks to our patrons and friends who have supported us during the past year, and shall endeavor during the coming year to make our paper still more attractive than heretofore.—We wish you all a "Happy New Year."

TALLAHASSEE, FLA., Dec. 27.—This morning ex-Attorney General Williams arrived here, and immediately thereafter Attorney-General Cocke of the Returning Board was served with a notice from Secretary of State McLinn, withdrawing the notice before served on him requiring his presence at the office of the Secretary of State to-day to re-canvass the vote under the mandate of the Supreme Court. McLinn and Cogwill refuse to obey the order of the court, and will file a motion to vacate the rule and set aside the mandamus. Attorney-General Cocke will obey the mandate of the court by making a canvass himself and filing the same in the clerk's office this afternoon, as directed by the court. It is understood that Judge Wood will be in Florida to-morrow.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 26.—Governor Grover, of Oregon, left this morning for Washington. Last evening he was serenaded at the Cosmopolitan Hotel.—Gov. Irwin, who introduced him, said Gov. Grover's action would have the effect to compel Congress to go behind the face of the returns, in which case it was believed the Senate would refuse to give Hayes the elective vote. Gov. Grover spoke very briefly, justifying the constitutionality of his action. Resolutions were adopted indorsing Gov. Grover's course. About two or three thousand persons were present, including a number of prominent Democratic politicians.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—Mr. Cronin, the Tilden elector of Oregon, as recognized by Gov. Grover, of that State, and the bearer of the electoral vote, withdrew the package containing it from the safe of the National Hotel, where he had temporarily deposited it, and this afternoon delivered it to President pro tempore Ferry, to whom he was introduced by Senator Bogy, of Missouri, accompanied by Representative Lane, of Oregon. Mr. Ferry declined to give a receipt, on account of two returns from that State, as in the case of Florida, leaving for future determination by the proper authorities the question concerning the party entitled to compensation for bringing hither the electoral vote.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Dec. 26.—Gov. Stearns says the decision of the Supreme Court settles the question in this State, and that he has advised the Canvassing Board to obey the orders of the Court. Secretary of State McLin has notified the other members of the board to meet in his office at 11 o'clock to-morrow to canvass according to the Court's mandate. The Senate committee has concluded its labors here, and left for Jacksonville this morning.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—The messenger from the Republican board of alleged electors of Oregon reached here yesterday and presented the sealed envelope containing the returns to President Ferry in the presence of witnesses. Mr. Cronin made two calls in company with Senator Kelly to-day on Ferry, but failed to find him in, and the returns will be presented to-morrow. It was anticipated that a subpœna would be served on Cronin by the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, but none has yet been served.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—Miss Katie Claxton appeared for the first time since the Brooklyn calamity at the National Theatre here at the Christmas matinee, in the "Two Orphans." The house was literally packed with people, and towards the last part of the performance a man in the audience had a fit, which caused for a few moments a scene of consternation, most of the people fearing that it was another fire. In the rush for the doors some children were injured, but most of the audience escaped without any bruises. The exits were found to be quite ample, and there was considerable presence of mind displayed by the audience, by which quiet was finally restored and the play went on, lasting by the delay for an hour after dark.

Judge Edward J. Warren, who died at Washington, N. C., Sunday, Dec 10, was one of the prominent lawyers of that State. He was born in Vermont, Dec. 23, 1826. He was admitted to the bar of the county of Beaufort, N. C., and was a member of the Convention of 1860. He served several terms in the Legislature. In 1871-2 he was Speaker of the Senate. From the close of the war till the adoption of the Constitution of 1868, he was Judge of the Superior Court of North Carolina, the Court of last appeal.—He received his degree from Dartmouth College with Moody B. Smith and Whitney Barstow, M. D., of N. Y., and other members of the class of 1846.—About twenty years ago he had full charge of the prosecution of a clergyman arraigned for murder. Immediately after the jury announced their verdict of guilty the prisoner arose and shot Judge Warren in the left side.—The bullet penetrated all his clothing, but did not injure him. The clergyman blew his own brains out immediately afterwards.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 24.—Capt. Bogardus and Crittenden Robinson shot a pigeon-match yesterday of sixty single birds at twenty-one yards, and forty double at eighteen yards; boundary eighty yards. Bogardus killed fifty-one single, and Robinson fifty; Bogardus thirty-three double, and Robinson twenty-seven.

Mr. Cronin, of Oregon, who came it over Zach Zhandler & Co., "in a way they despise," is not a "heathen Chinee" but a native of Washington County, N. On Monday last the boiler house of the American Transfer Company's station, at Oil City, Pennsylvania, took fire and was followed by the explosion of the boiler, which was thrown against an iron tank containing about 15,000 gallons of oil, bursting the tank and setting fire to the oil. The total loss of oil is about 35,000 barrels. Five iron tanks were destroyed, two of which were owned by McWhinney Bros., two by Cochrane, and one by the American Transfer Company. There were also five Erie Railway cars burned. The loss is estimated at $200,000, which is partially covered by insurance. The American Transfer Company will commence rebuilding at once.

Morse, $5 00; W. B. Smith, $5.00; N. Runyon, $6 50; J. W. Lang, $15.00; M. Bird, $150. On motion, claims referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. French offered a Resolution that the bill of Dr. H. H. Lowrie be audited and ordered paid, and the Aud. Com. be instructed to request the City Treasurer to deduct the amount of said bill from the salary of the present City Physician, Dr. Gillette, in accordance with Ordinance regulating his duties. Resolution adopted, all aye.

Mr. Ryder presented petition of I. Aldrovandi for permission to erect a booth, for the sale of peanuts, &c., on the corner of Front & Somerset Streets. On motion, referred to Com. on Fire, Water and Lamps.

The Aud. Com. reported correct the 18 above claims, and on motion, warrants were ordered drawn for the same. All aye.

Mr. Brown called up Ord. to establish the grade of Front Street, between Leland and Raymond Streets, on second reading. Read and on motion of Mr. Brown, the enacting clause was stricken out.

Mr. French presented petition of French & Martin for the privilege of erecting an awning corresponding in every particular to the one erected and granted by the Council to Mr. R. Totten.

On motion, petition was granted.

Mr. Brown called up report of Laws and Ordinances on matter of Linfield Ave. Tabled—Nays 6. Mr. Simpson being excused.

Com. on Fire, Water & Lamps reported on petition of I. Aldrovandi for the erection of a booth, corner Front and Somerset Sts., that the Street Commissioner be ordered to cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours. Adopted. Ayes 8. Nays 1.

Mr. French moved that when Council adjourn it be to meet on Friday evening, 29th inst., at 7½ o'clock. Carried.

Council then adjourned.

The Worcester Press presents it in this shape:

He took a sudden seat, he did,
In all his gorgeous foppery;
Such mournful spectacles we see,
When sidewalks are so sloppery.
And she, poor girl, went down with him,
In all her pull back frippery;
Such tragic incidents take place
When sidewalks are so slippery.

TELL us, angelic host, ye messengers of love, shall swindled printers, here below, have redress above? The shining angel's band replied: "To us is knowledge given; delinquents on the printers' books, shall never enter heaven."

A NEVER FAILING DELIGHT.—Whenever [illegible] out shopping, I ask him what he wants. If it is a picture book for Edward, I [illegible] to Webster. If it is an encyclopedia for Uncle James, I point him to Webster. If it is something to please an invalid, I recommend Webster. If it is a Christmas present for his wife, I urge him to get Webster. Webster Unabridged and Illustrated. It is a never failing delight to every one.—Christian Reg.

A TIME-HONORED SPECIFIC.—The long and successful career of DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL, as contrasted with the speedy collapse of numerous would-be specifics which have from time to time been puffed into a brief notoriety during the twenty odd years that this celebrated medicine has been sold, affords a proof that the American public continue to repose its confidence in deserving articles only. The PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL has long been recognized as the leading specific for Consumption, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Diphtheria, and all other diseases of the breathing organs. It is, moreover, a certain, speedy, and safe botanic remedy for Dyspepsia, Liver Disorders, Scrofulous Affections, Gravel, Dropsy, Debility, and Constipation. Constantly accumulating evidence of its unimpeachable character establishes the fact that it not only entirely eradicates the diseases to which it is adapted, but also that its action is remarkably prompt and thorough. The crucial test of experience has demonstrated its reliability in every particular. Sold by all Druggists. Principal Depot, No. [illegible] Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa. 17oct6m

MANY thousands of dollars has been spent in distributing, free of charge, Sample Bottles of BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP to all parts of this country, to those suffering from Coughs, Asthma, Hemmorrhages, Consumption, and other Throat and Lung Diseases, that the afflicted might satisfy themselves, that this remedy would save them from those fatal diseases. No person has ever used this medicine without getting immediate relief, yet there are a great many poor, suffering, skeptical persons going about our streets with a suspicious cough, and the voice of consumption coming from their lungs, that will not try it. If you die, it is your own fault, as you can go to your Druggist Wm. H. Voorhees, and get a Sample Bottle for 10 cents and try it; three doses will relieve any case. Regular size only 75 cts.

DEATHS.

MARSH.—In this city, Oct. 24th, [illegible] Marsh, aged 61 years, 11 months, 24 days.

WHITE.—In North Plainfield, Dec. 22, Manning Stelle White, infant son of Wm. and Mary A. White, aged 1 year, 4 months and 7 days.

THROW crumbs to the sparrows.

THE poor boy's Christmas—The shop windows.

THE best way to kill time just now is to sleigh it.

AND now the small boy "twangs his trumpet horn."

WE have already had as much sleighing as the whole of last winter furnished.

APPLES don't keep worth a cent this winter, especially when there are four boys in the house.

DURING these slippery times you should wear two pairs of shoes, one as usual and the other on the back.

MR. JOHN H. TIER is filling his large ice houses with pure ice, some 12 inches in thickness, taken from Tier's lake adjoining.

THE insurance men are now liberally distributing their blotters, calendars, almanacs, circulars, etc., with an incomprehensible array of "cash assets."

CHARS. VAN ARSDALE has had his mare "Lucy" clipped. Mrs. V. followed suit with her fast going mare "Nelly Fly." Both these animals look handsome after clipping.

THE colored people held a Grand Ball on Christmas night, in the rooms over Rockfellow's grocery store, corner of North Ave. and Cherry Street. Another will be held in the same rooms New Year's night.

ATTENTION is directed to the advertisement of the Avon Park House, under the careful charge of Mr. Wm. S. Dean, late of the Dunellen Hotel. Sleighing parties will find at this popular Road House ample accommodations for man and beast.

THE children of the Jackson Sabbath School, Short Hills, were treated to a sleigh-ride in an immense sleigh placed on four pair of "bobs," and drawn by four horses, on Tuesday last. They passed through our principal streets, the reins being handled by Mr. John Meeker.

THE gas has been terribly poor in our city for the past week. We are informed by the veteran superintendent, Mr. Morse, that the cause of it was in consequence of the sickness of one of the employees, who had charge of some parts of the works. He says it is all right again.

A GRAND opportunity will be offered parties in want of hardware, carpenters' or gardeners' tools, &c., by attending the Bankrupt sale of such goods in the store formerly occupied by B. & J. Vetterlein, on Front Street, commencing Friday, Dec. 29th, and continuing Saturday, Dec. 30th.

"COOKIE," THE CONSTITUTIONALIST'S old and faithful Carrier will present his annual Address on New Year's Day to his patrons. His effusion this year will eclipse all former efforts. It will treat principally on local topics and is written by a lady of well known poetical ability, a resident of North Plainfield.

THE S. Brotherhood of United—— Sy reans will give an Oyster Supper and trip the light fantastic toe in the rooms of Howell Division No. 97, S. of T., next Thursday, January 4th. Tickets One Dollar, admitting gent and lady, to be procured at John Steiner's store, Chas. Zackewertz and Crane & Terrill's.

A COMICAL sight on our streets last Tuesday was a party of young lads who were enjoying the sleighing on two small sleds, with a plank about ten feet long stretched from one end to the other, on this was seated a row of young lads, who drove a gentle "dobbin" that was frequently reminded by a long whip in the hands of the driver that more speed was required.

THE little sparrows become courageous while the snow covers the ground, and venture close to the doors of dwellings in search of crumbs, &c. A large flock of these little strangers were observed flying about the neighborhood of the residence of the late Dr. Martin, on Tuesday, where they have their homes among the ivy clinging to the side of the building. Feed the little warblers.

The Union Prayer and Praise Meeting on Saturday evening next, in the rooms of the Y. M. C. A., will be conducted by Mr. Chas. W. McCutchen. The meeting begins with a service of song at 7:30 o'clock.—The Committee earnestly desire a full attendance of young people and of all interested in our work at this last meeting of the year. Ladies and gentlemen willing to assist in the singing will please be present promptly at the hour named.

That absurd law, the depositing of all the ballot boxes of the county with the county clerk immediately after the election, has been complied with in this county, and fourteen boxes are now in the Clerk's Office under seal. Here they must remain unmolested for six months, before the expiration of which time the spring elections take place. Unless the law is changed duplicate boxes will have to be made, entailing an expense altogether needless.—Somerset Unionist.

AT the annual election for officers of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, A. F. & A. M., of this city, held last Tuesday evening, the following named officers were elected for the ensuing year:

W. M.—William Addis.
S. W.—Geo. P. Seydam.
J. W.—B. F. Costell.
Treas.—Jacob Adams.
Secretary—John H. Jackson.
Tiler—C. H. Westphall.
Stewards—Wm. E. Gardner, Fred. Chamberlain.

MR. DEAN, proprietor of "Avon Park House," on Park Avenue, created quite an excitement on our streets Wednesday morning last, by displaying a fine, fat deer on the seat of his wagon. "Billy" didn't swear that he shot the deer at the edge of the swamp back of his hostelry, but intimated that to those who enquired too particular as to where he got the animal. Nevertheless, we are happy to inform our readers that venison stew will be served up to visitors at the Avon Park House, free gratis, as long as the animal will hold out from this date forward.

THE Fair given in the Y. M. C. A. Rooms, under the auspices of the ladies of the German Reformed Church of this city, on Wednesday and Thursday evenings last, was a most decided success, the attendance being very large, and the quantity of goods sold large. The German Liedertafel Society, a singing club, rendered some excellent vocal music during the entertainment, while the North Plainfield Cornet Band discoursed fine music. The rooms were neatly decorated with bunting, flags and evergreens, while the tables were presided over by bevys of handsome girls. We learn that the proceeds of the fair netted a handsome sum.

WE can endorse the following from an exchange: "A gentleman met us yesterday with a bitter complaint that the clergymen of our city refuse to read notices of various entertainments, charitable and otherwise, in their pulpits. We presume it is with clergymen as with newspapers. The grumbler has no knowledge of the immense number of this kind of calls on our pastors or our papers, and what would a church service become if prefaced with half an hour's reading of benevolent candy pulls, and pious pop-corn festivals. It is only a dodge for stealing advertisements, and the pulpit is wise to be free from the infliction. Pastors and papers are liberal in these particulars, but object decidedly to be imposed upon."

WATCH NIGHT services will be held in the M. E. Church, next Sunday evening, commencing at 9:30 o'clock, taking the place of the regular service.

AT the close of Prof. Lyon's School for Boys, on Friday last, he was made the recipient of one of Roger's Groups in Terra-cotta, and a handsome calendar clock, from his scholars, as a slight token of their esteem for him as a teacher.

A large sleigh load from Orange visited our city Thursday evening, (21st inst.) stopping at Laing's Hotel, where they enjoyed themselves to their heart's content. From the fact that our Democratic friend Daniel Brennan being one of the number, and after a look at the placard on the side of their sleigh, we concluded they were "Uncle Sammy" men.

A fatty tumor was successfully removed from the eye of a female patient, in this city, by Dr. Chas. A. Hart, of North Plainfield, without external mark, one day last week. Surgery is something the Dr. has made a life study of and he is devoted to his art; his skill in the same should be duly appreciated by those so unfortunate as to require such aid.

We learn with regret of a painful accident happening to the estimable wife of Councilman John H. Tier, who broke three of her ribs one evening last week by slipping from a chair on which she was standing to reach something from a shelf in a closet, the top of the chair striking her in the breast as she fell. Dr. South is attending the case, and Mrs. T. is getting along nicely.

A MOON Christmas Tree was the centre of attraction at Fred. Caspar's on Tuesday evening last, the same being contributed by the German Singing Society for the benefit of the children of the members of the Society. The tree was handsomely decorated with presents, which were distributed among the children at the close of a Fair, where each member and invited friend invested in a ticket which drew a prize, the money being given to the Society. At the conclusion, dancing was commenced and a good time experienced until the wee sma' hours of morning.

FRIEND PATT, the restaurateur, on Front Street, opposite Laing's Hotel, received a call from a rather seedy looking genius on Tuesday evening last, who requested that an oyster fry be made for him. His request was attended to, when he astonished the inmates of the place by unscrewing the top of the red pepper bottle, pouring a large quantity of the fiery preparation into his hand, and conveying the same to his mouth, smacking his lips as he swallowed it, as though it was good. He then endeavored to thrust a half dozen oysters down his throat at once, stringing them on the tines of his fork, also cutting up other queer antics. When through with his meal he tendered as pay part of a return ticket to Dunellen. Tom didn't like that kind of pay and turned him over to the tender mercies of Officer Hedden, who conveyed him to the bastile. The stranger was evidently crazy.

THE City National Bank, of this city, was put to some inconvenience last week by a derangement of the time lock on the vault of the safe, which refused to work so that the door could be opened. An expert was sent from the manufactory on application, who worked on the lock from Monday until the following Friday, but without success. It then became apparent that a hole must be cut through the vault door, which was accomplished after working on the same from Friday morning until Saturday noon, work being continued all Friday night. The bolts were then worked and the vault opened. The safe is one of Herring & Farrell's manufacture, and the vault door cut through was three inches thick, of chilled iron. The time lock on these safes are located inside the inner vault, so that when the outside doors are opened by a combination lock, the books of the bank are accessible. A small vault alongside the large vault is also opened by a combination lock, and in this there was a quantity of money, so that by using that business was not interfered with. The cause of the time lock refusing to work was caused by the displacement of a small pin, which interfered with the working of the clock and caused the same to stop.

Friend's Sunday School.

Christmas day was made the occasion for the Sunday School Festival of the Society of Friends, and was more largely attended than any since the inauguration of the Sunday School of this society. Under the careful management of Nathan Harper, Joseph Mather and wife, Mary Jane Field and others, the school has steadily grown in point of numbers, and the interest manifested in the continued success and prosperity was evinced by the crowded audience present. The manner of conducting and managing this Sunday School is characteristically Quaker. Simplicity is marked in all its arrangements and exercises. The children are gently cared for by the matrons and are instructed in such a social and gentle way as to make even the little ones feel at home and happy, so much attention is given to their comfort and such a social equality maintained between teachers and pupils that the school has drawn to itself children from other religious persuasions, many of which scholars in addition to attending their own sunday school, have joined and attend this one as well. The exercises consisted principally of recitations and dialogues by classes, recitations by several of the scholars, in which all acquitted themselves with much credit, evincing careful study and patient training. A little boy and girl of some four years made their maiden effort before the public by way of small recitations in such manner as greatly to amuse their listeners. Next in order seemed to be the collation which was bountiful and was heartily enjoyed. We could'nt help but remark at the time as the good things were continually duplicated and disappeared that the capacity for holding was something wonderful, but there was more than enough even though the spectators were invited to partake. This collation has heretofore been provided by Aunt Amy Webster as everybody loved to familiarly call her, but since the last festival of this society she has been called to her rest, and her grand daughter Catharine Webster, with the same liberality donated and prepared the refreshments. Nathan Harper, in his annual address, very feelingly alluded to the above facts and the tearful eyes of his silent listeners attested the veneration and love felt for the departed one, whose absence was so marked. After the address the roll was called and each scholar presented with a gift; it is needless to say that this part of the programme was interesting to those concerned, and it would be hard to say if the satisfaction of those receiving was greater than those who had contributed and were bestowing them. It was noticed that the gifts were more than sufficient to go round as many little children present not members of the school were made happy recipients of a gift. After the recitation of the Lord's Prayer by the whole school everybody turned their steps homeward, made happier by the occasion which had drawn them together.

Some Hogs!

In June last Postmaster Vail purchased two shoats of our Democratic friend, Thos. Megan, who resides on "Dog Way," North Plainfield Township. The porkers were then 4 weeks old; since that time they have been well taken care of. On Dec. 7th they were slaughtered and turned the beam of the scales at 550 lbs.

Recently five hogs were slaughtered at New Market, whose aggregate weight was 2,626 pounds. The porkers were all raised in New Market, Middlesex County, and were owned as follows: Two belonged to O. M. Hetfield, their weight was 580 and 515 lbs. respectively. Two to Lloyd B. Nelson, total weight 1,046 lbs. Mr. Lewis Harris was the owner of the other which weighed 505 lbs.

The Grand Concert

Given in the Congregational Church last Thursday evening was a success in an artistic point of view, although we regret to say that financially, or in numbers present, it was not. Why the people of Plainfield, especially the musical portion, should slight such an entertainment is beyond our comprehension. The artists were all first-class and well-known, and several of these have sang before in Plainfield in days gone by, receiving the plaudits of those present. The programme, which was a fine one, was fully carried out the evening in question, and the artists all acquitted themselves creditably. We trust soon to again have them in our city under more favorable circumstances.

In Memorian.

At a special meeting of the Plainfield Phrenological society, held on Thursday evening, December 21st inst., at the rooms of G. Thorn, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased the Great Almighty to remove from our midst by death, on the 11th of Nov. [illegible], our dear and valued friend, John M. Case; and

Whereas, This sudden death has brought grief and sadness to all our hearts, and to a large circle of friends, therefore,

Resolved, 1st, That in his demise, we recognize the hand of God, and bow to the Majesty of the Divine will, realizing that "The Judge of the earth doeth right."

Resolved, 2nd, That his many amiable qualities, his devotion to science, his interest in the promotion of morals, and more than all else, his sterling integrity, merits our highest respect, and commands our admiration.

Resolved, 3rd., That, in his death, the community has lost a valued citizen, our Society, a member, whose loss it is ill able to bear, a kind and loving husband and father.

Resolved, 4th., That we herewith tender to his bereaved family our heartfelt sympathies, believing our loss to be his eternal gain.

Resolved, 5th., That these Resolutions be published in both of our city papers, and a copy thereof sent to his afflicted wife.

W. M. SCRIBNER, Pres't.
G. THORN, Sec'y.

Christmas Celebration.

ST. MARY'S R. C. CHURCH.

Magnificent Ceremonies at Midnight Mass. Splendid Decorations and particularly Grand Music. Sermon by the Pastor.

The Festival of Christmas was observed at midnight with ceremonies commensurate with the solemnity of the occasion. The altar was tastefully decorated and studded with numerous lights. The altar was fairly surrounded with the most magnificent and choicest flowers. The Celebrant at midnight was Father Morris, who preached a sermon, the subject being on the Nativity. He dwelt particularly on the surroundings of the Saviour's birthplace, and said that he exposed his tender, delicate body to the inclemency of the severest season of the year, to the hard boards of a manger instead of a cradle and to a privation of the most ordinary conveniencies and necessities of human life. All these hardships he embraced to correct the mistaken notions and confound the folly of sinners, who blindly set their hearts and affections on the perishable riches of this world. The music was of the highest order. Hermer's Mass, selected by the Organist, Mr. Schmidt, was sung in a superb manner, the principal Solos being rendered by Mrs. Doty and Mr. Boutes.—At the Offertory, "Milliard's Christmas Anthem," was successfully rendered by the Choir. The Duett at the Communion, "Quam Dilecta," by Sambilotte, was superbly given. The "Cantique de Noel," was another feature of the musical programme. Mr. Schmidt, the Organist of the Church, deserved great credit for the magnificent Choral arrangements.

Personalia.

Messrs. G. F. & C. E. Brown, & Co., window shade manufacturers, who were burned out at No. 315 Canal Street, N. Y., last week, are now located at 321 Canal Street. Their enterprise in securing this location at considerable expense and removing their business the day following the fire, is commendable. Mr. George F. Brown, the senior member of the firm, resides on Duer Street, North Plainfield.

Mr. Michael Gilligan, son of John Gilligan, Esq., of this city, had a narrow escape from being burned to death at Council Bluffs, Iowa, during the occasion of the destruction by fire of the Transfer Hotel, U. P. R. R. Baggage Rooms, ticket office, &c., which occurred Dec. 17th. Mr. Gilligan was the means of rescuing a fellow employee, Cory Reed, the telegraph operator, who was a cripple, by carrying him in his arms to a window where they made their escape to the ground below. Mr. G. held the position of baggageman at the depot. One life was lost during the fire, a young man named Duffy being suffocated and his body burned to a crisp. The loss by the fire was $43,000.

We record the sudden demise of David S. De Camp, of Chester, N. J., who leaves behind numerous mourning friends in this city. He was one of the oldest, most respected and esteemed residents of Morris County, having filled with honor to his name and the pride of those he has left behind some of the most responsible official positions in the locality in which he lived.—He was known only to be loved and respected. He is particularly identified in our community as the father of H. H. De Camp, Esq., of Laing's Hotel, in this city.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

Messrs. Wilson & Simpson have their large ice house in Washington Valley nearly filled with pure, sparkling ice taken from their pond adjoining. The ice is about 12 inches in thickness. Messrs. Codington Bros. are also filling their large ice house with pure ice, on Somerset Street.

A DISEASE called "Hog Cholera" is raging in certain sections of the State. Aug. Smith, of North Plainfield, lost 5 animals. Mr. Deilman, of Warren Township, lost 5 and Mr. Miller, of same Township lost 3 in the past few days.

Last Sunday evening, James Winn, a man aged about 65 years, left his home on Grove St., near the Green Brook road, to attend early church service in the Catholic Church in Plainfield, since which time he has not been seen. It is supposed that the man was laboring under a fit of mental aberation of mind, to which he is subject, and has wandered away from his home. Any information regarding him will be thankfully received by his friends, by leaving word with Mr. Stephen Staats, at Jas. M. Dunn's Grocery Store, Plainfield.

A horse, belonging to Mr. Gilbert Van Nest broke its leg in some manner while standing in its stall a few days since, and the animal had to be killed in consequence.

Somerset Street is daily the scene of many sleigh-riding parties, the splendid macadamized road bed affording smooth bottom. Friend George Demler, who keeps the hostelry at the "Notch" just at the head of the street, attends to the wants of all who stop at his place in a manner that gives satisfaction and insures a return to his hospitable home.

FIRE MATTERS.

Remember the annual hop of Plainfield Steamer, No. 2, at Laing's Hall, January 18th. Tickets, $1.00.

The tickets for the eighteenth annual supper and ball of Gazelle Steamer, No. 1, at Laing's Hall, the eve of Washington's birth-day, Feb. 21st, are now ready.—Tickets, $2.

ONCE more our much talked of Town Clock peals forth the hours of the day and night. The cause of this is attributable to the fact that Mr. Theo. French, for over fifteen years its custodian, since the clock has been in position in the M. E. Church steeple, determined, at his own expense, to set the clock once more in motion and make it strike right. He proposes to persevere until the same is accomplished. Already correct time is kept. We trust our incoming Council will make a suitable appropriation toward keeping the clock in order for the year 1877. There is no debt against the same but a bill of about $20 for repairs.

Christmas Festivities.

Wednesday evening last was a gala night among the Sunday School children of this city, the occasion being the Christmas festivities of the various churches, several of them being held the same evening. That of the First Baptist Church was postponed in consequence of the death of Elston Marsh, Esq. At the Congregational Church, the exercises were of more than usual interest. In consequence of the great jam attending the like entertainments at this church in past years, it was decided by the church authorities this year to issue tickets to be given only to parents and friends of the children, so that a crush would be avoided. The plan is a good one, as was evidenced on the evening in question. Fifteen rows or seats in the centre of the church, from the front, was reserved for the Sunday School Children, while the balance of the seats were comfortably filled with holders of tickets. The interior of the church was handsomely decorated with evergreens, emblems, mottoes, &c., with the words "Merry Christmas" in green on an arch over the platform. Promptly at 7:30 the exercises were opened by an Organ Voluntary, Mr. Clark presiding at the Organ, during which the various classes of Sunday School Scholars marched in and took their seats. An Anthem—"This day was Jesus born," was then sang by the choir of the church, which was finely rendered. Following this came Hymn—"Thanks be to God" by the School. This was exceedingly well rendered the voices of over 300 children joining in the singing.

After reading a portion of scripture and a prayer by Dr. Smith, another Hymn—"Ring out, Merry Bells" was sang by the School, and then came the Tableaux, the first being a tableau vivant representing "The Living Temple." On a half circular raised platform appeared 40 little girls ranged in tiers five deep, one above the other, the larger girls, of about 9 years of age being ranged on the lower step, while on top the pyramid ended with three little mites of some three years of age. Each little girl then repeated a verse applicable to the occasion, commencing at the bottom and ending at the top, after which the "Temple Chorus" was sung by them, at the close of which an angel suddenly appeared to view with outstretched hands at the top of the pyramid and delivered a blessing; this piece was well conceived and carried out. Each little one performed her part with promptness and credit to herself, even to little Jennie Voorhees, aged three years, who capped the pyramid. Miss Renie Voorhees, as the angel, performed her part exceedingly well. Next came a "Christmas Hymn," by the School, which was fine indeed.

Following this came a Tableau representing "Sorrow led to the Cross" and "Peace at the Cross," two scenes, accompanied with appropriate and affecting music. Miss Laura Smith as Sorrow and little Jennie Voorhees as the child angel, rendered their parts to perfection. At the conclusion of this piece, continued encore caused the curtain to be again run up and the piece re-enacted.

The Recitation—"Hagar in the Wilderness" by Miss Bessie Kenyon, was well rendered. The young lady has a finely modulated voice, although hardly strong enough to be heard well in the far end of the church. Following this came three tableaux, representing "Hagar and Ishmael;" "Ishmael's thirst in the Wilderness;" and the "Angel's Deliverance." These were exceedingly well enacted, all participants taking their parts admirably. "Hagar" was represented by Mrs. Albertus Swaim and "Ishmael" by master Everett Bogart. Next came a tableaux of four scenes—"Peter's Imprisonment," "Peter's Deliverance," Peter outside the Gates," "The Angel leaving Peter." Peter was represented by Mr. Wm. Swaim and the Angel by Miss Renie Voorhees. All the scenes were exceedingly well enacted in this piece.

Then came the distribution of presents, which were displayed on one side of the platform. There was something for every scholar, and roars of laughter greeted some of them as something amusing or comical was presented. Each teacher then received a present from his or her class. Rev. Dr. Smith was the recipient of a handsome dressing gown from his Bible Class, for which he returned thanks in his usual happy manner. Mrs. Bogart was also the recipient of a handsome present from her infant class of 80 little ones, Mr. Hugg tendering that lady the congratulations of the church upon her untiring efforts to make successful everything undertaken by her in its management.

The Hymn—"Good-bye to the old year," with Tolling the Noon of Night, was then sung with pleasing effect by the school, after which the curtain was raised upon the tableau of "Flight of Time," with music "Welcome to the New Year" by Mrs. Proudfit. This tableau represents Time with his hand resting on the Wheel of Time, the New Year rising from a bed of roses, with two cherubs bearing aloft a time piece with the hands of the clock pointing to twelve while numerous angels hover around the scene.

The Doxology was then sang and Benediction pronounced.

We are informed that the school is indebted to Mrs. S. O. Peck for the skill and originality displayed in these tableaux.

The ladies connected with the church who have labored so unceasingly for days and weeks past to make this entertainment what it was, a grand success, deserve the thanks of all who were present, and in their behalf we will present them.

The First Presbyterian Church, Rev. J. P. Ketcham, held their entertainment in Assembly Hall, Public School building, Wednesday evening last. A novelty of the evening's pleasure was a concert given by several young ladies and gents on combs, several airs being perfectly played. On the platform was erected a house in which resided Santa Claus, who distributed refreshments and presents to the little ones.

The Seventh Day Baptist Sunday School held their Festival Tuesday evening last.—The evening's entertainment consisted of singing, recitations, &c., with refreshments and presents.

Where to Buy Holiday Goods.

Inadvertently we last week omitted from among our list of advertisers several who have Holiday Goods for sale, and this week propose to tell who they are. Of course there are many other advertisers in THE CONSTITUTIONALIST who do not deal in Holiday Goods, simply announcing their business. They are, however, deserving of patronage in their line.

MULFORD,

On Cherry Street, next to J. O. Doane's, have, perhaps, as fine a stock of Holiday Goods, in the shape of Toys, Games, Stationer, Fancy Articles, &c., as can be found in this city. They are well known to our citizens and probably do not need any newspaper notice to aid them in disposing of their wares, but nevertheless we desire to say a good word for them, as their stock is complete and their prices exceedingly low, which is a great desideratum in these hard times. Call at their store and assure yourselves of the truth of what we say.

P. CASEY,

Three doors east of the above, has a fine display of Gent's Furnishing Goods, Hats, Caps, &c., which are suitable for Holiday presents either in style or price. Mr. Casey is one of our successful merchants, and, we are pleased to learn, is receiving the patronage he so justly deserves. Although his store may not be as large or ostentatious in appearance as some others, his stock is right and prices low.

C. C. BOCK,

Druggist, whose neat store is located on Somerset Street, North Plainfield, also deserves mention, since he has demonstrated the fact that a Drug Store, conducted on the right principle, can be made a success in North Plainfield. As he advertises, his stock is pure and prices low.

WARNOCK,

The Baker, on Front Street, has just the toys made of flour or sugar, which will please the little ones for a New Year's present.—His stock is complete and everything is made of pure material.

MRS. JOHN WILL,

On Front Street, opposite Cherry, has a splendid stock of fruits, both foreign and domestic, nuts of all kinds, &c. Aside from the fact that her goods are of the best quality, she is deserving of public patronage in consequence of her recent bereavement, the loss of her husband by accidental death.

WM. H. BROWER,

Florist, 955 Broadway, N. Y., will furnish you with flowers, evergreens, &c., to decorate your dwellings on New Year's Day. Give him your orders by mail or in person and you will receive the goods promptly the same day.

MRS. P. DUNN,

Milliner, Front Street, has some goods the ladies will much desire to see.

MRS. J. T. CAVE

Advertises the last styles of Felt and Velvet Hats, besides a fine assortment of Millinery Goods. The ladies undoubtedly are aware of the fact and will, of course, profit thereby.

CIGARS, TOBACCO, &C.

On our first page will be found several of our cigar merchants who not only advertise pure cigars, &c., but display in their show cases articles suitable for a New Year's gift to either lover, father or brother, in the shape of cigar holders, lighters, &c. Read over the advertisements and select yourself the place to purchase. They are all good.

R & E. SEARLE

Will furnish you with a New Year's Turkey, Duck, Goose, or Chicken at fair rates. Read their adv. You may depend upon purchasing fresh goods from them.

DOANE,

The Shoe Merchant, on Cherry Street, will clothe your feet or those of your little ones at fair prices.

PATCHMAN & BRO.,

The Jewelers of 313 Canal Street, N. Y., announce that they have a fine stock of Holiday Gifts in the Jewelry line. They are among our oldest advertisers and are perfectly trustworthy. What you buy of them you may depend upon as being good.

VANDERBEEK

Has a fine assortment of skates for the boys which you can buy cheap. Other Holiday gifts at his store on Cherry Street under this office.

THE Public School will again open on Tuesday, Jan. 3rd. The teachers and scholars of some of the class rooms in the Intermediate Department, gaily decorated their school rooms with garlands of evergreens interspersed with mottoes, &c., for the holidays.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

Messrs. Hetfield, Dean Cook and others of this village are laying in a heavy crop of very excellent ice this winter.

We are pleased to hear that Miss Mary Emma Marsh, daughter of John R. Marsh, Esq., of this village, who has been quite dangerously ill with Pneumonia, is rapidly recovering.

The late snow, added to what we previously had, has made the sleighing in this village all that could be desired; and as a consequence our thoroughfares are almost constantly resounding with the merry jingling of sleigh bells, as our citizens and others are indulging in that healthful and invigorating exercise.

Deacon Henry Hetfield and wife who have been absent for two or three months on a visit to their children and friends in different parts of the country, returned to their home in this village on Tuesday 26th inst, looking hale and hearty.

Judge James Buchanan of Trenton and his family, are stopping with his brother at the parsonage in this village.

Owing to the illness of Mr. Buchanan there were no Religious Service, held at the Baptist Church last Sunday evening.

Mr. L. N. Seaman, formerly Principal of the Public School in this village, and now of Williams College, Mass., has been spending a few days with his many friends here.

Rev. Joseph Buchanan of the Baptist Church this village, has been confined to his house for several days in consequence of a severe attack of Bronchitis and Bilious Fever. He is now convalescing, Dr. Coles attending Physician.

There being no services in the Baptist Church last Sunday evening, the Methodist Church was well filled. The audience room was very prettily ornamented with evergreens, and in the rear of the desk, was this biblical passage in large evergreen letters: "For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given," which was made the basis of remarks on the occasion by the Rev. Mr. Harrower, their pastor. The services throughout were of a Christmas character.

The Public School in this village has closed for the Holidays, and while congratulating the efficient teachers, Miss Rhoda Hallock and Mr. [illegible] Day upon their short respite from very arduous and trying labors, we also congratulate the scholars upon the proficiency they have made in their studies during the past year, and wish them all a "Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year," and very many of the same. We are glad to append the following Roll of Honor for December, and shall be pleased to see the January Roll greatly enlarged. Roll of Honor for December; Nettie Gere, Nellie Gere, Aggie Hollingsworth, Phebe Pope, Alice Brisbane, Jessie Archbold.

Freeholder Martine has had a substantial railing constructed at each end of the bridge, near the intersection of Lafayette Avenue and Darby Road, as a precaution against accident in driving off the same. Mr. S. M. Bad did the work, which is a model of neatness and durability.

The pulpit of the Baptist Church in this village will be occupied on Sunday morning by D. E. Maxson of Plainfield, the illness of the Pastor, Rev. J. C. Buchanan rendering him unable to officiate.

On Christmas night the Sunday School Children of the M. E. church were invited to an Artropticon Entertainment given by their teachers—the members of the Church and friends were admitted upon payment. The Church was well filled with a delighted audience. A Choral service was held in the Church on Christmas Eve, conducted by the Pastor, Rev. F. Harrower, which was also well attended.

At a regular convention of the Knights of Pythias of Good Will Lodge, No. 101, held Dec. 27th, the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: C. C., A. Devine, V. C., T. Doyn, K. R. S., F. C. Gibbs, M. F., A. Dobbins, M. E., J. A. Baker, M. at A., J. Flannery, G. L. H., F. C. Gibbs. Alternate, J. McNair, Trustee, H. Dean. The D. D. G. C. will install the Brethren next Wednesday week.—Members of the order invited.

The Baptist Sunday School Christmas Festival which took place in the Church on Wednesday evening was a very pleasing affair. The entertainment consisted in part of excellent singing by the school, led by Mr. Franklin Wiley, Chorister, and Miss Elizabeth A. Nichol, declamation and dialogues, the presentation of gifts, and last but not least, refreshments in abundance. We have not space and perhaps it would be difficult to particularize where all rendered their parts so well upon the platform, but we must not fail to mention Master Frank R. Wiley, in his delivery of "The Battle of Ivry" and Miss Nettie Gere, in "Lost and Found," their rhetoric being unsurpassed. We were also pleased to notice little J. Harvey Buchanan and Gracie Smith on their cunning dialogue, "Childhood's Thoughts" which was beautifully rendered and heartily applauded, and Miss Hannah Dobbins, who acted the role of "Santa Claus's Daughter." The entertainment reflects credit upon Mr. C. A. Smith, Superintendent, and his good wife for their untiring exertions in making it such a decided success.

An exciting trot was witnessed at Scotch Plains on Christmas Day between Ed. Wiles' pacer "Leatherlungs" and R. Drake's mare "Bessie B.," the course being on the main road from Terrill Road to Brittin's Hotel, about three quarters of a mile, to sleigh, for a purse of $25. The first heat was won by "Leatherlungs" after a close contest, the second heat was declared a dead one; the 3rd heat and race was won by "Leatherlungs." We are informed that on New Year's Day the trot will be repeated.

FOR THE LADIES.

Looping the overskirt at one side to display the cardinal red balmoral is the latest device of the fashionable.

A man in Jersey City has found use for his mother-in-law. He forges her name to checks.

White undressed kids are the favorite glove for street wear, as they bear cleaning unusually well.

The latest style of fashionable stationery exhibits a colored robe, instead of the usual monogram, and this, after a little study, is found to read, "I expect a reply from you."

Breakfast sets of collars and cuffs have very wide cardinal bands of percale [illegible] and embroidered with white; price $4. The fancy is for very high, close-throated dresses for the house, but this new lingerie is in open garment shapes.

Why are so many ladies left-handed? In horse cars and omnibuses the female passengers generally have their right hand gloved, while the left is bare, and they use the latter in taking change to pay their fare, shaking hands or in making gestures. There may be a diamond [illegible] to this arrangement.

The striped Chantilly gauzes are much used for over-skirts, with white silk low basques that are merely trimmed with a bertha of the gauze. The over-skirt is very long, and is shorter behind than in front. The flowers form a vine and fringe, which serve as an edge for the over-skirt, falling [illegible] around the skirt; a few odd ends of white ribbon should tie the vine on one side.

The novelty for fichus is the new Irish point lace which is like church lace, made of the sheerest muslin, with the most elaborate designs cut out and the edges done in button-hole stitch. Two rows of this lace are put on muslin handkerchiefs that are to be worn either in the house or street; price $22.

Artificial flowers are now much used for decorating houses, windows, frames, and tables, especially during the holidays. Natural flowers are so costly in the Winter that ladies who give many entertainments purchase jardinieres of artificial tropical leaves and bouquets of flowers that will decorate the table a whole season.

IN MEMORIAM.

HON. ELSTON MARSH.

Another of Plainfield's old and esteemed citizens has departed this life. Elston Marsh, as well known both among our own citizens and those abroad, died Sunday morning last after a short and painful illness.

Mr. Marsh was born near Rahway, Jan. 1st, 1818, and came to Plainfield at the age of 9 years. Upon attaining his majority he entered into co-partnership with his brother-in-law, the late Zachariah Webster, under the firm name of Webster & Marsh, and engaged in the manufacture of clothing, sale of dry goods and groceries; the place of business being on Front Street, in the building now used as a residence by Jacob Manning, Esq., adjoining Mr. Marsh's late residence. In the year 18[illegible] the firm purchased land on the corner of Front & Somerset Streets, now occupied by Pope Bros. and the Times, and after erecting the present brick building on the same, conducted their business there for many years, branch stores being opened in St. Louis and Chicago afterward. At the time of his death Mr. Marsh was a member of the firm of Stelle, Marsh & Co., (formerly Stelle, Vorst & Co.,) a large clothing house in St. Louis. During the past few years he has held various offices of trust in Plainfield, and at the time of his death was President of the Plainfield Am. Mutual Fire Ins. Co., President of the Washington Fire Insurance Co., of this city; President of the Dime Savings Institution, also a Director in the City National Bank of Plainfield. In 1847 Mr. Marsh was selected to represent the people of this district in the State Legislature. In 1860 he was again elected to the Legislature and served as presiding officer of the House. He was among the first to be appointed by the late President Lincoln as Collector of Internal Revenue in the Third District, which position he held for nine years. During the past few years he has held the position of Secretary and Treasurer of the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Co., which offices he held at the time of his death. Mr. Marsh was a member of the First Baptist Church of Plainfield for many years past, during which he has held the office of Deacon, Trustee and Clerk of the same.

In many respects the illness of Mr. Marsh was peculiar. The pneumonia which at first threatened his life, had resolved entirely and convalescence seemed to be perfectly assured. During last Tuesday and Wednesday he sat up in his chair the greater part of each day and partook liberally of food. He was able to transact business and talked rationally and hopefully of his future prospects, and yet those in attendance upon him could not avoid noticing a succession of jerking of the thumb and hand, which he seemed unable to control.—These and other symptoms indicative of some grave trouble with the nervous system induced his physicians, Drs. Craig and Stillman, to call Dr. Delafield of N. Y., in consultation with them on Friday.—They all agreed in pronouncing the trouble of an exceedingly dangerous character, Dr. Delafield remarking that if the patient was a child, he would be in constant convulsions. The complication they feared came on suddenly on Friday night about half-past eleven when he was seized with a terrible convulsion and writhed in strong spasms, being rendered unconscious of all surroundings. The constant use of chloroform was required to restrain the force of the spasms, which continued with but few intermissions up to the time of death. The next morning about 9 o'clock he suddenly became conscious and while surrounded by his family immediately recognized his condition and in the most endearing manner bade each member adieu; gave final instructions with regard to his business and then consigned himself to God in whom he gave the strongest evidence that he firmly and lovingly trusted. For several hours his condition improved and he talked with his pastor most feelingly—sent for such friends as he wished to bid good-bye, and while surrounded by his family, with their loving accents and heartfelt farewells ringing in his ears, again lapsed into unconsciousness, the spasms becoming more and more violent and in this state he continued up to within a short period before death. His departure was peaceful, placid and unconscious. Retaining as he did the fullness of convalescence in his features, he looked more as one asleep than one deceased.

The funeral of Mr. Marsh which took place on Wednesday afternoon was more largely attended than any which has ever occurred in our city.—Retaining as he did the friendship of the great mass of our older citizens and the respect and confidence of those more lately settled among us, it seemed both appropriate that business should almost be suspended, the flags of the city be at half-mast, and that great masses of citizens of every degree should throng the streets and church and endeavor to catch a last glimpse of him who had been the faithful friend and advisor of so many.—After a short prayer at the house the funeral cortege proceeded to the First Baptist Church, with which Mr. Marsh has been identified for so many years, and there in the following order the sorrowful procession moved into the edifice and up the broad aisle into the seats reserved for them. The attending Physicians entered first followed by the officiating Clergyman; the associates of Mr. Marsh in the Central Railroad office, Mr. John Taylor Johnston and Sons, and others, a long procession made up of the men in the community most identified with its financial interests, the beautiful casket containing the remains, surmounted by rare and costly flowers, lovely and appropriate in arrangement and borne by six citizens, Messrs. William White, Elias R. Pope, William C. Ayres, Elias W. Runyon, Manning Vermeule, and Daniel F. Randolph and followed by the afflicted family, immediate relatives and most intimate friends.

Rev. Dr. Yerkes, his pastor, introduced the Rev. Lewis Bond—as one who had known Mr. Marsh throughout the entire course of his life and he testified to the extreme worth and respect in which he was held by all that knew him. Dr. Yerkes followed in utterances almost choked by the emotions which possessed him, and in a very appropriate manner, spoke of the virtues of the deceased; his happy death bed; his relations to the church; stating that as the church with which he so long had worshiped was engaged in devotional exercises last Sunday morning, his spirit ascended to its God in company with their prayers. After some comforting remarks to the immediate family, he was followed in prayer by Rev. Mr. Ketcham, and the vast concourse of people was then allowed to view the remains and retain a last impression of the countenance so many had loved to look upon. Among those most affected were many Friends, among whom he has acted as a chief adviser, and who faltered and sobbed in their grief.

At the grave the assembly stood in solemn silence while the embalmed body was placed in the stone crypt prepared for its reception, the covering slab placed and firmly sealed in position, and then all heads were uncovered while the pastor prayed for the goodness of God to be shed upon the bereaved, after which Rev. Mr. Ketcham pronounced the benediction, and all turned silently and grief stricken to be again conveyed to their accustomed places of abode.

Elston Marsh will be missed in our community by every grade of society; the financial interests, the banks, stock companies, insurance, &c., will miss him; his church will miss him; his associates will miss him; his tenants will miss him; those accustomed to receive his charitable contributions and trustworthy advice will miss him; but above all his afflicted, bereaved family will experience in his death a void which the lapse of years will never replace or greatly reduce. An indulgent father, an affectionate, appreciative husband, and a sympathetic, judicious counselor what can we say that in the least would mitigate their unapproachable grief.

Throughout the entire course of Mr. Marsh's career in every position of trust which he has held, he has commanded the fullest confidence of all those who have come in contact with him, and to no man with whom we are acquainted could more unequivocal or fuller reliance be placed upon his unimpeachable integrity. He died as he has lived, a [illegible] of christian graces and [illegible].

It is not generally known that part of the coast of New Jersey are "diamond" fields, and produce some very pretty stones. They are a peach pebble which is a perfect crystal, bears high polish and has a brilliant lustre. The lapidaries say they are about as hard to cut as an amethyst. They constitute quite a trade at Cape May, where they are known as "Cape May diamonds."

Burglars recently robbed Monroe Howell's store, at Monroe, Morris County, of $300 worth of goods $35 in cash and a diamond, which had been an heirloom in the family for generations. The thieves secreted the bulk of their booty in an old saw mill near by, where they were subsequently found by Mr. Howell. No clue to the diamond, money or thieves.

The boiler in the engine house at the copperas mine on the Greenpond Mountain, ten miles from Dover, suddenly exploded Monday night of last week, blowing the house to pieces. Four men were in the building at the time, two of whom were instantly killed, another fatally injured and supposed to be dying at last accounts, and a fourth terribly mutilated, both eyes being destroyed. John A. Clark, the engineer, was one of the killed and his body was blown a distance of 300 feet away. Wayley & Connolly, the contractors of the mine, repaired the boiler but a short time since, and it was supposed to have been in a safe condition.

GENERAL NEWS.

The counting of the certified Electoral vote by Congress will take place on the sixteenth day of February.

Chesapeake and Ohio canal, from Cumberland to Georgetown, D. C., has already been completely locked up with ice.

The Centennial Board of Finance has brought a suit in the United States Circuit Court for instructions how to dispose of the $2,000,000 on its hands.

The New York Herald distributes its political favors weekly in this way: It is four days Hayes, two days for Tilden and one day for Grant, with a decided leaning to give the entire week to Hayes.

The new hotel built on the site of the burned Metropolitan Hotel, at Long Branch, is nearly finished. It has a main building 175x42, with a rear extension 81x40. There are 100 bed chambers, and accommodations for about 200 guests.

The New Hampshire Constitutional Convention has adopted amendments providing that removals from office shall not be made for political reasons, and that public money shall not be appropriated for sectarian schools.

In the United States Senate Committee, Mr. Frelinghuysen, remains Chairman of Agriculture, and is a member of Finance, Foreign Affairs and Judiciary. Mr. Randolph is a member of Commerce, Military, Mines and Civil Service.

The baggage of Tweed was sent to Washington and overhauled by the State Department in the expectation of finding evidence of consequence; but all the papers were found of no public importance, and the baggage has been relinquished.

Ohio will follow the example of Indiana, and the Democrats will hold a State convention on the 8th of January, to consider the present condition of affairs, and protest against the subordination of the civil to the military power. The call is at the instance of the Ohio delegation in Congress.

It may not be true, but the funny man of the Boston Post says that the smallness of the negro vote in the Southern States is said to be owing to the large number of original Georgia Minstrel and Tennessee Jubilee Singer troupes at present devastating the North.

Captain Wm. H. Christopher, of the Hudson River "People's Line," died at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. E. R. Pennoyer, last Friday, in his seventieth year. He was for many years the favorite captain of the New York and Albany steamers. He was a Democratic Assemblyman from Putnam county in 1873, having been elected over Hamilton Fish, Jr.

One of the largest real estate transactions ever occurring in the United States has just been consummated by the Charter Oak Life Insurance Company, of Hartford, in the purchase of New York real estate on Broadway, Broad street, &c., to the extent of over $2,000,000. One of the objects of the company in purchasing this property was to place it among its assets in substitution for $1,250,000 of the second mortgage bonds of the Connecticut Valley Railroad, which have been held for four or five years past. The property is very valuable and has been already leased on terms which will secure from it an annual income of $212,100.

A SENSIBLE ACTION.

Concerning the action of the Chief Engineer of the Brooklyn Fire Department, at the Brooklyn fire, the World thus comments:

"Ever since the Brooklyn fire it has been thought a thing strange almost to incredibility, that nobody should have known or suspected any loss of life by it until the day after it burned. It now turns out that this strange thing is not true. The Chief Engineer of the Brooklyn Fire Department reports that on the night of the fire he found a dead body in the theatre, and was convinced that there were many more. He decided, on consideration, not to let that fact be known, for fear the consequent crowd would obstruct the operations of the firemen, and endanger the walls still standing. There can be no doubt but that this was the right and sensible conclusion, and Mr. Nevins and his advisers deserve to be commended for coming to it."

NEW JERSEY

Enamel Paint Company,

RARITAN, NEW JERSEY.
Manufacturers of
Bradley's Enamel Paint.
Mixed Ready for Use, in any shade, Tint or Color desired.

BEAUTIFUL & DURABLE
TRADE MARK

THESE Paints are composed of the purest and best materials known to painters; the principal ingredients being Pure White LEAD, ZINC, and LINSEED OIL, which are made to unite in a homogeneous mass by the addition of other materials which add greatly to the durability, elasticity, beauty and strength of the Paint. The whole are chemically combined so that the pigments are held in permanent solution, thus forming a new compound which dries on the surface and adheres firmly to it, thus forming a Smooth, Glossy, Firm, Elastic, Beautiful and Durable Paint.

The Oil, which is the real life of the Paint, cannot leave it and be absorbed by the substance to which it is applied, as it does in paints mixed in the ordinary way, & thus leave the pigment dry and chalky, to wash & rub off in a few months. This paint is unaffected by changes of temperature, is perfectly impervious to the action of water, is well adapted to all classes of work, & is in every way a better paint for either inside or outside work or boat painting than any other Paint known to the trade, and will last at least three times as long as the best Lead and Oil mixed in the ordinary way.

These Paints are Ready for use.

Are easily applied by any one, require no mixing, stirring or addition of dryers.

Liberal Inducements to Dealers.

And full satisfaction guaranteed to their Customers.

Sold by the Gallon, Keg or Barrel. Orders attended to promptly. For Price List and Sample Color Card, Address,

AGENT FOR GREEN'S PATENT

American Driven Wells.

In North Plainfield, Scotch Plains, Westfield, and Cranford. Residence on FRONT ST., bet. Cherry and Peace Sts.

All Orders addressed to P. O. Box 382 will receive prompt attention.

CAUTION!

The undersigned would caution the public against using or sinking driven wells under Nelson W. Green's patent, unless the same are put down by him, as all parties using the same otherwise put down, or sinking such wells will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, he having the exclusive right to sink driven wells in Plainfield. The following is a decision recently rendered by Judge Benedict, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Wm. D. Andrews, owner of a patent granted to Col. Nelson W. Green, for a driven well, sued Theo. A. Carman some time ago to restrain him from the use of the patent in the manufacture of a similar well. The testimony filled over one thousand pages and council were over two weeks in summing before Judge Benedict in Brooklyn. The patent is worth a million dollars. The well is an air-tight iron tube, driven into the ground until it reaches water-bearing stratum. An air pump is screwed on the top of the tube, and the other end is of steel, made sharp and perforated. Many thousands of the wells are in use. Carman is accused of using a similar well. Counsel for the defence contended that the patent was merely a new plan of more easily reaching the water bearing strata, and could not be held patentable. Judge Benedict held that the idea of forcing water from the earth into a well pit by artificial means was new, but was not patentable, but that the method by which the idea is made available was patentable. He decided that the infringement has been clearly proved."

WM. J. NELSON,

Residence, Sebring's Building, next to Laing's Hall, Plainfield, N. J., where all orders left will receive prompt attention.

THE SUN.

1877 NEW YORK. 1877

The different editions of THE SUN during the next year will be the same as during the year that has just passed. The daily edition will on week days be a sheet of four pages, and on Sundays a sheet of eight pages, or 56 broad columns; while the weekly edition will be a sheet of eight pages of the same dimensions and character that are already familiar to our friends.

THE SUN will continue to be the strenuous advocate of reform and retrenchment, and the substitution of statesmanship, wisdom and integrity for hollow pretence, imbecility, and fraud in the administration of public affairs. It will contend for the government of the people by the people and for the people, as opposed to government by frauds in the ballot-box and in the counting of votes, enforced by military violence. It will endeavor to supply its readers—a body now not far from a million of souls—with the most careful, complete, and trustworthy accounts of current events, and will employ for this purpose a numerous and carefully selected staff of reporters and correspondents. Its reports from Washington, especially, will be full, accurate, and fearless; and it will doubtless continue to deserve and enjoy the hatred of those who thrive by plundering the Treasury or by usurping what the law does not give them, while it will endeavor to merit the confidence of the public by defending the rights of the people against the encroachments of unjustified power.

The price of the daily SUN will be 55 cents a month or $6 50 a year, post paid, or with the Sunday edition $7.70 a year.

The SUNDAY edition alone, eight pages, $1.20 a year, post paid.

The WEEKLY SUN, eight pages of 56 broad columns, will be furnished during 1877 at the rate of $1 a year, post paid.

The benefit of this large reduction from the previous rate for the WEEKLY can be enjoyed by individual subscribers without the necessity of making up clubs. At the same time, if any of our friends choose to aid in extending our circulation, we shall be grateful to them, and every such person who sends us ten or more subscribers from one place will be entitled to one copy of the paper for himself without charge. At one dollar a year, postage paid, the expenses of paper and printing are barely repaid; and, considering the size of the sheet and the quality of its contents, we are confident the people will consider THE WEEKLY SUN the cheapest newspaper published in the world, and we trust also one of the very best.

Notice of Dissolution.

The firm of VAN DYKE & CO. is this day dissolved by mutual consent. All persons indebted to said firm are requested to call and settle the same by January 1st, 1877, as after that date the accounts will be placed in other hands for immediate collection.

L. M. VAN DYKE,
J. C. VAN DYKE, Agt.

Plainfield, Dec. 20th, 1876.

The business will be continued at the same place (Liberty St., near R. R.) upon a strictly cash basis. We intend making a reduction of 10 per cent. on nearly all goods from former prices. We hope our old patrons and as many new ones as feel disposed to give us a call, will avail themselves of this opportunity. "Buy cheap and pay as you go," is a good motto in these times that try men's pockets.

Respectfully yours,
L. M. VAN DYKE.

Dissolution of Partnership.

The Co-partnership heretofore existing under the firm name of Shaw & Van Deventer, (Druggists) has this day been dissolved by mutual consent. All parties indebted to the above firm will please call and settle their accounts immediately.

R. J. SHAW,
AUGUSTUS VAN DEVENTER.

Plainfield, Dec. 26th, 1876.

The Drug Business will be continued at the old stand (Front St., opp. Cherry) by R. J. Shaw, who extends thanks to his many friends and the community at large for their liberal patronage, and hopes by keeping pure Drugs and Medicines and giving strict attention to business to merit a continuance of the same.

R. J. SHAW.

LEGAL NOTICES.

SHERIFF'S SALE.—In Chancery of New Jersey. Between Manning Stelle, complainant, and John C. Van Horne and wife, et al., defendants. Fieri facias.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fiery facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale at public vendue, at the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on Wednesday, the 24th day of January, A. D., 1877, at two o'clock p. m., of said day—in the first place, all that tract or parcel of land and premises, situate, lying and being in the city of Plainfield, in the county of Union and State of New Jersey:

Beginning at a point in the center of Central avenue, said point being in the division line of property belonging to M. Stelle and property conveyed by M. Stelle to John C. Van Horne, said point being three hundred feet distant southerly along the center of said avenue from L. Ackerman's southerly line; thence (1) at right angles to Central avenue, in a magnetic course north eighty-eight degrees east seven hundred and forty-three and four-tenths feet along said Stelle's line to a point in the center of Union street; thence (2) along the center of Union street, parallel with Central avenue and in a magnetic course north two degrees west six hundred and fifty feet; thence (3) at right angles to Union street, and in a magnetic course south eighty-eight degrees west one hundred and seventy-three feet; thence (4) parallel with Union street and in a magnetic course north two degrees west two hundred and three and fifty-five one-hundredths feet to a point in a line of land now or formerly belonging to Clark Rogers; thence (5) along said line south seventy degrees forty-eight minutes west one hundred and eighty-one and fifteen one-hundredths feet to a point in the center of Madison avenue, formerly Mechanic street; thence (6) along the center of Madison avenue and parallel to Union street in a magnetic course, south two degrees east five hundred feet; thence (7) at right angles to Madison avenue and along Lawrence Ackerman's line, in a magnetic course south eighty-eight degrees west three hundred and ninety-seven and four-tenths (397 4) feet to the center of Central avenue; thence (8) along the center of Central avenue, and in a magnetic course south two degrees east three hundred feet to the beginning.

Excepting and reserving, nevertheless, out of the above described premises four lots of land; the first lot being one hundred feet front and rear and 397 4-10 feet deep from center of streets, and running from the center of Central avenue to the center of Madison avenue, being the same lot sold and conveyed by B. Vetterlein and wife to one Vaillaume, by deed dated October 30, 1874; the second lot being 100 feet front and rear by 173 feet deep from center of street, and fronts on Madison avenue and is lot No. 12 on a map, and was sold and conveyed by B. Vetterlein and wife to J. Cameron, by deed dated January 18, 1876; the third lot is 100 feet front and rear by 173 feet deep from center of street, and fronts on Madison avenue, and is lot No. 13 on a map, and was mortgaged by said Vetterlein and wife to J. Cameron, August 21, 1876; the fourth lot is 100 feet front and rear by 397 4-10 feet deep from the center of streets, and running from the center of Central avenue to the center of Madison avenue, and was mortgaged by B. Vetterlein and wife to William White, August 11, 1875.

And in the second place—all that tract lying in the said city, county and State:

Beginning at a point in the center of Central Avenue, at a corner of lands of Elmira Randolph; thence along the center of Central avenue in a northerly direction, one hundred feet to a point in the center of said avenue; thence easterly and at right angles to said first-mentioned line three hundred and ninety-seven and four-tenths feet to a point in the center of Madison avenue; thence southerly along the center of Madison avenue one hundred feet to a point in the line of said Randolph's lands; and thence along the line of said Randolph's lands, in a westerly course, three hundred and ninety-seven and four tenths feet to the center of Central avenue and place of beginning.

And in the third place—all that tract lying in said city, county and State:

Beginning at a point, in the center of Madison avenue, distant four hundred feet in a northerly direction along the center of said avenue from the line of lands of Manning Stelle; thence easterly and at right angles to Madison avenue one hundred and seventy-three feet to a point, and is a corner of lot No. 8; thence along the line of lot No. 8 in a northerly direction one hundred feet and the line being parallel with center line of Madison avenue; thence westerly along the line of lot No. 12 one hundred and seventy-three feet to the center of Madison avenue; thence along the center of Madison avenue one hundred feet, in a southerly direction, to the place of beginning, and is lot No. 13 on Vetterlein's map.

And if the proceeds of the sale of said three tracts of land shall be insufficient to satisfy the complainant's debt, interest and costs, I shall sell, in the fourth place, all that tract of land lying and being in said city, county and State:

Beginning at a point in the center of Union street, said point being one hundred and fifty-seven feet from the easterly corner of lands sold to B. Vetterlein by John C. Van Horne, in a course north two degrees west therefrom; thence north eighty-eight degrees east five hundred and sixty-three and six-tenths feet to a point in the line of land of the estate of D. Martine; thence along that line north six degrees east four hundred and forty-four and four-tenths feet; thence along formerly Thomas B. Stillman's line north fifty-four degrees and forty-eight minutes west five hundred and ninety-five and five-tenths feet to a corner of the Seventh Day Baptist Church Cemetery lot; thence along that line and others south seventy degrees and forty-eight minutes west, three hundred and forty-six and fifteen one-hundredths feet, more or less, to a corner of land sold to B. Vetterlein; thence along that line south two degrees east two hundred and three and fifty-five one-hundredths feet to another corner of said Vetterlein's land; thence north eighty-eight degrees east 173 feet to another corner of said Vetterlein's land in the middle of Union street; and thence along the middle of said street south two degrees east 493 feet to the beginning.

SHERIFF'S SALE.—In Chancery of New Jersey. Between Ziba H. Kitchen, complainants, and Virginia Gardner, James C. Freeman, et als. defendants. Fieri facias.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale at public vendue, at the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on Wednesday, the 17th day of January, A. D. 1877, at two o'clock P. M. all that tract or parcel of land and premises, hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being in the township of Westfield, in the county of Union and State of New Jersey: Beginning at a stone in the line of Wm. H. Brower in the southerly line of the road leading from Plainfield to Scotch Plains; thence with the line of said Brower south forty-six degrees east (as the needle points in 1865) fourteen chains and sixty-five links to a stone; thence with the line of said Brower north forty-three and one-quarter degrees east two chains and ninety-eight links, more or less, to the middle of the road leading from the above described road to Fanwood Park, known as Hunter Avenue; thence with the middle of said Hunter Ave. a southeasterly course four chains and thirty-one links, more or less, to the line of Stiger; thence in the line of said Stiger south forty-three and one quarter degrees west ten chains and thirty-eight links, more or less, to a stone in the easterly line of an old street now closed; thence with the easterly line of old street north forty-seven degrees west eleven chains and [illegible] links to a stone and making a corner for said Stiger; thence north forty-six and one-half degrees east three chains and seventy-five links to a stone and making a corner for said Stiger; thence being the middle of a new street (said new street beginning at a point in the road leading from Plainfield to Scotch Plains, and running in a southeasterly direction sixty-six feet wide to the southerly line of said property; thence with the middle of said new street north forty-three and three-quarter degrees west seven chains and ninety-three links to a stone in the southerly line of the first mentioned road and making a corner for said Stiger; thence with the southerly line of the first mentioned road north forty-two and three-quarter degrees east three chains and forty-four links to the place of beginning, containing thirteen acres of land, more or less. The above described streets are to be used as public property so long as required for that use and so understood by both parties in this conveyance. Excepting and reserving, however, so much of said premises as was sold to W. B. S. Taylor by deeds of J. C. Freeman and wife, one dated February 24, 1874, and recorded in the Clerk's office of Union County, in Book 87, pages 521, and another dated January 1, 1874, and recorded in said office in Book 87, of deeds on page 535, and excepting also a lot sold to said Taylor by Virginia Gardner, being one hundred feet on the road leading from Scotch Plains to Plainfield, and two hundred feet deep, and lying next to Brower's land.

SHERIFF'S SALE.—In Chancery of New Jersey. Between Victoria R. Stine, complainant, and James Raymond and wife, and others, defendants. Fi. fa., for sale of mortgaged premises.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale at public vendue, at the Court House in the city of Elizabeth N. J., on Wednesday, the 17th day of January, A. D. 1877, at two o'clock, p. m., of said day, all that tract or parcel of land and premises hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being in the city of Plainfield, in the county of Union and State of New Jersey, bounded and described as follows:

Beginning at a stone in the northerly side of the road or main street, passing through Plainfield and now of late Manning Vermeule's south-west corner, thence along his line north thirty-one degrees west four chains and fifteen links to a stone at the edge of the water; thence down the same course south sixty-five degrees west seventy-seven links and one-eighth of a link to a stone; thence along the land heretofore sold by Daniel [illegible] to John S. Harberger, south thirty-nine degrees east four chains and twenty-nine links to a stone in the side of the road; thence along the road north fifty-two degrees east seventy-seven and one eight links to the place of beginning, containing thirty-two one-hundredths of an acre of land.

Being the same premises conveyed to the party of the first part by deed of John Hughes and wife, dated October 20th, 1873, recorded in book 91 of deeds for Union county, page 161, [illegible] &c.

SHERIFF'S SALE.—In Chancery of New Jersey—Between The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, complainants, and the American Trust Company, and al., defendants. Fi. fa. for sale of mortgaged premises.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale at public vendue, at the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on Wednesday, the 10th day of January, A. D. 1877, at 2 o'clock p. m. of said day, in the first place all that certain tract or parcel of land and premises, situate, lying and being in the township of New Providence, in the county of Union and State of New Jersey, butted, bounded and described as follows:

Beginning in the middle of Passaic river, at a corner of lands of Israel Sheldon; thence on his line and that of John Littell (1) south thirty-nine degrees east twenty-two chains and ninety links to road; thence in said road (2) easterly one chain to said Littell's land, on the south side of said road; thence on his line (3) south forty-five degrees east nineteen chains and fifty links to a stone for a corner; thence (4) north eighty-six and a half degrees east sixteen chains and seventy-five links to a hickory tree at a corner of lands of John Littell; thence on his line south thirty minutes east six chains and twenty-five links; thence on the same (6) south eighty-nine and a half degrees west eight chains and [illegible] links; thence on the same (7) south thirty minutes east fifteen chains to a stone on the same and Dangliss' and Runkle's line; (8) south eighty-nine and a half degrees west sixteen chains and seventy-eight links to C. A. Runkle's corner; thence on his line (9) north one degree west eighteen chains and seven links to a stone in middle of ditch, and to land of James Bennett; thence (10) on his line north seventy-six degrees east two chains and forty-seven links; thence (11) north forty-three degrees west fifteen chains and forty links to black walnut tree on west side of road; thence (12) on line of lands of C. A. Runkle north thirty-seven and a half degrees west eighteen chains and twenty-five links to corner; thence on the same (13) south sixty degrees west [illegible] chains and seventy-three links; thence (14) on the same north thirty-eight and a half degrees west [illegible] chains and ninety links to middle of said river; (15) thence down the river as it runs about [illegible] and fifty links to hickory for corner, thence (16) south thirty degrees east five chains and forty-seven links to elm about twenty feet south of ditch; thence (17) north seventy-seven degrees east one chain and forty-seven links to a stone; thence (18) north thirty degrees west five chains and forty seven links to small hickory on bank of river; thence down said river one chain and seventy-six links to place of beginning, containing eighty acres of land, be the same more or less.

Being the same [illegible] premises conveyed to said Allen R. Ostrander by two deeds—one from Thomas K. Stewart and wife, Aug. 1, 1856, recorded in Book 44, page 94, of Deeds of Union Co., and one from John Littell and wife, June 1, 1866, and recorded in Book 39, page 402, of Deeds for Union (excepting about two acres, which do not embrace any of the farm buildings.)

Excepting nevertheless, thereout and therefrom, all those two certain tracts or parcels of land and premises conveyed by the said Ellen R. Ostrander and husband, by deed dated October 17, 1871, to The New Jersey West Line Railroad Company, and bounded and described as follows:

The First Tract—Beginning at a stake in the northerly line of lands of the New Jersey West Line Railroad Company in a line of land of said Ellen R. Ostrander and John Littell, distant fifty feet at right angles from the center line of said Railroad; thence (1) along said northerly line of lands of said Railroad north seventy-seven degrees fifty-two minutes west, parallel to and fifty feet distant from the center line of said Railroad, one hundred and eighty-one feet to a stake in said northerly line of said Railroad; thence (2) north eighty-eight degrees and five minutes east two hundred and six feet to a stake; thence (3) south seventy-seven degrees fifty-two minutes east parallel to and one hundred feet from the said center line, six hundred and eighty-one feet to a stake in the said line of lands of Ellen R. Ostrander and John Littell; thence (4) along said line of lands south fifty feet to the beginning, containing ninety-hundredths of an acre, be the same more or less.

The Second Tract—Beginning at a stake in the southerly line of lands of the New Jersey West Line Railroad Company, in line of lands of said Ellen R. Ostrander and John Littell, distant fifty feet at right angles from the center line of said Railroad; thence (1) along the said southerly line of lands of said Railroad north seventy-seven degrees fifty-two minutes west, parallel to and fifty feet distant from the center line of said Railroad, eight hundred and eighty-one feet to a stake in said southerly line of said Railroad; thence (2) south sixty-three degrees and forty-nine minutes east two hundred and six feet to a stake; thence (3) south seventy-seven degrees and fifty-two minutes east, parallel to and one hundred feet distant from the said center line six hundred and eighty-one feet to a stake in said line of lands of Ellen R. Ostrander and John Littell; thence (4) along said line of lands north fifty feet to the beginning, containing ninety one-hundredths of an acre, be the same more or less.

And if the proceeds of such sale should not be sufficient to pay the mortgage debt and costs, then I shall sell in the second place, at the same time and place, the two tracts described in the above exception, which were conveyed to the West Line Railroad Company.
